Studio hits Still leave Red ink

Claudia Eller and James Bates
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD- Hollywood is on track to break its all-time box-office record, with more than $7 billion in receipts expected by the time the year ends. So why do so many people with a financial stake in the movie business still hate it.

The answer lies in the inherently volatile nature of the expensive, high-risk end of the business, where three steps forward in box-office hits is all too often accompanied by two steps backward in turkeys.

Nowhere is that clearer than at Universal Studios Inc., where relative newcomers Edgar Bronfmian Jr., head of parent Seagram Co., and his second in command, Seagram Vice Chairman Robert Matschullat, remain highly skeptical of the rewards versus the risks of the movie business.

Universal has had three big hits this year in The Mummy, Notting Hill and American Pie - each grossed more than $100 million domestically. Hoping to stem persistent rumors that it may abandon the film business, the studio this week put out a news release crowing that it is enjoying its best box office in 17 years.

Given the studio's lull in the previous two years, Universal is clearly seeing better times. It also has raked in profits this year from two films released in late 1998 - Patch Adams and its share of Shakespeare in Love, which it co-financed with Miramax Films.

But left unsaid is that the more than $350 million in total profits that The Mummy, Notting Hill and American Pie will potentially generate, the bulk of which will be realized over the next three years, has to pay for more than $200 million in losses from such expensive flops as Mystery Men, EdTV, For the Love of the Game, Dudley Do-Right and Virus.

The hype over this year's record box-office numbers masks the reality that plenty of movies created a lot of red ink. The culprit is high production and marketing costs, especially when movies cost more than they should. Both EdTV and Mystery Men, for example, cost more than $70 million to produce and tens of millions to market, despite neither film boasting big stars.

Their combined loss: about $110 million. The studio's recent release, For the Love of the Game, starring Kevin Costner, is likely to wind up about $35 million in the red, with Dudley Do-Right losing about $30 million. But the biggest turkey was probably Virus, a movie Universal had a half-interest in. Universal's share of the loss on that film is expected to amount to $35 million.

Universal isn't the only studio experiencing the yins and yangs of the movie business. The Hollywood studio with the fewest losses this year, just one so far, is Paramount Pictures, which for the past few years has cautiously shielded itself by routinely sharing financial risks with outside partners. Even so, the studio took a hit of more than $20 million on its Steve Martin-Goldie Hawn remake of the comedy The Out-of-Towners.

At the other end, Columbia Pictures has had a long string of losers since the year began, including Idle Hands, Jakob the Liar and Muppets From Space. Those losses offset the profits from the breakout comedy hit Big Daddy, which has grossed more than $160 million, and a couple of respectable performers like Blue Streak and Cruel Intentions.

Disney hit the jackpot with The Sixth Sense and its animated feature Tarzan and expects to see profits on Inspector Gadget and Runaway Bride, which it owns half of with Paramount. But the studio will take a loss of at least $30 million on The 15th Warrior and smaller setbacks on such expensive flops as Instinct, The Other Sister and My Favorite Martian.

Warner Bros. scored with The Matrix, expected to gross about $400 million worldwide, and Analyze This but absorbed such high-cost disappointments as Wild, Wild West, Deep Blue Sea, Message in a Bottle and the much-hyped Eyes Wide Shut, starring Tom Cruise and Nicole Kidman in the late director Stanley Kubrick's final film.

An out-of-the-stratosphere hit like Star Wars Episode 1: The Phantom Menace and profitable films like

Turn to Movies, page 10

Bowie's latest album turns personal
Hours is lyrically and musically beautiful

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Staff

DAVID BOWIE
'hours...'
Virgin

David Bowie's last couple albums, 1995's Outside and 1997's Earthling, although exceptional, have been very concept heavy. One of the problems with concept albums is that the idea often overshadows the music. With his latest release 'hours...', Bowie has found a delicate balance between the two. Whether you're familiar with Bowie only through the aforementioned two albums, or as the Thin White Duke or even Ziggy Stardust, 'hours...' should meet with your satisfaction.

As Bowie watches yet another decade come to a close, his maturity as an artist can in no way be contested. Here, on his twenty-third album, he gets a bit introspective as he has every right to be. The most prominent tracks of the album are those concerning regret and imminent doom ("Survive," "The Pretty Things are Going to Hell," "What's Really Happening?") —appropriate in keeping with an Armageddon theme with the coming of the new millennium. But the disintegration that Bowie speaks of is more on a personal level. An internal crumbling that ironically showcases Bowie the introvert.

The album gets off to a smooth start with the mellow crooning of "Thursday's Child." Bowie has his vocal skills well under control as he glides along with the atmospheric melody. Right away, we see that the synthetic noise that has come to characterize the David Bowie of the '90s is being put on hold, if only for five minutes. "Thursday's Child" is easily reminiscent of past hits such as "China Girl" or Labyrinth's "Underground." "Something In the Air" pulls out all the distortion effects early in the game. The song is sonically interesting, despite the fact that half of it sounds as if it were recorded underwater.

The acoustic sounds of "Survive" are an absolute delight, with some of the best lyrics on the album. The electric solos provide highly emotive riffs, courtesy of Boston guitarist Reeves Gabrels, who has been working with Bowie since the birth of Tin Machine.

COURTESY VIRGIN RECORDS

David Bowies twenty-third album, 'hours... is an introspective gem

The ever-increasing tempo of "If I'm Dreaming My Life" prepares us for the quick decent into oblivion that encompass such songs as "Seven." Although the song is slow and acoustic, lyrics such as "I got seven days to live my life/and seven ways to die" aren't exactly uplifting.

At this point in the album's course, Bowie and Gabrels decide that we've had decide that they've been a bit too easy on us instrumentally. "What's Really Happening?" is a segue-way to the heavy jagged guitar songs that commandeer the next few songs. "The Pretty Things are Going to Hell" is the climax of the album. With its metal riffs, and an insanely catchy hook, the song is a bit overproduced. All the polish detracts from an otherwise gritty song. A much better, darker mix of "The Pretty Things are Going to Hell" appears on the Stigmata soundtrack.

Now that we're ready for the rock, Bowie and Gabrels deliver with "New Angels of Promise." The short instrumental track "Brilliant Adventure" has a spooky Eastern sound. The dark beats of the disc's final song, "The Dreamers" bring the album to a close as Bowie pulls out all the stops vocally. The chimes at the very end of the song are a nice touch.

Written and produced by both Bowie and Gabrels, all the songs on 'hours...' are among the best Bowie has graced us with in the past few years. And while the album is not devoid of concept, something that Outside had maybe a bit too much of, Bowie has pushed it aside along with the big techno beats that characterized Earthling. 'hours...' harks back to the Bowie of another era, while at the same time keeping Bowie's contemporary sound intact. Simply brilliant.

Grade: A

Zeppelin's Jones Delights Pearl St

By Scott Robbins
Collegian Correspondent

JOHN PAUL JONES
Pearl Street Nightclub
October 12

Having not played a live gig since the death of Led Zeppelin's John Bonham in 1980, John Paul Jones had every right to be a little nervous. But that wasn't the case here. Playing for the first time on his North American tour, Jones came out and electrified the Pearl Street crowd. The crowd was a mixture of Zeppelin fans, young and old, that came to hear this legendary bass guitarist jam.

Fresh off the release of their 1999 instrumental album Zooma, John Paul Jones and his band opened up the night with a bang. It seemed as though Jones had not missed a beat. He seemed very natural on stage, and along with drummer Pete Thomas, Jones seemed to thrive off the crowd's energy. Around the third song, Jones pulled out his bass mandolin guitar for "The Smile of Your Shadow" off of Zooma. The song started out very slow and mellow with Jones alternating between his guitar and synthesizer. The crowd seemed to be almost in a trance- amazed that Jones could alternate between the two with great success. The Zeppelin influence was evident.

Jones then told a story of a long time ago he had great success with the next song. The crowd knew that they were in for a Zeppelin classic tune. And they certainly were not disappointed. Jones stood behind his keyboard and began the intro to "No Quarter", a highly popular tune with Led Zeppelin fanatics, but not so popular with the general mainstream when it was released on Houses of the Holy in 1973. The sound was very eerie as if Jones had been transformed back to 1975 with Zeppelin. The only thing missing was Jimmy Page wailing away on the guitar.

Jones quickly let the crowd know with his next song that he wasn't going to linger solely on Zeppelin tunes. His next tune "B Fingers" off of Zooma was well received by the audience. Its catchy bass beat made it a very popular selection. The crowd would have to wait till the end of the concert for more Led Zeppelin songs. After a short break, Jones continued with songs from Zooma, with tunes such as "Grind" and "Zooma."

The crowd was enjoying what they were hearing, and Jones seemed to get more and more comfortable as the night progressed. The crowd was egging Jones on to play more Zeppelin tunes, yelling out for some of their favorites. Jones did not let the crowd down, though, with the smooth transition into "When the Levee Breaks" off of the mellow with Jones alternating more underrated songs from the Led Zeppelin IV. The crowd was more than happy with this selection. If there was any doubt to whether John Paul Jones can still play, this song erased those thoughts. Jones didn't even introduce the song at the end he followed it by saying, "You know what that was."

For his encore Jones dove a little bit deeper into the Zeppelin catalogue. "Trampled Underfoot", which was considered one of Jones's more heavily influenced

Turn to Jones, page

COURTESY NEIL JACOBS

Hot Bodies
New Line's Body Shots hits New York and Los Angeles, California, this weekend.

■ Verse

continued from page 5

Holyoke Range north, to Mt. Toby, and then northeast to the Ruggles Pond area at Wendell State Forest. The trail is marked with orange paint blazes.

The trail runs across private property in many places, so respect for landowners is crucial to maintaining the beauty and availability of the trail. Obviously, no litter should be left and no vegetation damaged; other regulations include: no open fires, no motorized vehicles, and horses and mountain bikes should only be used when the ground is completely firm and dry.

The trail is designed to include scenic high points, wildlife-rich areas and agricultural regions, crossings of the towns' major streams, and other picturesque views of New England life.

The name – of it – is "Autumn"
The hue – of it – is Blood –
An Artery – upon the Hill –
A Vein – along the Road –
(from The name – of it – is "Autumn" –)

Emily Dickinson is one of the Pioneer Valley's most renowned citizens. She lived unmarried, in her family's home in Amherst from 1830 to 1886, writing an incredible 1,700 poems and an impressive collection of correspondences to her relatives and friends before illness claimed her life. Emily started from a wealthy, well educated family and started Amherst College's. She attended Mount Female Holyoke Seminary (now today as Mount Holyoke College).

There's more to life than texts, and there's more to enjoying the beautiful New England landscape than coming out ahead. How while avoiding your inner Emily Dickinson, you can't shuffle your feet through the leaves along the Robert Frost Trail, or daydream in your mind through his wonderful poetry, are that of Amherst's own Emily Dickinson. You won't regret it, I promise.

Council Travel
Student Travel from A to Z
On the journey from A to Z
A is as important as Z
-Buddhist saying
A To Z
44 Main St.
Amherst MA
413-256-1261
www.counciltravel.com

Learn to Meditate!
Meditation Workshops
UMASS Campus Center
Workshops include lecture on meditation techniques, meditation practice, music for meditation, and instructional video
FREE no charge, nothing to buy - just a great chance to learn how to meditate
FREE

安城中国餐店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 • 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

Bring it.

Where it matters most.

As one of the world's leading diversified technology companies, we're breaking new ground in everything from defense and commercial electronics, to aviation, to engineering and construction. As a Raytheon employee, you'll contribute to the development of exciting, revolutionary technology designed to make life better, easier, and safer throughout the world. Such as our STARS air traffic control system. And our award-winning NightSight™ technology.

But it all starts with you. Your creativity. Your knowledge. And enthusiasm about the future. In return, we offer exceptional training and professional development opportunities. A supportive, down-to-earth work environment. And incredible benefits, including flexible schedules designed to respect your quality of life.

So you can still show off all those great qualities of yours outside of work, too.

We'll be visiting your campus soon — contact your career placement office to schedule an interview. If you are unable to meet with us, please e-mail your resume to: resume@rayjobs.com (ASCII text only, no attachments), or mail to: Raytheon Company, Attn: National Staffing Data Center, P.O. Box 660246, MS-201, Dallas, TX 75266. U.S. citizenship may be required. We are an equal opportunity employer.

Opportunities are available for exceptional students with the following majors:

- Aeronautical Engineering
- Chemical Engineering
- Civil Engineering and Construction Management
- Computer Engineering
- Computer Science
- Electrical Engineering
- Finance/Accounting
- Human Resources
- Industrial and Labor Relations
- Management
- Marketing/Communications
- Math
- Mechanical Engineering
- Physics

Check out our Website at www.rayjobs.com/campus for further information including a calendar of recruiting events. At Raytheon, we strive to be the employer of choice for a diverse workforce by attracting, retaining, and recognizing the most talented, resourceful and creative people.

Bringing technology to the edge

Raytheon

TV

continued from page 8

which he would play a psychiatrist.

People Magazine recently announced the "Sexiest Man Alive." For a while, I heard people saying that the winner was the WWF's The Rock(don't know where this rumor started, but after believing it for about a week, to my surprise I found out that it's not true. The actual winner is Ricky Martin. I'm also not sure if the magazine has been released yet, but the only reason I know that Mr. La Vida Loca won, was because Jay Leno mentioned it on his talk show Tuesday night.

Finally, Who do you think is the greatest TV character in history? Recently TV Guide did a poll, and the answer is not who you would think. The winner was Danny Devito's character, Louie DePalma from "Taxi," and coming in right behind him, were Ed Norton, Lucy Ricardo, and of course, the Fonze. However, we all know who the true man is, and should without a doubt be number one. Homer Simpson came in at fourteen.

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian Columnist

Fall

continued from page 5

Bob's Haunted Hay Ride on Route 9 heading toward Northhampton. It's worth the trip just to see the strangely phallic ghost balloon waving in the Autumn wind.

The Atkins Farms Country Market, right here in Amherst, is offering a unique opportunity this Fall. Through October 23rd, anyone can visit the farm on either Saturday or Sunday to make their very own life-sized scarecrows. You don't even have to bring clothes or straw. Just think, one weekend and your cornfields will be protected all season long.

Returning to the apple world, Old Sturbridge Village will host Antique Apple tasting this Saturday. Visitors will be able to sample 12-15 varieties of 18th and 19th century variety apples, as well as hear about the answers to apple trivia and a history of apples. You'd better hurry though, as reservations for the event are recommended.

On October 22 "Haunted Old New England" moves into the Storrowtown Village Museum in West Springfield. This is a Halloween storytelling event set against the backdrop of the town's historic setting.

The day before Halloween, Old Sturbridge Village will host two more events. Kids can enjoy fables, a costume parade, songs, cookies, cider, and craft projects at their annual Kids Club Halloween Party.

For a more mature audience, the site hosts Halloween 19th Century style. Visitors will join 19th-century Irish immigrant laborer Mary Culligan at the Towne House as she entertains with Halloween stories and customs from the "old country" and shows off her turnip carvings of jack-o'-lanterns.

The Holyoke Mall hosts "Mallween: Trick or Treat" on October 31st. This is a safe venue for kids and their family to collect treats and particpate in a costume contest.

For those of you ready to plunge head first into winter, there will also be a number of events to suit your fancy. This Saturday and Sunday, The New England Snowmobile Expo heads to West Springfield. Here, you can see the latest in snowmobile technology and pick up a machine in time for the first frost.

The following weekend, the same venue (Eastern States Exposition Center) hosts their New England Christmas Craft Spectacular. Craftspeople from throughout the region and country will gather to display their wares, including a whole host of handcrafted Christmas stuff.

Lastly, Bright Night at Forest Park in Springfield promises more than 350,000 lights sparkling in dozens of displays all across more than two and a half miles of scenic Forest Park. You can enjoy Seuss Land, Toy Land, North Pole Village and many other attractions in New England's largest light display.

Hillary

continued from page 7

her husband because it was "apparently well known in Washington" that President Bush had had an extramarital affair. Hillary Clinton apologized for her remarks.

What took so long to expand a magazine piece? "Gail talked to 200 or so people," Marvin says. The book was postponed beyond its most recently scheduled September release because, Marvin says, Sheehy needed "extra time" to filter through her material. The Hillary Trap: Looking for Power in All the Right Places, by miniskirted-lawyer-turned-conservative-pundit Laura Ingraham, is slated to appear in the spring.

"I'm in total crash mode trying to finish it," she says. The book is not a biography of the first lady but, Ingraham explains, a portrait of Hillary Clinton as "a symbol of where women are today, of the conflicts that animate women's lives on a professional and personal level."

Peggy Noonan, former speechwriter for Ronald Reagan and author of Strictly Speaking, is writing The Case Against Hillary Clinton for publication by the Judith Regan imprint of HarperCollins sometime next year. The book is an expansion of Noonan's June 1999 Wall Street Journal piece "The Mad Boomer."

Of Hillary Clinton's nascent senatorial campaign in New York, Noonan wrote in the newspaper, "To say to this great state full of gifted people that you deserve to be its senator is an act of such mad boomer selfishness and narcissism that even from the Clintons, the Gimme and Getme of American politics, it is an act of utter and breathtaking gall."

"And of course she may well win. Modern people have a way of absorbing the brazen, facturing it in, in time discounting it. For some New Yorkers, gall isn't a flaw but a lifestyle choice, one of the seven habits of highly effective people."

Noonan's editor, Calvert Morgan, says he has not seen Noonan's finished manuscript, but expects it on his desk in the next few weeks. "It's not a biography or journalistic piece, per se," Morgan says. "She looks at the record and raises a lot of serious questions."

Meanwhile, at Alfred A. Knopf, senior editor Jonathan Segal says that Carl Bernstein's book about Hillary Clinton won't come out until after the first lady leaves the White House. The book, which has no working title, was proposed by Bernstein to Segal and Knopf Editor in Chief Sonny Mehta.

"We talked a couple of hours about the subject and approach," Segal says. The editors agreed that a complete picture of Hillary Clinton would include her final days in the White House, "whether she gains the Senate or not," Segal adds.

"We don't want a quickie," Segal says. Bernstein's book will be a full-length portrait. "We don't want to rush it. I know there are other things in the works. That's okay."

Already there are more than two dozen books about Hillary Clinton in print. None has been a blockbuster. The first lady has not cooperated with any biographer, and in most cases her friends have not been particularly helpful. One volume in the works is by the first lady herself. "An Invitation to the White House" is scheduled to be published by Simon & Schuster in the spring. The coffee-table tome is a behind-the-scenes look at entertaining at 1600 Pennsylvania and will include menus from state dinners and notes on decor.

Hillary Clinton has already penned two books while in the White House. "It Takes a Village," published in 1996, reflects the first lady's thoughts on children and children's issues, and sold well, with more than 600,000 in print. Dear Socks, Dear Buddy: Kids' Letters to the First Pets was published in 1998 and hit the remainder tables faster than you can say kitty litter.

But will the first lady eventually write a take-names, tell-all book about her tumultuous years in the White House? "She has indicated that she'd like to write another book," says White House spokeswoman Marsha Berry. Though Berry says she's not sure what the subject would be, it would be more substantive than Dear Socks.

"Writing is time-consuming" and the first lady is extremely busy these days, Berry says, then adds, "She would be the best person to write a book about herself."

Of the host of Hillary Rodham Clinton biographies on the horizon, her lawyer, and agent, Bob Barnett says, "The only book about Mrs. Clinton that readers will buy in large numbers and that will be truly insightful will be her own."

Movies

continued from page 8

Entrapment and Never Been Kissed overshadowed 20th Century Fox's full slate of films this year, among them Office Space, Pushing Tin, Brokedown Palace and Ravenous. While their production and marketing costs were relatively modest, all will lose money.

New Line Cinema has had a similar year, with the smash hit Austin Powers: The Spy Who Shagged Me, which grossed more than $200 million domestically, followed by such bombs as Drop Dead Gorgeous, The Astronaut's Wife, Detroit Rock City and Dog Park.

Financially ailing Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's biggest hit this year has been The Thomas Crown Affair, grossing about $67 million domestically, but the better part of its releases were money losers like At First Sight, The Rage: Carrie 2 and The Mod Squad.

Jones

continued from page 9

songs was first. Much of the crowd was singing along as if Robert Plant was present belting out the lyrics. But this was John Paul Jones's night. His keyboard and synthesizer perfectly complimented his fabulous bass guitar work. Perhaps the highlight of the night was his finale, "Black Dog", one of the more popular Zeppelin hits.

He turned the crowd into a frenzy and left them hanging there with a question? How could Jimmy Page and Robert Plant leave this highly talented musician out in the cold? John Paul Jones proved that he still has what it takes to entertain crowds of young and old, whether they have been listening to him for 20 years or for the first time.

To UMass students and Daily Collegian fanatics,

For the final two Arts covers of this year, the Arts & Living section is doing something special. In light of the decade coming to an end, we plan on doing a best of 90s movies and a best of 90s music. As a part of this, we would like to get everyone's opinion.

So, all those who would like to vote, listen up. You can either bring your entry to the Collegian office in the Campus Center basement or you can e-mail it to us at Daily_Collegian@hotmail.com

Either way, all entries must include your name and phone number as well your selections. If you submit by email, please enter either "Movies" or "Music" in the subject line. If you enter via paper, please write this at the top of your paper.

For the movies, please select and clearly number your choices for the 10 best movies of the 90s. For the music, please clearly number your choices for the 10 best albums of the 90s.

At the end of the semester, all votes will be tallied and the results will be published on the final 2 Arts covers. I encourage everyone to participate in both contests, but please limit your entry to one per person.

Thanks,

Adam Martingetti

The First Rule of Fight Club: Don't Talk About Fight Club

THE FINE ARTS CENTER SERIES

RUSSIAN STYLE

TRIOVORONEZH

This classically trained trio plays traditional Russian folk instruments with a fresh, decidedly untraditional style. The sleeper hit of the Oregon Bach Festival and NPR's "A Prairie Home Companion," they continue to win audiences with their repertoire, ranging from Bach to Gershwin to Zigankov. Catch them on their way up—you'll never look at the balalaika, bajan, and domra in the same way again!

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 20, 7:30PM BOWKER AUDITORIUM

Sponsored by Barnes & Noble

Support the Fine Arts Center at a special fundraiser at Barnes & Noble on Monday, October 18 from 4–9pm. Trio Voronezh will make a special appearance at 7pm.

Something Funny's Going On Around Here

REDUCED SHAKESPEARE COMPANY IN

THE COMPLETE MILLENNIUM MUSICAL

$5 $7 $9

They shook up Shakespeare. They annihilated American history. They abridged the Bible. And now this hilarious troupe takes on the last thousand years in a musical comedy guaranteed to deliver at least a laugh a decade. Politically incorrect and uncompromisingly funny.

"This trio of modern Marx Brothers will leave you in stitches." – Boston Herald

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 23, 8PM, CONCERT HALL

Join us for a Talkback with the Company immediately after the show. Sponsored by First Massachusetts Bank and WRNX 100 9FM

An Incomparable Flute Virtuoso

Carol Wincenc

Carol Wincenc stands apart as one of the most renowned flutists in the world. Don't miss her!

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 27
7:30PM, BOWKER AUDITORIUM

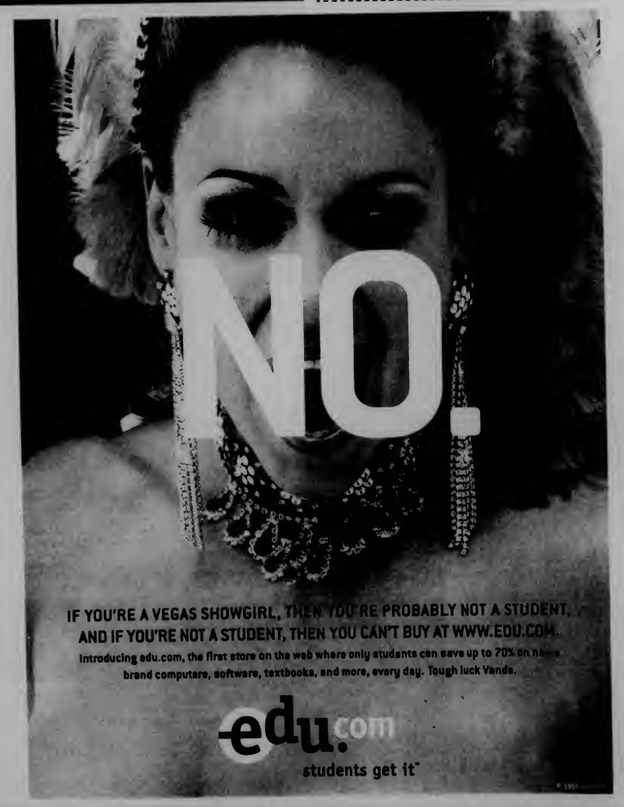
Leapin' Lizards! Annie's Back!

Annie

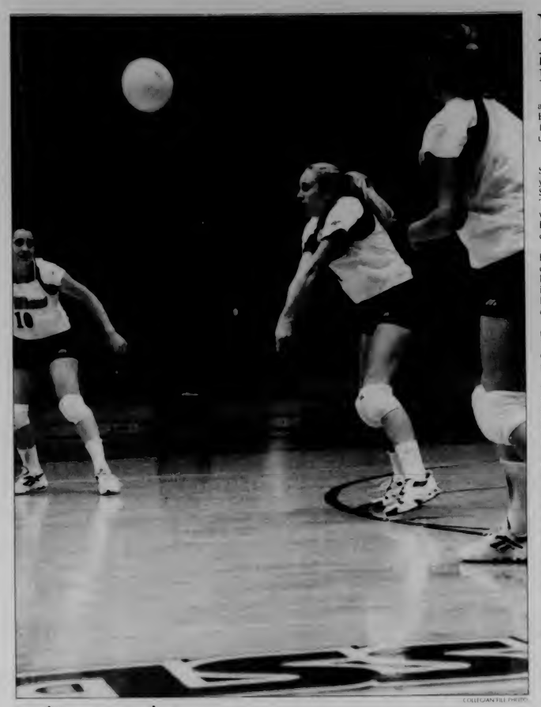
America's most beloved musical, Annie, is back on tour after a triumphant Broadway engagement. Winner of seven Tony Awards, Annie continues to capture hearts and delight audiences of all ages! It's a classic theatrical experience for the entire family.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 7:30PM, CONCERT HALL

Join us for a free reception in the lobby at 6:30pm – free juice and cookies, freckle painting, and Sandy the dog. Arf!



Sponsored by Peoples Bank, FamilyFun magazine, and WRNX 100 9FM



We've got a New Lobby! Check out our new entrance when you visit the box office, now open at its Concert Hall location, 10–6pm, M–F
Please note new time: weeknight performances begin at 7:30pm.

Call 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS for tickets

TICKETS FOR FIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS

The Fine Arts Center, University of Massachusetts Amherst

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Looking to stay hot

The Massachusetts volleyball team will be on the road this weekend for road games at Virginia Tech and George Washington.

NY, Sox differ a lot since Babe

By Peter Schmuck
The Baltimore Sun

NEW YORK - Everywhere, there are ghosts. The Boston Red Sox sold Babe Ruth to the New York Yankees in 1920, and some say they have lived under a curse ever since.

Who's to argue?

The Yankees have won 24 World Series championships in the past 80 years. The Red Sox have not won the Series since Ruth was their star pitcher. The closest they came was in 1986, when that ball rolled through Bill Buckner's legs and the trophy ended up on the other side of New York City.

If you're a diehard Red Sox fan, it's hard not to look at the swings and errors of outrageous fortune that have beset the Sox over the years and wonder if some higher power has it in for them. But maybe, just maybe, they finally have come face-to-face with a new destiny.

They have come back to New York to face the Yankees in the American League Championship Series and take one of the greatest rivalries in professional sports to a new level.

The Red Sox and Yankees have never played each other in the postseason. The closest thing to a postseason showdown was the 1978 regular-season playoff in which Bucky Dent knocked the Red Sox out of October with his memorable three-run home run.

Now, thanks to the three-tiered playoff system, they finally will go head-to-head for the right to represent the American League in the World Series. The best-of-seven ALCS begins Wednesday night, when Yankees right-hander Orlando "El Duque" Hernandez faces last-resort left-hander Kent Mercker in Game 1 at Yankee Stadium.

"It's kind of eerie if you think about it," said Yankees pitcher David Cone, who will start Game 2 against Ramon Martinez Thursday night. "The Sox and Yankees are meeting for the first time in the postseason. It's an opportunity that Sox fans have been waiting for since Babe Ruth."

The Red Sox staged an incredible three-game comeback to defeat the Cleveland Indians in the Division Series. They figure to be decided underdogs, with their pitching so in shambles that the journeyman Mercker was the best option available for Game 1. But they're still dangerous. The Indians found that out the hard way.

"I think it's a source of motivation to prove everyone wrong and it's obvious that we're an underdog," Mercker said. "We were an underdog against Cleveland, but as long as 25 guys and five coaches in that clubhouse don't believe that, you've got a chance."

The Yankees won't need a pep talk. They lost eight of 12 regular-season games to the Red Sox, including a three-game September sweep at Yankee Stadium.

"There is no speech that I could make that could get them excited more than knowing they are going to Fenway Park and that the Red Sox are coming here," said Yankees Manager Joe Torre.

"It's been a rivalry back before me and before them, but I think even if they don't know the ancient history that has involved between these two teams, I think they've seen Bucky Dent's home run more times on that scoreboard than they wanted to."

Torre said over the weekend that he didn't care who the Yankees played, as long as the Indians and Red Sox wore each other out in the Division Series. He got his wish, but now discounts the importance of the fatigue factor in this series.

"I think Jimy (Williams) hit it right when he said, 'We are not tired,' " Torre said. "You don't get tired when you're in postseason play. Maybe they can't line their pitchers up the way they would normally like to do, but they're on such a high right now. They beat the odds, not only by beating a great Cleveland Indians ballclub, but coming back from 2-0. They've ridden this thing."

That would appear to be a very important competitive edge for the Yankees, who might be facing presumptive Cy Young Award-winner Pedro Martinez in Game 1 if the Red Sox had been able to steal one of the earlier games of the Division Series and avoid a draining Game 5.

Instead, they will draw Mercker, an unlikely choice even on a pitching staff stretched paper thin during the five-game Division Series.

The veteran left-hander lasted just two innings in Sunday night's 23-7 victory over the Indians, but drew the start based on his solid performance during the final weeks of the regular season and, presumably, because left-handed starters fare better with the short right-field porch in Yankee Stadium.

"We just felt he was the best choice to start the game," said Williams. "I'm looking at his last start like it was a side start. He hadn't pitched in 12 days. His command wasn't what it could have been."

Hernandez was an obvious choice for the Yankees. He was the starter in Game 1 of the Division Series and pitched very well against the Texas Rangers. Veteran David Cone will go in Game 2 and former Red Sox ace Clemens will face Martinez in a much-anticipated Game 3 showdown at Fenway Park on Saturday night.

"I think with El Duque, both he and Roger have the durability to be able to pitch long and then come back and pitch long the next time," Torre said. "Hernandez was picked for Game 1 against Texas because he's put a lot of numbers up as far as innings pitched, seven and eight innings, and he didn't disappoint us. Roger didn't either, obviously, but Roger couldn't pitch Game 1 because he just pitched."

Red Sox

continued from page 10

their hopes in a man who, only months ago, was pitching for the Single A Lowell Spinners on rehab. Scary. So, it is highly probable that the Sox will be sent home to an off-season of what-ifs and Red Sox Nation will have nightmares about pinstripes for the next few weeks.

But we really have no reason to complain. Our beloved Sox have already surpassed all expectations. Even if the season were to end tomorrow, the Fenway Faithful were privileged enough to witness a compelling and enjoyable summer of hardball drama, including one of the most emotional All-Star games in history. And nothing brings friends and strangers together better than a little Sox talk when playoff fever grips the Hub.

The stage is set for a Saturday afternoon showdown between Pedro Martinez and Roger Clemens on Yawkey Way — win or lose, it just doesn't get any better than this for true hardball fanatics.

Peter Gammons once said that the theme song of Red Sox Nation should be "Won't Get Fooled Again."

We could heed his advice... but what fun would that be?

YOU'LL FIND A HARVEST OF GREAT PRICES AT...

LIQUORS 44

Don't Drink and Drive

Everyday pricing

1/2 KEGS
BUD, BUD LIGHT, BUD ICE, MICHELOB LT, AMBER BOCK, LITE, ICEHOUSE, RED DOG, COORS LT, COORS, ROLLING ROCK
$39.99 +DEP.

1/2 KEGS
ICE, NATURAL, NATURAL ICE, MILWAUKEE'S BEST
$34.99 +DEP.

1/2 KEGS
BERKSHIRE BREWING STEEL RAIL, PORTER, TRADITIONAL, I.P.A.
$82.99 +DEP.

ICEHOUSE & RED DOG CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS
$10.49 +DEP. 30 PACK

MILWAUKEE'S BEST CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS
$9.49 +DEP. 30 PACK

HEINEKEN & AMSTEL 12 PK. BOTTLES
$10.99 +DEP.

PAPER CITY BREWERY 6 PK. BOTTLES
$5.49 +DEP.

BASS ALE 12 PK. BOTTLES
$11.49 +DEP.

GUINNESS PUB DRAUGHT 4 PK.
$4.99 +DEP.

WINE OF THE MONTH

FETZER VINEYARDS SUNDIAL CHARDONNAY, VALLEY OAKS CABERNET SAUMGNON, EAGLE PEAK MERLOT 750 ML
$7.49

LIVINGSTON CELLARS CHABLIS, BLUSH, RHINE, WHITE GRANACHE, FR. COLOMBARD, BURGUNDY, RED ROSE 1.0 LT.
$6.99

WALNUT CREST ALL FLAVORS 1.5L
$7.49

CORBETT CANYON CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5L
$7.99

GEORGES DUBOEUF BEAUJOLAIS-VILLAGES 750 ML
$5.49

FOXHORN WHITE ZINFANDEL 1.5L
$4.69

POLAND SPRINGS VODKA 1.75L
$8.99

CANADIAN CLUB 1.75L
$16.99

BURNETT'S GIN 1.75L
$10.99

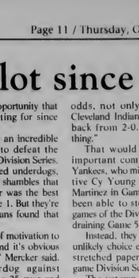
CLUNY SCOTCH 1.75L
$12.99

JACK DANIELS 750 ML
$14.99

CASTILLO RUM LIGHT & DARK 1.75L
$11.49

Discounts Available on Cases of Wine & Liquor. Ask For Details.

AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA



HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555

SALE PRICES THURS. 10/14/99 THRU WEDS. 10/20/99

NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

todd oldham

dirty wash jeans

ZANNA

downtown Amherst

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?

YANKEE

-DISCOUNT OIL-

NORTHAMPTON/HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888

• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

Taipei & Tokyo

DINE-IN OR TAKE-OUT

Chinese & Japanese Restaurant

GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE

(413) 582-1888
Open 7 Days
18 Main Street
Northampton, MA 01060

THE ASIAN DANCE AND MUSIC PROGRAM AND THE DEPARTMENT OF ASIAN LANGUAGES AND LITERATURES PRESENT

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 17 AT 3PM

The Geisha Obsession

Anthropologist Liza Dalby, author of Geisha, is the only Westerner ever to become a geisha. Come hear her fascinating, insider's take on the life of the geisha and the reasons Americans are so obsessively interested in this uniquely Japanese tradition.

Following the talk there will be a reception and concert. Musician Masayo Ishigure will perform on Shamisen, an instrument learned by every geisha.

The Odyssey Bookshop will host a book signing at the event with author Liza Dalby.

Bowker Auditorium
FREE

Funded in part by the Five College Center for East Asian Studies, Asian Area Studies Fund, Japan Arts Council, Office of Academic Cultural Enrichment Fund, and Departments of Asian Studies at Smith, Amherst and Mount Holyoke Colleges

Division changes loom on the NFL

By Leonard Shapiro
The Washington Post

The NFL's decision last week to award Houston its latest expansion franchise overshadowed another major development that is certain to stir spirited league-wide debate. Team owners also voted last Wednesday to realign to eight four-team divisions no later than May 2001, a move that is far easier said than done.

The most sensible plan has been put forward by Pittsburgh Steelers owner Dan Rooney, whose own magnanimous move to the AFC after the AFL-NFL merger in 1970 helped smooth that contentious process along. Under Rooney's plan, every team would play a home-and-home series with the three other teams in its division, with four games against teams in another division in the same conference and four games against teams in a division in the other conference, for a total of 14. They would get to 16 with two "wild-card" games that would allow the league to placate teams forced to leave their current divisions.

For example, the Arizona Cardinals, now in the NFC East, do not want to give up their annual home game against the Dallas Cowboys because it's their only sellout. Arizona likely would get one of the wild-card games against Dallas if, as logic would dictate, it moves out of the NFC East.

The playoffs would still have six teams from each conference playing the four division winners and two instead of the current three wild-card teams.

One scenario already on the table would include the following divisions, and only one team, Seattle, having to switch conferences:

* NFC East - Washington, Dallas, New York Giants, Philadelphia
* NFC South - Tampa Bay, Atlanta, New Orleans, Carolina
* NFC Central - Minnesota, Green Bay, Chicago, Detroit
* NFC West - San Francisco, St. Louis, Seattle, Arizona
* AFC East - New York Jets, Buffalo, New England, Miami
* AFC South - Houston, Jacksonville, Tennessee, Indianapolis
* AFC Central - Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Cleveland
* AFC West - San Diego, Kansas City, Denver, Oakland.

One more intriguing twist: Instead of needing 24 votes for passage, only 21 are necessary because as part of the relocation agreements that allowed the Ravens, Rams and Titans to leave Cleveland, Los Angeles and Houston, respectively.

Collins hoping to turn the NY offense around

By Neil Best
Newsday

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. - Kerry Collins was five years, 250 miles and millions of dollars removed from State College, Pa., but his mind drifted there Tuesday as he stood at his Giants Stadium locker and recalled a simpler time.

"At Penn State, I used to take guys to eat steak sandwiches at the VFW for $1.50," he said. "It's those kinds of things that make you start to feel that closeness and that togetherness."

Two days later, the Giants quarterback was standing by the verbal bomb he dropped after Sunday's loss to the Cardinals in Arizona. He did clarify himself, saying he did not intend to come across negatively when he said players on offense were "not pulling for each other" during the 14-3 defeat.

Collins reiterated his central point: that the offense might play better on the field if the players knew each other better off of it, and that it is up to the quarterback or other leaders to make sure that happens.

"I think it is important we are aware of it and continue to look at it, because it can be an area that can really help us," he said. "Every team I've been on with a good offense has had that special closeness."

Collins knows he is treading on delicate ground. For one thing, he has been a Giant only since February. For another, some people still believe that he quit on the Carolina Panthers last year. For yet another, he is not even sure he will be the Giants' starter this week, let alone for the long haul.

The last issue could be addressed Wednesday, if Coach Jim Fassel says Collins will play against the Dallas Cowboys on Monday night, as most players expect. The second is impossible to disprove, and Collins no longer tries to.

As for the first, some teammates might take issue with a relative newcomer critiquing team chemistry, but Collins' view as an outsider makes it even more valuable, and he should be applauded for expressing it.

Defensive players, and many fans and reporters who follow the team, have observed for years a lack of personality, leadership and fire on offense. Now there is a witness to confirm it, one who has experienced more successful situations elsewhere.

Giants defensive players say they fear mistakes because the unit's high standards and internal culture make failure unacceptable. They shudder at the thought of facing Jessie Armstead or Michael Strahan if they falter. And they wonder why they feel no similar sense of accountability on offense.

They hoped the offensive players had turned the corner in training camp, when they finally began to fight back against the bullies on defense, and to make plays. But after five regular-season games, the old pattern is back.

"I'd love to be a player on offense right now," Armstead said. "New York is waiting for a leader on the offensive side. They've been waiting for the last few years, and whatever player steps up, he can be the guy."

The best way to fix the offense, and to create a tighter bond, is for players to play better and Fassel to coach them more effectively. And if it doesn't happen, get better players and/or a better coach.

In the meantime, though, anyone willing to suggest ways to make it happen should have the full attention and respect of teammates. Armstead can't be the offensive leader New York is waiting for, but Collins believes that job can be his.

"I've tried to do that in the past," he said. "I found it to be beneficial." Some players believe Collins has overstated the problem, but figure there is no harm in trying to improve chemistry. If Collins plays better and becomes the long-term starter, most will accept an invitation to dinner - as long as it's not at the VFW hall.

Armstead said he would support the offense this week. "They're at their lowest right now," he said. "You can either kick them or you can help them up. This is the time to help them up, because if I kick them, and Dallas comes in and tries to kick them, you have too many people trying to kick at you."

Second Rule of the Fight Club:

Don't Talk about Fight Club.

ATTENTION HOOP FANS!!!

Meet and talk with men's basketball coach Bruiser Flint today on the Campus Center Concourse from 12-1 pm. Signed men's hoop posters!!!!!

Countdown to the Madness

2 DAYS!!!!!

Get your tickets today at the Curry Hicks Cage or the Campus Center Concourse.

■ Baseball

continued from page 10

Knoblauch sacrifice, Jeter then atoned for his first inning blunder by singling to right-center and driving in Brosius with the equalizer.

Neither team could break the deadlock through nine, sending their fateful first playoff game into extra innings. It was there that Williams once again second-guessed himself into trouble, and this time it cost his club the game.

After bringing in Rheal Cormier to close out the last batter of the ninth, the skipper mysteriously elected to call on veteran closer Rod Beck to pitch the bottom of the tenth. After backing Bernie Williams off the plate with an inside fastball, Beck served up a high heater that the NY outfielder happily launched over the center-field fence for the game-breaker.

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE

IF YOU HAVEN'T SEEN IT IN A THEATRE YOU HAVEN'T SEEN OR HEARD IT

Newly restored - never before - seen footage presented with ULTRA STEREO/DBL SURROUND SOUND

The Beatles Yellow Submarine

OFFICIAL SELECTION - 1999 SUNDANCE FILM FESTIVAL

"ONE OF THE BEST GAY COMEDIES in many a moon."

trick

CHRISTIAN CAMPBELL · LP PITOC · TORI SPELLING

ACADEMY MUSIC · Cinema Arts Center · NORTHAMPTON · 584-8435

Learn to Meditate!

Meditation Workshops
UMASS Campus Center

Tuesday Oct. 19th 6:00 - 8:00 pm Room 911
Wednesday Oct. 20th 6:00 - 8:00 pm Room 911
Thursday Oct. 21st 6:00 - 8:00 pm Room 911

FREE

Workshops include: lecture on meditation techniques, meditation practice, music, information, and instructional video.

FREE no charge, nothing to buy. Just a great chance to learn how to meditate.

Carmelina's Student Specials

RT. 9 in Hadley
(413) 584-8000

Coming soon...

UMASS STUDENT TICKET PICK-UP SCHEDULE

9:00 AM - 4:30 PM CURRY HICKS CAGE

Pick-up Date	Sport	Date of Game/Opponent
Tue., Oct. 12, 1999	Hockey	Oct. 23, 1999 vs. Boston College
Mon., Oct. 18, 1999	Men's Basketball	Nov. 3, 1999 vs. California All-Stars
	Hockey	Nov. 5, 1999 vs. UMass-Lowell
Tue., Oct. 26, 1999	Men's Basketball	Nov. 10, 1999 vs. Converse All-Stars
Mon., Nov. 8, 1999	Hockey	Nov. 19, 1999 vs. Connecticut
Mon., Nov. 15, 1999	Hockey	Nov. 23, 1999 vs. Vermont
	Men's Basketball	Nov. 29, 1999 vs. Marshall
Mon., Nov. 22, 1999	Men's Basketball	Dec. 2, 1999 vs. Boston University
	Hockey	Dec. 3, 1999 vs. Boston University
	Men's Basketball	Dec. 6, 1999 vs. Villanova
Mon., Dec. 13, 1999	Hockey	Jan. 2, 2000 vs. St. Lawrence
	Men's Basketball	Jan. 6, 2000 vs. St. Bonaventure
	Hockey	Jan. 7, 2000 vs. Providence
	Men's Basketball	Jan. 8, 2000 vs. Fordham
	Hockey	Jan. 11, 2000 vs. Maine
Mon., Jan. 10, 2000	Hockey	Jan. 15, 2000 vs. Northeastern
	Men's Basketball	Jan. 20, 2000 vs. Dayton
	Hockey	Jan. 21, 2000 vs. Merrimack
	Men's Basketball	Jan. 22, 2000 vs. Rhode Island
Mon., Jan. 17, 2000	Hockey	Jan. 26, 2000 vs. Providence
Mon., Jan. 24, 2000	Men's Basketball	Feb. 1, 2000 vs. Temple
	Hockey	Feb. 4, 2000 vs. Boston University
	Men's Basketball	Feb. 5, 2000 vs. Texas
Mon., Jan. 31, 2000	Hockey	Feb. 6, 2000 vs. UMass-Lowell
	Men's Basketball	Feb. 9, 2000 vs. La Salle
Mon., Feb. 7, 2000	Men's Basketball	Feb. 19, 2000 vs. St. Joseph's
Mon., Feb. 14, 2000	Hockey	Feb. 25, 2000 vs. Boston College
	Men's Basketball	Feb. 29, 2000 vs. George Washington
Mon., Feb. 21, 2000	Hockey	Mar. 4, 2000 vs. New Hampshire

PICK-UP & GAME DATES SUBJECT TO CHANGE
STUDENT ID CARD NEEDED TO PICK-UP TICKETS
FEE SHOULD HAVE ALREADY BEEN PAID

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center

Allen's Ballistic Black 101 Schnapps 750ml $9.99

Myers Dark Rum 750ml $12.75

Cuervo Gold 750ml $12.75

Jack Daniels 750ml $14.99

Columbus Week Special!
15% off Regular New World Fine Wine Prices with Student ID
U.S., South America, Australia, N. Zealand. Thru 10/20

338 COLLEGE ST, RTE. 9
1 MILE EAST OF AMHERST CENTER
OPEN 9AM - 11PM
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER •
(413) 253-5384

PICK a 12 PACK $9.99 + dep.
SAM ADAMS, OTTERCREEK, SEADOG VARIETY, REDHOOK ESB

Pub Can Special $4.99 4pk + dep.
RUDDLES, OLD SPECKLEDHEN, BELHAVEN

GENESSEE 30pk
All types $6.99 + dep. *after rebate

SEADOG 6pk
$4.99 + dep.

Eerie qualities surround 2 teams in AL championship

By Lawrence Rocca
Newsday

NEW YORK - The mystical qualities of the New York Yankees vs. the Boston Red Sox are too real to deny, the inter-connectedness of their histories too deep to uproot. For the length of this century, the clubs have served each other as mutual character foils, the individual actors all but helpless to a rivalry in which the Yankees have always seemed to prevail.

Over all those years, Yankees vs. Red Sox has meant bench-clearing brawls and one-game playoffs and the Curse of the Bambino and now, finally, this - For the first time in history, the Yankees and Red Sox will play a best-of-seven series to decide the American League pennant, just in the nick of the millennium.

"It is kind of eerie when you think about it," Yankee pitcher David Cone said. "It's 1999, and the Yankees and Red Sox are meeting for the first time in the postseason. It's an opportunity Boston fans have been waiting for since Babe Ruth."

For the Red Sox to shed that curse, they'll need a continuation of their current torrent of good karma and hot hitting to negate the superior condition of the Yankees, who are better rested, better balanced and, except for Paul O'Neill (fractured rib), in better health. Fresh off eight scoreless, two-hit innings against the Texas Rangers, Orlando Hernandez starts Game 1 Wednesday night against Boston's Kent Mercker, who will be pitching on two days rest and has the great good fortune to make his first career start against the Yankees in the very House that Ruth Built.

In a mild surprise, Cone will oppose Ramon Martinez in Game 2 and Andy Pettitte will face Bret Saberhagen in Game 4.

Game 3 is the featured and fantasy matchup - Roger Clemens, the greatest pitcher in Red Sox history, against Pedro Martinez, who had the greatest season ever by a Red Sox pitcher. The possibilities are epic.

"Maybe if we beat them in this series, it won't be the curse of the Bambino anymore," Chili Davis said. "It will be the curse of the Rocket."

For his part, Clemens wouldn't admit to feeling much about the upcoming assignment.

"I think it's a great way to close out the '99 situation. I just hope it's as exciting as it should be" - but his teammates gave him up.

"It's a tremendously unique opportunity for him, and I'm sure he's viewing it that way," Cone said. "To pitch in your old park where you made so much history for a chance to go to the World Series against Pedro Martinez. ... It's a game he's probably not going to forget, no matter what happens."

If the baseball gods are kind enough, there will be a winner-take-all Game 7, where the two could meet up again. Regardless, the series figures to be one none of the players, managers or executives involved forgets. After all, the tangles between the clubs have already seered indelible imprints on some of them.

Yankees bench coach Don Zimmer managed the Red Sox for parts of five seasons.

"I loved every bit of it," he said, "except one minute and a half." Zimmer, of course, referred to Bucky Dent's home run in 1978, just one of many Yankees trans-gressions against the Red Sox that has built ill will over the years.

"Special?" Red Sox general manager and Massachusetts native Dan Duquette said of the series. "Other than the fact we're here to play the Yankees for the pennant, this is something I've wanted to do since I was 10 years old." The rivalry is that deep and passionate and personal.

"Unless you're from either city or you've played in either city," former Yankee and current Red Sox Mike Stanley said, "it's hard to understand what it means."

Yankees Manager Joe Torre did his best to explain.

"There is no speech that I could could make that could get them excited more than knowing they are going to Fenway Park and that the Red Sox are coming here," he said of his players. "It has been a rivalry back before me and before them. ... There is no question that you feel this is going to be special." Yankees reliever Mike Stanton has also played for both teams. He recognizes what is happening full well.

"This right here is what baseball's about," Stanton said. "It does seem like it's scripted. Hopefully, Yankees win is the end of the script."

On the road again

Adam Black and the UMass men's soccer team are off to Ohio this weekend to face Dayton and Xavier.

In the driver's seat

Katelyn Jones and the UMass women's soccer team will take on Dayton and Xavier this weekend in a pair of key home matches.

No clear cut favorite in the NFL through a month

By Paul Attner
The Sporting News

Five weeks into this NFL season, I am officially declaring a mulligan. For all of us - and you know this means you, too - who bravely made forecasts regarding everything from the best teams to grandest players and a lot of hokum in between, this has not been the most gratifying of falls.

So I am now calling this the New NFL, which means the league that we once knew - the one that kicked off the season September 12 - no longer exists. Instead, let's take another shot at figuring out the boldest and the brightest. Maybe this time, we'll all get it right.

First, in the New NFL, there is no high-quality NFC team. None. Zippo. Green Bay easily could have lost its first three games. Minnesota is clueless on offense. Tampa Bay can't score. Washington can't play defense. And do you really think San Francisco and St. Louis still will be playing in late January? That leaves Dallas. Too bad this isn't 1995.

It wasn't long ago, in the old NFL, when we had the same complaint about the AFC: bad clubs, no chance in the Super Bowl. That's why I would welcome the league seeding playoff teams without regard to conference loyalty. If that means two AFC members wound up in the Super Bowl, good for the fans. We could only wish it could happen this season.

Second, maybe we better start listening in the New NFL when Coach Cliche dishes out pabulum about how his team is only an injury away from being in trouble - or when he tells us "my players better seize the moment" when they have a chance to make a Super Bowl run.

Ask the Falcons how precarious life at the top is once you lose your best running back. Or the Jets when your No. 1 quarterback gets hurt. Or the Broncos when your top runner is injured and you already don't have a quarterback.

Franchises are so close now in talent that one injury to the wrong player indeed can determine a season. And with the incredible lack of back-up talent at quarterback, that position is particularly vulnerable. For once, a cliche actually works.

And talk to the Vikings about last January, when they botched an easy path to the Super Bowl by folding against the Falcons. Minnesota clearly was the superior team, but the Vikings were outcoached and outplayed on a day the players appeared to think the outcome already had been decided.

Considering how they are competing this season, that may have been the Vikings best opportunity to play for the league championship. Unfortunately, the squad couldn't deal properly with the gift. It's a regret the players always will have.

Third, in the New NFL, parity is a forbidden word. One more time. Stop talking about parity. It's as if having lots of good teams is a sin. I'd much rather have competition than a situation like baseball, where only the big-money clubs make the playoffs. What is happening in this new league of ours isn't boring or troubling or a sign of any difficulty. It's reflecting at an incredibly health situation

naC

PRE-REGISTRATION FOR SPRING 2000

uoy

The WRITING PROGRAM PLACEMENT TEST will be offered on TUESDAY OCTOBER 19 @ 7P.M. in BARTLETT 61

?etirw

This test may be taken only once. Students should pre-register for ENGLWP before pre-registration ends. Students do not need to register for the test.

Steve Madden

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

Entertainment, Food, & Giveaways
AMHERSTONLINE.COM
Bookmark It!™

$1 Sushi
ROCK & ROLL
10:30-2:30
Fri-Sat Nites

KARAOKE
Rock & Roll
10:30-1:00
Fri - Sat Nite

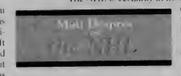
ICHIBAN いちばん

Authentic Japanese and Korean Restaurant
1 Roundhouse Plaza, Northampton, MA
(413) 585-1185
(Behind City Hall, off Main St.)

10% off Dinner w/ Student I.D.
Exp. 12/31/99

Birthday Party

Chef's Free Meal 4 person table



Advance tickets available at the Mullins Center Box Office and all Ticket Master locations.
To charge by phone call Ticketmaster at (860) 525-4500 or (413) 733-2500.
Purchase online at ticketmaster.com.
For additional info call the Mullins Center at (413) 545-0505
Presented by Jack Utsick Presents and Massconcerts
www.massconcerts.com

News and notes from the NHL

Modano hopes to return quickly; overtime system already in effect

The statement issued last week by Dallas Stars center Mike Modano that he will walk away from the game, if it continues down a path of excessive violence sent waves not only through the heart of Texas, but through fans everywhere who love hockey for the game it is.

Modano was viciously hit by Anaheim defenseman Ruslan Salei, who subsequently was handed a 10-game suspension by league disciplinarian Colin Campbell. The incident, which left Modano with a mild concussion and strained neck ligaments, was the sore point in a game that was an all around dirty affair- one that saw Dallas defenseman Darryl Sydor and center Joe Nieuwendyk receive brutal blows to the head.

Matt Despres is a Collegian staff member.

Hockey is clearly a brutal sport; no one will dispute that. However, players of the last 10 years have been carrying on more recklessly with each passing season, perhaps as a result of feeling safer with improved equipment, or perhaps because of a lack of discipline. Whatever the case, the league is now scrambling to find answers to a question that may never be solved: how to curb the excess violence?

To his credit, Campbell has been doing the job. Handing down seven suspensions in the first week of play, he has sent the message to players that this over the top behavior will not be tolerated. Although he has been on top of things, it's preventing the incidents in the first place that haunts the league. No list can be made of "dirty" players and distributed, nor can players with a history be banished. We simply have to have faith that these guys will make the right decision to play the game hard, but with respect.

The NHL is certainly in no state to lose a marquee player like Modano. He plays the game tough, but cleanly; he brings excitement to the ice every time he steps on it, and has proven to us all he knows how to win. The league needs more players like him, and can't afford to lose the few that are.

So how about that new overtime system the NHL has going for it this year? Although it has yet to deliver in terms of reducing the amount of deadlocks, don't knock it quite yet. Once players grow accustomed to the format, and defensemen realize it's ok to stray from the blue line and jump on loose pucks, more goals are bound to follow. This is the stuff that players like Jaromir Jagr and Sergei Samsonov have dreamed about for a long time. It's only a matter of time before these guys eat up all that open ice and start putting the puck in the net.

"With all the injuries coming down throughout the league, teams are scrambling to find guys who can step in and take over. Toronto has reportedly shown interest in ex-Bruin Dimitri Kristich, who Boston failed to come to terms with in the off-season. The move would make sense, as the Leafs have lost center Mats Sundin for the next six weeks with a broken right ankle. Other teams in the market to fill roster positions include St. Louis, who lost defenseman Al MacInnis; Florida, who lost both Pavel Bure and Scott Mellanby in Tuesday nights game against Montreal; and Philadelphia, who has lost key forward Rod Brind'Amour for the better part of two months after undergoing foot surgery. Look for phones around the league to be busy as GM's scramble to fill these holes.

* It's nice to see that former Bruin Dave Reid is still in demand out there. Reid signed on last week with the Colorado Avalanche, leaving the team with a solid veteran forward who can help the club while Peter Forsberg heals. Apparently, Boston management was approached over the summer about bringing Reid back to Boston, but they said they weren't interested, and that younger players could do the job. Sure. After a 0-3-2 start, I too would gladly pass up the opportunity to pick up one of the leagues best penalty killers, who still has an all-around solid game and experience that could prove invaluable come playoff time. Yeah, we don't need that at all..

*And speaking of the Bruins, it wouldn't be right if I didn't use at least part of my first column of the season to address the Black and Gold. Don't even think of giving up on them yet. Ok, so a winless first week hasn't been the best way to get the season going, and yes, management still refuses to sign key individuals. This we know, and really, there's nothing we can do. Let's not focus on what's not happening, but rather support what is.

Look at the poise Joe Thornton has shown in the early goings, using the body effectively and making smart decisions, both offensively and in his own end. Jason Allison, who at times does seem to merely coast along, has controlled the flow of the game well, making smart passes and plays around the net. Enough can't be said about the play of Rob DiMaio, who more often than not is the engine that is driving the club. Ray Bourque – enough said. He may not be the player he was five years ago, but I'll still take him over just about anybody else you can think of. Kyle McLaren continues to get better, and is quickly becoming one of the most physical, dominant defensive defensemen in the game. And there's John Grahame. He's got size that fills the net well, and as Mikael Renberg will attest to, an attitude that lets opponents know he comes to play. Experience comes with time, and we should do nothing but get behind him and Rob Tallas.

The Bruins are a team that, with a few key moves, are close to being there. And yeah, I'm just as sick of waiting for them to take it to the next level as the next guy. But leave all the complaining to somebody else and get behind what's there now, because when they do get to the top, it's going to be sweet.

Matt Despres is a Collegian staff member.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Time to drop the puck

Junior goaltender Markus Helanen and the Massachusetts hockey team will open up the 1999-2000 season this Saturday night against Colgate.

Wilt Chamberlain left a huge legacy on the pro hoops world

By Steve Springer
Los Angeles Times

In the early 1960s, Hershey, Pa., was known primarily for two things - Hershey Bar chocolates and Hershey Bear hockey.

Until March 2, 1962.

On that night, Wilt Chamberlain gave that sleepy little town a permanent spot on the basketball map and elevated his struggling league into a prominent spot on the sports page with one of the most spectacular individual performances in sports history. On that night, Chamberlain scored 100 points, a figure often not reached by teams today.

All his numbers that night are staggering: 36 shots made from the field in 63 attempts, 28 free throws made in 32 attempts.

Then 25 and in his third NBA season, Chamberlain was already on the verge of one of his greatest accomplishments as he rode the team bus into Hershey that day - a season scoring average of better than 50 points a game. But he wasn't happy about it.

"It was toward the end of the season," Chamberlain later told the Los Angeles Times, "and I remember thinking, 'Hey Wilt, what do you do for an encore after a 50-point average?'... I better try to cut this thing back a little bit.... Pass a little more, do something. Because next year, they're gonna be asking for 60 points a game."

The 7-foot-1, 275-pound Chamberlain was already being asked to carry the NBA on his large shoulders. Still a poor third behind baseball and football in the minds of most sports fans, the league was trying to expand its fan base. That's why Chamberlain's Philadelphia Warriors were at the Hershey Sports Arena on the night of March 2 to play the New York Knickerbockers. Philadelphia played in Hershey about once a month to draw new fans.

Officially, 4,124 were on hand that night, although in later years a hundred times that many would claim they had been there.

Chamberlain already held the league single-game scoring record, having scored 78 points against the Los Angeles Lakers three months earlier. But Chamberlain had required three overtimes to amass that total. He started off on March 2 with 23 points in the first quarter and added 18 in the second to give him 41 at the half. But Chamberlain was just warming up.

He had 28 points in the third quarter, putting him at history's doorstep with 69 as the fourth quarter began.

Trailing, 125-106, with 12 minutes to play, the Knicks began to think about their own role in one of basketball's most memorable nights. It was a role many of the Knicks didn't want to play.

In 1975, Willie Naulls, a New York forward but also a friend of Chamberlain, claimed in an interview that New York Coach Eddie Donovan, less concerned with the final score than with Chamberlain's final point total, told his players to hang onto the ball until the 24-second clock was about to expire on each possession to keep it out of the Warrior center's hands.

The Knicks also started fouling Chamberlain's teammates to prevent him from scoring.

But Chamberlain wasn't to be denied. With little more than a minute to play, he had scored 29 points in the final quarter to give him 98. He took a shot at No. 100, but missed.

Finally, teammate Ted Luckenbill got the rebound and passed it to fellow Warrior Joe Ruklick.

"I was dribbling up the sideline because my man was on Wilt," recalled Ruklick, now 61 and a reporter for the Chicago Defender. "I remember (New York guard) Richie Guerin came at me to hit me and foul me."

There was less than a minute to play.

"Just then," Ruklick said, "Wilt bumped the man on him, pivoted and went to basket. It was like a door opening for a second. I remember our eyes met and he said, 'Woo' in my direction. I had about an eighth of a second to get him the ball before Guerin hit me."

"To this day, I think of the look Wilt flashed me. It was as if he were saying, 'If you don't get me the ball, I will understand.' You have to remember it was a different era and he may have thought I might have been one of those people who didn't want to see a black man get that kind of an achievement."

Ruklick, however, didn't hesitate.

"I flipped him the ball as fast as I could," he said. "Wilt was four or five feet from the basket, moving in that direction with his hands up. He caught the ball, went up without putting it on the floor and went in for an easy layup."

Fans raced on the court. Forty-six seconds still remained to play, but the fans had seen enough. They had seen a moment that may well never be equaled.

Afterward in the cramped Warrior locker room, somebody thought that perhaps the moment might be worth capturing for posterity. A camera was readied. Near one of the benches lay a scrap of paper partially soaked by the water from one of the players toweling off after his shower. The number 100 was scribbled on the paper.

Chamberlain posed while holding it.

Then the paper was wadded up and thrown in the wastebasket and everybody went back to dressing.

Although he later changed his mind, Chamberlain himself was less than impressed over his feat at the time.

"I had just done so many more things in basketball that had more meaning to me," he said. "You get downgraded all the time because you're a scorer. Hey, somebody's got to put the ball in the basket."

STAY IN THE GAME
READ SPORTS!!!!!

THANK YOU U-MASS
For Voting Us #1 Again!
9 Large Uniquely Themed Tanning Rooms
Check Out Our Newest Stand—up Unit!
Sun Capsule VHR.
10,000 watts, 15mph breeze, 9 minutes, No sweat!
584-1776
CARLA'S CREATIONS Tanning & Nails
Licenced Nail Technicians
Acrylic Nails · Manicures · Pedicures · Waxing
Full Sets $25 w/Student ID
108 Russell St (Rte 9) · 2nd Floor · Hadley, MA

We take OCMP
BUFFALO Wings DOMINO'S PIZZA
AMHERST/HADLEY
256-8911
Hours: Sun.-Weds. 11 am-3am
Thurs.-Sat. 11 am-4 am
$2 OFF ANY PIZZA VALID 11AM-11:30 PM Expires 10/30/99
$3 OFF ANY LARGE OR EXTRA LARGE PIZZA VALID 11AM-11:30 PM Expires 10/30/99
$4 OFF ANY EXTRA LARGE PIZZA VALID 11AM-11:30 PM Expires 10/30/99
Medium Cheese Pizza $7.49
Large Cheese Pizza $9.49
Extra Cheese Pizza $11.49
HELP WANTED :
Pays $60 to $120 Per Shift

NFL Week Six Last Week (Overall)	Las Vegas Point Spread Note: Selections to be used strictly for entertainment and not for betting purposes	 Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief 8-6 (32-38)	 Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor 8-6 (35-35)	 Kathleen Ralls Women's Affairs Editor 6-8 (32-38)	 Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor 6-8 (30-40)	 Adam White Sports Associate 6-8 (31-39)
Miami @ New England	N.E. by 2	New England	Miami	New England	New England	Miami
St. Louis @ Atlanta	St. Louis by 9 1/2	St. Louis	St. Louis	St. Louis	St. Louis	St. Louis
Oakland @ Buffalo	Buffalo by 3 1/2	Buffalo	Oakland	Buffalo	Buffalo	Buffalo
Philadelphia @ Chicago	Chicago by 7	Chicago	Philadelphia	Philadelphia	Philadelphia	Chicago
Green Bay @ Denver	Green Bay by 3 1/2	Green Bay	Green Bay	Green Bay	Green Bay	Green Bay
Indianapolis @ N.Y. Jets	Indianapolis by 3	Indianapolis	Indianapolis	Indianapolis	Indianapolis	Indianapolis
Cleveland @ Jacksonville	Jacksonville by 17 1/2	Cleveland	Cleveland	Cleveland	Jacksonville	Cleveland
Minnesota @ Detroit	Minn. by 7	Minnesota	Minnesota	Minnesota	Minnesota	Minnesota
Pittsburgh @ Cincinnati	Pittsburgh by 5	Pittsburgh	Pittsburgh	Cincinnati	Pittsburgh	Cincinnati
Carolina @ San Francisco	San Fran by 5	San Francisco	San Francisco	San Francisco	Carolina	Carolina
Seattle @ San Diego	Seattle by 1 1/2	San Diego	San Diego	San Diego	San Diego	Seattle
Tennessee @ New Orleans	Tennessee by 2 1/2	Tennessee	New Orleans	Tennessee	Tennessee	Tennessee
Washington @ Arizona	Washington by 3	Washington	Washington	Washington	Washington	Washington
Dallas @ N.Y. Giants	Dallas by 3	N.Y.G.	Dallas	Dallas	Dallas	Dallas

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

This Shipp is set to anchor in Orono

Marcel Shipp and the UMass football team head north to Maine this week to take on the Black Bears.

Jets are struggling and searching for answers

By Richard Oliver
Newsday

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. - As he sat before the microphone at Tuesday's media briefing, bleary-eyed Jets Coach Bill Parcells was tired from lack of sleep, tired of his team's poor execution and tired of losing.

And, though he wouldn't admit it openly, a bit tired of quarterback Rick Mirer.

"I'm just thinking about things," said Parcells, who declined to commit to the struggling Mirer for Sunday's home game against the Indianapolis Colts (2-2). "I've got a lot of problems here, all of us know that. I'm not just going to say, 'OK, this is what I'm doing.'

But, he added, "Something's going to change. I'll tell you that. I'm not going to put up with this going on here."

That's because Mirer's stuff wasn't nearly enough in Monday's 16-6 loss to the Jacksonville Jaguars. Parcells will announce Wednesday whether he'll stick with the seventh-year veteran at quarterback or turn the job over to backup Tom Tupa or, more unlikely, raw talent Ray Lucas. Of those options, Mirer staying put for at least another week appears strongest.

"When you have, across the board, so many things happening, I can only go and look at the quarterback and what he was told to do," Parcells said. "How is he supposed to read this? What is he supposed to do based on the coverage?"

"He was in the group of several things that were not done well. He had a lot of company. That leads overall to the ineptitude."

In the loss to Jacksonville, played out in excruciating fashion before a national audience, Mirer failed to satisfy Parcells' top commandment for quarterbacks - get the team in the end zone - for the second time in less than a month, and only the second time in Parcells' tenure with the Jets (1-4).

The offense produced only 250 yards as a skittish Mirer, as unsteady against Jacksonville as he was steady the week before at Denver, completed 19 of 38 passes for 184 yards and two more interceptions. The quarterback, whose 54.8 passer rating is the worst in the AFC, was hamstrung on occasion by poor routes and dropped balls from his receivers, slipshod blocking on several crucial downs late and running back Curtis Martin's ineffectiveness in the second half.

"I felt like I made as good decisions as I could during the game, but I'm sure there are things that you look at and you see it differently on film," said Mirer, 1-3 in place of last season's All-Pro, the injured Vinny Testaverde. "It just wasn't productive enough. I know that, and I'll be the first to say that. Some days it's going to be hard, and was one of those days."

We certainly could have done more than muster up six points."

Parcells' job is "to make decisions like that," Mirer said of his potential benching. "There's always that chance, but I won't react unless something happens. I'm not anticipating anything."

With good reason. Parcells' options, thanks to economic constraints that restrict any potential deals, rest with Tupa, who has completed nine passes in the past seven seasons, and Lucas, who has as many completions - four - as years in the league.

In a largely empty locker room Tuesday, players treated the news of a potential change with indifference. At this point, wide receiver Keyshawn Johnson wouldn't blink if Hillary Clinton took the field Sunday and lobbed wobbly spirals toward him – as long as the throws reached the end zone.

"Me? I don't care who the quarterback is," Johnson said. "I just want to win. I'm not here to save nobody's, but just win a game. That's all I care about.

"If Rick's the quarterback, Rick's the quarterback. It brings a guy, the guy he brings in is the quarterback. Quarterback controversies every year. I'm tired of that."

No more than Parcells.

Think the Jets miss Wayne Chrebet? The Jets have converted only 6 of 28 third-down attempts over the past two games, averaging only 1.9 yards per snap. Mirer is 5 of 17 for 18 yards on those downs, with two passes intercepted, three sacks and one incompletion on a throwaway on an interference call. Six of his throws have gone to Johnson, with only one completed.

Chrebet returned to workouts last week, but his broken left foot didn't respond well to the action and he slightly sprained his right ankle. He was inactive for Monday's game and will be iffy this week.

All the Digital Power in the Palm of Your Hands
www.omniplayer.com

Beauty Nails
Professional Nail Service • Highest Quality Products • Lowest Price
31 Campus Plaza Rd., Hadley (Behind Pizza Hut- Across From Stop & Shop)
Open Mon-Sat 9:30-8:00 WALK-INS WELCOME 253-4756
Experience A Manicure $9.00 (Reg. $10.00)
Experience A Pedicure $16.00 (Reg. $18.00)
Refill $13.00 (Reg. $15.00)
Full Set of Acrylics $23.00 (Reg. $25.00)
Manicure & Pedicure $23.00 (Reg. $25.00)
Not valid with any other offer. Expires 10/31/99

Keep your summer tan!
Special: 1 month unlimited only $49.99
253-9526
REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS
189 N. Pleasant St.

Northampton's Favorite Sports Bar and Dance Club
City Cafe
1 Pearl St. Northampton • 584-4100
• 3 BARS - 2 Dance Floors • Gameroom • Pool table • 19 Tap Line
• Satellite Dish, NFL Ticket • KENO • U-MASS Alumnae Owned

BILLARDS SPORTS BAR
10A Belchertown Road
Amherst, MA 01002
256-8284
Located near the Colonial Village 2nd stop at the corner of Rts. 9 and S. East St.
8
Friday Night @ 10:00
"B.J."
Saturday Night @ 10:00
"The Basement Dwellers"
9
Single Ca$h Tournament
Every Thurs. Night at 7:30pm
Double Elimination
$5.00/person
Best! 1998

DON'T RIOT, READ SPORTS.
EVERY DAY IN YOUR MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN.

THE ASIAN DANCE AND MUSIC PROGRAM PRESENTS
FESTIVAL OF LIGHTS
A TWO-DAY INDIA CULTURAL FEST
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15 Sarod & Tabla Concert
Buddhadev Dasgupta & Nayan Ghosh
"One of the most brilliant sarodiyas of our time, Pandit Buddhadev Dasgupta was in his element when he held the two-thousand strong audience in total suspense, awaiting each phrase. After tabla wizard Pandit Nayan Ghosh joined in, it was sheer magic—a concert to cherish for a lifetime."
—INDIAN EXPRESS, BOMBAY, 1998
Bowker Auditorium 8pm
General Admission: $12, Students & Children: $6
Presented in collaboration with Hampshire College World Music Program
SATURDAY, OCTOBER 16
Pooja: The Five Elements in Prayer
A new work by choreographer Ranjanaa Devi, depicting the creation of the universe. A juxtaposition of dance, theater, sculpture, poetry and narrative. Pooja will reach and touch the organic core of each being, making for a transformational and unforgettable experience.
Bowker Auditorium 8pm
General Admission: $12, Students & Children: $6
The Fine Arts Center
For reservations and information call 545-2511

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

LET'S GO TO FOX-WOODS! All UMass Seniors, Alumni, and Faculty are invited to take a bus trip on October 16. Tickets are $17 and $18 per. Call the Alumni Office for more info, 545-2317

TEACH FOR AMERICA Info session for all interested students. October 14 at 7pm in 504 Goodell. www.teachforamerica.org

AUTO FOR SALE

95 NEON AT AC AM/FM Cass. Excellent Condition. $5500. 585-8086; 582-9077

87 VW JETTA-GLT $1,000 5Spd. Runs strong, good tires, recent clutch, exhaust. 256-6235

For Sale 1995 Mitsubishi Galant. Must sell 587-9224 Great Car.

1990 Honda Civic DX 5 Speed, AM/FM, Hatchback, runs good, and high miles. $1400 or BO 549-6490

EMPLOYMENT

Experienced House Cleaner for family home in Leverett $8hr. Susan 548-9870

SSGET PAID WHILE GOING TO CLASSSS Versity.com, an Internet notetaking company is looking for students to be Class Research Coordinators. Earn while you learn. $8-14/hr. Apply @ www.versity.com

EARN EXTRA CASH workers needed for family weekend, October 29 and 30. Call the Alumni Office to set up an interview, 545-2317

EMPLOYMENT

allstudents.com

Earn $400

per class each sememster by simply Taking Notes! Apply online at www.allstudents.com for all sections of the following undergraduate courses.

Accounting 221, 222
Animal Science 101
Anthropology 100, 102, 103
Astronomy 100
Biology 100, 103, 105, 106
Chemistry 102, 110, 111, 112
Classics 100, 102, 224
Communication 150, 180, 218, 222
Communication 226, 287
Communication Disorders 210
Community Health 129, 160
Computer Science 102, 105
Computer Science 120, 121
Consumer Studies 105
Economics 103, 104, 203
Economics 204, 330, 331
Education 115, 310
English 115, 131
Entomology 126
Environmental Sciences 101
Exercise Science 130, 210
Finance and Operations Management 250, 300
Finance and Operations Management 310, 320, 330
Food Science 101, 120
Geosciences 101, 102, 103
Geosciences 109, 250
History 100, 101, 112
Hotel, Restaurant, Travel Administration 100, 130
Linguistics 101
Management 260, 301, 314
Management 315, 330
Marketing 301, 340
Nursing 100
Nutrition 101, 130
Philosophy 100, 110
Physics 100, 131, 132
Plant and Soil Sciences 100
Political Science 101
Psychology 100, 305, 315
Resource economics 211
School og Management 210
Sociology 103, 107, 210, 222, 242
Sport Studies 210
Statistics 111, 140
Theater 100
Women Studies 187

If you're interested in becoming a Note Taker for a course that doesn't appear on this list please submit an application online for review.

Attention Marketing Majors
Currently we are hiring for a Marketing Specialist as well as Note Takers, please apply online at

www.allstudents.com

Get In Get Through Get Out

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phsically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

EMPLOYMENT

Teachers Aides

Wanted for small, innovative learning programs in Amherst. Tutor and supervise small groups of students in elementary, middle, or high school classrooms. Training provided. Great opportunity to prepare for a career in education for for interested individuals. Mass. Dept of Ed Approved Site Based Certification Program. H.S. or equivalency required, college training recommended. Full employment benifits available.

Submit a resume and cover letter to:
Jone Messmer #116
30 Industrial Drive East
Northampton, MA 01060

AA/EOE/ADA

WEBMASTER Part-Time Position. QA Computer Consulting (Springfield) has opening for student with excellent graphics and web design skills. Work around your class schedule. $35 per hour to start. First-rate knowledge of development application like NetObjects Fusion, Visual Page or DreamWeaver. Ability to code in HTML. Knowledge of PhotoShop, CorelDraw, CGI, JavaScript. Call Larry at 800-945-4747 or e-mail Admin@QAComputer.com

Human Services - Relief support needed to work with developmentally disabled adults, may lead to permanent hours. Hours include evenings, weekends and/or overnights. Required: HS deploma and driver's license. Starting pay is $7.47 p/h (for relief), $8.35 (for permanent). Locates in South Hadley, Hadley and Belchertown. Call 413 774-2281 (ask for Mary) AA/EOE

EMPLOYMENT

FLEXIBLE PART-TIME Childrens Health Research Abt Associates in nearby Hadley, MA has openings for Telephone Research Interviewers for evening and weekend shifts. We require a minimum of 20 hours/week with flexible scheduling. Applicants must have excellent reading/communication skills, some computer knowledge and a solid work ethic. We offer $6.75/hr to start, regular merit increases to $8.00, health and dental benefits, holiday pay and free shuttle service from the Hampshire Mall. PVTA stop. For more information or to arrange a personal interview, please contact: Paul R. Bebo Recruiting Coordinator 1-800-792-4514

Baker/Cook/Customer Service Prepare foods,batters, doughs, recipes. In Village Market. FT/PT PM/Weekends 1 mile from campus. Cushman Village 413-549-1953

DP Dough is hiring drivers and kitchen help. Must be able to work nights. Approxiametly 20hr/wk. Apply at DP Dough.

ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT For teenage bicycle-touring program. Partime until late spring; then full-time through August. Call 800-343-6132 Student Hosteline Program Conway, MA

EMPLOYMENT

Candy Company looking for full time apprentice. Artist/graphic designer must be familiar with Quark, Illustrator, Photoshop - benifit. Cartoon art skills a big plus. Contact Tom Martin 1-888-556-5599

Cashier Wanted self-service station weekends. Must be honest, reliable, good at math. Apply in person Northampton Citco 54 E. Hampton Rd. Rt 10

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raises commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

The Student Government Association is now hiring for the RSO Resource Center. We are accepting applications for the positions of Receptionist, Computer Technician, and RSO Resource Center Manager. Pick up applications in the SGA office, 420 Student Union and please return them to Sandra Brookley by October 20th. If you have any questions, please call Sandra at 545-0343.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals - Free delivery 253-9742

ENTERTAINMENT

AMERICAN SKIING COMPANY Cheapest student season passes! Starting at $299. We'll come to you! Call Mike @ 253-1187 before 10/15

FOR SALE

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

INSTRUCTION

Casco Bay Bartending Classes start soon student discounts call for information 1-800-467-2028 Space is Limited

Afro-Latin Percussion Lessons: Congas, Bongos etc. Have studied and played with some of the best in Cuba, U.S. and Europe. Hilary (413) 967-0466 (413) 237-5069

Saxophone Lessons with working musician; Berklee, UMass grad. Hilary (413) 967-0466 (413) 237-5069

LOST & FOUND

Found: Womens pair of glasses. Found outside of Tobin. To claim please call or come down to The Collegian in the Campus Center basement. 545-3500

Lost Black Covered pocket planner near the pay phones in the lobby of Lederle GRC Low Rise around 3pm Oct 6. Please call Charles Salinetti at (1-800) 225-5979

MUSICIANS

Female Vocalist looking to join up with other musicians! Lead, backup, harmony vocals. Can also play limited guitar. Give me a call and we'll jam! 546-4442 - ask for Jen

SERVICES

Know Your Rights! Do you have questions about your rights? Do yo think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TICKETS

2 Indigo Girl Tickets for Sat. Night @ Mullins great seats. Call Allison 549-1928

TRAVEL

EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 CANCUN JAMAICA For 10 years Class Travel International (CTI) has distinguished itself as the most reliable student event and marketing organization in North America Motivated Reps can go on Spring Break FREE & earn OVER $$$$$ $10,000! $$$$$ Contact Us today for details! 800/328-1509 www.classtravelintl.com

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

Browse icpt.com for ALL Springbreak "2000" hotspots. Need Student Orgs & Sales Reps. Fabulous parties, hotels, prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

I am looking for a student to make a 20-30 minute video-tape of a walk through the UMass-Amherst campus (exterior shots only) to send to my niece in Alaska who's looking at colleges. Please call 1-518-475-0082 Collect

Your Ad Could Be in THIS SPACE!!

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, OCT. 18

Asian Night
8 pm Hillel House
Snacks, drinks, video, trivia, & games. Meet, interact, and socialize!
Sponsored by Hamagshimim

FRIDAY, OCT. 22

Shabbat Service
6 pm Hillel House
Then stay for free challah dinner
All UMass students are welcome

THURSDAY, OCT. 21

Coffee House and Open Mic
8:30 Hillel House
FREE! Sponsored by SHU. All are invited

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Your FYI Announcements could be here...

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

Sorry No TV Listing Available...

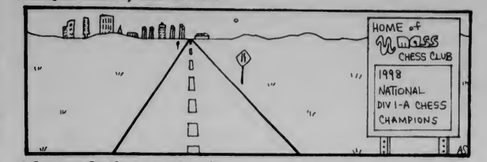
HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	16	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	18	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Syndacast
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WCCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
17	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Penthouse Blues By Mike Braidman



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Adam and Eric By Ross Baruch

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Horoscopes

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22)- You are in need of understanding and affection today, but you must be willing to give as well as receive. You may learn a lot about yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21)- You should not be lacking for support and admiration today. What you have to offer is widely sought, and others know to come right to you for it!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21)- You will seem to know what others are thinking today before they actually share their thoughts with you. Don't get carried away however.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19)- You're in the mood to stay home today, but you can't justify doing so with all you've got on your docket? You can relax a little later on.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18)- What you are missing may not be available to you in the form you most desire, but could be yours if you alter your expectations slightly.

PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20)- You can get a lot of mileage today out of a story told in jest, but which others take quite seriously for a while. Your creativity will shine.

ARIES (March 21- April 19)- You may be having problems at work today with someone who, in reality, reminds you of yourself in the "old days." You know what kind of help to offer.

TAURUS (April 20 – May 20)- You may come upon a new and surprising barrier to communication is an established relationship. It's time to get down to the truth.

GEMINI (May 21- June 20)- You must make all requests today through the proper channels if you wish to benefit in a timely fashion. Your own legwork might take you too long.

CANCER (June 21 – July 22)- You'll have your chance to shine today, but you must share the spotlight with someone older and wiser than you. You can learn by observing.

LEO (Jul 23 – Aug. 22)- Your attempts to contact someone from your past may fall short of success today, but you'll encounter a surprise in the process.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22)- It's learning time again, and the benefits you'll enjoy as a result will surprise even you! Take care you don't turn a deaf ear to one who knows!

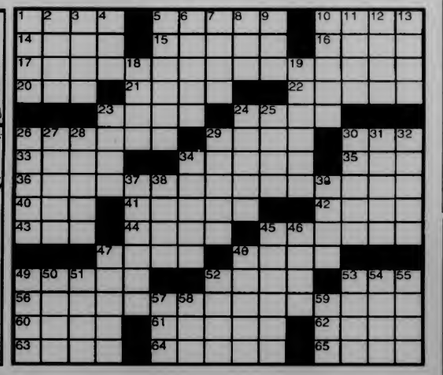
Quote of the Day

"A photograph is a secret about a secret."

–Diane Arbus

Leold www.leold.com
by Roger and Salem Salloom© 1997

I think I have Tourette's Syndrome of the hand. I've been making profane hand gestures to cars when they pass my dad on the interstate.



It's an involuntary digital muscular response.

My dad almost got into a fight. So, I promised him for the next 2 weeks I'd keep my right hand in my pocket.

It's only my right hand. Maybe it has been cursed by the devil. Maybe my right hand has been involved in some indecent activity for years and now is suffering from past sins.

Our family minister has Tourette's too. His sermons are very very colorful.

Life is pretty darn good.

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10-14-99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

ACROSS
1 Hearty's partner
5 32 ounces
10 Ninth mo.
14 Lamb's pen name
15 Excessive
16 Small group
17 Temporarily
20 Hot or cold beverage
21 — of measure
22 Last Greek letter
23 A single time only
24 Staffs
26 Like a nocturnal bird
29 Forbids
30 Cushion
33 Wrench, e.g.
34 Lively dance
35 Carnival city
36 Reliability
40 "Talk" workers abbr.
41 Gladiator's place
42 Skye or Wight
43 Cereal grain
44 Abhor
45 Expired
47 Party staples
48 Heaps
49 Fortuneteller's deck
52 Alone
53 Be indebted
56 Vancouver's province
60 Team
61 Hesitate
62 Charged particles
63 Overtake
64 Tacked on
65 For fear that

DOWN
1 Weight
2 Lotion ingredient
3 Milan money
4 Snack
5 Extinguish (a fire)
6 Loosen
7 Mine entrance
8 Jamaican liquor
9 Golfer's peg
10 Stalks
11 New York canal
12 High-pitched sound
13 Roman's garment
18 Attila's people
19 Dwarf tree
23 Greases
24 Island south of Sicily
25 Egyptian symbol
26 Aquatic mammal
27 Garrulous
28 Heel
29 Canned
30 Squeeze
31 Passageway
32 Prescribed medicine
34 Rita Dove and Robert Hass
37 South Pacific island
38 Shawl or cloak
39 Bites
45 Lounged
46 — Ben Adhem
47 — on acts like a grandparent
48 Type of step
49 Recipe amt.
50 Pavarotti piece
51 Disencumbers
52 Type of missile
53 Woodwind
54 Takes home the trophy
55 Direction
57 Mineral spring
58 "It — to Be You"
59 Wire measure

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Fish Munchies
Sheperd's Pie
Soup du Jour
Falafel Burgers

DINNER
Hot Dogs and Beans
Bianco Vegetable Lasagna
Beans and Rice
"How Sweet It Is" Dessert

Worcester

LUNCH
Fish Munchies
Sheperd's Pie
Soup du Jour
Falafel Burgers

DINNER
Hot Dogs and Beans
Bianco Vegetable Lasagna
Beans and Rice
"How Sweet It Is" Dessert

Hampshire

LUNCH
Fish Munchies
Sheperd's Pie
Soup du Jour

DINNER
Hot Dogs and Beans
Bianco Vegetable Lasagna
Beans and Rice
"How Sweet It Is" Dessert

Berkshire

LUNCH
Fish Munchies
Sheperd's Pie
Soup du Jour
Lentil, Macaroni, and Tomatoes

DINNER
Hot Dogs and Beans
Bianco Vegetable Lasagna
Beans and Rice
"How Sweet It Is" Dessert

Today's Staff

Night Editor: Adam Martignetti
Photo Technition: Pam FitzPatrick
Copy Editor: Morgan Tobor
Production Supervisors: Ben Alamed, Brian McDermott
Production Staff: Janine Tangney

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

LET'S GO TO FOX-WOODS! All UMass Seniors, Alumni, and Faculty are invited to take a bus trip on October 16. Tickets are $17 and $18 per. Call the Alumni Office for more info, 545-2317

TEACH FOR AMERICA Info session for all interested students. October 14 at 7pm in 504 Goodell. www.teachforamerica.org

AUTO FOR SALE

95 NEON AT AC AMFM Cass. Excellent Condition. $5500. 585-8086, 582-9077

87 VW JETTA-GLT $1,000 5Spd. Runs strong, good tires, recent clutch, exhaust. 256-6235

For Sale 1995 Mitsubishi Galant. Must sell 587-9224 Great Car.

1990 Honda Civic DX 5 Speed, AM/FM, Hatchback, runs good, and high miles. $1400 or BO 549-6490

EMPLOYMENT

Experienced House Cleaner for family home in Leverett $8hr. Susan 548-9870

SSGET PAID WHILE GOING TO CLASSSS Versity.com, an Internet notetaking company is looking for students to be Class Research Coordinators. Earn while you learn. $8-14/hr. Apply @ www.versity.com

EARN EXTRA CASH workers needed for family weekend, October 29 and 30. Call the Alumni Office to set up an interview, 545-2317

EMPLOYMENT

allstudents.com

Earn $400

per class each sememster by simply Taking Notes! Apply online at www.allstudents.com for all sections of the following undergraduate courses:
Accounting 221 .222
Animal Science 101
Anthropology 100 .102 .103
Astronomy 100
Biology 100 .103 .105 .106
Chemistry 102 .110 .111 .112
Classics 100 .102 .224
Communication 150 .180 .218 .222
Communication 226 .287
Communication Disorders 210
Community Health 129 .160
Computer Science 102 .105
Computer Science 120 .121
Consumer Studies 105
Economics 103 .104 .203
Economics 204 .330 .331
Education 115 .210
English 115 .131
Entomology 126
Environmental Sciences 101
Exercise Science 130 .210
Finance and Operations Management 250 .300
Finance and Operations Management 310 .320 .330
Food Science 101 .120
Geosciences 101 .102 .103
Geosciences 109 .250
History 100 .101 .112
Hotel, Restaurant Travel Administration 100 .130
Linguistics 101
Management 260 .301 .314
Management 315 .330
Marketing 301 .340
Nursing 100
Nutrition 101 .130
Philosophy 100 .110
Physics 100 .131 .132
Plant and soil sciences 100
Political science 101
Psychology 100 .305 .315
Resource economics 211
School og Management 210
Sociology 103 .107 .210 .212 .242
Sport Studies 210
Statistics 111 .140
Theater 100
Women Studies 187
If you're interested in becoming a Note Taker for a course that doesn't appear on this list please submit an application online for review.

Attention Marketing Majors
Currently we are hiring for a Marketing Specialist as well as Note Takers, please apply online at
www.allstudents.com
Get In Get Through Get Out

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phisically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

EMPLOYMENT

Teachers Aides
Wanted for small, innovative learning programs in Amherst. Tutor and supervise small groups of students in elementary, middle, or high school classrooms. Training provided. Great opportunity to prepare for a career in education for for interested individuals. Mass. Dept of Ed Approved Site Based Certification Program H.S. or equivalency required, college training recommended. Full employment benifits available.

Submit a resume and cover letter to:
Jone Messmer #116
30 Industrial Drive East
Northampton, MA 01060

AA/EOE/ADA

WEBMASTER Part-Time Position. QA Computer Consulting (Springfield) has opening for student with excellent graphics and web design skills. Work around your class schedule. $35 per hour to start. First-rate knowledge of development application like NetObjects Fusion, Visual Page or DreamWeaver. Ability to code in HTML. Knowledge of PhotoShop, CorelDraw, CGI, JavaScript. Call Larry at 800-945-4747 or e-mail Admin@QAComputer.com

Human Services - Relief support needed to work with developmentally disabled adults, may lead to permanent hours. Hours include evenings, weekends and/or overnights. Required: HS deploma and driver's license. Starting pay is $7.47 p/h (for relief), $8.35 (for permanent). Locates in South Hadley, Hadley and Belchertown. Call 413 774-2261 (ask for Mary) AA/EOE

EMPLOYMENT

FLEXIBLE PART-TIME Childrens Health Research Abt Associates in nearby Hadley, MA has openings for Telephone Research Interviewers for evening and weekend shifts. We require a minimum of 20 hours/week with flexible scheduling. Applicants must have excellent reading/communication skills, some computer knowledge and a solid work ethic. We offer $6 75/hr to start, regular merit increases to $8.00, health and dental benefits, holiday pay and free shuttle service from the Hampshire Mall. PVTA stop. For more information or to arrange a personal interview, please contact:
Paul R. Bebo Recruiting Coordinator
1-800-792-4514

Baker/Cook/Customer Service Prepare foods,batters, doughs, recipes. In Village Market. FT/PT PM/Weekends 1 mile from campus. Cushman Village 413-549-1953

DP Dough is hiring drivers and kitchen help. Must be able to work nights. Approxiamtely 20hr/wk. Apply at DP Dough.

ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT For teenage bicycle-touring program. Partime until late spring; then full-time through August. Call 800-343-6132 Student Hosteline Program Conway, MA

EMPLOYMENT

Candy Company looking for full time apprentice. Artist/graphic designer must be familiar with Quark, Illustrator, Photoshop - benifit. Cartoon art skills a big plus. Contact Tom Martin 1-888-556-5599

Cashier Wanted self-service station weekends. Must be honest, reliable, good at math. Apply in person Northampton Citco 54 E. Hampton Rd. Rt 10

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raises commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

The Student Government Association is now hiring for the RSO Resource Center. We are accepting applications for the positions of Receptionist, Computer Technician, and RSO Resource Center Manager. Pick up applications in the SGA office, 420 Student Union and please return them to Sandra Brookley by October 20th. If you have any questions, please call Sandra at 545-0343.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals - Free delivery 253-9742

ENTERTAINMENT

AMERICAN SKIING COMPANY Cheapest student season passes! Starting at $299. We'll come to you! Call Mike @ 253-1187 before 10/15

FOR SALE

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

INSTRUCTION

Casco Bay Bartending Classes start soon student discounts call for information 1-800-467-2028 Space is Limited

Afro-Latin Percussion Lessons: Congas, Bongos etc. Have studied and played with some of the best in Cuba, U.S. and Europe. Hilary (413) 967-0466 (413) 237-5069

Saxophone Lessons with working musician; Berklee, UMass grad. Hilary (413) 967-0466 (413) 237-5069

LOST & FOUND

Found: Womens pair of glasses. Found outside of Tobin. To claim please call or come down to The Collegian in the Campus Center basement. 545-3500

Lost Black Covered pocket planner near the pay phones in the lobby of Lederle GRC Low Rise around 3pm Oct 6. Please call Charles Salinetti at (1-800) 225-5979

MUSICIANS

Female Vocalist looking to join up with other musicians! Lead, backup, harmony vocals. Can also play limited guitar. Give me a call and we'll jam! 546-4442 - ask for Jen

SERVICES

Know Your Rights! Do you have questions about your rights? Do yo think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TICKETS

2 Indigo Girl Tickets for Sat. Night @ Mullins great seats. Call Allison 549-1928

TRAVEL

EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 CANCUN JAMAICA For 10 years Class Travel International (CTI) has distinguished itself as the most reliable student event and marketing organization in North America Motivated Reps can go on Spring Break FREE & earn OVER $$$$$ $10,000! $$$$$ Contact Us today for details! 800/328-1509 www.classtravelintl.com

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

Browse icpt.com for ALL Springbreak "2000" hotspots. Need Student Orgs & Sales Reps. Fabulous parties, hotels, prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

I am looking for a student to make a 20-30 minute video-tape of a walk through the UMass-Amherst campus (exterior shots only) to send to my niece in Alaska who's looking at colleges. Please call 1-518-475-0082 Collect

Your Ad Could Be in THIS SPACE!!

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, OCT. 18

FRIDAY, OCT. 22

THURSDAY, OCT. 21

FYIs are public service announcement; printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Your FYI Announcements could be here...

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions.

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

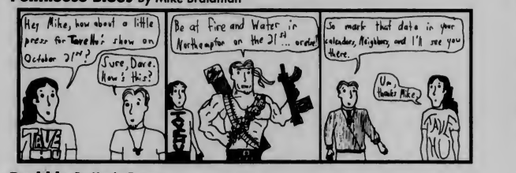
UStore CAMPUS CENTER Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	15	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	16	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	26	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
17	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

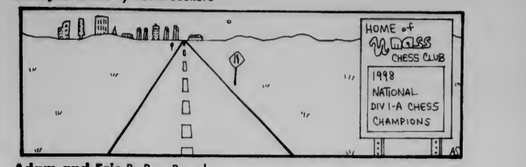
Sorry No TV Listing Available...



Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Penthouse Blues By Mike Braidman



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Adam and Eric By Ross Baruch

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Horoscopes

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22)- You are in need of understanding and affection today, but you must be willing to give as well as receive. You may learn a lot about yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21)- You should not be lacking for support and admiration today. What you have to offer is widely sought, and others know to come right to you for it!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21)- You will seem to know what others are thinking today before they actually share their thoughts with you. Don't get carried away however.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19)- You're in the mood to stay home today, but you can't justify doing so with all you've got on your docket? You can relax a little later on.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18)- What you are missing may not be available to you in the form you most desire, but could be yours if you alter your expectations slightly.

PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20)- You can get a lot of mileage today out of a story told in jest, but which others take quite seriously for a while. Your creativity will shine.

ARIES (March 21- April 19)- You may be having problems at work today with someone who, in reality, reminds you of yourself in the "old days." You know what kind of help to offer.

TAURUS (April 20 – May 20)- You may come upon a new and surprising barrier to communication is an established relationship. It's time to get down to the truth.

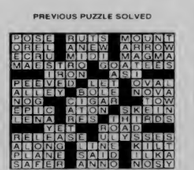
GEMINI (May 21- June 20)- You must make all requests today through the proper channels if you wish to benefit in a timely fashion. Your own legwork might take you too long.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22)- You'll have your chance to shine today, but you must share the spotlight with someone older and wiser than you. You can learn by observing.

LEO (Jul 23 – Aug. 22)- Your attempts to contact someone from your past may fall short of success today, but you'll encounter a surprise in the process.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22)- It's learning time again, and the benefits you'll enjoy as a result will surprise even you! Take care you don't turn a deaf ear to one who knows!

Quote of the Day



"A photograph is a secret about a secret."

–Diane Arbus

ACROSS
1 Hearty's partner
5 32 ounces
10 Ninth mo.
14 Lamb's pen name
15 Excessive
16 Small group
17 Temporarily
20 Hot or cold beverage
21 — of measure
22 Last Greek letter
23 A single time only
24 Staffs
26 Like a nocturnal bird
29 Forbids
30 Cushion
33 Wrench, e.g.
34 Lively dance
35 Carnival city
36 Reliability
40 "Talk" workers, abbr.
41 Gladiator's place
42 Skye or Wight
43 Cereal grain
44 Abhor
45 Expired
47 Party staples
48 Heaps
49 Fortunetellers deck
52 Alone
53 Be indebted
56 Vancouver's province
60 Team
61 Hesitate
62 Charged particles
63 Overtake
64 Tacked on
65 For fear that

DOWN
1 Weight
2 Lobon ingredient
3 Milan money
4 Snack
5 Extinguish (a line)
6 Loosen
7 Mine entrance
8 Jamaican liquor
9 Golfer's peg
10 Stalks
11 New York canal
12 High-pitched sound
13 Roman's garment
18 Attila's people
19 Dwarf tree
23 Greases
24 Island south of Sicily
25 Egyptian symbol
26 Aquatic mammal
27 Garrulous
28 Heel
29 Carried
30 Squeeze
31 Passageway
32 Prescribed medicine
34 Rita Dove and Robert Hass
37 South Pacific island
38 Shawl or cloak
39 Bites
45 Lounged
46 — Ashem
47 — on acts like a grandparent
48 Type of step
49 Recipe amt.
50 Favorite piece
51 Disencumbers
52 Type of missile
53 Woodwind
54 Takes home the trophy
55 Direction
57 Mineral spring
58 "I — to Be You"
59 Wire measure

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10/14/99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Fish Munchies
Sheperd's Pie
Soup du Jour
Falafel Burgers
DINNER
Hot Dogs and Beans
Bianco Vegetable Lasagna
Beans and Rice
"How Sweet It Is" Dessert

Worcester
LUNCH
Fish Munchies
Sheperd's Pie
Soup du Jour
Falafel Burgers
DINNER
Hot Dogs and Beans
Bianco Vegetable Lasagna
Beans and Rice
"How Sweet It Is" Dessert

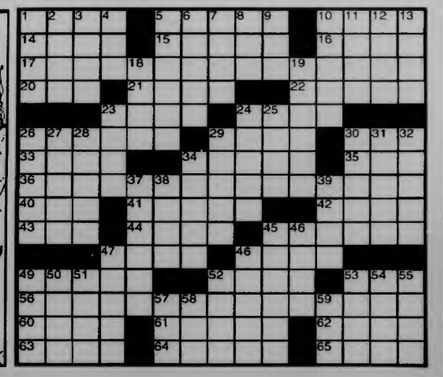
Hampshire
LUNCH
Fish Munchies
Sheperd's Pie
Soup du Jour
DINNER
Hot Dogs and Beans
Bianco Vegetable Lasagna
Beans and Rice
"How Sweet It Is" Dessert

Berkshire
LUNCH
Fish Munchies
Sheperd's Pie
Soup du Jour
Lentil, Macaroni, and Tomatoes
DINNER
Hot Dogs and Beans
Bianco Vegetable Lasagna
Beans and Rice
"How Sweet It Is" Dessert

Today's Staff
Night Editor — Adam Martignetti
Photo Technition — Pam FitzPatrick
Copy Editor — Morgan Tabor
Production Supervisors — Ben Alamed, Brian McDermott
Production Staff — Janine Tangney

Leold www.leold.com
by Roger and Salem Salloom© 1997

I think I have Tourette's Syndrome of the hand. I've been making profane hand gestures to cars when they pass my dad on the interstate.



It's an involuntary digital muscular response.

My dad almost got into a fight. So, I promised him for the next 2 weeks I'd keep my right hand in my pocket.

It's only my right hand. Maybe it has been cursed by the devil. Maybe my right hand has been involved in some indecent activity for years and now is suffering from past sins.

Our family minister has Tourette's too. His sermons are very very colorful.

Life is pretty darn good.

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Thursday, October 14, 1999

Field Hockey comes from behind, flattens PC Friars

UMass back Bruemmer comes up big on both sides of ball in 2-1 win

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Instead of praying for the Friars to falter, the Massachusetts field hockey team instead cranked up its own game in an exciting come-from-behind 2-1 victory yesterday at Richard F. Garber field.

UM showed excellent offensive cohesiveness on its very first possession, as midfielder Jill Fantasia and forward Sarah Bohonowicz traded crisp passes in moving the ball deep into Friar territory before Providence back Julie Tanguay slapped it frantically over her own end line.

UMass forward Kristen Schmidt began a busy offensive day by dribbling through the PC backfield and barreling at keeper Andrea Weyl, only to be tripped up from behind. That set up UM's first penalty corner, less than three minutes into the game. The Minutewomen unveiled some trickery on the free play, as back Anke Bruemmer faked a shot and instead sent a delayed short pass to Schmidt, who's subsequent blast missed wide right.

Providence used a rapid succession of free hits around the 20:51 mark to move within striking distance of UMass keeper Zowie Tucker, but a flamboyant steal by UM's Patty Robinson thwarted the PC drive before a shot could be launched.

"Had Providence connected on a few more of their passes, I think we would've been in big trouble," UM coach Patty Shea said.

The Minutewomen continued to flex their offensive muscle over the next three minutes of play, as a series of pinpoint passes between Robinson and Bohonowicz along the near sideline set up another Schmidt shot and UM's second penalty corner at the 18:26 mark. This time, Bruemmer handled the shooting herself, and unloaded an absolute missile that Weyl just barely managed to glove away from the net. Providence took the ensuing possession and charged down the far sideline into UM territory, until Bruemmer out-positioned Friar Jamie Lerch and snatched away the ball cleanly. But Bruemmer's outlet pass to teammate Nicole Bardell overshot the Ontario native, landing instead on the stick of Friar Katie Willett. Willett evaded the efforts of a pair of UM defenders before dishing to forward Erica Hebert, who hooked a shot around Tucker's left side to stake Providence to a 1-0 lead with 9:56 to play in the half.

The last five minutes of the half were clearly dominated by UMass, as Bruemmer clears set up both Bardell and freshman Erika Whiston with great opportunities to show off their superior open-field dribbling. As the halftime whistle sounded, the Minutewomen were staring down a one-goal deficit, despite clearly outplaying their opposition.

"I felt that we weren't dangerous in the first half," Shea said. "We were hesitant; we weren't going to the ball, we were waiting for it."

The first 10 minutes of the second frame saw both teams stepping up physically, with a number of sequences resulting in players from both teams hitting the turf. Maroon and White co-captain Lucy Koch, who had been waging a tough battle with Friar Hillary Wirtz for much of the game, sent the Illinois native sprawling as both players pursued a loose ball along the near sideline. Bardell also proved she was going full throttle physically, sliding under Friar Willett for a steal that effectively dropped the PC midfielder.

"We started to dive for the ball a lot more than in earlier games," Bruemmer said. "This was a regional game, so we were a lot more physical, playing with more emotion."

Shea utilized a number of substitutions in the second half, bringing in fresh legs that made an immediate impact on the UMass effort. Freshman Stacey Blue entered at the forward position and found herself in position to make two big plays right away. The first was a diving save of an off-the-mark Bruemmer pass; the second was a dynamic shot that Weyl kicked clear.

Another first-year substitute who changed the face of yesterday's action was forward Krysta Johnson; she checked in around the 17:10 mark and immediately paid dividends for the Maroon and White. The New York native used her quickness and stick skills to power into the Providence circle and set up another UM penalty corner with 16:40 to play. This time Bruemmer's aim was true, and the contest was locked at one. Credit the UMass forwards, whose newly found aggression had set up the corner opportunity.

"We just didn't have the drive to go to goal earlier in the game," Bruemmer said. "We would make the extra pass, instead of going to goal and taking the shot. We changed that in the second half, and got a lot of shots."

Once UM found its rhythm offensively, the Friars could only watch in disbelief as the Minutewomen came at Weyl with passion and power. A dynamic transition sequence from Millbauer to Abbott left Semidt isolated against the bewildered PC goalie, setting up yet another Maroon and White penalty corner with 8:16 to play. Robinson and Bruemmer worked the ensuing play to perfection, delaying the shot deceptively until Weyl was almost completely screened. Bruemmer then blasted home the go-ahead goal, as her bench and the home crowd erupted.

"We've been pretty successful all season at penalty corners," Bruemmer said. "Lucy and Patty have done a great job at pushing out and stopping [the ball], and we've incorporated some new passes and tactics."

UM went into its version of "prevent defense" over the final six minutes, using its free hits to dump the ball into the PC end and kill off the clock. When the final whistle sounded, the Minutewomen were left to revel in the thrill of a 2-1 comeback victory.

PAUL BILODEAU/COLLEGIAN

PAUL BILODEAU/COLLEGIAN

Chrissy Millbauer [left], Kaitlin Byron [right] and the rest of the Massachusetts field hockey team took on Providence College yesterday afternoon at Garber Field.

Yankees ride Bernie blast to game one win over Sox

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Army-Navy. USC-UCLA. Celtics-Lakers.

Forget about it.

When the American League Championship Series kicked off last night at Yankee Stadium, it just happened to feature the hands-down biggest rivalry in professional sports. And while the Red Sox and Yankees had never faced each other in post-season play before, no one doubted that this year's matchup of AL East heavyweights would be one for the ages.

And game one certainly did not disappoint, an absolute nail-biter won 4-3 by the Bronx Bombers on a tenth-inning Bernie Williams solo homer.

New York manager Joe Torre spent the three days leading up to last night's showdown trying to solve his own little pinstriped problem: Which of his four pedigreed starters would he send at hard-hitting Boston first? With David Cone, Roger Clemens, Andy Pettitte and Orlando Hernandez all chomping at the bit to take a bite out of Boston, Torre had a "problem" that most playoff managers would die for.

The same could not be said for Boston's Jimy Williams, who's dilapidated staff had seemingly burnt itself out during the Sox' five-game war with Cleveland in round one. Staff ace Pedro Martinez would not be available until game three, forcing Williams to hand the ball to late-season acquisition Kent Mercker against New York's Hernandez.

Mercker hadn't exactly made a name for himself against the Tribe, getting the hook a mere five outs into Sunday's 23-7 game four laugher. But after the release of Mark Portugal in the last week of the season and the ineffectiveness of spot-starter Tim Wakefield against Cleveland, the Sox had no choice but to rely on their lone lefty starter to eat up some innings in the Bronx.

Luckily for Mercker, the Bronx remembered to pack their bats for last night's game. Sox leadoff man Jose Offerman opened the first with a sharp single to center off Hernandez, then scored on a throwing error by NY shortstop Derek Jeter that put John Valentin on third with nobody out. 27 year-old Sox rookie Brian Daubach followed with a single to right, and suddenly the underdog Sox had a 2-0 lead in the house that Ruth built.

The second would see more opportunistic Boston offense, as centerfielder Darren Lewis earned a leadoff walk from Hernandez and stole second. A base knock by Trot Nixon was followed by an infield single by Offerman, pushing home Lewis to make it 3-0 Sox.

Mercker would give back most of that lead in the home half of the second. Yankee Shane Spencer opened the sequence with a two-out single, then '98 World Series MVP Scott Brosius crushed a two-run jack to left to cut the Boston lead to one. Mercker escaped the inning only after a dangerously deep fly to left by Chuck Knoblauch.

Williams had seen enough from the southpaw after four frames, opting to go with reliever Rich Garces out of the pen to start the New York fifth. "El Guapo" continued the brilliance that made him Boston's bullpen ERA champ, sitting down all six men he faced in order over the next two innings.

But when Williams opted to lift Garces and send Derek Lowe to the mound for the NY seventh, the heavy-handed manager may have finally been bitten by his switch-happy tactics. The usually solid Lowe allowed a leadoff single to Brosius, who was subsequently moved over by a

Turn to Baseball, page 12

Despite improbable odds, Fenway's faithful still seeking October victories

Jennifer Cromier
Collegian Correspondent

It's that time of year again.

A time when typically rational human beings turn into masochistic gluttons for punishment. When, usually level-headed people become paranoid, superstitious freaks. When, normally serene individuals writhe with terror at the mere uttering of the number 1918.

Yup, you guessed it. It's October in Boston, and the Red Sox are making another run at the post season.

For reasons beyond the realm of sanity, the rivers of the Olde Towne Team optimism flow most freely during the autumn months. Leave it to Boston fans to get it backwards. In most cities, spring training is the time of hope and confidence. Not for Sox fans. In Red Sox Nation, spring training is tinged with cynicism, dire predictions, and disdainful criticisms hurled at management's latest off-season folly.

But in October...suddenly, that weak line-up everyone was ridiculing is expected to propel the Sox to a pennant. The beleaguered bullpen that was mocked by the Fellowship of the Miserable is supposed to capture the ever-evasive World Series title.

This year's version of the starry-eyed Fenway Faithful gang have a whole new collection of superstitions and omens to wave in the faces of the few disparaging cynics in the crowd. There's the uneaten, unwrapped Baby Ruth candy bar that manager Jimy Williams carries with him at all times. Or the time when Sox announcers Sean McDonough and Jerry Remy arranged for a mini bean-bag version of Wally the Green Monster to stare down an engraved picture of Babe Ruth at Yankee Stadium in an attempt to break the curse.

Then there's the annual numbers game. Williams' hotel room number in Cleveland was 1916, the year that the Babe won the series for the Sox. Not to mention the fact that 1998-1918=81 which is 18 backwards (I know, I know, that one's pathetic, but I kid you not—someone told me this with great excitement).

This year, the optimism seems more pervasive than ever before. It could be that this version of the Olde Towne Team is an easily likeable group of overachieving, gutsy, and gritty hard workers. No Mo Vaughn to "eat breakfast" at the Foxy Lady, no Roger Clemens to whine about (gasp) carrying his own luggage, and no egotistical money-hungry imbeciles that usually crowd the Sox clubhouse.

Instead, we hear heart-warming stories about 28 teammates gathering together to watch an Oakland game that could clinch a playoff berth for the Sox. We see unassuming players like Nomar Garciaparra and Brian Daubach humbly refuse to take credit for a good play. We watch our ho-hum manager proudly talk about how his close-knit team truly has a passion for the game of baseball. How can we not root for these guys?

Love'em or hate'em, it is not likely that the 1999 edition of the Boston Red Sox will cure 81 years of frustration, angst, and heartbreak. Yes, they have Pedro and Nomar, but neither is performing at peak condition. The brief fireworks provided by John Valentin (7 RBI, Game Four) and Troy O'Leary (7 RBI, Game Five) were galvanizing, but what are the chances of it happening again?

The burden of the Curse of the Bambino now falls upon the shoulders of a Martinez, but not the one with 23 wins, 313 Ks, 37 walks, and a 2.07 ERA. Ramon Martinez, the older, more subdued brother holds the fate of the Olde Towne Team is his right hand. Consider this: Pedro, after his six inning, no hit masterpiece against the Tribe, will only be available to pitch two games against the dreaded Yanks. Unless the Sox get bat-happy again and put up another 23 runs (not bloody likely), they need Ramon to rack up a pair of wins if they want to advance to the World Series. The Sox must invest

Turn to Red Sox, page 11

NY Mets hoping to get past Braves in playoffs

By Jeff Goldberg
The Hartford Courant

ATLANTA - Kenny Rogers doesn't have many memories of pitching in Atlanta. He has pitched in this city once and lasted two innings.

It is unlikely that anyone else would remember that start either - except it came in Game 4 of the 1996 World Series.

Pitching for the Yankees on Oct. 23, 1996, the left-hander allowed five runs on five hits and two walks. Thanks to Jim Leyritz, the Yankees came back and won in extra innings - and eventually won the series.

"I remember getting hit and giving up a few," Rogers said. "I don't remember a whole lot. I wasn't in the game that long."

Rogers will pitched in Atlanta again yesterday, starting Game 2 of the National League Championship Series for the Mets.

"The hard times I went through with the Yankees made me better in a lot of ways," said Rogers, who went 18-15 in two seasons with the Yankees. "You name it, I probably went through it the first time with the Yankees."

With more prodding, Rogers recalled the inning in which he gave up four runs and left with the Yankees trailing, 5-0. Specifically, he remembered Jeff Blauser's second-inning squeeze bunt - and the out that never was.

"I went to field it and throw to first, and there was nobody there (covering)," Rogers said. "That really caused a flood."

That appearance added to Rogers' reputation as a pitcher who shrinks in big games. Such talk resurfaced last week, when he allowed four runs in 4 innings in the 7-1 loss to the Diamondbacks in Game 2 of the Division Series.

But Mets Manager Bobby Valentine rejects such notions.

Rogers, acquired from the Athletics in July, is talking about staying with the Mets.

"Basically, from Day 1 since I've been here, I've been accepted," Rogers said. "I've gotten the chance to go out and show that I could pitch."

Mike Piazza was on the field before the game with his left thumb uncovered. And it appeared to be the same size as his right one. Healthy again after missing the last two games of the Division Series, Piazza was back in the lineup Tuesday, batting in his customary cleanup spot.

Andres Galarraga threw out the ceremonial first pitch to a rousing standing ovation. Galarraga has gone from cancer victim to cancer survivor. Diagnosed with non-Hodgkin's lymphoma during spring training, Galarraga said he's now cancer-free and that he had his last radiation and chemotherapy treatments five weeks ago.

Braves Manager Bobby Cox made a surprising move of sorts, starting Walt Weiss at shortstop. Jose Hernandez has been the primary starter for Atlanta since being acquired July 31. Weiss, who spent considerable time on the disabled list because of a strained left quad and started only 69 games, made the biggest play of the Division Series against Houston in Game 3, turning a potential winning hit into a forceout at the plate.

"He looked good in Houston and (hitting instructor) Don Baylor has him swinging a lot better now," Cox said. "He's a great defensive shortstop and I thought I'd go that way."

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CXV Issue 28 — Friday, October 15, 1999

Police put stop to horseplay

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Police estimated that after Bernie Williams beat the Boston Red Sox with a tenth-inning homerun Wednesday night, 400-500 students gathered in the pyramid section of Southwest.

According to Deputy Chief of Police Barbara O'Connor, the students gathered in what was described to her by officers on the scene as "good, clean fun."

"Individuals were shouting back and forth at one another, so it was probably a mix of Yankees fans and Red Sox fans," O'Connor said. "It was predominantly rowdy behavior, but nothing really bordering on criminal or dangerous."

One student was arrested during the celebration, O'Connor said. Joseph E. Clayton, a 21-year-old sophomore majoring in animal science, was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct and mistreatment to animals owned by police agencies.

"There was an individual [Clayton] in Southwest who chanting that the Yankees suck, and he was doing it inches away from a police officer," O'Connor said. "There was an officer on horse, and Clayton started clapping his hands trying to get the horses attention."

According to O'Connor, the officer on horseback warned the student to stop, but the individual continued. She said that people around Clayton realized what was going on, but that the officer was still concerned about safety.

"The student never really stopped yelling and clapping loudly," O'Connor said. "The officer was worried about the rest of the crowd, so the student was taken into custody."

Clayton was taken to court today and a pre-trial hearing was scheduled for November. Should he not arrive for the hearing, he will be fined $1,000.

According to the law, Clayton faced a fine of at least $100 and not more than $500. He could face a maximum of two and half years in prison with the fines.

O'Connor said that people can absolutely not do what Clayton did.

"It doesn't just put the person and the officer in the horse in danger, but also everyone nearby," O'Connor said. "This kind of conduct will not be tolerated and arrests will be made."

O'Connor said that officers are always ready for celebrations like those on both Wednesday and Monday nights. She said that officers in future celebrations would be in the crowd, both in uniform and out of uniform.

COLLEGIAN STAFF PHOTO

Refuge with a book
Junior Journalism major Mikkel Roer reads behind the shelter of a brick wall outside the Student Union yesterday.

Privatization conflict remains volatile

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Employees of the University of Massachusetts campus businesses are taking action against the threat of privatization within the college community.

According to Bob Connolly, a member of the Board of Trustees, a pre-bidders conference was held on Oct. 9, which leaves bids for those interested in on-campus business spots due on Nov. 9. Any company interested in acquiring the location may place a bid, including currently existing campus businesses.

The Campus Community Coalition was formed to try and prevent privatization on the UMass campus. The Coalition is made up of the AFSCME, GEO, MSP, SEIU and USA union employees, as well as student groups and campus students. According to Jeanne Cashman, a 12-year employee of the Textbook Annex and a member of the Campus Community Coalition, one of the main reasons for the opposition to privatization is the major competition that it creates with the already existing student organizations.

"I think that it would effect businesses significantly, and the students would lose," Cashman said.

Sarah Angers, an UMass student and employee of Sweets and More also expressed her feelings against privatization. Angers said some of the negatives to privatization were that if it were to go into practice, foreign exchange students could not get jobs, and prices would likely increase while quality and variety would decrease. Angers said the businesses are a "student's way to get involved in business," and privatization would take these opportunities away from students.

Angers said the University was only emphasizing the positive aspects of privatization and not addressing the negative issues. She said this perspective allows for many students on campus who "don't understand the negatives of privatization."

Another employee of Sweets and More, Amanda Zafrin, also spoke out against privatization. Zafrin said privatization hurts both students and student businesses.

"It is hard for student businesses to compete with large corporations," Zafrin said. She also expressed concern that the corporations "won't hire students and won't pay benefits."

The Coalition as a whole has stated that there are many negative issues that are involved in the privatization of UMass. Privatization will mean increased prices for products and services, fewer student jobs, less flexibility for student workers, loss of full-time benefited jobs for workers with families and lower wages for employees.

Both employees at Sweets and More and members of the Campus Community Coalition have both been trying to communicate to the UMass community the problems with privatization. They have spread the word through petitions, pamphlets and other types of paper handouts in order to make students more aware of the problem. Still, they hope that more students will get involved in the fight to stop privatization.

In contrast, Connolly explained that the Board of Trustees was "not making any drastic changes," in the issue of privatization. According to him, the board is simply interested in, "determining what the alternatives are."

"The board and the president are interested in exploring this option," Connolly said.

Town fights E. coli breakout

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

Two private wells in Belchertown tested positive for the E. coli bacteria last Tuesday, Town Administrator Gary L. Brougham said in a Monday article.

Brougham declined to comment on the issue.

The source of the contamination has not been identified and according to Superintendent of Schools Richard Pazasis, this isn't the first time the town has had to deal with the problem.

A few weeks ago, the water system at two elementary schools on state school property tested positive for the E. coli bacteria.

Water at neighboring town had a recent problem with E. coli bacteria in its public water system and had to chlorinate their water to rid the bacteria from the system. The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) was not able to determine the source, but has since deemed that the water safe to drink.

"I'm having all our schools tested separately," Pazasis said. "So far, all the tests have come back negative."

He said that the other public schools in Belchertown have not been affected with the bacteria and believes it has something to do with the fact that the two affected schools get their water from the same old water system. He said the source of the E. coli may have had something to do with the old pipes.

"I'm having the Quabin labs test the school waters one more time as a precaution," Pazasis said. "I'm going to wait until we can connect to different [water] pipes before taking the bottled water out of the two schools."

Poland Spring has been delivering water for the past two weeks to the schools but he said he doesn't believe there is any further concern as to the presence of E. coli in their water.

"The source has not been found. It was a temporary issue and they [DEP] chlorinated and then tested the water many times," Pazasis said. "There's no more E. coli."

Turn to E.COLI, page 2

UM grad students branch out with shopping website

By Andrea M. Peers
Collegian Staff

Graduate students from the University of Massachusetts have created a new shopping portal, ShopLoco.com, making online shopping more efficient. The site provides a new way to shop online, according to one of the designers, Pamela Eisermann.

"We are taking an old idea and making it better, and easier for browsers to shop on line," Eisermann said. The site combines every category of shopping into one main site.

The idea started over the summer, when Anthony Asare, an MBA student, and Emmanuel Agu, a computer engineering Ph.D. student, brainstormed and decided to go with the shopping site. Both attended a "boot camp" run by former Apple Company executive Guy Kawasaki, which taught young entrepreneurs how to create new Internet businesses. The program showed Asare and Agu how to get funding, start a site and avoid problems down the road.

"The camp gave us real pointers like funding, how to pitch an idea and how to avoid mistakes," Agu said.

Asare and Agu teamed up with Eisermann and Ruth Malkin, also in the MBA program, to begin the website. The team spent four months working intensely, which they said paid off in a total team effort. All information for the site was hand-gathered, and now offers browsers a new spin on shopping. The site includes over 15,000 categorized store links. Categories include Department Stores, Books, Cards, Automobiles, Flowers and Bath and Beauty. New categories in the works include Holiday Shopping, Food and Beverage and Fashion.

The main goal of the site is to showcase new stores and possibilities that other sites don't offer, Eisermann said. Along the way to their goal the group created a feature called "Off the Beaten Path." The feature takes the user to cities across the United States, allowing the user to look at interesting shops that usually go unmentioned.

"With so many e-giants vying for consumer attention, the smaller stores often fall to get noticed," Agu said. "ShopLoco wants to provide a venue for them alongside the larger stores to offer consumers more choice."

ShopLoco is also planning to enrich the online shopping experience with new customer reviews of stores, as well as feedback from browsers. The reviews will look at stores from all angles, including the quality of merchandise, shipping fees and credit card problems.

ShopLoco was also featured in the Boston Globe for its newfound success. The team hopes to continue advertising the site with mailing lists, ads in papers and online advertising. Meanwhile, the site will try to make it possible for shoppers to get what they want, all in one place.

"We try to accommodate all the different ways that people try to shop," Eisermann said. "The site makes it possible to bring everything to one site."

To visit the site, go to www.shoploco.com.

MICHELE GIANNOTTI/COLLEGIAN

The pumpkin patch
Mary Curley, a Freshman Pre-Communications major, shops at the Environmental Horticulture club's pumpkin sale yesterday.

Former Black Panther to address conference

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

Past chairman of the Black Panther Party Elaine Brown will be visiting the area this weekend as a keynote speaker for a leadership conference at Smith College. Brown now spends her time as an activist in organizations aimed at improving the lives of poor children.

The first and only woman to run the Black Panther Party, Brown will speak in Wright Hall Auditorium at Smith College at 5 p.m. on Saturday.

The student organizers for the conference said Brown's will be a beneficial voice for students to hear.

"We felt that leaders come in all varieties, they are not only the CEO of a large company or the President. Brown is an important leader and with her varied background will have much to say to young people," said Ann Scanahan, Public Affairs Officer at Smith College.

Brown's speech is part of a full day of events surrounding the idea of leadership. The day will begin at 9:30 a.m. with a panel of Smith alumni speaking. Following the panel, Smith students may sign up to attend various workshops during the day ranging in topics, including how to build a resume.

Brown has dedicated her life to improving the social as well as economic conditions of less fortunate individuals in the United States. In addition to her involvement with the paramilitary organization, she has run for public office and spent much time in North Korea, Vietnam, China, Russia and Cuba. She has documented her experiences from her start in the ghettos of Philadelphia to her leadership with the Panthers in her memoir, A Taste of Power, published in 1993.

Her next book focuses on her current work with Mothers Advocating Juvenile Justice. Michael Lewis, otherwise known as "Little B" is serving a life sentence at age 14 for a crime he said he did not commit. Brown's new book explores Lewis' situation. Brown feels strongly about Lewis' position and is an advocate for Michael and other children in the same situation.

Brown has also formed a nonprofit educational corporation, "Fields of Flowers, Inc." The corporation is working toward creating an education center in Atlanta, which Brown hopes will serve as a model for other communities all over the country to follow.

Elaine Brown

Turn to PANTHER, page 2

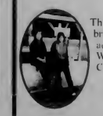
EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 59 LOW: 34	HIGH: 67 LOW: 45	HIGH: 65 LOW: 18

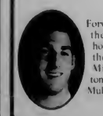
SOURCE: CNN.COM



BoSox or Bronx Bombers?

The question of the week seems to be "Red Sox or Yankees?" Find out what students think inside.

ARTS PAGE 3



Closet to Fine

The Indigo Girls are bringing their trademark acoustic sounds to the William H. Mullins Center tomorrow night.

ARTS PAGE 5

Slam Man

Forward Mike Babul and the rest of the UMass hoop squad will kick off the '99 campaign with Midnight Madness tonight at the William D. Mullins Center.

SPORTS PAGE 8

Arts & Living 5
Comics 7
Crossword 7
Editorial 4
News 1
Sports 8

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Andrea Crane • Photos by Kara Stokes

Who's it going to be: Red Sox or Yankees?

Definitely the Red Sox. They have a better pitching staff, and they're my favorite team."

Edward Breen
Freshman
Engineering

"The Yankees. I'm from Brooklyn. I have to have hometown pride. Hey, history tells the tale."

Meghan Lynch
Junior
Photography

"The Red Sox. It's been 81 years, so we're definitely due for a title. Not to mention, Pedro Martinez is a sure win."

Steve Conti
Freshman
Undeclared

"The Red Sox in seven games. They always do well when the odds are against them."

Maurice Caprice
Senior
Legal Studies

"I'm rooting for the Red Sox. I really got into the game last night, so we'll see what happens."

Merilee Tyau-Wong
Junior
Psychology and Sociology

"I don't know. I don't really follow baseball."

Tania Hinds
Sophomore Microbiology

Corrections

The headline for an article that ran in yesterday's issue, "Professor still stirs up controversy: Ex-prof unleashes opinions," was incorrect, and the byline was omitted. Daphne Patai is currently a professor. Jake Lilien wrote the article. The Collegian regrets the error.

Collegian- All the news that fits

Japanese financial merger creates world's second largest bank

By Clay Chandler
Washington Post

TOKYO – Setting aside a rivalry that goes back centuries, two of Japan's most powerful commercial lenders Thursday announced tentative plans to merger into what would become the world's second largest bank.

Executives from Osaka-based Sumitomo Bank Ltd and Tokyo-based Sakura Bank Ltd confirmed they plan to unite by 2002 in order to cut costs, broaden their business capabilities and pump more money into computers and on-line services.

The announcement – the third of its kind in as many months – was greeted with applause from analysts and investors, many of whom have gazed upon Japanese banks with jaundiced eyes for years.

"You wait and wait for things to start happening around here and just when you're about ready to throw in the towel in disgust – wham! – it all starts happening at once," said J. Brian Waterhouse, a

Turn to BANK page 3

■ e.coli

continued from page 1

Even though the affected schools lie near the town line, Pazasis told the town he and the DEP are concerned of the bacteria spreading from the original source, still undetermined, into other water lines connected to the town water supply.

However, some residents have privately owned wells and do not get their water from a town water supply. Pazasis said this would be a likely reasoning to explain the recent contamination.

"They thought it was isolated, but to protect everyone on the town water line they set a boil alert and have been working with the Town Health Officials to monitor the source," Pazasis said.

A boil alert was in effect for the entire town over the last two weeks and it recommended that residents boil water for approximately five to ten minutes to dispose of any contamination products.

However, the alert was lifted by the DEP on the same day the positive reading was released indicating the presence of E. coli in the wells.

The town was directed by DEP to continue chlorinating the system through next week to ensure the bacteria has been eliminated from the system.

Still, according to Pazasis, there is no report of an individual affected with the bacteria. Some common symptoms of E. coli bacteria include nausea, vomiting, cramps and diarrhea.

Judy Metcalf, director of public health in Belchertown, said owners with private wells should have their water tested immediately. She commented that contamination is most common in shallow wells because material such as fecal bacteria can sometimes build up in the water.

Pazasis commented on how positive he is now that the school has tested negative for E. coli bacteria.

"At least the town water has been taken care of and that's what the schools connected to," Pazasis said.

Council Travel

SALE EXTRAVAGANZA

LONDON $85
PARIS $115
LISBON $120
AMSTERDAM $125
ROME $145

Each way based on RT purchase, taxes apply, travel dates: 1st Nov-31st March (some restrictions apply), non-refundable, subject to availability, student youth only, ISIC/ITIC required, age restriction may apply

[Extended hours - retail shops and 24 Hr Rez center]

44 Main Street
Amherst MA
413-256-1261

Reservations & Payments must be made between Oct.19 - Oct 22nd

1-800-2COUNCIL
www.counciltravel.com

MIDNIGHT MADNESS!

10:30 pm Friday, October 15th
at The Mullins Center

There will be fireworks, contests, giveaways and much more!

Get the 1999-2000 UMASS Basketball Poster FREE!

FREE TO PUBLIC

For Tickets: Call the Athletic Ticket Office at 545-0810
(Tickets Needed for Contest Purposes Only- Not for Admission)

We take OCMP

BUFFALO Wings DOMINO'S PIZZA

AMHERST/HADLEY
256-8911
Hours: Sun.-Weds. 11 am-3am
Thurs.-Sat. 11 am-4 am

$2 OFF ANY PIZZA VALID 11AM-11:30 PM Expires: 10/30/99
$3 OFF ANY LARGE OR EXTRA LARGE PIZZA VALID 11AM-11:30 PM Expires: 10/30/99
$4 OFF ANY EXTRA LARGE PIZZA VALID 11AM-11:30 PM Expires: 10/30/99

Medium Cheese Pizza $7.49
Large Cheese Pizza $9.49
Extra Cheese Pizza $11.49

HELP WANTED :
Pays $60 to $120 Per Shift

■ bank

continued from page 2

veteran Japan bank watcher at HSBC Securities (Japan) Ltd. "I think we're right at the beginning of major transformation in the Japanese financial sector."

Investors appeared to share that view. The Nikkei stock average closed down slightly, but bank shares soared, with Sakura Bank's stock climbing 11.1 percent and Sumitomo Bank's rising 10.9 percent.

With yesterday's gains, share prices for Japan's major banks have climbed a dizzying 225 percent since last October. Analysts say that is particularly impressive given that only one player, Bank of Tokyo-Mitsubishi Ltd., earned a profit in the most recent fiscal year.

Sumitomo Bank and Sakura Bank have a combined asset value of $923 billion. Historically, they have functioned as the vital center of Japan's fiercely competitive industrial groups, which go by the name "keiretsu." Sakura Bank, for example, serves as the main bank of the venerable Mitsui group, whose blue chip roster includes Mitsui & Co., the global trading house; Mitsui Fudosan Co., the giant real estate developer; Mitsui Engineering & Shipbuilding Co.; and the Mitsukoshi department store chain.

Sumitomo Bank's key customers include: Sumitomo Corp., Sumitomo Heavy Industries Ltd.; Sumitomo Metal Mining Co. and electronics behemoth NEC Corp.

Analysts in Tokyo predicted that the bank union would be followed by a flurry of "shotgun weddings" among bank clients.

"This creates tremendous pressure on the banks to restructure borrowers with more enthusiasm than they've shown in the past," said Kathy Matsui, a Japanese strategist at Goldman Sachs.

Many experts described the Sumitomo-Sakura tie-up as part of much broader restructuring process that could eventually leave Japan with only four or five major banks. In August, three banks – Dai-Ichi Kangyo Bank, Ltd., Fuji Bank, Ltd and the Industrial Bank of Japan, Ltd. – announced plans to merge operations by 2002, creating the world's largest banking group with assets of $1.3 trillion. Western bank analysts here have begun to call the combination "Godzilla Bank."

Earlier this month, Asahi Bank Ltd and Tokai Bank Ltd also announced plans to merge producing an institution with combined assets of about $500 billion. Currently, Tokyo-Mitsubishi is Japan's largest bank, with assets of about $650 billion.

Executives from Sumitomo and Sakura said that, over the next 5 years, they plan to eliminate 9,300 of their total 33,000 employees. They also said they expected to close about 183 of their total 853 branches before merging.

But many bank analysts contend that the main objective of the recent flurry of mergers is less to slash payrolls and close branches than to achieve economies of scale necessary to support huge new investments in information technology.

Japanese banks spend about a third as much on information technology as their U.S. and European counterparts, according to analysts, and lag far behind in on-line banking and computerized asset management.

NICOLE HANNA / COLLEGIAN

Saddling up
Animal Science major Katelyn Little prepares to go horseback riding in her class at Hadley Horse farm yesterday.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

It's a bird, it's a plane.....
A low flying plane intersects with the mighty W.E.B. Dubois library.

Pakistani military takes action after overthrow

By Pamela Constable and Kamran Khan
Washington Post

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan – Pakistani army troops sealed off the National Assembly building yesterday, one day before parliament was scheduled to meet as military leaders who overthrew the country's democratically elected leadership maintained a public silence about their plans for forming a new government.

Top military officials were said to be nearing the final stages of preparing an ambitious, long-range plan to overhaul Pakistan's entire political system, which is widely viewed as corrupt and inefficient. The officials have been holding private talks with legal experts, government officials and political leaders for the past two days.

"There is no doubt in our minds that the world will never accept military rule, but we are in for the long haul," said a senior army official who is close to the discussions. "We have decided we must cleanse a political system that allows corrupt people to decide the destiny of our people. We must cleanse it once and for all."

The army, headed by chief of staff Gen. Pervez Musharraf, appears to feel bolstered by the nearly universal outpouring of public support among Pakistanis it has received since deposing Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif and his top aides Tuesday in a bloodless coup. The army seized power hours after Sharif ordered Musharraf's resignation, and Sharif and his top aides are now in army custody.

Musharraf, who has not addressed the public since a nationally televised appearance early Wednesday, has yet to declare martial law, leaving the country's political life in limbo and the country's 135 million citizens uncertain about the future.

Across the capital Thursday, however, people from all walks of life expressed gratitude and relief at the army takeover, the fourth such military intervention in Pakistan's 52-year history. They described Sharif as an autocratic and arrogant leader who had blocked all constitutional avenues of dissent, and who had failed on his promises to revive the country's ailing economy.

"People very much appreciate this thing. The government we had was too proud and its policies were not good for the country," said Mohammed Amin, 43, a drapery seller. "We all want democracy, not martial law, but Allah knows what he is doing and what we need."

"The entire nation has heaved a sigh of relief," said Khurshid Ahmed, a scholar and former senator from the Islamic Jamaat-I-Islami Party. "Nobody wants martial law, but we need a transition to a system that works. The greatest threat to democracy is not the army, it is the political and economic mafia that have ruined the country."

It remained unclear tonight what form of government military leaders would try to establish. Observers said the most likely would be a caretaker regime composed of technocrats and senior civilian leaders, with army backing behind the scenes, and that elections or a plebiscite would be held in the future.

Military officials were said to be seeking the support of the Supreme Court before announcing such a government, and dozens of names of potential members circulated in the capital today. The officials were also said to be moving cautiously in their planning, which appears to have begun only after the abrupt Tuesday takeover.

"The most workable solution is one in which the Supreme Court validates their actions on grounds of necessity," said Hafiz Pirzada, a leading constitutional expert. "It's incredible to see how the people have accepted this with open hearts and arms, but they need to add legality to the morality of their actions."

It seemed increasingly clear Thursday that the military will not turn to parliament for a political solution. Some observers had suggested that the army might seek a vote of no-confidence in Sharif from the National Assembly at its meeting today, thus providing a constitutional rationale for his ouster. But yesterday afternoon troops were sent to seal off the National Assembly building, sending a strong signal that no legislative session will be permitted.

"There is no question of a return to the former political setup," said one army official. He said the military wanted to reform the constitution and political process, and that it intended to take a neutral stance in partisan politics.

In addition to garnering widespread expressions of public support, the military appeared to be gaining limited approval from some Western diplomats. One diplomat said today that he was optimistic Musharraf and his aides will take responsible steps in a variety of policy areas. He also said the military was "bending over backwards" to legitimize the takeover and make it palatable to foreign governments, which have reacted with alarm and concern at the military takeover.

When news breaks, we fix it!!!

Michael's Billards & Sports Bar
10A Belchertown Road
Amherst, MA 01002
256-8284
Located near the Colonial Village bus stop at the corner of rte. 9 and S. East St.
Friday Night @ 10:00 "B.J."
Saturday Night @ 10:00 "The Basement Dwellers"
Single Ca$h Tournament Every Thurs. Night at 7:30pm
Double Elimination
$5.00/person
UMass Best! 1998

SUNDAY BRUNCH
5 Brunch Platter Meals
$4.99
Saturday - Sunday
10 a.m. - 3 p.m.
Applebee's Neighborhood Grill & Bar
Applebee's
100 Westgate Center Drive • Rte 9 & Rte. 116, Hadley • (413) 253-5799

Night Graphics Meeting Tuesday October 19

Entertainment, Food, & Giveaways
AMHERSTONLINE.COM
Bookmark It!™

WORLD HEALING CELEBRATION

Saturday, October 23
7 - 11 pm
Unitarian Church
220 main Street
Northampton, MA

featuring
EZEKIEL
channeled by Daniel Schon Ebon including

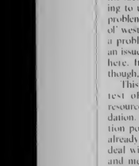
WORLD HEALING MEDITATION
accompanied by Mark Kelso
followed by the soul-filled melodies of Vikki True

reservations accepted for this FREE event
donations gratefully accepted
(413) 637-6196 (413) 621-5208

MAKE A DIFFERENCE

todd oldham
dirty wash jeans



ZANA
downtown Amherst

Imagine all the people

The Earth's population reached 6 billion this Tuesday. Six billion. There are 6,000,000,000 folks out there now. While I'm never one to put down a reason to celebrate, this figure is creating some panic about what to do with all of us. The crunch of space and resources is going to affect us all.

Since we won't be moving to Nabou until NASA gets the metric system down, population researchers are trying to understand how to deal with the problem at hand. Most of us in the good ol' western countries think we don't have a problem; overpopulation is obviously an issue over in Africa and Asia, but not here. It is quickly becoming apparent, though, that it is our problem.

Christine Ravinski

This crowd is going to put us to the test of how to stretch our natural resources and deal with ecological degradation. With our grain production, irrigation potential and acres of arable land already on the decline, we will have to deal with larger-scale food distribution and more starvation. We will need to handle new levels of poverty, immigration and labor supply, urbanization and support for the aged. The furor will rise over questions of adoption and social strain as well as over medical issues like abortion, artificial insemination and cloning technology.

Even though population in some western countries is slowly decreasing, we are now living longer than ever. Joseph Chamie, director of the United Nations' population program, was quoted in Monday's USA Today stating that this is the first time in history more people are alive over the age of 65 than younger than 15.

This means our generation will be supporting a growing number of retirees while facing dependence later on a dwindling number of children. (This is to say nothing for those lone Chinese sons who will be supporting their entire families.) A less-discussed effect of our aging population is that the declining number of young workers will create a void in the labor force. American and European countries will be forced to accept a flood of immigrants to keep their economies running. This will strain cultural identities and probably add an increased burden on welfare systems.

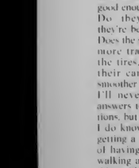
The economic situation will encourage a flood of people into the cities, as it has been doing for the past hundred years. Urban sprawl will abound. In places like Singapore, the entire population is already urban. Are we ready for this?

More pressing is the ecological impact our numbers will create. Remember that most of us westerners only have 1.5 children on average, if any. Remember too, though, who it is that's using up the natural resources. It's not those burgeoning families living in shacks on the outskirts of Sao Paulo. It's us, singularly driving our cars around. (And parking illegally in my purple lot, darn it.)

Every two American children in a typical household will consume the same resources as 66 East Indian children or 1,000 Ethiopian children. So now, where is the problem?

Americans desperately need to stop blaming everyone else's babies for the situation and start living less wastefully. Take better care of your car, for starters. The EPA estimates that vehicle travel in the U.S. doubles every 20 years, and while bike-riders and walkers are increasing, my purple lot is still suspiciously over-packed. We can use a lot less gas just by keeping the fluids filled, inflating the tires fully and going easy on the AC. We'll also save a lot of money just by slowing speeds when we're not in a hurry and doing all our errands in one outing. Let's use those free busses more! Try eating by candlelight on occasion or volunteering for a clean-up program with your friends some weekend. Conservation doesn't have to be painful.

Although it's been pounded into the ground, we really need to recycle more. They put the bins right in our dorm rooms — it doesn't get much easier. Besides a terrific amount of waste, landfill trash creates a lot of greenhouse gasses. Do any of you out there not know someone, or know of someone, who has had to deal with skin cancer? According to the EPA, if we reduced waste to 1990 levels and increased recycling to 35 percent, greenhouse gasses would be affected as if seven million cars were taken off the road for a year.



So be fruitful and multiply, my friends, but teach your kids to recycle, not to leave the milk out, and to put on a sweater before turning up the thermostat. Even though 10 times more women in developing nations have access to contraceptives now than 20 years ago, we still increase the global population by about 78 million people every year. There's nowhere left to go, and we're all in this together.

Christine Ravinski is a U-Mass student.

Nowhere to walk

What do the terms sidewalk, walkway and Interstate 95 all have in common? Apparently they're all great places to drive! I was walking on the little path en-route to Thompson Hall last week when my life nearly ended again. Why must people on this campus drive on the sidewalk? Is the road not good enough for them?

Ryan Bevilacqua

Do they feel that they're better than us? Does the sidewalk have more traction under the tires, thus giving their car or truck a smoother ride? I guess I'll never know the answers to these questions, but the one thing I do know is that I'm getting a little bit sick of having to yield my walking area to something with four or more wheels.

Let's take the time to break down the word "Sidewalk." It pretty much consists of two parts. If Jack Handy were breaking it down he'd say "Side" and "alk," but he's not breaking it down. I am. The two words here are obviously "Side" and "Walk."

I never took any Latin in high school, and I'm not quite sure where the roots of these two words come from, but I'm sure that when the ancient people such as John, the Word choosing guy, were choosing the meaning of words they thought somewhere along the lines of "Hmm, we need a word that means 'not the middle.' I've got it: Side! We can use this word to determine the place you are if you're not directly in the center. Hundreds of years from now, when 18-year-old girls can get breast implants and sing about others 'hitting them one more time,' people won't be able to drive their luxurious gas-powered, flying cars on this Side because the Side is not for driving on!" The response would be something like "You're right, John, Side is such a terrific word, and I'd really like to get one of those flying cars!"

After months of wondering John as a God, for coming up with the term Side, the citizens came to John with a new problem. "John," they exclaimed, "we need a word that means 'not driving or riding our horses and donkeys.'" John thought long and hard with this one. He drove around on the streets in his gas powered, flying Mercedes (notice I said "on the streets, and not "on the side") After almost a week of thinking, John stood in front of a huge podium and yelled out, "The word for 'not driving' will be known as..." John died of a heart attack right then and there, and no one ever knew what his word was. However, after a long funeral process a team of dedicated word-choosing guys came up with the word Walk.

Yes, Side and Walk two wonderful words with ancient roots, that have only four letters, but mean so much. When you put them together, what do you get? You get Sidewalk. If you put the two definitions together, it's "A place not in the middle, that is not for driving." Here at UMass, we have revolutionized word creations. We're changing the meaning of "Sidewalk" forever.

I rarely ever walk on a sidewalk on campus without having to take time to climb off the walkway, because there's a car or truck on it. I truly don't understand the logic for it either. Don't get me wrong though, I fully understand if it's an emergency vehicle that's trying to get to a building to help someone, and the quickest way there isn't to go half way around the world in a 2 hour trip, so they break a couple of traffic laws. People that need help should get it quickly. However, I have yet to see it be an emergency vehicle driving on one of the sidewalks. I'm sorry, but a big truck with the US Postal Service logo on the side is not fully equipped to deal with someone who's having an epileptic seizure in Bartlett. Also, I constantly see trucks from the power plant or some sort of Construction Company driving along the sidewalks as well. Can't they drive on the street like a normal company, and carry the hammer over to the building to fix the leak?

Something that I do while walking on campus is listen to a walkman. I can never hear anything coming behind me, and you should see the look on my face when I turn around, and there's a Mack truck crawling up my tail. The worst part about it is that the truck driver gives me this look that says, "Hey buddy, get the hell outta the way. What's the matter with you? You have no business walking in the middle of the sidewalk like that. Don't you know that people drive here? Watch where you're going, putz!"

Okay, so I've been rambling and it feels nice to get this off of my chest. I guess I could say that the point of this article is to ask people not to drive on the sidewalk. However, I just can't imagine a journalist, in 1999 – the year where even though our cars don't fly, we do have 18-year-old girls getting breast implants and having their faces plastered all over the place because of it, just like John the word choosing guy said we would – having to persuade drivers not to plow over pedestrians while driving on walkways. I'm sorry, but even people in the ancient times had enough common sense not to drive on the sidewalk. Nowadays, people just don't understand.

Ryan Bevilacqua is a Collegian columnist.

Experience This!

What do you do when you try to wake up in the morning? What do you do when you are making out with a toilet following a long night of partying? What are you doing right now? A survey conducted by no one in particular indicates you are most likely experiencing something. If you are not experiencing anything, then you are probably dead, and you're not reading this.

Experience in itself is the ultimate expression of education. It incorporates the world around you into your own, personal little world. Given location, demographics, and current socio-cultural values, our experiences can be limited. If you live in a heavily urbanized environment, you may not have had the opportunity to experience suburban life. If you are raised in a small, Catholic town, your experiences are going to be limited to the culture that particular town promotes. These experiences become more often than not the foundations of your value system. However, certain incorporated value systems have the tendency of blocking opportunities for experiences. Now, of course, these value systems usually are based on some version of common wisdom. Thus most value systems would certainly discourage jumping out of a five-story window, unless it was a known fact that the spaceship behind the comet was going to take you to paradise following impact.

Some people take the world for granted. They mindlessly absorb the teachings of family, school and the church. They rigidly uphold the status quo, being thoroughly dependent on the system. They incorporate others' views, fanatically defend them, and refuse to experience anything that falls outside their little sphere. Trying to reason with them is impossible, as any deviation from the accepted norm is either grounds for instability, or outright heresy. Even people who walk around proclaiming their open-mindedness can only be as open-minded as their experiences allow them. If you are "open-minded" and living a sheltered existence, the introduction of alternative lifestyles may make a strain on your fragile little mind. The open-minded individual now becomes the closed-minded bigot. We fear what we cannot understand, we hate what we fear, and we rationalize away our hate. Thus our fear to experience gives birth to the ignorance that spawns many of the injustices we face today.

Ryan Bevilacqua

It is written in the Book of Boo that, "The wise person does not avoid experience, he/she learns and profits from it." This is paramount in learning things the hard way. Life experiences aside, there are a handful of more mundane experiences that would fall under common sense that we still manage to mess up. For example, it's not enough to take your parents' words of wisdom for granted; you must experience it all for yourself. You must figure out why it is not healthy to stick a fork in an electrical socket. While it is a sure fast way of losing all your arm hair, the burns are not so pretty. On the topic of vanity issues, never, NEVER throw poison ivy leaves in a campfire. While it gives your buddies an exciting trip to the hospital, your face ends up twice its size. Not a way to get the ladies, mind you.

Learning things the hard way usually is the most effective means of education. This education has limits, of course. While you may feel like you must find out why shooting heroin is such a trip, your value system usually kicks in. Given the common knowledge of addiction and the horrors of withdrawal, your curiosity may be curbed under certain circumstances. Things that mean certain death, chronic pain and death, or severe emotional suffering, chronic pain and death should be avoided.

You would think that people would learn from their experiences, or just keep away from the stupid ones. Unfortunately some people just don't get it. You probably know someone who falls under that category. In my experiences, several female friends have come up to me after a night of partying, and said, "Hey, Boo. Last night I had so much to drink, and I hooked up with some sketchy guy, then I spent the rest of the night darting the toilet before passing out in the bathroom. I woke up on the john this morning with a mega hangover, and vomit in my hair. I'll never ever drink again." She would end up being sober the next evening, but she was back at it again the next weekend. So much for profiting from your experiences.

Experiences make us who we are. Our perception of the world, the way we deal with other people, and the way we feel about ourselves come from the experiences we have lived. People who have experienced life should encourage others to live a little. People who want to experience life should get out of their shells and experience one step at a time. People who are really concerned about the consequences of experiences should not totally abandon hope, but instead negotiate their past experiences with the chance of gaining some new ones. Experience the fun, experience the thrills, but please experience something. Otherwise, you might as well be dead.

Boo Daurus is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury — By Garry Trudeau

Got something to say?
Then write for Ed/Op!!

The Collegian and Ed-Op: We've got some super-duper opinions.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor

Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor

Joslyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Position Vacant Distribution Manager
Joslyn Lomberd Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor

Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Fight Club: witty, violent

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

Fight Club
Directed by David Fincher, with Edward Norton, Brad Pitt, Helena Bonham Carter, Playing at Pleasant St. Theater, Northampton

You cannot imagine the strangeness that is Fight Club. I swear to you, no matter how much you've heard, and no matter how much you've read, this film will leave your head spinning and your heart racing.

Edward Norton stars as the movie's narrator (we never find out his name, but he begins to identify himself as the character "Jack" from a series of children's books). Jack is a caricature of a model American: the perfect consumer, spending his days earning money at a deadening job and his free time spending that money, mindlessly acquiring material possessions. He suffers from insomnia, and he discovers that the only way he can sleep is through crying; and the only way he can cry is by attending support groups for ailments he doesn't have. He attends meetings for victims of testicular cancer, tuberculosis, and other illness, feeding off of the sympathy he receives from strangers who don't know that he's perfectly healthy. This sort of satire may seem too over-the-top, hitting you over the head with the film's view of America as a spiritually anesthetized society, but Fight Club never takes itself too seriously, and the movie does a wonderful job of balancing an inane sense of humor against the heavy-handedness of its message.

The appearance of a fellow support group junkie, Marla Singer (Helena Bonham Carter), brings Jack's stolen sense of peace to an end; the thought of someone else feeding off the undeserved kindness of others lets Jack to see just how pathetic his existence has become. Soon after, he makes the acquaintance of Tyler Durden (Brad Pitt), a soap salesman whose confidence and anarchistic hatred of American society fascinate Jack. Together, the two of them start Fight Club, an underground arena in which men can reclaim their sense of masculinity and empowerment by beating each other bloody. (And be warned, Fight Club does contain some scenes of startling physical violence.)

Marla and Tyler represent opposing facets of Jack's personality, and therefore two extremes of how people cope with the suffocating anonymity of society. Marla has been completely defeated by it; she has no job, no friends, and no personal identity beyond that which she invents while attending her support groups. She is the ultimate victim, and a reminder of what Jack could become if he doesn't escape his current situation. Tyler, on the other hand, is the ultimate survivor, a man who lives life by his own rules and refuses to be dominated. Fight Club is his dream, the ultimate exertion of an individual's power.

At this point, Fight Club seems to have arrived upon its primary function: a subversive attack on a society that renders its citizens faceless and impotent drones. Conflict is the one true source of identity, and as our culture rids us of the self-affirming thrill of physical conquest, it robs us of the experience of being human.

But Fight Club doesn't stop there. I can't elaborate without giving away too much, but the film's merciless satire tackles, among other things, cult dynamics and the idea that human beings are happiest when the burden of free will is taken out of their hands. (Is the placating nature of American society beneficial, even?) Fight Club closes with an amazingly surreal twist, which forces a re-examination of the previous two hours; each portion of the film, however, stands alone as a well thought-out piece of social satire.

Grade: A

Culture of India comes to UMass

Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

Starting tonight, the Asian Dance Music Program will begin its new season with Festival of Lights: A Two Day India Cultural Fest. The program is two-fold, featuring both Pooja: The Five Elements in Prayer, and a musical concert of Sarod and Tabla.

The festivities start tonight at 8 p.m. in UMass' Bowker auditorium, where the Sarod and Tabla concert will be given by Buddhadev Dasgupta and Nyan Ghosh. For those who don't know of the Sarod, it is a stringed instrument with a rich and somewhat vibrant tone. Playing tonight will be Buddhadev Dasgupta, who is renown for his clarity of technique, depth of ragas, and keen sense of rhythm.

Allyster Evans of Fanfare Magazine extols, "Buddhadev Dasgupta's technical virtuosity and command over his musical intellect are just matchless."

In addition to having his music in the Top 10 World Music rating, Dasgupta is also a professor at various universities around the world, including Viswa Bharati, Rotterdam Conservatory, and the Berlin Conservatory.

Dasgupta will be joined by Nyan Ghosh, one of India's top players. Gosh is known for his specialized knowledge of intricate rhythms and was honored by the governor of California in 1998 for his mastery of the drums. Together, they will create a very special night of music for all to enjoy.

The second half of the program, Pooja: Five Elements in Prayer, will take place tomorrow night at the same time in the same place. Pooja is a collaborative dance-theater production featuring the award winning work of choreographer, Ranjantaa Devi. The five-part show depicts the creation of the universe by using a combination of different forms, including dance, theater, sculpture and narrative. Rajanna's stunning visual depiction of the five elements-space, water, earth, fire and wind-draws inspiration from the "charred trees" sculpture by Matsuda and a eclectic selection of world music.

Pooja deviates slightly from more traditional chorecographic style by exploring a more abstract territory of movements that draw heavily upon the Indian folk and theatrical vocabularly with masks and various props to create visions and impressions of each of the elements. However, the elegance of Indian classical movement remains, flitting in sequences to keep the traditional style present, but not always apparent.

In addition to Devi, the production will feature Japanese-American sculptor Tom Matsuda and a variety of other theater artists hailing from both western Massachusetts and India. The narration for the production will be by India's well-known theater and film artist, Arjun Raina. Hampshire Shakespeare Company fans will be happy as Tim Holcomb, director of that group, has designed the sets for tonight's production. Indian craftsmen Richard Moss, Henry Lappen and Steven Korns have done all the masks with costumes by Radhey Shyam Costumers in India. To top it all off, the Nataraj Dancers, Western Massachusetts' only Indian dance company, will perform the wok.

Tickets to both events are $12 for students. For tix, call FAC box office: 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMASS.

COURTESY ASIAN DANCE AND MUSIC PROGRAM

Pandit Buddhadev Dasgupta will perform as part of the Sarod & Tabla Concert.

Art requires freedom to test values

Some British guy decided to put a decapitated cow head into a box and called it art. Who cares?

Lots of people. Suddenly the entire foundation that supports our unreliable standards of art has been shaken. Mayor Giuliani is queasy. Conservatives are angry. New York taxpayers are confused. And the Brooklyn Museum of Art's patronage has increased exponentially.

Doesn't this seem to happen once a year? Be it a play, a painting, or an song, a photo essay—perennially we come across one culturally shattering expression that redefines what is acceptable and gets everyone in a tizzy one more time. Not too long ago it was Christ in Pps that revived this debate. Now it's the Madonna in crap. When will we realize that there can be no constrictions placed on art? When will those protective Catholics realize that it's futile for them to contest what someone can declare as their vision of a perfectly ambiguous idea?

Kristi Ciccone

I hopefully never. Because every time this reoccurring issue arrives our ideals are challenged and we are either forced to rethink what we are willing to swallow or we reaffirm the notion that everything is everything. This time blame it on the English. Sensations, as this exhibit is so cleverly named is a result of their perversions. On its only U.S. tour stop, this show brings about ninety paintings, sculptures, photos, and "installations" by forty-two different artists. One of these creative minds is famous for his work composed of sections of sharks, cows, and lambs. Two brother artists come bearing their mutated corporeal images, exploring that always-elusive world of sexual identities. And another artist contributes her oversized paintings of obese woman. As if this wasn't enough to get you to the exhibit, an audio tour of the exhibit is available, narrated by David Bowie.

Honestly, people. We should already agree that the value of art and a constant set of principles to define it are endless. It must. I endeavors to confine and definitely criticize art are futile. But every time we think we've settled it something more obscurely daring comes along to make us crazy again. Now we've got rotting animals, maggots and the Virgin Mary surrounded by elephant dung to address. Do we let them in our artistic schema? And if we do, what else do we have to let in? Should I formaldehyde my goldfish because I feel that he represents all of my unanswered childhood ambitions? Well, yes.

And here is the one concern I have for this particular situation: the possible threats of atrophy to our imagination that cow heads as art pose. Stuffing the remains of the local Bison farm in a box, to me, requires so little effort. I suppose it's original, but where's that endearing artistic investment? The blood, sweat, and tears of the individual that makes the more conventional forms of art so rich and emotionally worthy of embrace?

There can't possibly be anything new under the sun, only altered perceptions of the stuff that's already been recognized. If these artist's claim (and they do) that from their point of view a cow head is telling of something very significant, we have to believe them. We have to try to go with it. And if it doesn't work for us, oh well. As long as we don't write it off as weird because it's different. Perhaps the only limits worth designating for ourselves are those that discern sincerity from beneath all the hype.

Indigo Girls to bring sweet folk sound to Mullins

Amy Ray and Emily Saliers make their return to the Pioneer Valley this coming Saturday night when the Indigo Girls perform at the Mullins Center for an 8 p.m. show. Touring on the seventh Epic studio album Come On Now Social features contributions from Sheryl Crow, Joan Osborne and Me'Shell NdegeOcello create a new and dynamic musical statement. It is their seventh Epic studio album.

Formed in the early eighties and taking the name of the Indigo Girls in 1985, they released their first full-length album in 1987 titled Strange Fire. Epic records signed them quickly thereafter and commercial success was not that far behind. The bands previous album, Shaming Of The Sun, was certified gold within a month of release.

Ray recently initiated Daemon Records, a nonprofit label to nurture new talent with an emphasis on like-minded singer/songwriters.

Ph Balance opens the 8 p.m. show at the Mullins Center Saturday night. Tickets are still available

— Tony Sadlonoski

COURTESY ANCHAL/HALIBAND

The Indigo Girls will play the Mullins Center tomorrow night.

MASS SKATE "kick A skate park"
Route 202 • Westfield
(413) 534-1000
Monday & Sat-
• BMX Sessions
Friday-
• Live Punk Shows
COMPLETE SKATEBOARD, SNOWBOARD, & BMX SHOP.
ELEMENT • SPITFIRE • INDY • SANT CRUZ • FORUM • FOUR SQUARE • DC • OSIRIS • AMERICA • BLACK LABEL • ZERO • 151 • ANTI HERO • VOLCOM • SPLIT • PRIMO • FBM • LOOSE • GLOBE • 5 • M • GIRL •
WEEKDAYS $5 OFF with COLLEGE ID
LARGEST INDOOR PARK IN MASS.
OPEN 7 DAYS • NOON-NINE

Arts is malto-cool!!!

Learn to Meditate!
Meditation Workshops
UMASS Campus Center
Tuesday Oct 19th 4:00 - 5:00 pm Room 911
Wednesday Oct 20th 6:00 - 8:00 pm Room 911
Thursday Oct 21st 4:00 - 5:00 pm Room 911
FREE
Workshops include lecture on meditation techniques, meditation practice music for meditation, and instructional video
FREE no charge, nothing to buy - just a great chance to learn how to meditate

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
NOW - Remember- NO RED SOX GAME FRI COME OVER!
IF YOU HAVEN'T SEEN IT IN A THEATRE YOU HAVEN'T SEEN OR HEARD IT
Newly restored - never before - seen footage presented with ULTRA STEREO DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND
The Beatles
Yellow Submarine
OFFICIAL SELECTION - 1999 SUNDANCE FILM FESTIVAL
At 7:15
At 9:05
"ONE OF THE BEST GAY COMEDIES in many a moon."
trick
CHRISTIAN CAMPBELL PITOC TOM SPELLING
ACADEMY MUSIC Cinéfile NORTHAMPTON 584 8435

Session Special
Beauty Nails
Professional Nail Service • Highest Quality Products • Lowest Price
31 Campus Plaza Rd., Hadley (Behind Pizza Hut- Across From Stop & Shop)
Open Mon-Sat 9:30-8:00 WALK-INS WELCOME 253-4756

Experience A Manicure	Experience A Pedicure	Refill	Full Set of Acrylics	Manicure & Pedicure
$9.00 (Reg. $10.00)	$16.00 (Reg.$18.00)	$ 13.00 (Reg. $15.00)	$23.00 (Reg.$26.00)	$23.00 (Reg.$25.00)
Not valid with any other offer. Expires 12/31/99	Not valid with any other offer. Expires 12/31/99	Not valid with any other offer. Expires 12/31/99	Not valid with any other offer. Expires 12/31/99	Not valid with any other offer. Expires 12/31/99

Castaway Lounge
I-91 to exit 24, south on Rte. 5
Whately, Mass., (413) 665-8733
Will Proudly Present
Monday October 18
Amateur Night
Ladies Apply in Person
1st Place $200
2nd Place $100
3rd Place $50

AMC
There is a Difference!
Silence is Golden
No child under 6 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6PM
Mt. Farms 4 • Mt. Farms Mall
584-9153
SIXTH SENSE:
Today at (4:50 @ $3.25) 7:50 10:40
Sa t 1:50 (4:50 @ $3.25) 7:50 10:40
Sun at 1:50 (4:50 @ $3.25) 8:10
Mon - Thurs at (5:50 @ $3.25) 8:40
FIGHT CLUB:
Today at (4:20@ $3.25) 7:20 10:20
Sat at 1:20 (4:20@ 3.25) 7:20 10:20
Sun at 1:20 (4:20 @ $3.25) 7:40
Mon - Thurs at (5:20 @ $3.25) 8:20
RANDOM HEARTS:
Today at (4:30@ $3.25) 7:30 10:30
Sat at 1:30 (4:30@ $3.25) 7:30 10:30
Sun at 1:30 (4:30 @ $3.25) 8:00
Mon - Thurs (5:30@ 3.25) 8:30
THREE KINGS:
Today at (4:40@ $3.25) 7:40 10:40
Sat at 1:40 (4:40@ $3.25) 7:40 10:40
Sun at 1:40 (4:40 @ $3.25) 8:00
Mon - Thurs (5:40@ $3.25) 8:40
AMC Hamshire 6
Thanks to all our Loyal Patrons for 20 great years! We'll be changing the way you see movies with... 16 New Screens fall '00
$3.00 'Twi-lite' Show Daily!
Special Engagement
No Passes or Coupons

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Greek Yard Sale on Sunday, October 17th from 12-3pm N.Pleasant. Be there!

LET'S GO TO FOX-WOODS! All UMass Seniors, Alumni, and Faculty are invited to take a bus trip on October 16. Tickets are $17 and $18 per. Call the Alumni Office for more info, 545-2317

AUTO FOR SALE

92 Saab 900S Good Condition lots of extras $3500.00 413-545-0136 or 413-967-7145

Purchasing a used Car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

95 NEON AT AC AM/FM Cass. Excellent Condition. $5500. 585-8086, 582-9077

87 VW JETTA-GLT $1,000 5Spd. Runs strong, good tires, recent clutch, exhaust. 256-6235

1990 Honda Civic DX 5 Speed, AM/FM, Hatchback, runs good, and high miles. $1400 or BO 549-6490

EMPLOYMENT

Coaching Positions Girls JV Basketball and Diving. Contact Rick Frances Williston-Northampton School-Easthampton (413) 529-3253

Bakers Wanted Part-Time or Full-Time. Early morning hours. Apply at Rao's Coffee in person.

EMPLOYMENT

Earn $400 per class each sememster by simply Taking Notes! Apply online at www.allstudents.com for all sections of the following undergraduate courses.
Accounting 221, 222
Animal Science 101
Anthropology 100, 102, 103
Astronomy 100
Biology 100, 103, 105, 106
Chemistry 102, 110, 111, 112
Classics 100, 102, 224
Communication 150, 180, 218, 222
Communication 226, 287
Communication Disorders 210
Community Health 129, 160
Computer Science 102, 105
Computer Science 120, 121
Consumer Studies 105
Economics 103, 104, 203
Economics 204, 330, 331
Education 115, 210
English 115, 131
Entomology 126
Environmental Sciences 101
Exercise Science 130, 210
Finance and Operations Management 250, 300
Finance and Operations Management 310, 320, 330
Food Science 101, 120
Geosciences 101, 102, 103
Geosciences 109, 250
History 100, 101, 132
Hotel, Restaurant, Travel Administration 100, 130
Linguistics 101
Management 260, 301, 314
Management 315, 330
Marketing 301, 340
Nursing 100
Nutrition 101, 130
Philosophy 100, 110
Physics 100, 131, 132
Plant and soil sciences 100
Political science 101
Psychology 100, 305, 315
Resource economics 211
School og Management 210
Sociology 103, 107, 210, 222, 242
Sport Studies 210
Statistics 111, 140
Theater 100
Women Studies 187
If you're interested in becoming a Note Taker for a course that doesn't appear on this list, please submit an application online for review.

Attention Marketing Majors Currently we are hiring for a Marketing Specialist as well as Note Takers, please apply online at

www.allstudents.com

Get in Get Through Get Out

Baker/Cook/Customer Service Prepare foods,batters, doughs, recipes. In Village Market. FT/PT PM/Weekends 1 mile from campus. Cushman Village 413-549-1953

Experienced House Cleaner for family home in Leverett $8hr. Susan 548-9870

EMPLOYMENT

DP Dough is hiring drivers and kitchen help. Must be able to work nights. Approxiametly 20hr/wk. Apply at DP Dough.

Teachers Aides Wanted for small, innovative learning programs in Amherst. Tutor and supervise small groups of students in elementary, middle, or high school classrooms. Training provided. Great opportunity to prepare for a career in education for for interested individuals. Mass. Dept of Ed Approved Site Based Certification Program. M.S. or equivalency required, college training reccommended. Full employment benifits available.

Submit a resume and cover letter to:
Jane Messmer #116
30 Industrial Drive East
Northampton, MA 01060

AA/EOE/ADA

The Student Government Association is now hiring staff for the RSO Resource Center. We are accepting application for the positions of Receptionist, Computer Technician, and RSO Resource Center Manager. Pick up applications in the SGA office, 420 Student Union and please return them to Sandra Brookley by October 20th. If you have any questions, please call Sandra at 545-0343

SSGET PAID WHILE GOING TO CLASSSS Versity.com, an Internet notetaking company is looking for students to be Class Research Coordinators. Earn while you learn. $8-14/hr. Apply @ www.versity.com

EMPLOYMENT

WEBMASTER Part-Time Position. QA Computer Consulting (Springfield) has opening for student with excellent graphics and web design skills. Work around your class schedule. $35 per hour to start. First-rate knowledge of development application like NetObjects Fusion, Visual Page or DreamWeaver. Ability to code in HTML. Knowledge of PhotoShop, CorelDraw, CGI, JavaScript. Call Larry at 800-945-4747 or e-mail Admin@QAComputer.com

FLEXIBLE PART-TIME Childrens Health Research Abt Associates in nearby Hadley, MA has openings for Telephone Research Interviewers for evening and weekend shifts. We require a minimum of 20 hours/week with flexible scheduling. Applicants must have excellent reading/communication skills, some computer knowledge and a solid work ethic. We offer $6.75/hr to start, regular merit increases to $8.00, health and dental benefits, holiday pay and free shuttle service from the Hampshire Mall. PVTA stop. For more information or to arrange a personal interview, please contact:
Paul R. Bebo Recruiting Coordinator
1-800-792-4514

EMPLOYMENT

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phsically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

Human Services - Relief support needed to work with developmentally disabled adults, may lead to permanent hours. Hours include evenings, weekends and/or overnights. Required: HS deploma and driver's license. Starting pay is $7.47 p/h (for relief), $8.35 (for permanent). Locates in South Hadley, Hadley and Belchertown. Call 413 774-2281 (ask for Mary) AA/EOE

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY$$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

ENTERTAINMENT

Rental Problems? Questions about you lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of you new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Fridge Rentals - Free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

2 Indigo Girl Tickets for Saturday night at Mullins. Great seats call Allison 549-1928

Couches, Beds, Desks, chairs, tables, bureaus, shelves, etc. Free delivery 253-7554

AMERICAN SKIING COMPANY Cheapest student season passes! Starting at $299. We'll come to you! Call Mike @ 253-1187 before 10/15

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition triniton. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Birthday Lonna Thanks for everything. Have a great night Love Kerry

INSTRUCTION

Casco Bay Bartending Classes start soon student discounts call for information 1-800-467-2028 Space is Limited

Afro-Latin Percussion Lessons: Congas, Bongos etc. Have studied and played with some of the best in Cuba, U.S. and Europe. Hilary (413) 967-0466 (413) 237-5069

Saxophone Lessons with working musician; Berklee, UMass grad. Hilary (413) 967-0466 (413) 237-5069

LOST & FOUND

Wedding Ring Lost on Campus 10/12 Any information please call 367-2085

FOR SALE

Lost Black Covered pocket planner near the pay phones in the lobby of Lederle GRC Low Rise around 3pm Oct 6. Please call Charles Salinetti at (1-800) 225-5979

SERVICES

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

Browse icpt.com for ALL Springbreak "2000" hotspots. Need Student Orgs & Sales Reps. Fabulous parties, hotels, prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

Desperately Seeking Tall, Dark, HRTA HUNK for a night of wining, dining, and dancing at the Newman Semi! Now have I changed your mind?

SHHH!

You've stumbled upon the best place to advertise

Call TODAY!! 545-3500

And don't forget to tell your closest friends!!

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, OCT. 15

Lecture – A lecture by Professor Sir Henry Chadwick entitled "The Seeds of Alienation between East and West" will be held at 8 p.m. in Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall, at Smith College. Anyone is welcome.
Reception — There will be a reception for "Common Threads" at the Student Union Visual and Performing Art Space from 4 to p.m.
Service— There will be a Shabbat service at 6 p.m. in the Hillel House. A free medieval Shabbat dinner will follow.

SATURDAY, OCT. 16

Comedy – MISSION IMPROVable, UMass' improvisational troupe, will perform at 8 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center.

SUNDAY, OCT. 17

Comedy — Active Ingredients will be performing a free comedy show in Field Classroom, Orchard Hill, at 8 p.m.

MONDAY, OCT. 18

Fun — Hamagshimim will sponsor Israel Night at 7 p.m. in the Hillel House. There will be discussions on Israeli culture, history, and politics. All are welcome.

NOTICES

Art – The Wheeler Gallery will present "Cellblock Visions: Cell Division- Prison Art in America," on display until Nov. 7. The Gallery is located in Central Residential Area.
Art – The Student Union Visual and Performing Art Space will present "Three Connecticut Women Fiber Artists," on display until Oct. 15.
Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is now open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops call 545-2096, or stop by the Craft Center.

Send in your FYI announcements aujourd' hui! Tres bien!!

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	26	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 15, 1999

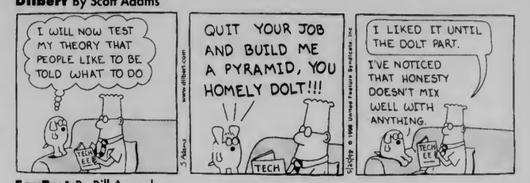
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12 Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⓒ		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Connecticut Journal		Children Are Watching ⓒ		Nova "Time Travel" (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	3 News ⓒ	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Kids-Darndest	Love & Money	Now and Again (In Stereo) ⓒ		Nash Bridges "Girl Trouble" ⓒ		News ⓒ	Late Show ⓒ
WBZ	4	4 News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Kids-Darndest	Love & Money	Now and Again (In Stereo) ⓒ		Nash Bridges "Girl Trouble" ⓒ		News ⓒ	Late Show ⓒ
WCVB	5	5 News ⓒ	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ⓒ	Boy-World	Odd Man Out	Sabrina-Witch	Hughleys ⓒ	20/20 ⓒ		News ⓒ	Nightline ⓒ
WLVI	6	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends ⓒ	Nanny ⓒ	Mission Hill ⓒ	Jamie Foxx ⓒ	Steve Harvey	For Your Love	News ⓒ		Friends ⓒ	Nanny ⓒ
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⓒ	Major League Baseball Playoffs: National League Championship Series Game 3 – Teams TBA				News		Caroline	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV ⓒ	Real TV (R) ⓒ	"Chameleon 2: Death Match" (1999, Action) Bobbie Phillips, ⓒ				News		Charge-Heart	Charge-Heart
WVIT	9	10 News	NBC News	Extra ⓒ	Ent. Tonight	Major League Baseball Playoffs: National League Championship Series Game 3 – Teams TBA				News		Friends ⓒ	Frasier ⓒ
WTIC	10	15 Simpsons ⓒ	Frasier ⓒ	Seinfeld ⓒ	Friends ⓒ	Ryan Caulfield: Year One ⓒ		Harsh Realm "Leviathan" ⓒ		News		News ⓒ	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	22 News ⓒ	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⓒ	Major League Baseball Playoffs: National League Championship Series Game 3 – Teams TBA				Cheft	Red Dwarf	Charlie Rose (In Stereo) ⓒ
WGBY	57	4 World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⓒ		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	State We're In	Time Goes By	Cheft		News ⓒ	UMASS
WGGB	40	26 News ⓒ	ABC News	Seinfeld ⓒ	Frasier ⓒ	Boy-World	Odd Man Out	Sabrina-Witch	Hughleys ⓒ	20/20 ⓒ		News ⓒ	Ricki Lake ⓒ
WSBK	38	Judge Judy ⓒ	Judge Judy ⓒ	Seinfeld ⓒ	Frasier ⓒ	Blind Date	NHL Hockey: Boston Bruins at Dallas Stars. (Live)			Cheft
WTBS	72	Roseanne ⓒ	Roseanne ⓒ	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★★ "Honeymoon in Vegas" (1992, Comedy) James Caan, Nicolas Cage,						★★ "Fly Boys" (1990, Adventure) Nicolas Cage,
A&E	51	Simon & Simon		Law & Order "Helpless" ⓒ		Biography: Katharine Hepburn		Biography: Humphrey Bogart		Sherlock Holmes Mysteries (R)		Law & Order ⓒ
CNN	23	Worldview ⓒ	Moneyline Newshour ⓒ		Crossfire ⓒ	World Today ⓒ		Larry King Live ⓒ		Newsroom		Sports	Moneyline ⓒ
COM	29	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R) Stein's Money		★½ "Fear From the Crypt Presents Bordello of Blood" (1996)				Saturday Night Live ⓒ		Saturday Night Live ⓒ
DISC	52	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Snakes		On the Inside: Commandos		News	Discover Mag.	Storm Warning!		On the Inside: Commandos
ESPN	43	Sportscenter		Auto Racing: NASCAR – Winston 500 Qualifying		Auto Racing: NASCAR Craftsman Truck Series						Sportscenter ⓒ
LIFE	50	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Chicago Hope (In Stereo) ⓒ		★★½ "Stormy Weather" (1995, Comedy-Drama) Cyndi Shepherd,				Once and Again (In Stereo) ⓒ
MTV	45	Global Groove	MTV Jams	Best Selection	News	TRL (R) (In Stereo)			Say What Kike	Making-Video	Fanatic (R)	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	46	All That	Catdog	Angry Beavers	Cousin	Spongeb	You Afraid?	Brady Bunch	I Love Lucy	Jeffersons ⓒ	Sanford & Son	All In Family	Maude ⓒ
SCIFI	61	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Poltergeist: The Legacy ⓒ		Farscape "The Flax" (In Stereo)		Sliders "The Great Work" (R) ⓒ	First Wave "Decision" (R) ⓒ			Poltergeist: The Legacy (R) ⓒ
TLC	59	26 Home Again	Home Again	Inside the White House		Speed Demons		Test Pilots: Spin Doctors (R)		Test Pilots: Night Flight (R)		Speed Demons
TNT	53	Due South "Chinatown" ⓒ		ER "Into That Good Night" ⓒ		Basketball: McDonald's Open Championship — San Antonio Spurs vs. Team TBA				Basketball: Zalgiris Kaunas vs. Team TBA
USA	60	Xena: Warrior Princess (R) ⓒ		JAG "People vs. Rabb" ⓒ		Walker, Texas Ranger ⓒ		★★★ "Cardio's Way" (1995, Drama) Al Pacino, Sean Penn, (In Stereo) ⓒ				Black Adder ⓒ
HBO	49	(5:00) ★★ "Phil Cacifico" (1999)	Inside the NFL (In Stereo) ⓒ			★★ "Pay Down Below" (1953) Steven Seagal, ⓒ		"Absence of the Good" (1999, Suspense) Stephen Baldwin, (R) ⓒ				Chris Rock ⓒ
MAX	47	★½ "Bad Defense" (1994, Comedy) Dudley Moore, (R) ⓒ				★★½ "The Sex Monster" (1999, Comedy) Ned ⓒ		★★ "U.S. Marshals" (1998, Suspense) Tommy Lee Jones, (In Stereo)				PPV-19 ⓒ
SHOW	63	[5:45] ★★ "Journey to the Center of the Earth" (1959) Pat Boone,				★½ "A Night at the Roxbury" (1998) Will Ferrell,		Movie News		Stargate SG-1		Outer Limits "The Inheritors" ⓒ	Total Recall

Adam & Eric By Ross Burach

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Robotman By Jim Meddick

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Dilbert By Scott Adams

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Once you get started today, you're not likely to stop. This will hold true until you run completely out of steam late in the day.
Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Study the facts again and again today and you should be able to visualize an accurate picture of recent events that lead to greater understanding.
Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – The approval of friends and relations is more important to you today than you had anticipated, and progress is impossible until you get it.
Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – The attraction you are currently experiencing may be just a matter of chemistry. Going further with it may be unwise, even risky.
Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Though you can learn from others today, in the end you must be willing to do things very much your own way at this time. Be a little daring!
Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – You may wind up being in precisely the wrong place at the wrong time, but with little clever maneuvering, you can avoid any real dangers.
Aries (March 21-April 19) – What has worked for you dramatically in the past may not be right for your current purposes. Subtle changes in tactics are required.
Taurus (April 20-May 20) — What seems simple today is likely to prove quite complex when you put your theories into practice. You may have trouble telling right from wrong.
Gemini (May 21-June 20) – You are under the influence of one or two strong domestic or environmental conditions today which you cannot fully control.
Cancer (June 21-July 22) – You'll be satisfied at home while the work place continues to offer mind frustrations and irritations. The answers can be yours in little time.
Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – You receive a little understanding, sympathy, and T.L.C. today, but you may not have to look any further than your own back yard.
Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You're going to have to do a little personal-izing today if your want others to adopt your point of view wholeheartedly.

Quote of the Day

"I wanna' get some ACTION tonight!"

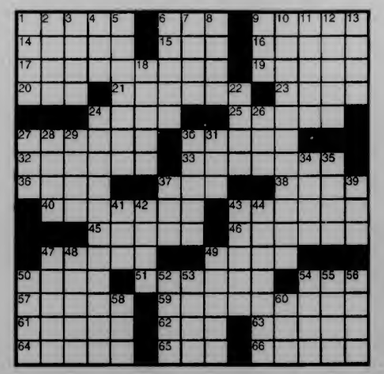
–Jason Trenkle

Leold www.leold.com
by Roger and Salem Salloom© 1997

You know...you get born and you think you've been dealt 3 queens and 2 kings. Your parents start things off by telling you, "You could be president."

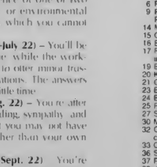


Then you strut your special walk up and down the street and you talk to people at parties.

But the real cards you were dealt was a pair of 3's,a 6, a 4, and a joker.

So,you make some more bets. You try out for the team, you get cut. You register for advanced neuralagical physics. You get an "F".

The world is filled with people trying to do things that they'll never ever be able ta do. They have stars in their eyes and doo doa In their pants.



They'll be content as long as they never look down to see their real cards. Actually, they never will look down, they're very very lucky people.

ACROSS
1 Overfull
6 Part of a sock
9 River of Pakistan
14 Musical citizen
15 Country addr.
16 Beach
17 Film about insects
19 Boredom
20 Kitchen utensil
21 Giants
23 Blemish
24 Baseballer Ruth
25 Fish basket
27 Smart
30 Moan and —
32 Colombia's capital
33 Carefree
36 Self-satisfied
37 Pub drink
38 Jot
40 Story with a moral
43 Piece of a circle
45 Steeds
46 Embraces
47 Mawkish
49 Cure
50 Spurt
51 Mum
54 Plane
57 Proportion
59 Onions' home
61 Like Yale's buildings
62 Choler
63 Workbench items
64 Concise
65 — Antonio
66 Wilder and Hackman

DOWN
1 Basher's need
2 Pulpit
3 Tense
4 High-school sub
5 Cool
6 Stale
7 Like failing — log
8 Eve's garden
9 — cubes
10 Absurd
11 Ball
12 Ordinary
13 Cooking direction
18 Where Tripoli is 22 Kid's wear
24 Like stones
26 "Norma —"
27 Air-rifle ammo
28 Frolic
29 — Fria, Arizona river
30 Strong winds
31 Map abbr.
34 Little kids
35 Halt
37 Priest's wear
39 "— Poetica"
41 Dada founder
42 Buzzards and Chesapeake
43 Bloodhound's need
44 Making happy
47 Dribonair
48 Up and about
49 Actress Hunt
50 Sand
52 Wading bird
53 Lady with a theme
54 Sign up
55 Writer — Stanley Gardner
56 Hardy heroine
58 Lyric verse
60 Actress West

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

© 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Soup du Jour
Steak & Cheese Sub
Turkey Tetrazzini
Garden Chilli

DINNER
Soup du Jour
Steak/Au Jus
Shrimp Alfresco
Stuffed Zucchini

Worcester
LUNCH
Soup du Jour
Steak & Cheese Sub
Broccoli Tetrazzini
Garden Chilli

DINNER
Soup du Jour
Steak/Au Jus
Shrimp Alfresco
Stuffed Zucchini

Hampshire
LUNCH
Soup du Jour
Steak & Cheese Sub
Quesadilla
Garden Chilli

DINNER
Soup du Jour
Steak/Au Jus
Shrimp Alfresco
Stuffed Zucchini

Berkshire
LUNCH
Soup du Jour
Steak & Cheese Sub
Turkey Tetrazzini
Garden Chilli

DINNER
Soup du Jour
Steak/Au Jus
Shrimp Alfresco
Stuffed Zucchini

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Kid Blanco
Photo Technition	Kara Stokes
Copy Editor	Samuela
Production Supervisor	Consuela Raes
Production Staff	"Loco" Jim Gilbert, Vlad the Clown

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Friday, October 15, 1999

UM grits teeth, heads north

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

DAN STOLTZ / COLLEGIAN

UM running back Marcel Shipp will look for his eighteenth-straight 100-yard game tomorrow at Maine.

History states that points will be scored when the Massachusetts football team heads to Orono to take on Maine this weekend. After all, the Minutemen's 55 points against the Black Bears last year marked the most points ever scored in the series since it began in 1909. Just two years ago, Maine put up 49 in a big conference win.

Ah yes, there needs to be a clincher, a stunner, a clear-cut indication that the crooked numbers will grace the scoreboard come tomorrow afternoon.

UMass' submission? 77 points.

It hit Amherst like a shockwave. In putting a three-game losing streak to rest, there was very little wrong with the Minutemen's 77-0 drubbing of Northeastern. A play here, maybe a play there, but otherwise, head coach Mark Whipple finally found the perfect game he'd been searching for since arriving at the university.

"I thought that from the opening kickoff all the way through the end of the game – on both sides of the ball and on special teams – our kids just played really, really well," Whipple said. "We played great and we got some bounces."

While the offenses soar, the defenses perhaps undercut the respective attacks. Maine picked off six McNeese State passes in a 35-7 victory last week at home. UMass, on the other hand, held the Huskies, the conference's most high-powered offense coming into the week, to just 72 total yards.

"Our guys really kicked it up a notch on defense," Whipple said. "I'm hoping the confidence they gained last week will carry over into the Maine game and show that it wasn't a fluke performance by our guys."

The x-factor for both squads will be how sound their ground game is. While UMass' Marcel Shipp goes for his 18th consecutive 100-yard rushing game, the Black Bears counter with Royston English, who rushed for 134 yards in Maine's 27-19 loss to Hofstra.

Tomorrow's game marks the end of Maine's five-game homestand that began with the loss to the Flying Dutchmen. After opening with a 28-21 loss to Colgate, the Black Bears have since gone 2-2 at Alfond Stadium, both wins coming against playoff teams, including a 21-14 victory over conference champion Richmond.

Maine quarterback Jake Eaton is a true freshman, having been forced into the lineup when starter Brian Scott went down with a right knee strain in the loss to Colgate. After starting out slow, the Vermont native put together his best performance of the season, a 226-yard, three touchdown effort against MSU.

Minutemen kick off '99 hoop slate with midnight madness

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

The countdown is closing in on zero and finally the University of Massachusetts campus can erupt, becoming full-fledged Minutemaniacs.

Tonight when the clock strikes midnight, the Massachusetts men's basketball team kicks off its 1999-2000 season in hopes of turning things around after a sub-par 14-16 campaign a year ago. With Lari Ketner and Charlton Clarke having graduated, head coach Bruiser Flint brings back an army of players that is expected to make a return visit to the NCAA Tournament.

Highlighting the evening's festivities will be a continuation of the American League Championship Series in a basketball sort of way. A solid two hours from Boston and a good three from New York City, Amherst plays host to the Red Sox against the Yankees on the Mullins Center hardwoods. Taking the floor representing the Olde Towne Team are St. John's transfer Shannon Crooks, Jonathan Depina, Mike Babul and Monty Mack. They will take on Kiwana Rhymer, Winston Smith, Micah Brand and Syracuse transfer Eric Williams in what promises to be a heated battle.

Babul, the three-time defending dunk contest champion, will try to graduate unblemished as the rest of the Minutemen gun for his title. Among those expected to challenge for the crown are Crooks and Brand, both of which will take the floor for the first time as Minutemen.

In the three-point contest, Mack will look to make it a streak despite having to play with a stress fracture in his left foot. He had surgery on the fifth metatarsal of his left foot last week, but will give the contest a go to represent his BoSox.

Along with the fan rivalry, students attending will have an opportunity to win a spring break getaway to Cancun along with two airlines tickets to Florida. Free men's basketball posters along with other prizes will be available.

"We really need their support this season," staff assistant Brian Gorman said, "and we want to start out the season strong."

This season it is expected that Flint's poised offense will be relieved by an up-tempo offense, mainly due to an overload of guards and mobile big men. The addition of Crooks gives the Minutemen a scoring point guard who can create shots for teammates. Mack, Babul and senior swingman Chris Kirkland bring much needed experience to an otherwise inexperienced lineup.

While students do not need tickets, nonetheless, obtaining tickets beforehand is strongly encouraged. They are available today on the Campus Center Concourse or at the Curry Hicks Cage.

Gates open at 10:30p.m., while the actual opening of the season begins at 11. The event will be hosted by Channel 40's Scott Coen, hitting the silver screen at 11:30.

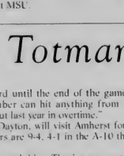
UM pucksters take on Colgate

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Hitting the road to play tough opponents is nothing new for the Massachusetts hockey team. While competing in the Hockey East conference, the Minutemen regularly enter hostile environments to face the elite of college hockey.

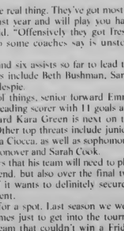
The past few seasons, however, UMass has beefed up its non-conference schedule to include national caliber teams such as Michigan State and Colorado College. Tomorrow night the Maroon and White will add another reputable opponent to that list, as UMass heads to Hamilton, NY to battle Colgate in its season opener.

"A lot of programs will go out and play easy teams early in the season, but for us, in our tough league, playing a team like Colgate gives us a chance to play a tough team in a tough environment," Massachusetts hockey coach Joe Mallen said. "We have a high number of road games during the first half of the season, so hopefully this game will allow us to find the composure and mental toughness that it takes to win on the road."



The Red Raiders were rabbled to finish fourth in the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference by both the media and coaches. However, Colgate posted a 19-12-4 mark a year ago and may be one of the dark horses in the league this season.

"They are an excellent team, and it's scary to think that an experienced coach like [Yale's] Tim Taylor has picked them to finish first in the league," Mallen said. "Last year they were the only team to beat Clarkson twice, and they [Clarkson] won the league."



UMass will enter Starr Rink tomorrow night looking to continue its ascent up the Hockey East ladder. Last season the Minutemen set a new record for conference wins in a season [eight], and also tied the most overall wins at the Division 1 status [12].

The Minutemen will be led this season by junior goaltender Markus Helanen. The Vantaa, Finland native was an honorable mention All-Hockey East selection in 1998-99 while posting a 3.32 goals against average.

Offensively, the trio of senior captain Nathan Sell, senior alternate captain Jeff Blanchard and junior alternate captain Jeff Turner will be looked upon to shoulder the load for the Minutemen. Blanchard led the team in goals, assists and points last season, while Sell was second on the team in goals last year. Turner finished right behind Blanchard in scoring and assists in 1998-99.

Marcus Helanen

Jeff Turner

Complementing the three captains up front will be juniors Kris Wallis, Ray Geever, R.J. Gates and Nick Stephens, along with sophomore Martin Miljko.

In the back, the UMass defense returns five of its primary six blueliners from last season. Junior Joey Culgin and sophomores Toni Soderholm, Chris Brannen, Justin Shaw and Randy Drohan will all see plenty of action in the season opener.

On the Colgate side of things, senior Hobey Baker candidate Andy McDonald paces the offense. McDonald was a second-team ECAC pick last season.

In goal, senior Shep Harder will look to shut down the Minutemen after a 1998-99 season in which he posted a 2.28 GAA to lead the ECAC.

"Andy is a Hobey Baker candidate and they have an excellent goalie too," Mallen said.

Home ice advantage may also play a big factor in tomorrow night's game. The Red Raiders were 9-1-3 at Starr Rink last year, an arena that has smaller dimensions then the Mullins Center.

"Everything happens so fast in a small rink, so we've got to chip the puck in off the boards and dump it in a lot," Mallen said.

UMass had an exhibition game with Acadia last Friday night, losing 4-1. However, Mallen said his troops went to use that tune-up to their advantage tomorrow night.

"We looked at the exhibition as a chance to go out and try some things, and it gave us an opportunity to look at some of our younger players," Mallen said. "But now this is the real deal. We've got to be up for it."

Tough duo travels to Totman

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

The road to the Atlantic 10 women's soccer title will likely go through the Massachusetts women's soccer team.

This weekend the Minutewomen [7-2-1, 5-0 Atlantic 10] will host Xavier and Dayton in two crucial conference matchups. Both opponents are currently second in the A-10 win a 4-1 record.

"This is our hardest weekend of the year as far as our opponents. If our people can't take this seriously, then we can't take anything seriously. This is an A-10 [tournament] qualifying weekend," Massachusetts women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "The teams that come out with good results can say they are in and start to relax a bit."

Xavier will arrive at Totman Field this afternoon at 3 p.m. The Musketeers are 7-6 overall, 4-1 in the league, but have yet to win a game away from Corcoran Field.

The top threat for the Cincinnati school is Annette Gruber, who has 26 points so far on the season. Complementing her will be Liz Singer, Christie Reinshagen, Megan Hosty and Erin Coley.

"We're going to be facing a well-organized, fit, and high-pressure Xavier team. They have some good complementary players too," Rudy said. "Coley will be on the left flank and should be a handful for whomever is defending her, and Singer and Hosti each have three goals. The one player who hasn't been starting but I think is dangerous is Reinshagen. She's good at not only pouching and picking up the garbage, but also at creating on her own."

"They will battle hard until the end of the game," added Rudy. "And Gruber can hit anything from 35 yards in, as well found out last year in overtime."

Sunday's opponent, Dayton, will visit Amherst for a 1 p.m. kickoff. The Flyers are 9-4, 4-1 in the A-10 thus far.

"Dayton looks like the real thing. They've got most of their team back from last year and will play you hard and physical," Rudy said. "Offensively they got freshman Missy Gregg, who some coaches say is unstoppable."

Gregg has 14 goals and six assists so far to lead the Flyers. Other top scorers include Beth Bushman, Sarah Walker and Danielle Gillespie.

On the UMass side of things, senior forward Emma Kurowski is the team's leading scorer with 11 goals and 25 points. Junior forward Kara Green is next on the squad with 14 points. Other top threats include juniors Brooke Bartlett and Kara Ciocca, as well as sophomores Katelyn Jones, Martha Conover and Sarah Cook.

However, Rudy knows that his team will need to play well not only this weekend, but also over the final two weekends of the year if it wants to definitely secure a bid in the A-10 tournament.

"We're still battling for a spot. Last season we were digging to win A-10 games just to get into the tournament, and we were a team that couldn't win a Friday game until almost the end of the season," he said. "Now I'm waiting to see the proof that we pushed last year aside, and we can start to do that [by playing well] this weekend."

UMass gears up for Philly fight

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Saturday's field hockey showdown in Philadelphia might at first glance be mistaken for a battle of the bands.

LaSalle is reeling; Massachusetts is absolutely rocking.

The Minutewomen [5-8, 1-0 Atlantic 10] have momentum on their side after Wednesday's emotional 2-1 come-from-behind victory over Providence. A-10 Co-Player of the Week Anke Bruemmer socked home a pair of unanswered scores off UMass goals in the waning minutes to fell the Friars.

Anke Bruemmer

The Explorers [5-7, 0-2 A-10] were left searching for answers Wednesday after a crushing 4-2 defeat at the hands of St. Joseph's. Team scoring leader Jami Wilus blew a second-half penalty stroke against the Hawks that effectively killed off any hopes of a LaSalle comeback.

LaSalle coach Jenn Harpel has coaxed five wins out of a team that, while lacking an explosive scorer, does feature a slew of solid hockey talent. Sophomore midfielder Wilus has teamed with senior Amanda Conway and junior Alishia Faller to form an effective offensive attack for the Explorers, one which has racked up 23 goals over LaSalle's first dozen contests.

UM coach Patty Shea, meanwhile, has used her team's brutal early schedule as an instructional tool to turn her immensely gifted roster into a finely tuned field hockey machine. Team scoring leader Bruemmer has risen to the status of superstar over UM's last two victories, while forwards Lindsay Abbott, Erika Whiston and Kristen Schmidt have provided consistent attacking pressure up front for the Minutewomen.

On the other side of the ball, Bay State natives Jill Fantasia and Patty Robinson have spent the season perfecting their stickhandling and positioning skills, placing them among the top players in the conference in ball control and transitional passing. Co-captain Lucy Koch, Canadian import Nicole Bardell, and backfield powerhouse Kerry Ann Jaggassar have erased the offenses of countless adversaries with their wonderfully physical playing styles. Keeper Zowie Tucker has yet to meet an equal in terms of flamboyant, dominating goalkeeping.

The opening pass-back of Saturday's war is slated for high noon. The Minutewomen will follow up their combat with LaSalle by trekking to the Empire State, to do battle with West Chester on Sunday. That game is also scheduled for a noon start.

X-country faces N.E. foes

By Farrah Alexander and Andrea Crane
Collegian Staff

After a week off for vigorous work and preparation, the Massachusetts men's cross country team will head into today's race with force and confidence. They are traveling to Franklin Park in Boston for the annual New England Championships. Forty-two tough regional competitors from all three divisions will run against the Minutemen today. There is a great deal of history and excitement involved in this race.

"The New England Championships is one of the oldest conference of champs in the entire country," coach Ken O'Brien said, who has attended the meet every year since he has coached the Minutemen.

The Maroon and White last raced at the Meet of Champions in Bronx, NY on Oct. 2nd. At this event, the team demonstrated that even with the loss of several of their key runners this season, they still have the solid skills and talent necessary to make an impact.

The Minutemen placed tenth with 291 points, which was only one spot below their finish from last season. The top finisher at the event was Dartmouth who took first place with 40 points, followed by Iona with 68 points and then Brown who finished a distant third. "We were ninth last year, but our first three runners are not on the team anymore," O'Brien said. "I would say that out of the people who make up the present team, the top seven runners worked hard to make up for the loss, and I thought they were pretty successful," he added.

Blazing sophomore Ryan Corbett once again was the first runner to finish for UMass, with a time of 26:16.5, placing him 36th overall. Hard-working senior, Matt Fly crossed the line with a time of 26:42.1, placing him 52nd overall. Finishing third for UMass was David Prasse in 76th place.

"The real pleasant surprise was Dave Prasse," said O'Brien. "The consistency of his performances in the first three meets, stamp him as one of the people who's going to be in our middle group. Of all the kids on the team he's most consistent at that level right now."

After the Meet of Champions, the Minutemen have been pushing themselves to improve their scores and to finish on top at the upcoming meet. However, the flu season is upon them and the team has been fighting to stay healthy.

"We have spent the last two weeks doing solid work and battling the flu," coach O'Brien said. "However, it now appears that the sickness is behind us and that everyone is relatively healthy."

With refreshed bodies and high spirits, the Maroon and White will go into the New England Championships following the lead of speed demons Ely and Corbett.

Although he has been in the shadows for the first few races, sophomore Kevin Curtain should not be overlooked. Curtain had an impressive first season last year as he was named the Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Year.

After this competition, the Maroon and White will travel to Philadelphia, PA on Oct. 30th for the Atlantic 10 Championships.

Water Polo takes tests

By Matty Bencal
Collegian Staff

The No.11 Massachusetts men's water polo team jumps back in the pool this weekend at Wheaton College in Norton, Mass for the New England Invitational. On Saturday, UMass will have its hands full when George Washington, No.15 Queens College, and No.15 St. Francis all look to pull off upsets against UM. Sunday's schedule is lighter consisting of only one game against the New York Athletic Club.

Last Saturday, the Minutemen drove south to the Collegiate Water Polo Association league tournament at Bronx, New York. The Maroon and White started the tournament on the wrong foot by losing a close battle against the Terriers of St. Francis, 13-11.

UM got off to a slow start in the match as the Terriers dominated early, but UMass didn't hold back and came within two points of tying the battle before an arguable personal foul was called late in the game that destroyed the Minutemen's comeback.

"St. Francis was a good test for us. It was a good comeback from a tough deficit," said head coach Russ Yarworth.

Tournament play on Sunday was dominated by the Maroon and White as UM defeated Iona College, 17-10, and Queens College, 8-5. Sophomore Adam Moore was a human highlight film, scoring seven times in the victory over Iona.

The offense was able to move the ball around well as Yarworth's squad proved that anyone on the offensive front could find the net. The scoring was spread out over the weekend, with Moore finishing with a team-high eight points. Also chipping in over the three games were Pat Kain, netting five, and Cors Kuenemann and Carlos Ramos blasting four to the back of the net apiece.

"We've been playing well", said Yarworth. "In the Queens game, I stressed game management and tempo. The guys responded well. We've had nice senior leadership and good play at the two-meter position."

The fierce rivalry against St. Francis on Saturday night will be the primetime match-up of the tournament. St. Francis has smeared the Minutemen's record twice this season, although UM dominates the all-time series record with an 11-2 advantage. The Terriers defeated UMass early in the season, 12-7, and UM came back to avenge that loss with a 10-8 win two weeks later. After this past loss to St. Francis, the Minutemen will be out for revenge again.

"This weekend will be a training weekend for us" Yarworth went on to say about the upcoming non-league match-ups. "We'll be playing hard and looking to win."

With their win over Queens last weekend, UMass owns a 19-7 record all-time against the Knights. The Minutemen have already defeated GW twice this season, and control the all-time series with a 9-1 record.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVJ Issue XX

Monday, October 18, 1999

Rivalry sparks revelry

KARA STOKES / COLLEGIAN

Yankee fans celebrate last night in Southwest after 9-2 victory over Red Sox.

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Student celebrations after last Thursday night's 3-2 Boston Red Sox loss to the New York Yankees ended after three students were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct. Saturday night's celebration of a 13-1 Red Sox victory ended peacefully.

On Thursday night, two separate groups of fans gathered in the Pyramid area of the Southwest Residential Area. Yankees fans took the high ground atop the pyramid, while Boston fans stood ten feet away. Both groups chanted at one another.

Yankees fans brought out brooms and Yankee towels, and chanted "1918," the last time the Red Sox won the World Series. Red Sox fans chanted "Pedro" back at the New York supporters. Individuals in both groups extended the middle finger at the opposition. Periodically, fans moved towards one another, then fell back.

Mounted University of Massachusetts Police Officers watched the event, as did undercover officers in the crowd. Uniformed officers were also stationed around the crowd, which was estimated at times to be close to 200 students.

Thursday marked the third consecutive time that students were arrested celebrating Red Sox games.

The first of the three students arrested, Daniel Riding, 20, a junior communications major, was charged after stealing a broom from Yankees fans, breaking it, and then stealing a towel from another Yankees fan. He was charged with disorderly conduct and possession of a false or stolen registry document.

At 12:35 a.m., both groups came at each other for the first time. Fans of both teams pushed and shoved before voluntarily breaking up. Both sides continued to chant, but at 12:40 a.m. both sides came at each other again. At 12:45 a.m., the crowd began to break up, with some students leaving the group, but the main groups stayed together and started pushing towards one another.

From the Boston Red Sox group of fans, a firecracker was thrown into the Yankees group, and the Yankees fans scattered. Patrick Fell, 18, a freshman communications major, came out of the Boston side of the crowd and pushed Yankees fans down. Undercover officers arrested the individual, charging him with disorderly conduct. No one was arrested for the thrown firecracker.

Dana Bassler, an undeclared sophomore and a Boston fan, described the arrest as "absolute BS."

"The guy was just fooling around. He didn't do anything wrong," Bassler said.

According to Greg Gader, an undeclared freshman, undercover cops were everywhere Thursday night.

"They were warning students to go home, and gave one guy three chances, but he didn't leave, so they arrested him," Gader said.

By one o'clock, after two arrests, only a group of Boston fans remained, and anonymous students were overheard saying all the "Yankees' fans had gotten cold and left."

According to UMPD Deputy Chief Barbara O'Connor, there were less people out celebrating than the night before.

"We only had 200-300 students out here," O'Connor said at 1:00 a.m. Behind her, Mark Miller, a 19 year old junior majoring in landscape contracting, threw an object towards the pyramids and police chased him. He was arrested, patted down, and officers then discovered a can of beer on him. He was charged with disorderly conduct and possession of alcohol by a minor.

Students Saturday night were subdued, as no Yankees fans turned out to oppose celebrating Red Sox fans reveling in a 13-1 Boston victory. According to estimates, 200 fans showed up to celebrate the victory.

Chris Sacco, a junior history and education major, predicted at 7:45 p.m. that more fans would join in the celebration.

"I've been out here twice as a Red Sox fan and it sucked when we lost, but we won tonight," Sacco said. "We just need the Yankees fans to come out here. They'll be here."

Fifteen minutes later, as the crowd broke apart, Sacco shook his head and said he guessed he was wrong.

According to O'Connor, the smaller crowd made her job easier.

"This isn't what we anticipated at all," O'Connor said. "But no Yankees fans came out, so this makes my job a little bit easier."

Turn to WIESEL page 2

Rabbi honored for service to Jews

By Anna Faktorovich
Collegian Correspondent

Yesterday, Rabbi Saul Perlmutter was honored for his 25 years of work and dedication to Hillel and the Jewish community. Perlmutter is currently on a one-year sabbatical from his position as the rabbi and director of the University of Massachusetts Hillel.

In a celebration at the Hillel House, several people offered thanks to Perlmutter for his dedication and spirit. Perlmutter's colleagues offered their perspectives. Joel Weiss, executive director of the Greater Springfield Jewish Federation, said he is "grateful for the friendship and collegial relationship with Saul." Weiss further thanked Perlmutter for his "ethical, moral and spiritual" leadership. David Schimmel, a professor in the School of Education, offered a toast to Perlmutter. "If you will it, it is no dream. Thank you for patience, support, and your dream."

Schimmel went on to say, "When I first saw the Hillel House – to me it was a dark, grim, polluted fraternity house. But to Saul it was a bright Jewish living and learning center."

Schimmel thanked Perlmutter for his "inclusiveness and patience that has made your dream and our dream come true."

Students also contributed in praising Perlmutter.

Senior Dan Friedman said he felt "the hooks of Saul digging into him" and attracting him to the Jewish community on his first day at UMass.

"Saul put out the bait and I fell for it," Friedman said.

Perlmutter "saw great qualities in people, and helped them realize their potential," Friedman said. "Saul doesn't just give opportunities but teaches how to get things for oneself. Throughout the years I heard Saul say beautiful words from the Torah – the hook of life."

A community member who has been a part of the Jewish community in the University of Massachusetts for 27 years, and has donated many works of art to Hillel throughout the years, donated another piece called the "Twelve Tribes of Israel."

Perlmutter spoke in response to those honoring him.

"It has been truly a pleasure and a delight to work with the Jewish community," Perlmutter said. "There are wonderful people in Hillel who have been helpful and supportive. It is a pleasure to be part of their lives.

"It is hard to imagine it has been twenty-five years," Perlmutter said.

Perlmutter reflected on the days when he was first starting out working at Hillel, and recalled a brunch with free bagels held in the Student Union. When students realized that there were free bagels, they came from all over campus and grabbed free bait. According to Perlmutter, the brunch was a disaster. But he said what was important was what he got out of it - "You can lail but still go on."

Perlmutter also reflected on something he once said to a student: "Stay as long as you like. If you need to do other things, go ahead. Come back whenever you'd like. Every

Turn to RABBI page 2

Nobel laureate Elie Wiesel to speak at Amherst College

By Neal Alpert
Collegian Columnist

AMHERST— Author, humanitarian, and Nobel Peace Prize winner Elie Wiesel is scheduled to speak tonight at Amherst College as part of a lecture series celebrating the college's new Center for Religious Life.

Paul Statt, Director of Media Relations for Amherst College, said while Wiesel's speech, entitled 'Building a Moral Society," will include Wiesel's views on the Holocaust. Wiesel will also be spreading a broader message about the world today.

"His message is that we all must remember the Holocaust," Statt said, adding that "we must also look forward. No man is an island, and if we neglect any group of people, than we neglect our jobs as human beings."

Wiesel, who was born in Romania in 1928, was deported by the Nazis and placed in a concentration camp during World War II. While Wiesel and two older sisters survived the ordeal, his parents and his younger sister did not. Wiesel was liberated from Buchenwald in 1945, at which time he went to Paris to study at the Sorbonne. He became a journalist after graduation, working for the Franco-Jewish newspaper L'Arche, as well as the Tel Aviv paper Yedot Ahronot. In 1956, Wiesel was sent to New York to cover the United Nations, and he was naturalized in 1964. Wiesel published his first book, La Nuit, in 1958. The book chronicled his experiences inside the concentration camps, and he has since gone on to publish almost thirty books, many of which deal with aspects of the Holocaust. Wiesel has used his position as a respected author to speak out on humanitarian causes for over forty years, dealing with issues pertaining to various groups of people who suf-

Turn to WIESEL page 2

Geisha dispels age-old myths

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

The Western world has latched on to the geisha fantasy, according to anthropologist Liza Dalby.

"People have a deeper curiosity about me being the only Westerner to become a geisha," Dalby said. "It's part of the Western world's obsession with geisha."

As part of the "Spirit and Soul: Dialogues with the Masters" series, Dalby spoke yesterday on her knowledge of geishas and the Western world's perception of such women.

Currently, Dalby believes there is an added focus on geishas and their lifestyle, and attributes part of this added phenomenon to the success of Arthur Golden's novel, Memoirs of a Geisha. Although there has been a fascination with these women for many years, according to Dalby more people are becoming intrigued, including the film industry.

Dalby said the problem with the Western world's obsession is that the ideas people have of these women are false.

"The appeal of geisha is fantasy, wishful thinking, and false facts," Dalby said.

Many have the impression that geishas are prostitutes, but in fact geisha is an art. The geisha of Japan are trained entertainers who begin their apprenticeships as young girls.

"They are traditional entertainers who provide singing, dancing, conversation, and companionship to their cus-

Turn to GEISHA page 2

"Dead Man Walking" author brings story to AC

By Jason Spears
Collegian Columnist

Author of Dead Man Walking and nominee for the 1998 Nobel Peace Prize, Mary Prejean, or Sister Helen, spoke out last Friday against the death penalty, and in support of the development of spiritual connections.

Prejean said one problem with the death penalty is that inmates on death row are reduced to their worst act – the justice system "freeze-frames" them at that moment, not allowing for any change in prison.

"Every human being is better than the worst thing [he or she] did," Prejean said.

Prejean's work for social justice started in 1981 when she began helping people in need while working in the St. Thomas project in New Orleans.

"My eyes were opened to all the injustice and the suffering of people," Prejean said.

She was asked by a member of the prison coalition office if she would write to a person on death row. Prejean agreed, further committing to social justice.

She began writing to a man named Patrick, and in the course of their correspondence discovered that he had no visitors in prison. Prejean began to visit him, and said she was surprised by how human he was. Eventually, she became his spiritual advisor.

After several months of meeting with Patrick, Prejean looked into his criminal record and discovered he was involved in the killing of two teenagers. She said she became filled with outrage, and had a feeling of "consorting with the enemy." She felt she was "hanging on by [her] fingernails to [her] principles" if she continued to visit Patrick.

Prejean said not going to visit the victims' families after finding out this information was a mistake. Eventually she met them at the pardon board hearing for Patrick, and discovered how little support the victims' families received. She said isolation was the common ground between death row inmates and victims' families. Because the victims' families needed support to find a path to spiritual reconciliation, Prejean started a support group for victims' families called Survivors in New Orleans.

Prejean accompanied Patrick to his execution. In her life, she had witnessed four other executions. She said this final event had another set of victims, aside from the executed and the family: those the state pays to do the execution. Prejean said the psychological toll carrying out executions takes on the guards is not discussed. Guards must execute prisoners they have come to know through daily interactions.

Prejean also spoke

Turn to PREJEAN page 2

New military-led Pakistani regime viewed as moderate

By Pamela Constable and Kamran Khan
Washington Post

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan – The new military-led government in Pakistan is likely to pursue foreign policies that are acceptable and even pleasantly surprising to the Clinton administration, according to a variety of Pakistani and foreign observers. The exception could be that Pakistan maintains its close and strategic relationship with the radical Muslim Taliban government in neighboring Afghanistan.

For now at least, the new government is unlikely to pursue the kind of aggressive policies toward India, such as the recent 10-week border clash initiated by Pakistan in May, that have alarmed and irritated the West, the sources said.

The tense security climate between the longtime rivals, both of which have nuclear weapons, may actually improve under the government now headed by Gen. Pervaiz Musharraf, the 56-year-old career officer who seized power from Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif on Tuesday.

The new regime will seek to avoid trouble abroad, in part because its overriding priorities will be domestic, according to military officials and specialists here. It especially wants to reform corrupt political institutions and revive the near-bankrupt economy.

Experts in both India and Pakistan said they expect the Musharraf government to seek a stable and improved relationship with India. Musharraf was army chief when Pakistan sent fighters into the Kargil mountains of the disputed Kashmir border territory last summer. But the experts said his new responsibilities at home, and his country's desperate need for Western financial aid, are likely to keep Pakistan from meddling abroad.

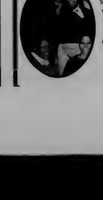
"He is not going to engage in any new misadventure, because the economy won't permit it and the world won't accept it," said Jasjit Singh, director of the Institute for Strategic and Defense Analysis in New Delhi. "In this situation, we must engage Pakistan and keep the doors of dialogue open, although we must also keep our eyes open and our powder dry."

Several American and European diplomats said they had a sense his government might support Western concerns in the subcontinent, ranging from terrorism by Islamic fundamentalist groups to the threat of nuclear war. "There are opportunities that were not there before," said one diplomat.

Pakistan's new military leaders have yet to make any public statements about their domestic or foreign-policy plans. Musharraf canceled a promised television address Saturday that was expected to outline an interim government. His spokesman did not say when the speech would be rescheduled.

Some foreign observers have expressed fears that a military government, with its finger on the nuclear button and no civilian checks on its power, might seize the opportunity to cause havoc, especially while it is still smarting from being forced by Sharif to retreat from Kashmir in July.

BARBARA ZUCKERMAN / COLLEGIAN



In Bowker Auditorium at UMass, Liza Dalby gives a first-hand account of her experience as a geisha, dispelling many of the myths surrounding this lifestyle.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 62 LOW: 50	HIGH: 52 LOW: 29	HIGH: 52 LOW: 29

SOURCE: WEATHER.COM

It's Greek to Us

African-American fraternities and sororities have a long-standing tradition of service and involvement in our communities. Read more on the Black Affairs page.

PAGE 3

What's your Story?

The Story of Us opened this weekend. Read our review to see what we thought. Plus, how well did Double Jeopardy perform at the box office? And 311's latest. All in today's Arts section.

PAGE 6

The Greenfield Great

Forward Kristen Schmidt cranked home an overtime goal to lift the UMass field hockey team to victory over Atlantic 10 rival West Chester on Sunday.

PAGE 12

Arts & Living 6
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 1
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.dailycollegian.com

■ Prejean

continued from page xx

about Mumia Abu-Jamal, an activist and journalist who was convicted of killing a Philadelphia police officer. She was asked about Abu-Jamal during the question-and-answer period of the lecture, and said she was shocked to hear that Abu-Jamal's execution date had been set for Dec. 2 of this year.

"Here is an African-American man, a strong voice for justice in his own writing," Prejean said. "The possibility of his innocence is very questionable in the shoot-out with the police."

Prejean encouraged students to organize to stop Jamal's execution.

"There needs to be education about Mumia's case," Prejean said. "How they have silenced him and how they have thrown him in solitary confinement ,and how they have kept the media away from him, and how they are trying so hard to kill him. There are ferocious injustices around this case."

Prejean said ending violence in American society is "all about being connected. Spirituality is about connecting – connecting deeply in ourselves and connecting with each other."

Prejean's lecture was the opening speech for the Center of Religious Life at Amherst College.

MELINDA NORES / COLLEGIAN

Helen Prejean gives a lecture concerning the death penalty and the role of community service at Amherst College's new Center for Religious Studies.

■ rabbi

continued from page

student does count."

Perlmutter chose to help people move through college his junior year of college while visiting Israel. According to him, college is a time for finding one's calling, what sort of job to pursue, what passion to follow, and which person to spend the rest of one's life with. While in Israel, he discovered that he had a great deal more to learn, and decided he wanted to work with the Jewish community. During his career, Perlmutter has performed weddings, funerals, and services throughout Massachusetts.

From North Pleasant Street to North Korea, from Massachusetts Avenue to the Massachusetts statehouse, the Collegian will keeps you up to date with the latest news.

Quake hits California with little impact

By Robert Lee Hotz and Kenneth Reich
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES – Foreshadowed by a trio of minor temblors, the 7.0 Hector Mine earthquake on Saturday – three times stronger than the 1994 Northridge earthquake – is among the four strongest earthquakes to strike Southern California this century.

But unlike more powerful quakes that severely damaged Turkey and Taiwan in recent months, this desert temblor struck so far from densely settled urban areas that its most lasting impact will be from its scientific reverberations and the insights it may offer into the region's abiding seismic hazards, experts said.

As quickly as millions of shaken residents reached for telephones to reassure worried relatives around the country – and local swimming pools stopped sloshing – many geologists around Southern California reached for their field boots and topographical maps. They headed out the door before dawn to search for any surface scars left by the powerful quake.

As a damaging earthquake, it was a near miss.

A similar-sized quake on any one of a half dozen faults in the densely populated Los Angeles basin could cause upward of $200 billion damage and thousands of deaths, experts estimated. On the Hayward fault under San Francisco, such a powerful temblor could wreak similar havoc.

Hitting about 120 miles east of Los Angeles at 2:46 a.m. PDT Saturday, the earthquake originated in the vicinity of a little-known strike-slip fault called the Pisgah fault within the boundaries of the U.S. Marine Base at Twentynine Palms.

The fault is located in a highly active seismic area in the Mojave Desert, northeast of the San Andreas Fault and not far from the fault that triggered the 7.3 Landers earthquake in 1992.

Rolling shock waves were triggered in an instant as fractured rocks about four miles underground slipped against each other explosively, earthquake experts said. It was not considered an aftershock of the Landers quake, but a new event.

It is likely that more than one fault might be involved in the earthquake, as was the case in the Landers quake, California Institute of Technology scientists said.

In the first hours after the jolt, earthquake experts and emergency response officials were briefly worried that it might herald a more serious quake on the huge San Andreas Fault. But as two clusters of aftershocks near the San Andreas diminished, that concern – and the possibility of an official quake warning – faded quickly.

Turn to GAMES, page 3

■ geisha

continued from page 1

tomers," Dalby said. "They weren't supposed to meet with clients of their own, even though they sometimes did."

Dalby presented a slide show demonstrating how the Internet has given the public a fictitious impression of geisha. Despite the meaning of the word being misconstrued, many Web sites place it on their pages to lure an audience. Multiple pornography pages attempt to pull the viewer in with slogans saying "Geisha Girls" or "Geisha Boys," the idea being that the word "geisha" simply means a person whose main goal is to pleasure his/her partner.

Dalby also said she thinks there are male and female versions of the geisha fantasy. In both cases, the fantasy, which includes the dramatically white face, red lips, and black attire, is too hard to put on a real person.

Dalby recognizes that she is also part of the Western world that is fascinated by geishas.

"I was fueled by my own obsession to write a book," Dalby said.

In addition to Dalby's speech, Masayo Ishigure opened and closed the event playing the shamisen, an instrument every geisha learns to play.

Dalby is currently writing another novel, The Tale of Murasaki, from which she will be reading excerpts today at Amherst College from 4-6 p.m.

The geisha programs have been a part of the Geisha and Genji Conference that began Oct. 14, and will continue through Oct. 19. The last event, to be held Oct. 19 at 2 p.m., will be led by Dalby in Bartlett Hall, and is entitled "Points of Honor: Where Geisha Draw the Line."

Media violence ratings studied

By Faye Fiore
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – Inside the Federal Trade Commission's monolith of cement and steel, some of the agency's finest lawyers are reading not only Legal Times, but Billboard, Daily Variety, and the Hollywood Reporter.

They are poring over lists of more than 15,000 films rated since 1968, watching MTV videos and perusing gory computer games. Next month, they plan to take a field trip to San Luis Obispo, Calif., to hear actor Ernest Borgnine at a forum on violence in the movies.

Four months into the $1 million study that grew out of last spring's

■ Wiesel

continued from page xx

fer persecution due to religious, racial, or national origins.

Wiesel was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1986. As part of his acceptance speech he said, "As long as one dissident is in prison, our freedom will not be true. As long as one child is hungry, our lives will be filled with anguish and shame. What all these victims need above all is to know that they are not alone...that while their freedom depends on ours, the quality of our freedom depends on theirs."

Wiesel, who has been a professor at Yale University, City College of New York, and Boston University, has recently been working on a volume of memoirs. The first, All Rivers Run to the Sea: Memoirs, was released in 1995. His lecture, which is free and open to the public, will be held at LeFrak Gymnasium at 8 p.m.

Dumas brothel restoration sparks debate

By Mike Bowler
Baltimore Sun

BUTTE, Mont. – The Dumas Brothel closed in 1982 after more than a century of service to the men of Butte. Now it's back as a tourist attraction – and the center of a storm over the place in history of the world's oldest profession.

On historic East Mercury Street in the heart of downtown, the Dumas is a regular stop on the Butte Chamber of Commerce-approved trolley tour of city landmarks.

Visitors can be guided through the building for $3. They can dress up in Victorian costumes and have their pictures taken in one of the brass beds, admire the art and artifacts of sex workers, and perhaps chat with the 48-year-old former Los Angeles police officer and Beverly Hills call girl who are restoring the Dumas as a museum of prostitution.

There's the problem. Some in Butte aren't enamored of the idea of paying historical homage to prostitution. It glamorizes a bordello and sends the wrong message to the young people of the town, said a group that gathered 600 signatures of protest in the spring. "They [young people] might say, 'Let's give it a try,'" two of the group's founders said in a letter to the Chamber of Commerce.

Nonsense, counters Norma Jean Almodovar, a self-described "activist for sex workers" who bought the Dumas nearly two years ago. She moved from Los Angeles with her husband, a retired movie actor, and brought with her the organization she heads, the International Sex Workers Foundation for Art, Culture, and Education.

■ games

continued from page 2

Colorado high school massacre, the 85-year-old trade watchdog – the small but powerful agency that first went after Microsoft Corp. – is immersed in behind-the-scenes Hollywood, working to sort fact from fiction in one of the most challenging controversies to surround the entertainment industry in years.

Government attorneys have asked for the sort of confidential information that industry officials say even the studios do not see. They want to examine the Motion Picture Association of America's ratings files on the top-grossing PG-13 and R-rated movies of 1997 and 1998 – including "Face/Off," "Lethal Weapon 4," and "Armageddon."

A half dozen of the FTC's most experienced legal minds, one economist, and a Stanford marketing professor are deciphering how movies are rated for violence, who decides which violence is inappropriate for children, and how those decisions are made. They are finding imaginative ways to penetrate an entertainment world that they confess to know little about, asking student interns to mail-order dark video games and cruise teen Web sites from home so there will be no government footprints.

All the while, FTC officials are working to assure a nervous Hollywood that this is a benign government "study" of the marketing of violence to children, not a McCarthyist throwback to the days of subpoenas, loyalty oaths and blacklists.

"It's a new area for us and we have a lot to learn," said Mary Koelbel Engle, FTC project director of the study. "All we are going to do is report. We are not going to say it's right or wrong to target 14 or 15-year-olds [in marketing violent products]. Just whether or not it is being done."

Even so, whatever findings the FTC produces by the end of next year almost certainly will frame the political debate over violent music, movies and video games that some industry critics believe are inspiring children to kill.

So far, the commission's initial queries about matters confidential have raised some hackles and at least one finding in the industry's favor.

What had been portrayed by President Clinton and Congress as an especially alarming advertisement for a video game was not really an advertisement at all, FTC lawyers determined. "More Fun Than Shooting Your Neighbor's Cat" turned out to be a headline for a bar

BARBARA BRADBURY / COLLEGIAN

Daikon-pulling

The Sunbow 5 Foundation, directed by Yasuhiro Suka (top left), displays its daikon harvest. This organization, located at 264 Harkness Drive in Amherst, uses only natural, organic farming techniques. For more information, contact the Collegian Photo Dept.

FBI probes alleged Ohio-VA internet adoption

By Justin Blum
Washington Post

A 58-year-old Harrisonburg, Va., man who advertised on the Internet to adopt a "young boy who needs a dad," paid a family in Ohio as much as $400 for their 14-year-old son, according to court papers filed in the case.

The August transaction allegedly unfolded in front of the child, who later told authorities his parents had also exchanged some of his siblings for, among other things, a swing set, new shoes, and clothing, according to court papers filed in Ohio.

Social service workers in Stark County made the claims in court last week in an effort to remove the boy's five siblings from the family's home. The allegations appear to be based largely on what the 14-year-old told authorities and assertions made by a social service worker.

No charges have been filed against the child's parents or the Harrisonburg man, although the allegations are under investigation by the FBI, local police, and Ohio social service officials.

The boy's parents, whose phone has been disconnected, could not be reached for comment. The Harrisonburg man, contacted in Ohio, denied making any payment in exchange for the youth.

The Washington Post is withholding the names of the Virginia man and the Ohio family to protect the identity of the children.

An FBI supervisor in Ohio said Saturday that the agency has been looking into the allegations for several weeks. "We're concerned about the Internet aspect of it," Mitchell Marrone said. "We've not made a determination about any illegalities." But, Marrone noted, "It's illegal to sell people."

The bizarre tale began in July when the Virginia man placed an ad on Yahoo!, an Internet search engine.

"I am a single white male professional, in the Security Services Field," the ad said. "I own my home and have room in my home and heart to give a place to a young boy who needs a dad. I

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Lights, camera, Noise!

If I'm not mistaken, and I never am, I am now officially a movie star.

Movie star (mooʊ-vē stär) n. 1.) One who repeats himself several thousand times while technically superior people fidget with ridiculously bright spotlights and complex cameras. 2.) Seth Koenig.

Seth Koenig

I am currently partaking in the production of a student movie called Noise, which is written, directed, produced, published, distributed, created, developed, started-in, and filmed by Shawn "Boo" Downs, whom some of you know as a columnist.

Realizing my brilliant acting skills, Boo asked me to jump miles out of character to play a crucial role in this movie. Only somebody of my expertise could pull off the transition that I had to make to be able to convince the audience of the authenticity of my character.

I play a newspaper editor.

"Whoa," you scoff, "You are a newspaper editor, silly."

Yes, but in the movie, my name is "Phil."

"I'm very sorry I ever scoffed at you," you apologize, realizing how foolish you were for ever assuming I was remotely off base.

In all actuality, there is a character in the movie based on me, named "Bradford," which is, in reality, my middle name. Bradford is the host of a radio show called Noise on the student radio station of UMass, WMUA, and Boo is his faithful co-host. The movie chronicles the lives of the two, plus a guy named Justin, as they go through their respective relationships with members of the opposite gender. Playing me in the film is a swell, debonair, dashing individual named Jesse DeAngelis (chosen very carefully because of his similarities to me), while I play Phil, who is, like me, a newspaper editor.

Confused? Try the Cliffs Notes version of the plot:

A guy named Boo is making a movie about him and me and another guy named Justin. I am in the movie but I am not Boo, me, or Justin, but rather Phil, a newspaper editor. Jesse plays me, Boo plays himself, and a third player in this whole thing, Kevin Kelleher, plays Justin. Got it? Good. Here is a helpful study guide...

1. Who am I playing in Boo's movie? (Correct answer: Phil)

2. Who is playing me in Boo's movie? (Correct answer: Jesse)

3. How the hell did Boo get the name "Boo"? (Correct answer: don't worry about it, it's a long story.)

4. If a train leaves Baltimore traveling west at 60 miles-per-hour at 5:00 p.m., and another train departs from Seattle heading southeast at 75 miles-per-hour at 5:33 p.m., wouldn't it be cool if the two became steel accordions in a blood-curdling, head-on collision somewhere around Denver? (Correct answer: yes)

I think that's all cleared up now.

As the shooting of the film presses on, I have been learning all sorts of interesting things about "Hollywood." For instance, I learned that it is biologically impossible to repeat the same lines, the same way, 70 times, while a light that rivals the wattage of the sun is pointed directly in your eyes. I also learned, after nine hours of filming to make roughly three seconds of actual movie, that I love being a writer.

In the same respect, Boo loves being a screenwriter, director, producer, publisher, distributor, creator, developer, star, and cameraperson. (He actually has other people – Jackie Sobel and Jessica Johnson, in particular – to take care of a lot of that stuff.) In the same way that I enjoy having fun and partaking in enjoyable activities that I can do in a leisurely fashion, Boo enjoys filming for hours upon hours while his life slowly ticks away to be condensed into, in movie form, about a twelfth of the time he put in.

In the end, though, I think Boo's hard work will be justified by a blockbuster flick that the whole world will benefit from, and I will be recognized miles around as a newspaper editor... named Seth.

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

Write for ED/OP

A note to all our readers:

We have received some excellent letters-to-the-editor recently, and we would like to print them. However, we do not print submissions that are hand-written. Additionally, we cannot print unsigned letters; all letters must include the name, phone number and address of the writer(s). The Collegian editorial staff reserves the right not to run submitted letters according to editorial discretion. Furthermore, the amount of material we print is limited by space constraints. We enjoy reading your letters, so please continue to submit them.

Thank you.

The Editorial/Opinion editors

Letters to the Editor

Postseason Madness

To the Editor:

This is an exciting time to be a baseball fan! One way or another, at least one team from New England or New York will make it to the World Series. As we enjoy the postseason games, please be thoughtful of those who don't particularly care about the outcome. Remember that large crowds of people can be dangerous whether they are celebrating or mourning. Take responsibility for your own and other people's safety. May the best team win!

F. Javier Cevallos
Interim Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs

Harsh Criticism

To the Editor:

This letter is a direct response to the Collegian review of "An Evening of One-Acts," produced by the UMass Department of Theater from October 6-9. The overall tone of the review was both caustic and harsh. We are all students in a university setting trying to learn about our craft in any number of ways. One of our best resources for feedback is our audience's reaction. There is no need to be destructive with our criticism, especially when we consider the source of this review. I presume that Julie Burrell is a student as well, perhaps a student of journalism. One would hope that her articles and pieces aren't referred to as "consistently monotonous" with "humorous moments."

Please understand, as a theater artist in a very active community I am no stranger to a bad or a good review, and have been the recipient of both, but there is a certain tone that creeps into reviews by even professional critics which is unnecessary and rude. The theater is a place where we go to be released from our everyday lives, to soar in beauty or examine excess, to study human greatness or scrutinize the dark corners of ourselves. All of that being said, we have a certain obligation to our audience to consider the effect our work has. A University-sponsored publication with a circulation that reaches some 10,000 people has an equal responsibility in the way that it deals with other student groups. Artists are, and should always be, open to constructive criticism, but belittling of other's work at this level seems both petty and small. Perhaps we all need to be more careful with our words, and think twice before we pan out what took a group of students more than a month to create. We thank you for your attention, but would appreciate some human consideration in the future.

Andrew C. Cappelli
Amherst

Jeremy Wahlers
Kingston

I will vouch for you

Richard Anderson

It was three o'clock and I was walking through the parking lot on a brisk autumn afternoon toward my car. I am the principal of Frank Sinatra Regional High School and I take my job seriously. That's why I was so concerned when I noticed history teacher Buddy Law leaning next to his car with a look of dejection on his face.

"Buddy," I said. "What's up pal? You look terrible."

"I'll tell you Rich, sometimes I don't know why I even bother teaching. I had another kid pass out in class today."

"God, Buddy. How did that happen?"

"She choked herself."

"What?"

"The students find my class is so boring that they asphyxiate themselves with plastic bags or belts for amusement. They say the heightened sense of danger they get from a lack of oxygen is intellectually stimulating."

"Now Buddy," I said, giving him a pat on the back. "Don't start doubting yourself just because of a few asphyxiated kids."

He sighed, rubbing his tired face with his hands. "It's just that lately, Rich, education doesn't seem to make sense. The kids are incorrigible, their parents couldn't care less, the school board is run by a bunch of dim-witted clowns who dress like they're in the Nixon administration, and the state would rather mandate six weeks of testing than give us adequate funding. That building is a circus, not a school!"

"Tell me about it!" I said.

"But doesn't that worry you, Rich?"

"No it doesn't, Buddy. And I'll tell you why. Two words: school vouchers."

"School vouchers?"

"Yeah. They're all the rage. The government provides tax breaks or direct subsidies to lower and middle class families so they can send their kids to private schools. With a voucher system, bright students won't be stuck in failing schools just because they can't afford private education. Lots of politicians support vouchers: George W., John McCain, Rudy Giuliani. Even Bill Bradley said he would consider them!"

Buddy looked perplexed.

"But couldn't we just fund the public schools more generously instead of paying people to attend private schools?"

"Buddy," I said with a chuckle, "You've obviously never been to a state Board of Education meeting. Do you know how hard it is to secure funding? Celluci lously develop a philanthropic side. How many times has he vetoed spending increases? I'm a principal and I have to look at it from a principal's perspective. As far as I'm concerned, the state is dead to us in terms of funding. We don't get half the money we need. Our only hope is to hitch a ride with the privatization craze while it's still popular."

"Well, Rich, you're right about privatization. They're even doing it over at UMass."

"It's the only way to go, Buddy. Accepting government funding just means that Washington fat cats get to tell us how to run our schools!"

"Amen, Rich!"

"And the more private schools there are, the less we have to pay in property taxes. I, for one, am sick of paying taxes so that somebody else's kid can go to school!"

"Right on!"

"And if I was the principal of a privately funded school, I could do whatever the hell I wanted. I could have people killed!"

"Isn't that going a little far, Rich?"

"Okay, I exaggerated. But you know what I mean."

"But what about the kids left over? You won't be able to give everybody vouchers. What do we do with the kids who stay in public schools?"

"Screw 'em! Anybody with an ounce of a brain will put his or her kid in a private school. Think about it, Buddy. If some parent doesn't care enough about his kid to get a voucher, why should we care about the kid? I don't have time to be the Miracle Worker!"

"But that's just it, Rich. We're public school teachers. Wouldn't a voucher program mean that we'd only get to teach the leftovers?"

"Good question, Buddy. The answer is no. We wouldn't have to teach the leftovers because we'd all get jobs in private schools. They're well endowed already. Just imagine the dough they'll have once the voucher program kicks in! We'll make more money, we'll be able to hit the kids, and we won't even need certification!"

"Wow!" said Buddy, shaking his head. "Those public schools will be like prisons!"

"Exactly! Oh Buddy, Buddy," I said, quoting Willy Loman. "That's the whole beauty of it. I tell you, I can see it like a diamond shining in the dark that I can pick up and hold in my hand! No more dealing with delinquent kids who don't want to be there but are forced to stay by the state! The public schools will become the Australia of education. If a kid in private school screws up, we can ship him back to Frank Sinatra Regional. We'll just send the Epsilons and Gammas to those penal colonies masquerading as schools and forget about 'em. The public schools will replace the alternate schools, and the alternate schools will disappear."

"Boy, Rich, liberals will fight us tooth and nail over this."

"But that's just it, Buddy. They can't fight us. How can they say that taking some disadvantaged black kid from Springfield and dropping him into Deerfield Academy is a bad thing? It's a liberal's wet dream!"

"But, Rich, are the vouchers actually going to go to those, um, those kinds of kids?" I paused.

"Well, Buddy, we, ah, wouldn't necessarily have to give vouchers to, um, everybody. The rules could be written so that certain kinds of kids would be more likely to receive financial assistance."

"Oh. That's a relief. Well, you convinced me, Rich."

"That's good. I wish everybody was as susceptible to demagoguery – I mean, to a good idea."

"What was that?"

"Oh nothing. Well, Buddy, I better run. I've got to put in an appearance at the boys soccer game."

"All right, Rich. Thanks for talking to me. You really eased my mind."

"That's what I'm here for, Buddy. And remember," I said, placing my hand on his shoulder. "Vouchers are good!"

"You're sure about that?"

"I'll tell you what, Buddy. If they turn out to be a disaster, I owe you dinner."

"It's a deal."

Richard Anderson is a UMass student.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Eliana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Position Vacant Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Ben Alamed Web Developer

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Black Affairs

Time to meet the Greeks

Mounira Morris
Collegian Correspondent

On Thursday, October 21, 1999, twelve Black and Latino(a) Greek-lettered organizations will converge for the first time at the University of Massachusetts. They will meet in the Student Union Ballroom at 7 p.m. to share their history and goals for the UMass community. "Meet the Greek," as it is called, has been a part of the university tradition for many years, but it has never been so large. This event is usually held in Southwest's Malcolm X Cultural Center. An enormous amount of interest was generated when the names of the participants were announced. Many Black and Latino(a) students want to be members of these historic and prestigious organizations.

Below is some brief information on the organizations that will be present at "Meet the Greek."

- Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Incorporated founded on December 6, 1906, at Cornell University.
- Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Incorporated founded on January 15, 1908, at Howard University.
- Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity, Incorporated founded on January 5, 1911, at Indiana University.
- Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, Incorporated, founded on November 17, 1911, at Howard University.
- Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Incorporated, founded on January 13, 1913, at Howard University.
- Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Incorporated, founded on January 9, 1914, at Howard University.
- Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, Incorporated, founded on January 16, 1920, at Howard University.
- Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority, Incorporated, founded on November 12, 1922, at Butler University.
- Iota Phi Theta Fraternity, Incorporated, founded on September 19, 1963, at Morgan State University.
- Lambda Upsilon Lambda Fraternity, Incorporated, founded on February 19, 1982, at Cornell University.
- Lambda Pi Chi Sorority, Incorporated, founded on April 16, 1988, at Cornell University.
- Gamma Phi Sigma Fraternity, Incorporated, founded on April 26, 1992, at Temple University.

This information is just the tip of the iceberg concerning their rich history. Many of these historically black organizations were founded on predominantly white campuses, such as Cornell University, in the early 1900s. "I think an informational session such as Meet the Greeks will allow all types of uninformed students across the campus to learn more about the history and the struggles of the non-white Greek-lettered organizations. Personally, I thought that black fraternities were not only founded and existing on black campuses, but I didn't even realize that UMass had both black and Latino(a) fraternities," said freshman Christopher Pellegrino.

Dwain Northe, a junior sociology major states, "A lot of people do not realize that the sororities have a rich history as well." The Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Incorporated, founders realized the important contribution that women make, and subsequently was inspired to help develop sister organizations, such as Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, Incorporated. These two organizations not only have similarities based on their framework, but also have the unique distinction of being the only constitutionally-linked Greek-lettered organizations.

All of the black and Latino(a) organizations work and play an integral role in various communities. Unfortunately, there are times when the media chooses to focus on the social aspects of these organizations, instead of the community service, educational programs, and scholastic achievement that are common themes of these organizations. "If I did not know better, I would think of all of the parties, drinking, and rowdiness that the media presents. However, I took the time to research [the organizations] and found out for myself what really happens, and what really goes on. As former president of Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, Incorporated, I feel that the experience that I gained from the Greek system was unmatched with respect to the bonds, connections, and friends that I made all across the country," says Cassandra I. Carty, UMass alumnus. Along with being scholars, many organizations such as Lambda Pi Chi sorority Inc., have the responsibility to attend local, regional, and national meetings. Many of these members joined their respective organizations for the community service, not for social reasons. Not only are these students committed and dedicated to their academic work, but to their community and respective organizations.

Black and Latino(a) organizations have put on many activities. Gamma Phi Sigma Fraternity, Inc., planed and executed community service events in Worcester and Springfield. Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc., is currently participating in fund-raisers for Breast Cancer Awareness. There are so many black and Latino(a) organizations that planned fund-raisers for various charity organizations or scholarship/leadership development opportunities for the youth. For example, Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Inc., organized the "Evening on the Nile" event.

The challenge of preserving the quality of Greek life on this campus was a major goal for Mounira Morris, the new Graduate Assistant for Greek Affairs. Working with fellow Greeks in planning and executing programs like "Meet the Greek" is an enjoyable experience, said Ms. Morris. When asked, "Mounira, you are no longer an undergraduate, why are you doing Greek stuff?" she smiled and responded, "Being a Greek is not a temporary job. It lasts a long time."

BLACK AFFAIRS EVENT CALENDAR

10/22
- Asian-American Student Assoc. Casino Night CCA 7pm- 1am
- Iota Phi Theta Fraternity Inc. Lip Sync
- Malcolm X Cultural Center Party- The X 11pm - 4am

11/4
- English-Speaking Caribbean Assoc. (ESCA) and Anacoana Cultural Center 1st Annual ESCA Talent Showcase The X 7pm

Remembering a phenomenal athlete

By J.A. Adande
Los Angeles Times

It surprised you. Caught you off guard in the way that the news of a 63-year-old man dying of apparent cardiac arrest should not do. The cold facts say this should not come as a complete shock. Sixty-three is not an exceptionally young age to pass away, especially for a man who had a recent history of heart problems.

Still, there was this sense of disbelief. That's when it hit you. What made this story different wasn't the what, the why, the when, or the how. It was the who. Mr. Wilt Chamberlain. Dead. The two concepts do not go together.

"You just don't think things like this are going to happen to people of his stature," said Jerry West, another legendary player of Wilt's era. You hear quotes like that all the time about many people and many situations. But have those words ever been used to describe the death of a man near retirement age?

If any person appeared to have the confidence, the willpower, the arrogance, the audacity to stare the Grim Reaper in the face and refuse to comply with him, it was Wilt Chamberlain. He made a living out of doing the unprecedented and the unimaginable.

He scored 100 points in an NBA game. Impossible.

He averaged 50.4 points for a season. No way.

He averaged 22.9 rebounds for his career. Yeah, right.

He once averaged 48.5 minutes a game in a sport with a 48-minute regulation.

Everything he did or said he did was larger than life. He loved telling stories, and some seemed so outrageous that "You'd say, 'Wilt, come on now, there's no way,'" West said. But deep down inside there was a part of you that thought ... it could have happened. When the facts were just as astounding as the boasts, how do you separate the reality from the mythology?

When he was in his 40s and even in his 50s, there was the occasional rumbling that he would return to the NBA. Anyone else would have been summarily dismissed. With Chamberlain, you considered the possibility. With Wilt, you had to consider every possibility. Except death. That one never crept into the imagination. He was too busy living his exceptional life as one of the true giants physically and otherwise to walk across the sports landscape.

He lived in an oversized house custom-built for his oversized dimensions. He was a Globetrotter (of the Harlem Globetrotters) and a well-traveled man. And he commanded our attention because he never tried to fit in or apologize for his size. He played it up, let everyone know he was taller than us, and therefore he felt he was better than us.

Many people despised him for that, for his refusal to conform and his candid statements on some unpopular viewpoints. Yet no one ever ignored him. Chamberlain did everything on his own terms. When an occasion called for everyone to wear a suit, Wilt was likely to show up in a tank top.

One walk across a stretch of sand summarized Wilt Chamberlain for me. It was a dozen years ago, at the volleyball nets next to the Santa Monica Pier, where Wilt liked to play his second-favorite sport with the locals. Chamberlain got out of his car and started walking over. He was wearing black spandex tights. No shirt, no shoes, no socks.

"Hey, Wilt," his volleyball buddies called out.

He acknowledged them and kept walking right through their courts, not caring one bit that they were in the middle of points because he didn't want to take the time and energy to go around. Wilt did what Wilt wanted, regardless of how anyone else felt about it.

Yet he almost couldn't help but leave a lasting impact on the sport he played and the places he lived. So great was Chamberlain's reach that his death was not only national news but a major story in three disparate regions of the country: Los Angeles, Philadelphia, and Kansas.

He was born and raised in Philadelphia, and played half of his NBA career there. He spent the final five years of his career with the Lakers, and lived here for the second half of his life. Then there was that brief stop in Lawrence, Kan., where he attended the University of Kansas.

He maintained relationships with some of his Kansas teammates, but never really kept any ties with the school for 40 years after leaving. Then he returned when the school retired his jersey on Jan. 17, 1998, and learned that he was beloved in America's heartland. "I think the hero had returned," said Doug Vance, the assistant athletic director/media relations at Kansas. "He was a giant of a man. His presence ... Basketball is so important here. Basketball is like a religion. He's certainly one of the icons of basketball at Kansas."

It was late in the game, but it gave us a look at a Chamberlain we rarely saw, the "big pussycat" that West described Tuesday afternoon. Wilt wiped away tears as he spoke to the fans at Allen Field house during ceremonies at halftime of a game against Kansas State. After the game he stayed and signed autographs for three hours.

"People didn't know what to expect when he came back," Vance said. "He couldn't have been nicer." Perhaps that picture of Chamberlain goes against everything else you know about him. It still isn't as jarring as the news Tuesday.

Perhaps his death is better than the other unimaginable alternative: watching him grow old and feeble. This way there won't be any public images of a weakened Chamberlain, a shell of his former self.

You will remember him as a robust figure. You can't picture him as anything else.

According to the Department of Health and Human Services, black women are less likely than white women to get breast cancer, but more likely to die from it. Concerning breast cancer, the Center for Disease Control reported that from 1980 to 1995 the death rate for all women fell 10 percent from 23.1 per 100,000 to 21. But the higher rate among black women stayed constant at 7.5 per 100,000.

Birth to Age	All Races: one in:	Asian/Other: one in	Black: one in:	Hispanic: one in.	White: one in.
30	2,451	4,445	1,445	2,890	2,558
35	623	709	443	721	614
40	227	259	176	272	218
45	101	121	85	134	94
50	55	65	46	74	48
55	34	44	33	49	31
60	24	34	24	34	22
65	18	27	19	27	16
70	14	22	16	21	12
75	11	19	14	17	10
80	10	16	12	15	9
85	9	15	11	13	8
Lifetime	8	13	10	12	7

Race/ethnicity categories are mutually exclusive. Persons of Hispanic ethnicity are identified by medical records and/or surname and may be of any race.
Source: California Cancer Registry (11/94)

This is in response to those seen marching and protesting around campus, yet not seen in a class putting their parents' hard-earned money to use. It is nice that you want to rally, but try to rally yourself a 3.0. You have so much to say about black power, and can break down "how the man is holding you back." You can analyze "how underprivileged we are," and can preach about "how we can better ourselves." However, you cannot seem to make it to class on time, if at all, and even if you do, you are not prepared. You have every excuse for why you could not make it or why you could not do the work. Well, you should not be representing the plight of our people. We had the opportunity to utilize affirmative action, but there are many of you who took it for granted. We do not need people like you speaking on our behalf. It was not "The Man" who held you back, it was you holding on to that DRU House ticket instead of a book. This is not about affirmative action. This is about us as a people not doing what we need to do to get ahead. Instead we put our efforts into other things, good and bad. First we need to make the difference within ourselves, and then we will be more adequately prepared to unite as a people. When we can stand strong, academically and in numbers, we can make a true difference.

Ta'Tasha Gilpin

Complex shades of Blackness: Poem from the Million Man March

A Poem from the Million Man March
By Maya Angelou

The night has been long,
The wound has been deep,
The pit has been dark,
And the walls have been steep.

Under a dead blue sky on a distant beach,
I was dragged by my braids just beyond your reach.
Your hands were tied, your mouth was bound,
You couldn't even call out my name.
You were helpless and so was I,
But unfortunately throughout history
You've worn a badge of shame.

I say, the night has been long.
The wound has been deep,
The pit has been dark,
And the walls have been steep.

But today, voices of old spirit sound
Speak to us in words profound.
Across the years, across the centuries,
Across the oceans, and across the seas,
They say, draw near to one another,
Save your race.
You have been paid for in a distant place,
The old ones remind us that slavery's chains
Have paid for our freedom again and again.

The night has been long.
The pit has been deep.
The night has been dark,
And the walls have been steep.

The hells we have lived through and live through still,
Have sharpened our senses and toughened our will.
The night has been long.
This morning I look through your anguish
Right down to your soul.
I know that with each other we can make ourselves whole.
I look through the posture and past your disguise,
And see your love for family in your big brown eyes.

I say, clap hands and let's come together in this meeting ground,
I say, clap hands and let's deal with each other with love,
I say, clap hands and let us get from the low road of indifference,
Clap hands, let us come together and reveal our hearts.
Let us come together and renew our spirits.
Let us come together and cleanse our souls.
Clap hands, let's leave the preening
And stop impostering our own history.
Clap hands, call the spirits back from the ledge.
Clap hands, let us invite joy into our conversation.
Courtesy into our bedrooms,
Gentleness into our kitchen,
Care into our nursery.

The ancestors remind us, despite the history of pain
We are a going-on people who will rise again.

And still we rise.

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Monday, October 18, 1999

New Reiner film tiresome

Story of Us proves melodramatic

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

The Story of Us
Directed by Rob Reiner with Michelle Pfeiffer, Bruce Willis
Playing at Showcase Cinemas, Springfield

Can a couple survive 15 years of marriage? A more relevant question: can an audience survive 90 minutes of this movie? Not easily.

Ben and Katie Jordan are trapped in a disintegrating marriage in which bickering and emotional estrangement have become the norm. Their two children are leaving for two months of summer camp, and while they're gone, Ben and Katie decide to separate. The couple spends the summer working through its problems, and examining their once-strong love for each other, consulting their respective friends for advice. Unfortunately, The Story of Us never accomplishes more than a shallow treatment of marriage, with a couple of lukewarm laughs thrown in to keep you from falling asleep.

Clumsy writing is primarily to blame here. Much of the story is told through flashbacks, but the haphazard and inconsistent employment of these flashbacks only makes for patchy character development, and a formless plot. The device of the children's summer camp showed promise, and perhaps if the story had stayed in the present, the movie could have created more convincing characters. Its insistence, however, on subjecting the audience to manipulative, syrupy memories, with no real emotional substance, undermines the story's potential.

Adding to the movie's problems is its use of humor. "Humor" might be putting it too strongly, however, since most of the jokes are unfunny, and even those that do score some laughter add nothing to the actual romance and are instead an inappropriate distraction from the important characters. Most of the comedic scenes feel like they're taken from one of those sitcoms no one watches. Especially intolerable is Paul Reiser, playing an amplified version of his character from "Mad About You." In fact, The Story of Us comes suspiciously close to being "Mad About You" the Movie, except the writing and character treatment are worse.

Pfeiffer and Willis each give excellent performances, but despite this, they have little on-screen chemistry, and their characters are incredibly self-absorbed. The movie gives us few reasons to sympathize with them; they seem so incompatible, so selfishly insistent upon getting their own points across that it hardly makes sense for them to have married in the first place. For a tear-jerking romance movie to work, the audience has to be able to buy into the relationship, but this one offers no credibility, no genuine affection. Essentially, we have to take the movie's word that its characters are in love, and most of the time, I just didn't buy it.

Perhaps The Story of Us tried to do too much: it tried to be both a bittersweet love story, and a lighthearted movie about the give-and-take of relationships. These two halves work against each other, however, and in the end neither is sufficiently accomplished. Perhaps, too, I couldn't appreciate the movie because I'm not married. Well, that may be, but that sort of in-joke approach to movie making doesn't go to the movie's credit. It's the job of the filmmakers to let me care about their characters. I shouldn't have to bring my own romantic history to the theater in order to enjoy it.

Grade: C-

COURTESY YAHOO.COM

Bruce Willis and Michelle Pfeiffer anchor the ensemble cast in The Story of Us, which opened this weekend

Fight Club almost scores BO knockout

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

For three weeks, I've been waiting for this day. I had the headline all picked out in my head: "Fight Club scores B.O. knockout." But, alas, it was not to be. Despite earning the top spot on Friday night, Fight Club could not keep its momentum, yielding instead to two different movies.

Double Jeopardy maintained the top box office streak for an unbelievable, and I mean that in the most literal sense of the word, fourth consecutive week. In a tightly-contested contest, Jeopardy managed to collect $10.5 million — a meager drop of 22 percent from last week. And although The Fugitive fairted much better (23.76 open, 111.20 after four weeks, and a 4.68 multiplier), Double Jeopardy was still phenomenal. For some perspective here, let's consider that four weeks ago the movie opened to $23.16 million. Its gross now stands at $80.6 million for a multiplier of 3.48, blowing away the average 2.9. Who needs critics?

In second place was the new Rob Reiner film, The Story of Us. The romantic drama, starring Bruce Willis and Michelle Pfiefer among others, just missed number one, collecting $10.4 million on only 2164 screens. The modest screen count gave the film a $4,806 per-screen average.

Despite some of the most brutal violence in recent memory and rumors of walkouts during pre-screenings, Fight Club claimed third place. These factors perhaps skewed the screen count low- only 1963. Fight Club, which was critically praised, collected $10.3 million for a per-screen average of $5,247.

Three Kings fell a disappointing 39 percent, especially after last week's small 26 percent, but still claimed fourth with $7.3 million. That's 45.7 million overall for the excellent Gulf War satire. Keep thinking I..A. Confidential.

For the first time since its release, American Beauty did not claim the best per-screen average in the top ten; I'll address that later. However, the movie did collect $6.8 million on about 100 more screens, 1350, to give it fifth place. That's still an impressive 28 percent drop and a per-screen average of $5037. This doesn't hold well for wider expansion.

Random Hearts was next. Harrison Ford couldn't even save this one, as it fell an atrociously poor 55 percent. For any type of romantic movie, which usually has strong legs, that spells doom. The movie made $5.8 million and stands at $22.7 overall.

Last week's other opener faired much better. Superstar fell only 36 percent to $5.7 million for the weekend. Next week, this will likely pass Random Hearts, which is sad in so many ways.

Two stalwarts occupied the number eight and nine positions. Sunday was likely The Sixth Sense's last day below the $250 million mark. Its $5.2 million was good enough for seventh and $249.9 million overall. That's already 14th all-time, ready to pass Men In Black, and soon laws. Blue Streak continues to linger in the top ten. Its $3.8 million brought its cumulative gross to $60.6 million.

Perhaps, the biggest story this week, though, was The Omega Code. Well, unless you watch a lot of Christian television, you're probably asking "The Omega what?" Apparently, the film was advertised exclusively through religious programming and publications, and was generally ignored by mainstream media. That is, until now. The apocalyptic film about a secret mathematical code hidden in the Torah (sounds like a Pi rip-off to me) grossed $2.4 million this weekend, and earned tenth place. Playing on only 305 screens, The Omega Code put up a per-screen average, $7,869, reminiscent of American Beauty.

It just goes to show you that you never know what to expect from the ever-fickle American audience.

Dillard's Time Being

Novel provides mental pleasure

By Brion McDermott
Collegian Staff

For the Time Being
Annie Dillard

With midterms coming up, jobs, Red Sox games, and a social life, who doesn't have time for a novel philosophically exploring mortality, individuality in a humanity of 6 billion, and the seeming absence of God? If you can make the time, and are looking for an intensely provocative read, Annie Dillard's For the Time Being is an excellent choice.

Loosely structured around several broad storylines, the novel is fragmented into short, contained sections that shift around like a pattern you can only recognize from afar. Reading the book is like taking a car ride where you keep falling asleep; every time you wake up, there is a different landscape. Each of Dillard's "awakenings" is almost journastically hard, yet her topics are incredibly personal — why human life means anything, for example. Dillard's paragraphs are succinct and personally distant, yet she still manages to elicit emotions ranging from awestruck joy to profound sadness from her readers.

"Its form is unusual, its scenes are remote, its focus wide, and its tone austere," writes Dillard in her author's note. "Its pleasures are almost purely mental."

Turn off the baseball game, it's time for almost purely mental pleasures!

But it is this unusual form and remote scope that make reading For the Time Being like a hunger. Though philosophical and ideologi

Turn to TIME page 7

Castaway Lounge
I-91 to exit 24, south on Rte. 5
Whately, Mass., (413) 665-8733
Will Proudly Present
Monday October 18
Amateur Night
Ladies Apply in Person
1st Place $200
2nd Place $100
3rd Place $50

Important Announcement
naC
PRE-REGISTRATION FOR SPRING 2000
uoy
The WRITING PROGRAM PLACEMENT TEST will be offered on TUESDAY OCTOBER 19 @ 7P.M. in BARTLETT 61
?etirw
This test may be taken only once. Students should pre-register for ENGLWP before pre-registration ends.
Students do not need to register for the test.

Fall 1999
Eating Disorder Programs
• Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. -- Confidentiality Assured
Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2
• Eating Disorder Informational Sessions
Facilitated by a UHS Nutritionist, these drop in sessions will include a video and discussion about eating disorders, where to go for help and learn how to help a friend. Registration is not required for these sessions that will meet 4:00 - 5:30 P.M. on Sept. 21, Oct. 20, Nov. 9, and Dec. 1 in room 302 at University Health Services.
• Residence Hall Workshops
Body Image and Understanding Eating Disorders Workshops are available upon request. Contact your Resident Assistant to schedule a workshop.

For Fast Early Delivery Call 256-4110
La Cucina di PINOCCHIO of Amherst 30 Boltwood
#1 Delivery in Town
MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL SPECIALS!!
(MONDAY – THURSDAY SPECIAL)
Get 10 Free wings with the purchase of a large cheese pizza only $8.25
Any 2 Calzones $8.40
Delivery only
Must Mention Ad When Ordering
Offer Expires 12/31/99
Monday - Thursday 11:00 - 2:00 am
Friday + Saturday 11:00 - 3:00 am
Sunday 11:00 - 1:00 am

Attention UMass students and Daily Collegian fanatics

For the final two Arts covers of this year, the Arts & Living section is doing something special. In light of the decade coming to an end, we plan to do a best-of-the-90s-movies and a best-of-the-90s-music spread. As a part of this, we would like to get everyone's opinion.

So those who would like to vote, listen up. You can either bring your entry to the Collegian office in the Campus Center basement, or you can e-mail it to us at Daily Collegian@hotmail.com.

Either way, all entries must include your name and phone number as well as your selections. If you submit by email, please enter either "Movies" or "Music" in the subject line. If you enter via paper, please write this ot the top of your paper.

For the movies, please select and clearly number your choices for the 10 best movies of the 90s. For the music, please clearly number your choices for the 10 best albums of the 90s.

At the end of the semester, all votes will be tollied and the results will be published on the final two Arts covers. I encourage everyone to participate in both contests, but please limit entries to one per person.

Thanks,
Adam Martignetti

311's Soundsystem is truly an original

Pioneers of rap/rock mix take it to a new level

By J.D. Considine
Baltimore Sun

"Come original, you got to come original/All entertainers, come original," sings 311's Nick Hexum in the song "Come Original." Despite the unique and different.

"Come Original," for instance, does just that, mixing a lilting, dance hall vocal with hip-hop rhythms and crunchy guitar for the A-section, then shifts to a more aggressive pulse based on slap-bass and to the punchy, muscular groove of "Large In the Margin," 311 offers a wide array of stylistic ideas here. But even when the sources are obvious, what the band does with its influences is neither pat nor predictable.

Indeed, if there's any common thread to these songs, it's the way the group balances rhythmic fluidity with textural intensity. In other words, no matter how much 311 wants to punish your speakers, the band never wants to interrupt your groove. So even though there's a fair amount of guitar shred in songs such as "Freeze Time" or "Can't Fade Me," 311 never detours into straight-out thrash, preferring instead to keep the music at a nice, funky simmer.

Wanting to "come original" doesn't mean the band doesn't occasionally pay overt tributes. Even though "Life's Not a Race" uses no congas or timbales, it's hard to mistake the influence Santana exerts over the track, from Tim Mahoney's sweetly searing lead (very much in the Carlos Santana vein) to the "BlackMagic Woman"-style breakdown at the song's end.

But even when 311 wears its sources on its sleeve, the band never seems to be slavishly imitating the artists it admires. These guys would rather "come original," and that's the best reason to make their "Soundsystem" a regular feature on your sound system.

COURTESY CHRYSALIS

The members of 311 (from left to right), Sa Martinez, Nick Hexum, Chad Sexton, Tim Mahoney, and P-Nut take it up a notch on their latest, Soundsystem.

awkward grammar, there's no mistaking Hexum's meaning, there's no value to be had in irend-chasing or imitation. If you want your work to matter, you need to do something distinctive.

To their credit, the members of 311 have done just that with Soundsystem. Even as other bands are cashing in on the rap/rock fusion that 311 helped pioneer, the band's new album moves beyond the obvious variations to deliver something turntable scratching for the rap-style B-section. That alone is more musical variety than most bands manage, but 311 shifts gears yet again on the song's bridge, laying down an angular metal riff that seems to soar over the pulsing bass and drums.

Thanks to the lyrics, "Come Original" may be the most obvious example of 311's unique and eclectic approach, but it's hardly an isolated example. From the easy, Caribbean-inflected flow of "Strong All Along,"

Fans chant K.C.

Latin pop gets down

By Alisa Valdes-Rodriguez
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES- Karl Cameron "K.C." Porter crouches before the blinking 80-track SL 9000 recording console, body pulsating with the sounds: a strummed "cuatro" guitar, the muted strains of a piano "montuno," clickity castanets, a fat, implied clave humping from low drum hits.

Porter eyes the engineer sitting nearby and grins.

"Oye, pero tiene swing, Papa!" Porter exclaims (Translation: Hey, this has swing, man!).

For those who live by stereotypes, it might come as a shock to hear the rapid, slangy Spanish, and complex Latin polyrhythms flowing from Porter's soul. After all, he's a "white guy" who was born in Encino and lives in a sprawling Tudor-style home in the hills of Calabasas.

It might also surprise such folks to know that the shy, soft-spoken Porter — an unassuming man of 37 who usually dresses in black jeans and an oversized shirt — is a leading Latin pop songwriter and producer, having worked with Ricky Martin, Luis Miguel, Jon Gabriel, Selena, Tabalusos Cadillacs, and many others.

But his Spanish pop credits don't end with Latin American and Latino artists. In fact, Porter is the guy to call when mainstream artists want to record in Spanish, something happening more frequently as the Latin music industry grows.

Porter has written, translated, and produced Spanish recordings for Toni Braxton, Janet Jackson, Boyz II Men, Mya, Julian Lennon, Toni Childs, Scorpion, Daryl Hall, Chaka Khan, Sea Edition B-52s, and many others, often serving as speech coach as well.

Then [illegible] the achingly tender singer on "Primavera," a cut on Santana's hit "Supernatural" album, is Porter. Carlos Santana had planned to get a well-known singer for the song, one of two Porter wrote for the album, but sang it as well as Porter. Raised 7 to 17 in Guatemala, Porter is proud that the ethnic and [illegible] lobbied loosely about the [illegible] including "white guy" and "[illegible] mess at best, ludicrous at worst.

Porter's two Grammys and [illegible] 40 album credits (with [illegible] tens of millions) are [illegible] "Latino" has everything [illegible] ture and nothing to do with [illegible] music is universal, and [illegible] mercial image does not [illegible] talent, or vice versa.

On this particular [illegible] song Porter produced, "[illegible] Latino," is sung by former Gen Hallwell.

In the past month [illegible] also counted Spanish [illegible] singers Brian McKnight [illegible] Jordan.

"K.C. Porter is all [illegible] about," says Candice Gaetz, [illegible] manager.

"K.C. Porter. K.C. [illegible] Porter. Campbell Soup. [illegible] only person who's [illegible] you ask around to see [illegible] a translation and [illegible] English song into Spanish, [illegible] one else."

Porter is modest about [illegible] as the king of Latin [illegible] crossover production.

"I think living in [illegible] a taste of Latin pop. [illegible] eyes radiate warmth [illegible] 'I think I understand [illegible] people what it's like to [illegible] speaker to have [illegible] says. "I know how to [illegible] pronounce the words.

"He keeps the [illegible] intact," says Mckinley [illegible] version of "Back at One" [illegible] in the coming weeks [illegible] only. "He's [illegible] tive."

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

The Girls are back in town

Amy Ray and Emily Saliers, better known as The Indigo Girls, played to a crowded house at the Mullins Center on Saturday night. Besides playing old favorites like Closer to Fine and Galileo, the duo played a variety of songs from their new album, Come on Now Social.

K.C. Porter has quickly become the most recognizable name for producing crossover Latino-Amer[illegible]

It is good to read Arts and Living

■ time

continued from page 6

cally challenging, the novel is easy to read, and reread. Whether it is her description of watching lifelike clay soldiers emerge from an archeological dig, or vivid descriptions of an artist painting clouds as his wife slowly dies, your mind jumps onto Dillard's words and tumbles with them.

The recurring sections are fascinating. One centers on the travels of a French philosopher in the 1920s. His thoughts on God and expedition swim beautifully with the author. Another storyline takes the life of Hasidic Jews, and the thought and persecution with which they lived. Still another deals with clouds — Dillard records the exact dates and circumstances that artists painted certain cloud formations, say 150 years ago. That effect, the "mental gymnastics" she puts the reader through, is illuminating. Dillard is constantly trying to find what individuality means in a universe where the ratio of galaxies to human beings is 9:1.

By the same token, find God in a world where a tidal wave in 1991 killed 138,000 Bangladeshi. Pinpointing Dillard's conclusion and personal views is a difficult task, but the book is more about the reader than the author. We are affected because we are somehow characters in this book.

However, unlike the pleasant games of a book like Einstein's Dreams, For The Time Being is often depressing and undercuts many of the ideas that we like to believe. Dillard's few attempts at humor fall flat in the face of a colossally serious text. If you're just in the mood to coast through a "normal book," this is not the sensible choice.

But if you're feeling brave, and have a little time to spend on contemplation, For The Time Being is the book for you.

Arts and Living
–Check out whats going on

Calling All Undeclared and Pre-Major Students:
"Planning for Academic Success" an important 45-minute workshop sponsored by your advisors at Pre-Major Advising Services
(545-2191)
Where?: the 6th floor of Goodell
When?: (select one)
Mondays: Oct. 18,25, Nov.1 3pm or 4pm
Tuesdays: Oct. 19,26, Nov.2 2pm or 4pm
Wednesday Oct. 20,27, Nov.3 3pm or 4pm

PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
THE Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Rd. off Rt.9
2 Miles East of Town Center
256-6446

安城中國飯店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 = 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

All the Digital Power in the Palm of Your Hands
www.omniplayer.com

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
-DISCOUNT OIL-
NORTHAMPTON/HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

Learn to Meditate!
Meditation Workshops
UMASS Campus Center
Tuesday Oct 19th 6:00 - 8:00 pm Room 911
Wednesday Oct 20th 6:00 - 8:00 pm Room 911
Thursday Oct 21st 6:00 - 8:00 pm Room 911
FREE workshops include lecture on meditation techniques, meditation practice, music for meditation, and instructional video.
FREE, no charge, nothing to buy - just a great chance to learn how to meditate Making a difference has always been a matter of applying yourself. Here's where to apply.

PEACE CORPS
Attention Seniors:
Apply Now for Assignments Departing After Graduation
ALL MAJORS ELIGIBLE AND ENCOURAGED TO APPLY!
Call the 5-College Peace Corps Office at (413) 545-2105

UM battles best in ECAC

Minutewomen fall twice in N.J.

By Eric Soderstrom
Collegian Correspondent

Guy Clark once said: "Ain't no chance if you don't take it."

This weekend the University of Massachusetts women's tennis team played in the ECAC Division I Women's Invitational Tennis Championships to vie for the right to be dubbed "the best in the East." Coming off three consecutive wins, it was the Minutewomen's first-ever invitation to compete in this nationally recognized tournament, and no matter the outcome, the opportunity was tremendous. The team-formatted tournament featured 16 of the East's top teams including James Madison, Virginia, Boston College, Seton Hall, Temple, Richmond, Syracuse, Rutgers, and all of the Ivy schools. The format consists of six singles matches followed by three doubles matches, all worth one point. The first team to reach five points wins the match.

"I am very pleased for my team for having the opportunity to play in such a wonderful tournament," head coach Judy Dixon said on Thursday. "It is a real step forward for this program."

Unfortunately for the Minutewomen, this championship experience was as wonderful as Adam Vinatieri's botched field goal attempt that smashed the right uprights in the New England Patriot's loss to the Kansas City Chiefs last week.

Saturday in Princeton, N.J., it was the Orangewomen of Syracuse who cut the ribbon to open up the Minutewomen's downhill adventure. UMass dropped its first match of the day 5-0 while being swept by the Orangewomen in singles and doubles action. Senior Ola Gerasimova fell to Lai Shareen 6-2 7-6 (6) at number one singles. Syracuse gained their second point when sophomore Helena Horak dropped a straight set 6-1, 6-1 loss to Anna Khuadina at number two singles. At the number three spot, sophomore Annie Hamilton lost her first singles match of the season to Michelle Neveklowska 6-3, 6-2. Freshman Katie Stammen fell to Masha Kabanova in three sets, 4-6, 6-0, 6-1, while freshman Beth Ebert was defeated 6-0, 6-1 at number six singles by Katie Thompson. The No. 5 singles spot was retired because Orangewomen had already taken the match.

The second match of the day found UMass in another struggle for dear life, this time they fell to the Brown Bears, 7-2. At number one singles, Gerasimova regained her composure from her previous loss in the day and defeated Heather Young 6-1, 4-6, 6-2. At the number two spot, Horak fell to Mary Ellen deValle, 6-1, 6-1 for her second loss of the day. Number three singles found Hamilton falling to Olivia Wong, 6-0, 6-0. Stammen defeated Rebecca Rhee, 6-4, 6-3 at the number four spot and sophomore Robyn Lebovitz was defeated 6-3, 6-4 by Jeannine Baillie at number five singles. At the No. 6 spot, Ebert was defeated by Irene Adzuar, 6-0, 6-2. UMass was swept in doubles play as Gerasimova and Hamilton lost for the first time this season, falling to Young and Wong, 8-3 at the number one spot. Horak and Stammen fell to Adzuar and Baillie, 8-6 and Lebovitz and Ebert lost to de Valle and Lauren Chung, 9-8 (4).

The Minutewomen will shake off the disappointment of this weekend when they travel to Boston University and prepare to destroy the Lady Terriers on October 21st. Head coach Judy Dixon remains stuck on seven, her magic number of wins away from the colossal 100-victory barrier. Dixon, however, is not solely concerned with her individual coaching accomplishments. It is the development of her team that she is focused on, and like the great David Henry Thoreau said, "Success usually comes to those who are too busy to be looking for it."

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

Puttin' it on Wax

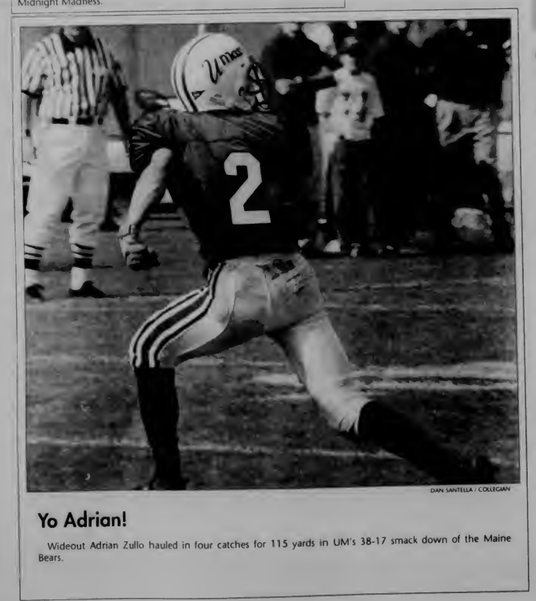
Darryl Denson rocks the rim during the Slam Dunk contest at Friday's Midnight Madness.

Sprewell irks Knick coach

By Matt Eagan
Hartford Courant

It was only January when Knicks Coach Jeff Van Gundy sat in a dimly lit hallway outside the team's training facility in Purchase, N.Y., and told everybody he thought Latrell Sprewell was coachable.

From January through July it seemed Van Gundy had indeed managed to coach the league's most notorious player.



Sprewell, for his part, seemed to embrace a second chance in the league. Rather than the choking monster many expected, he was articulate and contrite. Perhaps not a team leader, but certainly not someone who would create internal unrest.

There were moments, such as when he was fined because of agent Robert Gist's whining about a place in the starting lineup, when Sprewell still seemed to place himself in front of everyone else. Mainly, though, he was the good soldier.

This year, the soldier was AWOL.

Sprewell, who was excused from the first two days of training camp because of a civil trial in Oakland, Calif., decided to drive from Oakland to New York.

He also decided it wasn't necessary to answer his phone or notify the team that he was exploring his Kerouackian side. Sprewell finally showed up in New York on Monday, a week late. The Knicks promptly fined him and then, in what is the subject of much legal wrangling, either did or did not suspend him.

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

Yo Adrian!

Wideout Adrian Zullo hauled in four catches for 115 yards in UM's 38-17 smack down of the Maine Bears.

■ soccer

continued from page 12

from the kickoff. Xavier soon posted two goals to tie the game and a third with only about eleven minutes remaining to steal a victory away from the Minutemen.

The victory was Xavier's first Atlantic 10 win as they now stand at 4-9-4 on the season, and 1-5 in the A-10. The Musketeers were also able to snap a five-game losing streak, and snap a UMass four game-winning streak in the process.

Yet the Xavier pothole on the road to the Atlantic 10 tournament did not stall the Minutemen for too long, as they continued on to Sunday's game against last year's A-10 champions. Dayton, who has not shown such a spectacular conference performance this season, nonetheless gave the Minutemen a fight, as the game went to double overtime. Almost after two hours of play, the game finally came to an end in a 2-1 victory for UMass, as Kinateder scored the game winner and his second goal of the weekend.

Recovering a rebound of the Flyer goal post, Kinateder fired and hit netting with about 10 minutes to play in the second overtime. Kinateder's goal was the first and last scored after an hour of almost continuous play.

Black also scored in the Maroon and White's 2-1 defeat of Dayton to once again join Kinateder on the scoreboard this weekend. Putting the first point of the day on the board, Black scored his 12th goal of the season almost 13 minutes into the game.

True to form, Dayton was not about to be shutout at home, and with nine ticks remaining in the first half the Flyers were able to beat UMass senior and captain goalkeeper Todd Fowler. Heading a ball off a corner kick, Dayton tied the game at 1-1, and with both teams not able to crack the other's defense that is where the score was to stay until Kinateder score in the 110th minute of the game.

Although a long game, the win was an important victory for the Minutemen. The University of Massachusetts now stands at 10-5 on the season and 5-2 in the Atlantic 10. Dayton also serves as a good reference point for the Minutemen, as they were last years A-10 champs and are among the top teams in A-10 soccer.

For the statisticians, the Dayton defeat was the 10th win of the season for UMass; marking the 10th time UMass has won 10 or more games in a season since the beginning of the soccer program. Seven of those times have come in the last nine years, since Massachusetts men's soccer coach Sam Koch has been at the helm of the team. The game also marked Koch's 151st career victory.

Now the Maroon and White will prepare for another two games next weekend with more of their conference foes in their final two home games of the season. UMass will await La Salle University on Friday and Fordham University on Sunday at Totman field.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Sophomores Joey Culgin (above) and Markus Helanen (below) put forth solid defensive efforts in UM's Saturday loss to Colgate.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

■ ice hockey

continued from page 12

The game was actually tied at 1-1 after two periods, but Nolan and the Red Raiders struck first only 52 seconds into the final frame. Another UMass giveaway on a clearing attempt placed the puck on Nolan's stick. This time the senior winger fired a slap shot from just inside the UMass blue line and beat Helanen between the pads.

"What can you say, Nolan came up big for us tonight," Vaughan said.

Colgate scored the first goal in the opening period on a tally by Hobey Baker candidate Andy MacDonald. The senior center blasted a shot from the left faceoff circle over the blocker of Helanen to put his team up 1-0.

UMass tied it in the second period when senior winger Kevin Poulin scored his first collegiate goal on a scramble in front. Defenseman Toni Soderholm started the flurry with a shot from the point, but the rebound was batted around in front of the cage. Eventually the puck landed on the stick of Poulin, who slipped home the tying score.

However, as a whole, a one-goal loss was not the way that the Minutemen wanted to start their season.

"I thought that it was a sloppy game overall. We were drastically outshot, but we had plenty of chances to score," Mallen said. "If we capitalize on one of those chances that we had in the second or third periods, then it would have been a completely different game."

Helanen made 34 saves in the losing effort for UMass, who was outshot 37-21 by the Red Raiders on the evening.

"You have to give UMass credit. They did a nice job of boxing out after our initial shots," Vaughan said. "They play a tough game and their goalie made some big saves."

The Minutemen will next be in action on Friday night when they open up the Hockey East portion of their schedule against Northeastern. UMass will then host Boston College on Saturday night at the William D. Mullins Center.

Tribe on quest for manager after giving Hargrove the axe

By Jack O'Connell
Hartford Courant

BOSTON— The postseason game of musical managers is just beginning.

Mike Hargrove's dismissal in Cleveland, a foregone conclusion after the Indians were eliminated in the Division Series by the Red Sox, opens up one of the most enticing jobs in the major leagues.

Perhaps that's why the Tigers were so gung-ho in signing Phil Garner and incurring the wrath of Commissioner Bud Selig, who is fuming that Detroit did not send him a list of minority candidates under consideration for the job.

"In a letter to all clubs April 14, 1999, I implemented a new initiative requiring all clubs to consider minority candidates," Selig said. "Clubs were instructed to inform me personally of such openings and to provide me their list of candidates, to include minority representation, prior to making a decision."

The sticking point with the Tigers is that, technically, the job was never open. Larry Parrish was still the manager when Garner agreed to a four-year contract that is said to be worth $1 million a year. Upon Garner's acceptance, the Tigers offered Parrish another job in the organization.

Detroit General Manager Randy Smith acknowledged Garner was the only person interviewed. Team President John McHale Jr. and Owner Mike Ilitch seem prepared for a faceoff with the commissioner.

Hiring policies throughout the majors haven't been kind to minorities. But the Tigers moved quickly once they thought they might lose Garner to Cleveland. And why not? Indians General Manager John Hart may not be the easiest man to work for, but inheriting a team with that lineup is the envy of every job-seeking manager around. Buddy Bell, who seemed a cinch to take Jim Leyland's old job in Denver, might just change his mind and get in line outside Jacobs Field. He played and coached for the Indians, is well-liked, and has major league managerial experience.

But Selig will want that list, won't he? Never mind that the team he used to own, the Brewers, now run by his daughter, bypassed Dave Stewart for the general manager's job and have yet to contact Willie Randolph or Chris Chambliss about an interview for the managerial job left vacant by the firing of Garner.

Making up a list is nothing more than a smokescreen. Braves coach Don Baylor, who is on the verge of getting the Cubs' job, was on such a list made up by the Brewers seven years ago, when Garner was hired. But Baylor believes to this day he received merely a, well, token interview. That's why Baylor had no interest in the Milwaukee opening this time.

In Cleveland, Hart has been down on Hargrove for some time and finally got his chance to dump him after the Indians blew a 2-0 lead in the Division Series. Hargrove's loss of faith in Jaret Wright probably cost him the job more than the two intentional walks to Nomar Garciaparra and seven RBI on two swings by the next hitter, Troy O'Leary. Starting Bartolo Colon on three days' rest smelled of panic, but Hargrove simply did not trust Wright against the Red Sox.

Hargrove, of course, now goes into the managerial pool. Don't mention the Orioles' opening to him. Compared to the way he feels about Albert Belle, Hargrove is president of the Jaret Wright fan club.

An interesting minority hiring was made in Toronto. Former Manager Cito Gaston was brought back by the Blue Jays as hitting instructor, the job he held before succeeding Jimy Williams as manager 10 years ago. Current Jays manager Jim Fregosi, who with the Phillies lost to Gaston in the 1993 World Series, is in favor of the move, as strange as that seems. They are good friends and golf companions. This move does have political implications.

Jays management does not believe it can afford to keep both Carlos Delgado and Shawn Green, who are eligible for free agency after the 2000 season. Gaston has a good relationship with Delgado, not so good with Green. Fregosi angered Delgado when he stripped him of the captaincy. "I've never had a captain," Fregosi said at the time, unaware how much it meant to Delgado. Gaston can help smooth that over.

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

Mike Babul rocked the Mullins Center during Friday night's Midnight Madness by winning his fourth consecutive Slan Dunk contest.

Madness explodes

Flint and his Minutemen attempt new beginning

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

Try and try as they might to return the Massachusetts men's basketball program back to its glory days, some things never change. Especially when it comes to Midnight Madness.

In front of a half-full William D. Mullins Center crowd of 4,500 fans last Friday night, senior co-captain Mike Babul timed a perfect alley-oop to himself in the second round, topping teammate Ronnell Blizzard on his way to capturing his fourth consecutive slam dunk contest.

Babul, who stated he was doing it "for the Red Sox," furthered his legend Midnight Madness status when he performed "the human fly," an acrobatic dunk over teammate Monty Mack who was draped across three chairs in the paint.

Around the country, Midnight Madness officially marks the first possible minute college basketball teams can begin practice. The Kentucky Wildcat hoop team was introduced as the "Team of the Century" for being the most successful program with 1,748 victories, which has earned it a record 41 NCAA tournament appearances including seven national titles and a winning percentage of .764.

For the fans in the Mullins Center, it marked their first look at UMass newcomers JoVann Johnson, Eric Williams, and Micah Brand. Johnson, a transfer from Wabash Valley College in Ill., is a 6-3 junior guard expected to be a self-starter on offense. Brand, who completed his senior year at Milford Academy in Conn., is the only freshman on the roster. The lanky 6-11 native of Middletown, NY, will compete for minutes at the center slot. Williams, a forward transfer from Syracuse, will have to sit out for one year due to NCAA transfer rules. Walk-on junior Dwayne Early out of Springfield Central High School was also introduced with the team.

Beginning his fourth year at the UMass helm, head coach Bruiser Flint looks to spark up fans' interest with a more up tempo that should benefit his players. For the first time, the Minutemen will have to do without a standout big man like they have depended in years past from former stars Marcus Camby and Lari Ketner.

"My players like to play this way," said Flint of the fast-break offense. "But if we have to walk it up, then we will walk it up, I just want to win."

UMass hoped to attract more fans for the upcoming 1999-2000 season with open admission to the public, a Spring Break shooting contest at ball court, and visual effects that included fireworks and neon wands. A rendition of the "Brady Bunch," modified to the "Bruiser Bunch" in which the backcourt one day met the frontcourt, played over the screens.

Junior guard Jonathan DePina captured the individual three-point contest as he and Shannon Crooks of the Red Sox downed the Yankees who were comprised of Winston Smith and Brand.

Closing out the event, UMass divided into two teams, Maroon and White, and showcased a leisure scrimmage for 10 minutes. UMass women's basketball coach Joanie O'Brien and her squad were introduced earlier in the evening. The Minutewomen are captained by seniors Alison MacFarland and Jaysawna Bradley, alongside junior point guard Kathy Coyner. The last time O'Brien and her team made The Dance was in 1998 when it fell to Iowa in the first round.

Split drops Minutewomen from Atlantic 10 pinnacle

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

After splitting two games with Dayton and Xavier over the weekend, there is both good and bad news for the Massachusetts women's soccer team.

The good news is that the Minutewomen are still very much in control of dictating whether or not they will make the Atlantic 10 tournament. However, because of a 3-1 loss to Dayton yesterday, the Minutewomen are no longer in first place. That honor now belongs to Flyers, who hold the position despite the fact that the two teams have identical 6-1 records in the A-10.

"We're still in the hunt, but now we have to see how well our people respond to this," UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said.

The Minutewomen closed out their weekend with a two-goal loss to their visitors from Dayton yesterday. After an own-goal by Flyers defender Megan Worley which tied the game at 1-1 early in the second half, Dayton got goals from Lindsey Whitehead and Missy Gregg to pull out a 3-1 win.

UMass (6-3-1, 6-1 in the A-10) trailed by only a goal for 30 minutes in the second half. Whitehead's tally came with 35:02 left, while Gregg put the nail in the coffin with 4:10 remaining. In between, the Minutewomen had a bunch of chances to get the equalizer, but just couldn't finish off their opportunities.

"Some of our people made some poor decisions on what to do with the ball in close. We did create enough chances, but we didn't finish," Rudy said. "Then with five minutes to go I pulled [sweeper] Holly [Wildenhaus] with the idea of having another attacker. But it cost us at the other end [when Gregg scored]. That's the gamble you take though."

Ironically, last season it was UMass who went into enemy territory and came away victorious en route to the A-10 tournament. Yesterday's game was also extremely chippy, much like the affair in Dayton last year.

"Last year they beat us – but then we knocked them out in the A-10 tournament," Dayton women's soccer coach Mike Tucker said. "We're going to come back here and we will see them again. But we can't be content with one win today, because the next one is actually going to be tougher."

Added Rudy: "We played mentally tired. Our mature, experienced players just couldn't handle the extra-curricular contact out there. We were outmuscled and at times outhustled."

Friday afternoon's game with Xavier was a complete contrast in the style and pace of yesterday's affa . While the Dayton game was a myriad of clutching, grabbing and fouling in a pinball-like setting, Friday's contest was more wide-open and explosive, as evidenced by a 5-1 win by the Minutewomen.

UMass scored three times in the first 18:08 of the game and never looked back. Although the Musketeers did put up a brief fight in the second half, the Minutemen finished off Xavier with two late goals on their way to a four-goal win.

"Our quick start was ultimately what won it for us. They didn't start well, and that was fortunate for us," Rudy said. "That was our best start of the year."

Cindy Garceau scored her fourth goal of the year 3:39 into the game on a header. Emma Kurowski then netted her twelfth of the season just under two minutes later to give UMass a two-goal cushion. Kara Green would close out the first half scoring on a one-on-one break to push the Minutewomen up three goals.

After a Xavier goal by Christie Reinshagen midway through the second half, Tarah Tokarchik and Green would seal the deal on this one with late second half scores.

"Towards the beginning of the game we realized that they were slow, and that if we could put the ball over the top, then we could beat them," Green said. "We knew that we had to come out strong, especially that we are coming towards A-10's."

The Minutewomen will now look to rebound this weekend when they hit the road to face La Salle and Fordham. UMass defeated both teams easily last season in Amherst.

■ sox

continued from page 12

cleanup hitter Williams tapped a grounder toward the hole that Garciaparra gloved handily, but the All-Star shortstop sent the ensuing throw screaming into the Boston dugout for his fourth error of the series.

NY first-sacker Tino Martinez followed up the miscue by mashing a double to deep right-center, scoring Williams with an unearned equalizer. After an intentional walk to Strawberry and a strikeout of Scott Brosius, Saberhagen jammed Chad Curtis and sprinted toward first to cover on the ensuing ground ball to Stanley.

But the catcher-turned infielder short-armed his throw to the bag for his first error of the postseason, handcuffing Saberhagen and allowing Martinez to score the second unearned run of the frame.

Pettitte went into cruise control with the 3-2 lead, shutting out Boston over the next four frames before being chased by an Offerman infield single in the bottom of the eighth.

Torre then elected to bring in closer extraordinaire Mariano Rivera to extinguish Boston's potential comeback fire. But it would be another questionable call at second base, not the hard throwing stopper, that would sit the Sox for good.

Rivera initiated a soft bouncer to second off the bat of Valentin, which Knoblauch shakily gathered before lunging at the passing Offerman. The tag missed the Sox second-sacker by a full foot, but umpire Tim Tschida inexplicably ruled Offerman out while Knoblauch tossed the ball to Martinez for an inning-ending double play.

Despite the rantings of a furious Jimy Williams, the game moved into the final inning with NY still up by a single run. It was then that the Boston bullpen imploded, yielding six afterthought runs via an Offerman error and a grand slam by Yankee Ricky Ledee.

The real ugliness started in the home half of the ninth, though, when another questionable call prompted the overly argumentative Williams to earn an ejection from plate umpire Al Clark. The crowd had seen enough from the men in blue, and began showering the playing field with all manner of debris.

Both teams were pulled from the field for safety purposes, and Torre even went so far as to empty the Yankee bullpen to protect his reliever corps from the barrage of projectiles.

After the game's eventual conclusion, Yankee owner George Steinbrenner speculated in an interview as to whether the behavior of Jimy Williams would harm the skipper's consideration in Manager of the Year voting. Steinbrenner suggested that Williams's tirade in the ninth was the the spark that "incited" the hostile Boston fans.

■ field hockey

continued from page 12

Explorers. UM racked up an 18-6 shot advantage and a 13-6 penalty corner edge in the comeback victory.

Tucker totaled five stops in goal for UM, while Block put the kibosh on 13 Maroon and White scoring attempts.

After hopping a southbound bus to the Keystone State, the Minutewomen took the field in West Chester against a Rani team with strikingly similar season numbers as La Salle. West Chester (5-9, 0-4 A-10) had dropped four-of-five prior to its showdown with UMass, including tough overtime defeats courtesy of Drexel and Rhode Island.

Bruemmer apparently had some magic left in her stick on Sunday, as the UM back drove home her fifth goal in three games to push the Minutewomen out front early. The score came on a penalty corner a mere 1:18 into the first-half action.

The Maroon and White continued to have its way with the Ram defense, as a pair of Shea's young superstars teamed up to outgun West Chester goalie Joelle Maguire, and pad UM's lead to 2-0 at the 27:28 mark.

Freshman forward Sarah Bohonowicz, a year-long starter for UMass in spite of her youth, fed fellow first-year forward Stacie Blue, who then found the back of the West Chester net for her first collegiate goal.

The Minutewomen held their two-goal lead through halftime and into the second set, until Ram Kate Randle tucked home a score to halve the UM lead 9:39 into the half. West Chester co-captain Missy Mitchell, who fed Randle for the first Ram score, then wrested home a goal of her own with 15:17 to play to lock the contest.

Neither team could gain the upper hand over the final stretch, setting up UM's third overtime action of the '99 slate.

UM forward Kristen Schmidt would prevent the Rams from completing their comeback, taking a feed from Bruemmer and blasting a shot past Maguire to kill off West Chester 8:28 into the overtime period. It was the Greenfield native's fourth goal of the season.

UMass once again looked phenomenal on the stat sheet, building a 16-11 shot advantage over the course of the battle.

The Minutewomen go back to work on Wednesday, when they head to New Hampshire for a 3:30 showdown with the Wildcats of UNH.

FAZE BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

The toast of Trinidad and Tobago

Back Kerry Ann Jaggassar is a big reason why the UMass field hockey team is undefeated in Atlantic 10 competition this year.

■ football

continued from page 12

wide by Maine kicker Todd Jagoutz, but it was only significant until the next time the Bears got into the end zone.

A Jeremy Robinson pick for UMass at the Maine 31 set up a Jason Cherry field goal with 30 seconds left in the first quarter. The two teams reversed roles in nearly the same scenario at the 11:09 mark in the second period. Black Bear linebacker Stephen Cooper stepped in front of a Bankhead pass to allow Maine the opportunity to pound themselves into field goal range after nine plays and 29 yards to make the score 10-9 in favor of the Minutemen.

That was almost how the half ended. After the teams traded a couple of possessions, Naccara capped off a four-play, 69-yard Black Bear stampede by rumbling through the Massachusetts defense from 34 out to put the hosts in the lead. Eaton then hit the 6-foot-4, 245-pounder in the flats for the two-point conversion to up the Maine lead to seven and end the quarter's scoring, 17-10.

"In the first half, there were a lot of missed assignments and a lot of guys slow on the blitz... missing their coverages, and, like the coach said, not tackling," White said.

On UMass' third possession of the second half, Bankhead connected on consecutive throws of 27 and 24 yards to Zullo, and in the end zone to tight end Sean Higgins, respectively, to tie the score.

When the third quarter got rolling, so did Minuteman fullback Marcel Shipp. The Walter Payton Award candidate broke out for 195 yards in the second half, including scoring runs of 30 and eight yards, the latter of which was set up by a Shipp 64-yard scamper. The stellar runner finished with 236 yards and a pair of touchdowns.

"We played much better in the second half," Shipp said. "We blocked better on offense and we tackled on defense."

"The O-line stepped up and our fullback played a great game in the second half," Shipp said. "It was a great team effort."

Bankhead was responsible for the second of the four second-half scores for Massachusetts, vaulting over the top from a yard away to put UMass in front, 24-17.

The two subsequent Shipp jaunts would produce the final score of 38-17.

In the second half, the Minuteman defense clamped down as well, holding Naccara, who picked up 59 yards and two touchdowns in the opening half, to only 14 yards.

"I told the team that this was our best win of the year," Whipple said. "Because we were tested."

Write for Sport

■ ice hockey

continued from page...

the game away before hurrying to the locker rooms. Nacarra's second score gave Maine a seven-point cushion. But it very well could have been more.

Cornerback Jerard Watson picked off Eaton's final pass of the afternoon, came back with another big play early in the second quarter. Mr. Stephen Cooper intercepted a Bankhead pass at the UMass 35-yard line, the Black Bears drove to the UM 3-yard line in hopes of snatching the lead from the Minutemen. On third-and-goal, they went to their go-to receiver Phil McGeoghan, whose 6-4 frame gives him a tremendous height advantage on the 6'1" senior cornerback.

White stepped in front of McGeoghan just in front of the end line and batted down a near-sure TD for the Bears to settle for a 22-yard field goal shot by Todd Jagoutz. On their next drive, White broke up another pass on the third down when Maine had taken the ball into Minuteman territory.

"In the red zone, I thought they were going to run a lot more fades on me," White said, "but they decided to take it inside on that one and I just broke on it."

Freshman Corey Potter made his second career start at outside linebacker, relieving the injured Dan Healey. A week after the converted quarterback won Atlantic 10 Defensive Player of the Week honors for his two interception effort against Northeastern, he came back with 14 tackles to lead the team.

"I told them after that this was our best win of the year," Whipple said. "I don't think there's any doubt about it. We've really tested."

UMass travels to Newark, Del., to take on the Blue Hens in hopes of avenging a 33-30 loss last season.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free CD of Cool Indie Music when you register at MyBytes.com, the ultimate wesite for your college needs

AUTO FOR SALE

1992 Mercury Sable Wagon 120K miles. Good condition. Plus 4 snow tires. Call 256-0067

92 Saab 900S Good Condition lots of extras $3500.00 413-545-0136 or 413-967-7145

87 VW JETTA-GLI $1,000 5Spd. Runs strong, good tires, recent clutch, exhaust. 256-6235

1990 Honda Civic DX 5 Speed, AM/FM, Hatchback, runs good, and high miles. $1400 or BO 549-6490

EMPLOYMENT

FREE BABY BOOM BOX + EARN $1200! Fundraiser for student groups & organizations. Earn up to $4 per MasterCard app. Call for info or visit our website. Qualified callers receive a FREE Baby Boom Box 1-800-932-0528 ext. 119 or ext. 125 www.ocmconcepts.com

DP Dough is hiring drivers and kitchen help. Must be able to work nights. Approxiametly $20/hour. Apply at DP Dough.

EMPLOYMENT

Earn $400 per class each sememster by simply Taking Notes! Apply online at www.allstudents.com for all sections of the following undergraduate courses...
Accounting 221, 222
Animal Science 101
Anthropology 100, 102, 103
Astronomy 100
Biology 100, 103, 105, 106
Chemistry 102, 110, 111, 112
Classics 100, 102 224
Communication 150, 180, 218, 222
Communication 226, 287
Communication Disorders 210
Community Health 129, 160
Computer Science 102, 105
Computer Science 120, 121
Consumer Studies 105
Economics 103, 104, 203
Economics 204, 330, 331
Education 115, 210
English 115, 131
Entomology 126
Environmental Sciences 101
Exercise Science 130, 210
Finance and Operations Management 250, 300
Finance and Operations Management 310, 320, 330
Food Science 101, 120
Geosciences 101, 102, 103
Geosciences 109, 250
History 100, 101, 112
Hotel, Restaurant, Travel Administration 100, 130
Linguistics 101
Management 260, 301, 314
Management 315, 330
Marketing 301, 340
Nursing 100
Nutrition 101, 130
Philosophy 100, 110
Physics 100, 131, 132
Plant and soil sciences 100
Political science 101
Psychology 100, 305, 315
Resource economics 211
School og Management 210
Sociology 103, 107, 210, 222, 242
Sport Studies 210
Statistics 111, 140
Theater 100
Women Studies 187
If you're interested in becoming a Note Taker for a course that doesn't appear on this list, please submit an application online for review.

Attention Marketing Majors
Currently we are hiring for a Marketing Specialist as well as Note Takers. please apply online at

www.allstudents.com
Get In Get Through Get Out

Coaching Positions Girls JV Basketball and Diving. Contact Rick Frances Williston-Northampton School-Easthampton (413) 529-3253

Experienced House Cleaner for family home in Leverett $8hr. Susan 548-9870

EMPLOYMENT

Bakers Wanted Part-Time or Full-Time. Early morning hours. Apply at Rao's Coffee in person.

The Student Government Association is now hiring staff for the RSO Resource Center. We are accepting application for the positions of Receptionist, Computer Technician, and RSO Resource Center Manager. Pick up applications in the SGA office, 420 Student Union and please return them to Sandra Brookley by October 20th. If you have any questions, please call Sandra at 545-0343

$$GET PAID WHILE GOING TO CLASSSS Versity.com, an Internet notetaking company is looking for students to be Class Research Coordinators. Earn while you learn. $8-14/hr. Apply @ www.versity.com

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

EMPLOYMENT

Teachers Aides
Wanted for small innovative learning programs in Amherst Tutor and supervise small groups of students in elementary, middle, or high school classrooms. Training provided. Great opportunity to prepare for a career in education for for interested individuals. Mass. Dept. of Ed. Approved Site Based Certification Program H.S. or equivalency required. college training reccommended. Full employment benifits available.

Submit a resume and cover letter to
Jone Messmer #116
30 Industrial Drive East
Northampton, MA 01060

AA/EOE/ADA

WEBMASTER Part-Time Position. QA Computer Consulting (Springfield) has opening for student with excellent graphics and web design skills. Work around your class schedule. $35 per hour to start. First-rate knowledge of development application like NetObjects Fusion, Visual Page or DreamWeaver. Ability to code in HTML. Knowledge of PhotoShop, CorelDraw, CGI, JavaScript. Call Larry at 800-945-4747 or e-mail Admin@QAComputer.com

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Physically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

EMPLOYMENT

Baker/Cook/Customer Service Prepare foods,batters, doughs, recipes. In Village Market. FT/PT PM/Weekends 1 mile from campus. Cushman Village 413-549-1953

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals - Free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Skiing and Snowboarding season passes only $300! Stratton or Okemo Call Michael 549-6494

Couches, Beds, Desks, chairs, tables, bureaus, shelves, etc. Free delivery 253-7554

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons by retired pro Djata Bumpus in Amherst on UMass Bus Rte. Call 256-0364

Casco Bay Bartending Classes start soon student discounts call for information 1-800-467-2028 Space is Limited

Saxophone Lessons with working musician; Berklee, UMass grad. Hilary (413) 967-0466 (413) 237-5069

INSTRUCTION

Afro-Latin Percussion Lessons: Congas, Bongos etc. Have studied and played with some of the best in Cuba, U.S. and Europe. Hilary (413) 967-0466 (413) 237-5069

LOST & FOUND

LOST CAT: Near Leach, Orange Tabby Please 665-9950 Leave Message Reward!!

Wedding Ring Lost on Campus 10/12 Any information please call 367-2085

Lost Black Covered pocket planner near the pay phones in the lobby of Lederle GRC Low Rise around 3pm Oct 6. Please call Charles Salinetti at (1-800) 225-5979

SERVICES

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

Browse icpt.com for ALL Springbreak "2000" hotspots. Need Student Orgs & Sales Reps. Fabulous parties, hotels, prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

Desperately Seeking Tall, Dark, HRTA HUNK for a night of wining, dining, and dancing at the Newman Semi!! Now have I changed your mind?

AAUUGH!!!

IS THIS THE WAY YOU ARE FEELING LATELY?

ARE MIDTERMS AND PAPERS GETTING TO YOU TOO!

MAKE YOUR LIFE EASY!

STOP LOOKING FOR THAT PLACE TO ADVERTISE FOR THAT NEW ROOMMATE! CALL 545-3500 AND PLACE YOUR AD TODAY!!

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, OCT. 18

Fun – Hamagshimmm will sponsor Israel Night at 7 p.m. in the Hillel House. There will be discussions on Israeli culture, history, and politics. All are welcome.

Meeting – U.P.C. will have a general meeting at 7 p.m. in Bartlett 61. Volunteers are needed for the upcoming "Funkmaster Flex" concert.

Reception – There will be an opening reception for the self-portrait art exhibit at 5 p.m. in the Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space. There will be food and music, and all are invited.

TUESDAY, OCT. 19

Lecture – A lecture entitled "Imagined Latino Communities: The Challenge of the Coming Century" will be held at 4 p.m. in the New York Room of Mary Woolley Hall at Mount Holyoke College.

NOTICES

Art – The Wheeler Gallery will present "Cellblock Visions: Cell Division- Prison Art in America," on display until Nov. 7. The Gallery is located in Central Residential Area.

Art – The Student Union Visual and Performing Art Space will be showing an exhibit of undergraduate artwork, focusing on the self-portrait, until Oct. 29. Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday, 9:30 a.m.-5 p.m.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is now open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops call 545-2096, or stop by the Craft Center.

Support – The Counseling Services Program at the Everywoman's Center is offering a free support group for women living with bipolar disorder on Wednesdays from 5:15-6:45 p.m. There will be four consecutive sessions held in Wilder Hall at the Everywoman's Center. Call 545-0663 for more information or to register.

PI's are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PI's, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!
*See store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	16	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	18	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 18, 1999

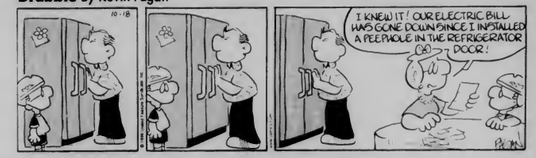
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Going Places "Santa Fe" (R)		Red Files (R)		Challenge for Jewish America		Connecticut Journal (R)
WFSB	3	News (R)	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	King	Ladies Man (R)	Raymond	Becker (R)	Family Law "The List" (R)		News (R)	Late Show (R)
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	King	Ladies Man (R)	Raymond	Becker (R)	Family Law "The List" (R)		News	Late Show (R)
WCVB	5	News (R)	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (R)	20/20 (R)		NFL Football: Dallas Cowboys at New York Giants. (In Stereo) Live. (R)
WLVI	6	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends (R)	Nanny (R)	Safe Harbor (In Stereo) (R)		Safe Harbor (In Stereo) (R)		News (R)		Friends (R)	Nanny (R)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Sudden-Susen	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV (R)	Real TV (R) (R)	Moesha (R)	Partners (R)	Grown Ups (R)	Malcolm-Eddie	News	Caroline	Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WVIT	9	News	NBC News	Extra (R)	Ent. Tonight	Sudden-Susen	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons (R)	Fraser (R)	Friends (R)	Friends (R)	Major League Baseball Playoffs: ALCS Game 5 – Red Sox or Indians vs. Rangers or Yankees						News	Friends (R)
WWLP	22	News (R)	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Sudden-Susen	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		News (R)	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Antiques Roadshow (In Stereo)		Red Files (R)		Quicksand and Banana Peels		Charlie Rose (In Stereo) (R)
WGGB	40	News (R)	ABC News	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	20/20 (R)		NFL Football: Dallas Cowboys at New York Giants. (In Stereo) Live. (R)
WSBK	38	Judge Judy (R)	Judge Judy (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	Moesha (R)	Partners (R)	Grown Ups (R)	Malcolm-Eddie	Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Blind Date	Ricki Lake (R)
WTBS	69	Roseanne (R)	Roseanne (R)	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	"Fatal Error" (1999, Suspense)		Antonio Sabato Jr., Janine Turner		"Fatal Error" (1999, Suspense)		Antonio Sabato Jr., Janine Turner
A&E	43	Simon & Simon		Law & Order "Blood Lies" (R)		Biography: Barbara Eden		Investigative Reports (R)		Patriot (R)		Law & Order "Irrelevance" (R)
CNN	42	Worldview (R)	Moneyline Newshour (R)		Crossfire (R)	World Today (R)		Larry King Live (R)		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline (R)
COM	53	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	++ "Better Off Dead" (1985, Comedy) John Cusack.				Strangers With Upright		Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	52	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Humpback		On the Inside: Friends		Bald Truth (R)		Top 10 Coasters (R)		On the Inside: Friends
ESPN	51	(5:45) Sportscenter		Monday Night Countdown				Gymnastics World Championship					Sportscenter
LIFE	63	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait "Michele Lee"		Beyond Chance (R)		"In a Private Garden" (1999, Drama) Allen Young, Joely Richardson. (R)					Golden Girls
MTV	33	Global Groove	MTV Jams	Beat Suite	TRL Wanna	TRL (R) (In Stereo)			Downtown (R)	Downtown	Road Rules	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	46	All That	Catalog	Hey Arnold! (R)	Rugrats (R)	Thornberrys	Rocket Power	Brady Bunch	Love Lucy	Jeffersons (R)	Sanford & Son	All in Family	Waude (R)
SCIFI	59	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Outer Limits (In Stereo) (R)		Outer Limits "Monster" (R)		Outer Limits (In Stereo) (R)		Outer Limits "A Stitch in Time"		Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales
TLC	56	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "After Life" (R)		Paramedics "Desert Sirens" (R)		Trauma Center (R)		Trauma Center (R)		Paramedics "Desert Sirens" (R)
TNT	45	Dva South "Chicago Holiday"		ER "Chicago Heat" (In Stereo)		WCW Monday Nitro (In Stereo) Live)						+ "Skyscraper" (1999)
USA	47	Baywatch "Hot Stuff" (R)		JAG "Deterrence" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger (R)		WWF Raw (R)		WWF War Zone (R)		Baywatch (In Stereo) (R)
HBO	65	(4:30) "Robin Hood-ol' Thieves"		Worst Witch	Worst Witch	++ "Practical Magic" (1998) Sandra Bullock. (R)		Random Heart		++ "Outbreak" (1995, Suspense) Dustin Hoffman. (R)
MAX	67	++ "Why Do Fools Fall in Love" (1998, Biography) Halle Berry. (R)				++ In "Flash & Bloom" (1985, Adventure) Roger Hauer. (R)				++ "Progeny" (1998) Arnold Vosloo. (R)			"Negotiator"
SHOW	68	+++ "Cousins" (1989, Comedy-Drama) Ted Danson, Ms-13				++ "The Big Lebowski" (1998, Mystery) Jeff Bridges. (R)				++ "Killing Zoe" (1993) Eric Stoltz. (R)			Hoop Life (R)

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Joe Banana! By JD Schneider

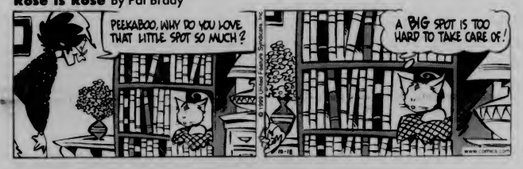
Welcome to the World By Ryan O' Donnell



Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Drabble By Kevin Fagan



Dilbert By Scott Adams

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You are likely to be quite adventurous and daring throughout the day, but you may balk at an opportunity a rival offers you after dark.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You may have to make even routine things crystal clear for others today as communication may be quite difficult.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You must be tender, generous and understanding with those who trust you to show them the ways today. Patience is the key.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You must be willing to look at a difficult issue from more than one perspective today. The untamiliar may be most beneficial to you.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You will not be able to ignore your own creative impulses today, but you mustn't neglect your more practical responsibilities.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – It's time you shared that secret with someone close to you. He or she is sure to understand and can offer you a valid new perspective.

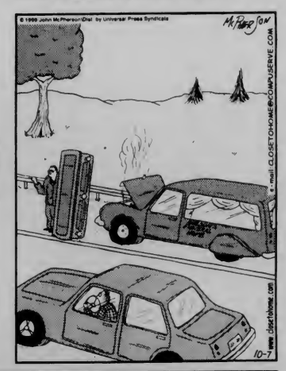
Aries (March 21-April 19) – Someone may accuse you today of making the wrong choice, but the jury is still out. In time you're sure to be vindicated.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – Something you've not been aware of may become so influential to you today that you are unable to ignore it any longer.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – Take your cue from someone else who has been in your shoes recently. Be sure you don't shrink from a hidden challenge when it is revealed.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – You may be able to have exactly what you want by day's end, but you will have to work hard to hang on to it for any length of time.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – You may be unusually stubborn today for no apparent reason. Take care that you don't let your mood become aggressive or abrasive.



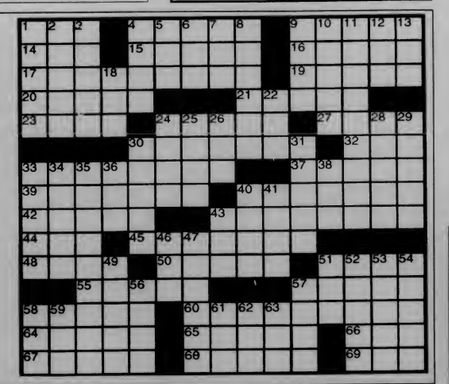
Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Your insecurities may be rising to the surface once again today, but a close friend is in a position to see you through a difficult patch.

Quote of the Day

"I want to be the girl with the most cake."

–Hole, "Doll Parts"

Close to Home By John McPherson



ACROSS
1 Hosiery shade
4 Movie like a baby
9 Lasso
14 Gardner of filmdom
15 Boring tool
16 Ski resort
17 Place to browse
19 Ice cream and root beer combo
20 Restrict
21 Glenn Close film — Attraction"
23 Prepare a manuscript
24 More timid
27 Swabs the deck
30 London farewell
32 Leg, slangily
33 Views
37 Give up (rights)
39 Eliminates
40 Salty snack
42 Blue Grotto site
43 Dimmest
44 Certain fighter pilot
45 Builders' materials
48 Adriatic and Marmara
50 Dart maker
51 See
55 Seminar
57 Celebrity's bit part
59 "— Forme"
60 Expert
64 Demon
65 Publish
66 Certain Asian
67 Peevish
68 Solidified
69 Urban trains

DOWN
1 Coffee or and —
2 Shun
3 A Judd
4 Acting group
5 Groove
6 Concert
7 "Auction" finish
8 Like better
9 Floating device
10 Muslim's religion
11 Say "I'm sorry"
12 Afternoon gathering
13 Crawling insect
18 Frontiersman
22 Tycoon
26 Onassis
24 Loafer, for one
25 Coop residents
26 "Surely"
28 Does roadwork
29 Small fish
30 Kind of duty
31 Country singer Buck
33 Killer whales
34 Type of treaty or pipe
35 Charges (an official)
36 Neither's partner
38 I.D. holder
40 Twinge
41 Ceremony
43 Nourished
46 Asner and Bradley
47 Tile picture
49 Tilt
51 Listener's need
52 Gnn
53 Flower part
54 String toys
56 Artist Warhol
57 College gal
58 Salamander
59 Neckwear
61 "Born in the —"
62 Expression of disapproval
63 Tint

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10-18-99 © 1999, United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Soup Du Jour
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Tri Bean Casserole

DINNER
Soup Du Jour
Chef's Choice
Chinese Beef & Vegtable
Southwestern Vegtable Bake

Worcester
LUNCH
Soup Du Jour
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Tri Bean Casserole

DINNER
Seven Vegtable Stew
Chef's Choice
Chinese Beef & Vegtable
Southwestern Vegtable Bake

Hampshire
LUNCH
Soup Du Jour
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Hungarian Noodle Bake

DINNER
Soup Du Jour
Chef's Choice
Chinese Beef & Vegtable
Southwestern Vegtable Bake

Berkshire
LUNCH
Soup Du Jour
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Tri Bean Casserole

DINNER
Seven Vegtable Stew
Chef's Choice
Chinese Beef & Vegtable
Southwestern Vegtable Bake

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Vanessa Walker
Photo Technician — Barbara Bradbury
Copy Editor — Samantha Poulten
Production Supervisor — John Burt
Production Staff — Ben Alamed

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free CD of Cool Indie Music when you register at MyBytes.com, the ultimate wesite for your college needs

AUTO FOR SALE

1992 Mercury Sable Wagon 120K miles. Good condition. Plus 4 snow tires. Call 256-0067

92 Saab 900S Good Condition lots of extras $3500.00 413-545-0136 or 413-967-7145

87 VW JETTA-GLI $1,000 5Spd. Runs strong, good tires, recent clutch, exhaust. 256-6235

1990 Honda Civic DX 5 Speed, AM/FM, Hatchback, runs good, and high miles. $1400 or BO 549-6490

EMPLOYMENT

FREE BABY BOOM BOX + EARN $1200! Fundraiser for student groups & organizations. Earn up to $4 per MasterCard app. Call for info or visit our website. Qualified callers receive a FREE Baby Boom Box 1-800-932-0528 ext. 119 or ext. 125 www.ocmconcepts.com

DP Dough is hiring drivers and kitchen help. Must be able to work nights. Approximately $20/hour. Apply at DP Dough.

EMPLOYMENT

Earn $400 per class each sememster by simply Taking Notes! Apply online at www.allstudents.com for all sections of the following undergraduate courses. Accounting 221, 222 Animal Science 101 Anthropology 100, 102, 103 Astronomy 100 Biology 100, 103, 105, 106 Chemistry 102, 110, 111, 112 Classics 100, 102, 224 Communication 150, 180, 218, 222 Communication 226, 287 Communication Disorders 210 Community Health 129, 160 Computer Science 102, 105 Computer Science 120, 121 Consumer Studies 105 Economics 103, 104, 203 Economics 204, 330, 331 Education 115, 210 English 115, 131 Entomology 126 Environmental Sciences 101 Exercise Science 130, 210 Finance and Operations Management 250, 300 Finance and Operations Management 310, 320, 330 Food Science 101, 120 Geosciences 101, 102, 103 Geosciences 109, 250 History 100, 101, 112 Hotel, Restaurant, Travel Administration 100, 130 Linguistics 101 Management 260, 301, 314 Management 315, 330 Marketing 301, 340 Nursing 100 Nutrition 101, 130 Philosophy 100, 110 Physics 100, 131, 132 Plant and soil sciences 100 Political science 101 Psychology 100, 305, 315 Resource economics 211 School og Management 210 Sociology 103, 107, 210, 222, 242 Sport Studies 210 Statistics 111, 140 Theater 100 Women Studies 187

If you're interested in becoming a Note Taker for a course that doesn't appear on this list please submit an application online for review

Attention Marketing Majors

Currently we are hiring for a Marketing Specialist as well as Note Takers. please apply online at

www.allstudents.com

Get In Get Through Get Out

Coaching Positions Girls JV Basketball and Diving. Contact Rick Frances Williston-Northampton School-Easthampton (413) 529-3253

Experienced House Cleaner for family home in Leverett $8hr. Susan 548-9870

EMPLOYMENT

Bakers Wanted Part-Time or Full-Time. Early morning hours. Apply at Rao's Coffee in person.

The Student Government Association is now hiring staff for the RSO Resource Center. We are accepting application for the positions of Receptionist, Computer Technician, and RSO Resource Center Manager. Pick up applications in the SGA office, 420 Student Union and please return them to Sandra Brookley by October 20th. If you have any questions, please call Sandra at 545-0343

$$GET PAID WHILE GOING TO CLASSSS Versity.com, an Internet notetaking company is looking for students to be Class Research Coordinators. Earn while you learn. $8-14/hr. Apply @ www.versity.com

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

EMPLOYMENT

Teachers Aides

Wanted for small, innovative learning programs in Amherst. Tutor and supervise small groups of students in elementary, middle or high school classrooms. Training provided. Great opportunity to prepare for a career in education for for interested individuals. Mass. Dept of Ed. Approved Site Based Certification Program. H.S. or equivalency required; college training reccommended. Full employment benifits available.

Submit a resume and cover letter to:
Jone Mensmer #116
30 Industrial Drive East
Northampton, MA 01060

AA/EOE/ADA

WEBMASTER Part-Time Position. QA Computer Consulting (Springfield) has opening for student with excellent graphics and web design skills. Work around your class schedule. $35 per hour to start. First-rate knowledge of development application like NetObjects Fusion, Visual Page or DreamWeaver. Ability to code in HTML. Knowledge of PhotoShop, CorelDraw, CGI, JavaScript. Call Larry at 800-945-4747 or e-mail Admin@QAComputer.com

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phsically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

EMPLOYMENT

Baker/Cook/Customer Service Prepare foods,batters, doughs, recipes. In Village Market. FT/PT PM/Weekends 1 mile from campus. Cushman Village 413-549-1953

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals - Free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Skiing and Snowboarding season passes only $300! Stratton and Okemo Call Michael 549-6494

Couches, Beds, Desks, chairs, tables, bureaus, shelves, etc. Free delivery 253-7554

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons by retired pro Djata Bumpus in Amherst on UMass Bus Rte. Call 256-0364

Casco Bay Bartending Classes start soon student discounts call for information 1-800-467-2028 Space is Limited

Saxophone Lessons with working musician; Berklee, UMass grad. Hilary (413) 967-0466 (413) 237-5069

INSTRUCTION

Afro-Latin Percussion Lessons: Congas, Bongos etc. Have studied and played with some of the best in Cuba, U.S. and Europe. Hilary (413) 967-0466 (413) 237-5069

LOST & FOUND

LOST CAT: Near Leach, Orange Tabby Please 665-9950 Leave Message Reward!!

Wedding Ring Lost on Campus 10/12 Any information please call 367-2085

Lost Black Covered pocket planner near the pay phones in the lobby of Lederle GRC Low Rise around 3pm Oct 6. Please call Charles Salinetti at (1-800) 225-5979

SERVICES

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

Browse icpt.com for ALL Springbreak "2000" hotspots. Need Student Orgs & Sales Reps. Fabulous parties, hotels, prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

Desperately Seeking Tall, Dark, HRTA HUNK for a night of wining, dining, and dancing at the Newman Semi!! Now have I changed your mind?

AAUUGH!!!

IS THIS THE WAY YOU ARE FEELING LATELY?

ARE MIDTERMS AND PAPERS GETTING TO YOU TOO!

MAKE YOUR LIFE EASY!

STOP LOOKING FOR THAT PLACE TO ADVERTISE FOR THAT NEW ROOMMATE! CALL 545-3500 AND PLACE YOUR AD TODAY!!

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, OCT. 18

Fun – Hamagshimun will sponsor Israel Night at 7 p.m. in the Hillel House. There will be discussions on Israeli culture, history, and politics. All are welcome.

Meeting – U.P.C will have a general meeting at 7 p.m. in Bartlett 61. Volunteers are needed for the upcoming "Funkmaster Flex" concert.

Reception – There will be an opening reception for the self-portrait art exhibit at 5 p.m. in the Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space. There will be food and music, and all are invited.

TUESDAY, OCT. 19

Lecture – A lecture entitled "Imagined Latino Communities: The Challenge of the Coming Century" will be held at 4 p.m. in the New York Room of Mary Woolley Hall at Mount Holyoke College.

NOTICES

Art – The Wheeler Gallery will present "Cellblock Visions: Cell Division- Prison Art in America," on display until Nov. 7. The Gallery is located in Central Residential Area.

Art – The Student Union Visual and Performing Art Space will be showing an exhibit of undergraduate artwork, focusing on the self-portrait, until Oct. 29. Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday, 9:30 a.m.-5 p.m.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is now open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops call 545-2096, or stop by the Craft Center.

Support – The Counseling Services Program at the Everywoman's Center is offering a free support group for women living with bipolar disorder on Wednesdays from 5:15-6:45 p.m. There will be four consecutive sessions held in Wilder Hall at the Everywoman's Center. Call 545-0663 for more information or to register.

PSAs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PSA, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

UStore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 18, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Going Places	"Santa Fe"	Red Files		Challenge for Jewish America		Connecticut Journal (R)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	King	Ladies Man	Raymond	Becker	Family Law "The List"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	King	Ladies Man	Raymond	Becker	Family Law "The List"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	20/20		NFL Football: Dallas Cowboys at New York Giants. (In Stereo Live)
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Th Heaven "With Honors"		Safe Harbor (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sudden-Susan	Veronica's CL	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Real TV (R)	Moesha	Parkers	Grown Ups	Malcolm-Eddie	News		Caroline	Change-Heart
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Sudden-Susan	Veronica's CL	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Sliders	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Major League Baseball Playoffs: ALCS Game 5 – Red Sox or Indians vs. Rangers or Yankees						News	Friends
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sudden-Susan	Veronica's CL	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (In Stereo)		Red Files		Quicksand and Banana Peels		Charlie Rose	(In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	20/20		NFL Football: Dallas Cowboys at New York Giants. (In Stereo Live)
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Moesha	Parkers	Grown Ups	Malcolm-Eddie	Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Blind Date	Ricki Lake
WTBS	72	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	"Fatal Error" (1999, Suspense)		Antonio Sabato Jr., Janine Turner.		"Fatal Error" (1999, Suspense)		Antonio Sabato Jr., Janine Turner.
A&E	25	Simon & Simon		Law & Order	Blood Libel	Biography: Barbara Eden		Investigative Reports		Patriot		Law & Order	"Innocence"
CNN	20	Inside View	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline
COM	29	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	"Better Off Dead" (1985, Comedy)		John Cusack.		Strangers	Upright	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	63	Tour: New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Humpback		On the Inside: Friends		Bald Truth (R)		Top 10 Coasters (R)		On the Inside:	Friends
ESPN	26	(5:45) Sportscenter		Monday Night Countdown				Gymnastics: World Championship.					Sportscenter
LIFE	69	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait: "Michele Lee"		Beyond Chance		"In a Private Garden" (1999, Drama) Aden Young, Joely Richardson.					Golden Girls
MTV	53	Global Groove	MTV Jams	Best Suits	TRL Wanna	TRL (R) (In Stereo)			Downtown (R)	Road Rules		Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	68	All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Rocket Power	Brady Bunch	I Love Lucy	Jeffersons	Sanford & Son	All In Family	Maude
SCIFI	45	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		Outer Limits "Monster"		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		Outer Limits "A Stitch in Time"		Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales
TLC	62	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "After Life" (R)		Paramedics "Desert Sirens" (R)		Trauma Center (R)		Trauma Center (R)		Paramedics "Desert Sirens" (R)
TNT	55	Due South "Chicago Holiday"		Elf "Chicago Heat" (In Stereo)		WCW Monday Nitro (In Stereo Live)						ss "Skyscraper" (1996)
USA	60	Baywatch "Hot Shot"		JAG "Defensesless" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger		WWF Raw		WWF War Zone		Baywatch (In Stereo)
HBO	48	(4:30) "Robin Hood of Thieves"		Worst Witch	Worst Witch	ss "Practical Magic" (1998) Sandra Bullock.		Random Heart		ss "Outbreak" (1995, Suspense) Dustin Hoffman. "R"
MAX	49	ss "Why Do Fools Fall In Love" (1998, Biography) Halle Berry. "R"				ss "Flash & Blood" (1985, Adventure) Rutger Hauer. "R"				ss "Progeny" (1998) Arnold Vosloo. "R"			"Negotiator"
SHOW	46	ss "Cousins" (1989, Comedy-Drama) Ted Danson. "PG-13"				ss "The Big Lebowski" (1998, Mystery) Jeff Bridges. "R"				ss "Killing Zoe" (1993, Eric Bogosian. "R"			Keep Life

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	WB/ New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

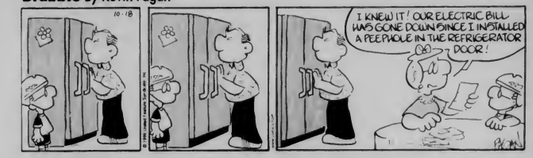
Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Joe Banani By JD Schneider

Welcome to the World By Ryan O' Donnell



Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You are likely to be quite adventurous and daring throughout the day, but you may balk at an opportunity a rival offers you after dark.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You may have to make even routine things crystal clear for others today, as communication may be quite difficult.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You must be tender, generous and understanding with those who trust you to show them the way today. Patience is the key!

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You must be willing to look at a difficult issue from more than one perspective today. The untamiliar may be most beneficial to you.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You will not be able to ignore your own creative impulses today, but you mustn't neglect your more practical responsibilities.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – It's time you shared that secret with someone close to you. He or she is sure to understand, and can offer you a valid new perspective.

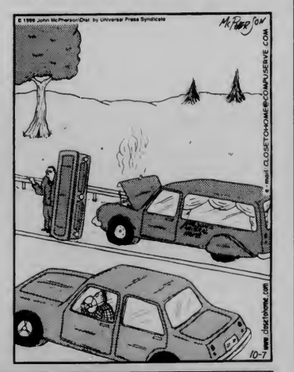
Aries (March 21-April 19) – Someone may accuse you today of making the wrong choice, but the jury is still out. In time you're sure to be vindicated.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – Something you've not been aware of may become so influential to you today that you are unable to ignore it any longer.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – Take your cue from someone else who has been in your shoes recently. Be sure you don't shrink from a hidden challenge when it is revealed.

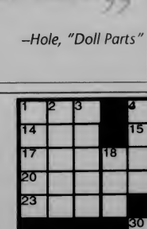
Cancer (June 21-July 22) – You may be able to have exactly what you want by days end, but you will have to work hard to bang on in it for any length of time.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – You may be unusually stubborn today for no apparent reason. Take care that you don't let your mood become aggressive or abrasive.



Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Your insecurities may be rising to the surface once again today, but a close friend is in a position to see you through a difficult patch.

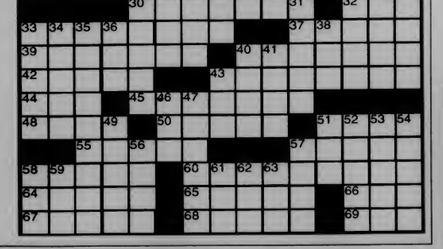
Quote of the Day



"I want to be the girl with the most cake."

–Hole, "Doll Parts"

Close to Home By John McPherson



PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10-18-99 © 1999, United Feature Syndicate

ACROSS
1 Hosiery shade
4 Move like a baby
9 Lasso
14 Gardner of filmdom
15 Boring too!
16 Ski resort
17 Place to browse
19 Ice cream and root beer combo
20 Restrict
21 Glenn Close film "— Attraction"
23 Prepare a manuscript
24 More timid
27 Swabs the deck
30 London farewell
32 Leg, slangily
33 Views
37 Give up (rights)
39 Eliminates
40 Salty snack
42 Blue Grotto site
43 Dimmest
44 Certain fighter pilot
45 Builders' materials
48 Adriatic and Marmara
50 Dart maker
51 See
55 Seminar
57 Celebrity's bit part
58 "— Forme"
60 Expert
64 Demon
66 Publish
68 Certain Asian
67 Peevish
68 Solidified
69 Urban trains

DOWN
1 Coffee or and —
2 Shun
3 A Judd
4 Acting group
5 Groove
6 Concert
7 "Auction" finish
8 Like better
9 Floating device
10 Muslim's religion
11 Say "I'm sorry."
12 Afternoon gathering
13 Crawling insect
18 Frontiersman Carson
22 Tycoon Onassis
24 Loafer, for one
25 Coop residents
26 "Burel"
28 Does roadwork
29 Small fish
30 Kind of duty
31 Country singer Buck
33 Killer whales
34 Type of treaty or pipe
35 Charges (an official)
36 Neither's partner
38 Lt. D. holder
40 Twinge
41 Ceremony
43 Nourished
46 Aaner and Bradley
47 Tile picture
49 Till
51 Listener's need
52 Grin
53 Flower part
54 String toys
56 Artist Warhol
57 College gal
58 Salamander
59 Neckwear
61 "Born In the —"
62 Expression of disapproval
63 Tint

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Soup Du Jour
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Tri Bean Casserole

DINNER
Soup Du Jour
Chef's Choice
Chinese Beef & Vegtable
Southwestern Vegtable Bake

Worcester

LUNCH
Soup Du Jour
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Tri Bean Casserole

DINNER
Seven Vegtable Stew
Chef's Choice
Chinese Beef & Vegtable
Southwestern Vegtable Bake

Hampshire

LUNCH
Soup Du Jour
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Hungarian Noodle Bake

DINNER
Soup Du Jour
Chef's Choice
Chinese Beef & Vegtable
Southwestern Vegtable Bake

Berkshire

LUNCH
Soup Du Jour
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Tri Bean Casserole

DINNER
Seven Vegtable Stew
Chef's Choice
Chinese Beef & Vegtable
Southwestern Vegtable Bake

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Vanessa Walker
Photo Technician — Barbara Bradbury
Copy Editor — Samantha Poulten
Production Supervisor — John Burt
Production Staff — Ben Alamed

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Monday, October 18, 1999

Shipp runs wild as UM cages Bears

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

UM running back Marcel Shipp rolled over the Maine Bears for an astonishing 256 yards on 30 carries in the Minutemen's 38-17 victory Saturday.

Big second half sinks Maine

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

ORONO, ME – The game was almost a nail-biter. Had the Massachusetts and Maine football teams played the second half like they played the first half, their square-off would have been a barn-burner for the ages.

UMASS	38
MAINE	17

Unfortunately for the hosting Black Bears, though, the 17-10 lead that they took into halftime was a far cry from the 38-17 score they were on the short end of when the final gun sounded.

In a fashion similar to the previous week's 77-0 whacking of Northeastern, UMass turned an early turnover into a quick lead, capitalizing on a Jerard White interception of Maine quarterback Jake Eaton.

White came down with the third down pass at the Bears' 36 yard line, and the Minutemen promptly put the ball into the end zone on a 36-yard pass from signal caller Todd Bankhead to Adrian Zullo, who finished the game with four receptions and 115 yards.

"Obviously, it was the tale of two halves," UMass coach Mark Whipple said. "I was really worried when (White) made that pick on the first drive, and then all of a sudden we get an easy touchdown on a shake route to Zullo. I didn't think we were really ready to play. It was my gut feeling, and when that happened I said to one of the coaches, 'It's going to be a long one.'"

Maine then responded with an efficient 12-play, 80-yard drive that knocked 5:27 off the game clock. After Eaton lofted a 27-yard floater to tight end Chad Hayes on fourth and 11, linebacker-turned-fullback Brent Naccara punched it in from a yard away to pull the Black Bears to within one, 7-6.

The extra point was booted and much more aggressive."

Then everything came to a stop. And, for all intents and purposes, the game was over.

The crowd of almost 7,000 was waiting for the offense to finally come alive, and midway through the third quarter, it arrived on the scene and pulled away for good.

While on the stat sheet 28 unanswered second half points would seem like an offensive explosion and, on the opposite sideline, a shutdown. On Saturday, it was the latter, but the UMass defense pulled the plug on the Black Bear attack.

In the third quarter, Maine saw its 17-10 halftime advantage disintegrate. Bankhead and tight end Sean Higgins connected from 24 yards out to tie it at 17 apiece. After driving to the Maine 14 and misfiring on a field goal, UMass came back on its following drive to take the lead for good.

Meanwhile, Maine stood in place, a week after running away with a 35-7 victory over perennial 1-AA power McNeese State. Naccara, whose 262-pound build gave defensive coordinator Don Brown nightmares in the first half, stumbling to a six carry, 14-yard second half. Eaton threw for just 45 yards after intermission, unable to bring the Black Bears back when failing behind.

"I think it was just our guys," Whipple said. "I told them that if we stepped it up, one half was all we needed to get the job done and they did it."

After overpowering the Minuteman defense in the first half, holding the ball for nearly 21 minutes, Maine fell into a severe rut, punting it away on six consecutive possessions. The Bears closed out the half with zero points and another loss to the loss column.

The Minuteman offense was fortunate to be within striking distance. The Black Bears had their chances to put...

Turn to DEFENSE, page 9

Minutemen cruise after defense wakes up

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

ORONO, Maine – Last season, the Massachusetts football team's jab rivaled the nation's best, waiting for the perfect moment to provide the knockout punch, or, in some instances, win by default. The train never stopped for anyone too slow or too weak to handle the Whiplash offense that had leveled the Atlantic 10 Conference.

The offense was automatic, scoring in numbers while the opposition tried helplessly to keep pace. Marcel Shipp ran for over 2,500 yards and 18 touchdowns while Todd Bankhead shattered nearly every standing UMass single-season passing mark.

Shipp has continued to run by and through the conference, but outside of his performance, the Minuteman offense has relied heavily upon a defensive unit that has finally reached adulthood.

A season ago, the defense struggled, as many players adjusted to new positions and new faces. Near the bottom of the conference across the board on defense, slowly it began to come together, most notably in a three-game postseason run where the defense yielded just 71 points.

In 1999, the offense has given way to the defense as the Minutemen's strong point, the facet of the game adversaries fear most.

This weekend, Maine dominated the line of scrimmage in the first half, outgaining the Minutemen (3-3 overall, 3-1 A-10) 228-104 through two periods. Black Bear fullback Brent Naccara scored a pair of touchdowns and quarterback Jake Eaton, a true freshman, picked apart the secondary for 140 yards passing.

"The defense wasn't tackling anybody and there wasn't anything there," head coach Mark Whipple said. "Maine was just running over us and were much more physical

Bad calls and booted balls spell ugly loss for Boston

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

For the long-suffering fans of the Olde Town team, Saturday's 13-1 Red Sox romp over the hated Bronx Bombers seemed at times like pure comedy.

But unfortunately for the Red Sox, their Game Four follow-up last night dissolved into a comedy of errors, as untimely miscues by Nomar Garciaparra and Mike Stanley led to early Yankee runs from which Boston simply could not recover. A late-inning umpiring blunder and near-riot by the sell-out home crowd further muddied the affair, which New York won 9-2 to take a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven American League Championship Series.

Boston may have had an uneasy feeling heading into last night's affair, despite its absolute domination 24 hours earlier. Taking the mound for the Sox was veteran Bret Saberhagen, whose '99 postseason thus far had been marked by uncharacteristic wildness and very early hooks by skipper Jimy Williams.

Opposing the two-time Comeback Player of the Year was New York southpaw Andy Pettitte, who rode the Big Apple roller coaster of trade rumors and public scrutiny after a so-so first half this season. But Pettitte has emerged as a postseason rock for manager Joe Torre, shutting down the heavily armed Texas Rangers in the first round of the playoffs.

Both pitchers came out of the chute like thoroughbreds last night. Saberhagen overcame a lead-off single by Chuck Knoblauch by erasing Derek Jeter on a foul-out and Paul O'Neill on a grounder to second, then ringing up the big-swinging Bernie Williams to escape the first unscathed.

Pettitte looked equally as masterful early, sitting down Jose Offerman on strikes before inducing harmless fly-outs from John Valentin and Garciaparra to close out the home half of the first.

Things got more interesting in the second, as ancient Sox nemesis Darryl Strawberry stepped in with one away. Saberhagen froze the lanky lefty with two beautifully spotted strikes, then mistakenly left a fastball in Strawberry's wheelhouse. The NY designated hitter showed off his still-sweet swing and deposited the pitch into the right field seats to put the Yanks out in front by one.

The Sox would strike back in the bottom of the inning, after newly appointed cleanup man Mike Stanley bounced out to Jeter. Designated hitter and Sinbad look-alike Butch Huskey stroked a double to left, which brought up seemingly overmatched lefty Troy O'Leary with a chance to lock the contest.

O'Leary responded to the deafening roar of the Fenway faithful, looping a single to shallow center that allowed the graceless but aptly-named Huskey to chug around and belly-flop across the plate to tie the game.

A double-play ball off the bat of Boston backstop Jason Varitek would stop the second inning bleeding for NY, but the Sox would come right back with more offense in the third. Boston outfielder Damon Buford, who got the starting nod over right field mainstay Trot Nixon because of Pettitte's success against lefties, scratched out a single and promptly swiped second.

Offerman then slapped a single up the middle, pushing home the speedy Buford to put the home team back on top. Valentin then rocked a Pettitte offering to deep left for a double, but Offerman couldn't beat the throw home and was subsequently gloved out by NY catcher Joe Girardi. Pettitte wisely pitched around Garciaparra with two gone, then rang up Mike Stanley to get out of the inning.

Shoddy defense reared its ugly head in the top of the fourth, after a punch out of O'Neill by the cruising Saberhagen. Yankee

Turn to SOX, page 9

UM runs over Dayton

By Matt Crocker
Collegian Staff

This past weekend the Massachusetts men's soccer team attempted to kick it into fourth gear and roll right over its Atlantic 10 competition. After stalling out against Xavier University 3-2 on Friday, they were able to pop the clutch and push the pedal to the floor as they ran down A-10 defending champs Dayton University 2-1 on Sunday.

The Minutemen rolled into Xavier University on Friday evening. After unloading the bus, UMass then unloaded on the Musketeers. Less than five minutes into the game, UMass lead 2-0 as they dominated the first half. Senior forward Adam Black and sophomore midfielder Fred Kinateder both contributed to the early Maroon and White lead. Black struck first, only 23 seconds after the game kickoff. Junior forward Seth Lilburn hit Black with a pass, and Black soon hit the back of the net with his 11th goal of the season. Kinateder then followed roughly four and a half minutes later with a goal of his own. Freshman midfielder Derek Rhodes had the assist as the Minutemen took their lead to halftime.

However, Xavier was not about to be embarrassed at home, as they surprised UMass with an aggressive offense attack and continued on to control the entire second half

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior midfielder and NY native Todd Baronwas his usual gritty self as UM split a pair of gams over the weekend.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Junior forward Seth Lilburn and the UM soccer squad dropped Dayton 2-1 in a double-overtime thriller yesterday.

Turn to SOCCER, page 8

UMass remains perfect in A-10

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

A penalty corner in field hockey is usually the product of a hustling offense and a desperate defense clashing within the defending team's circle. The resulting free hit often equals a score.

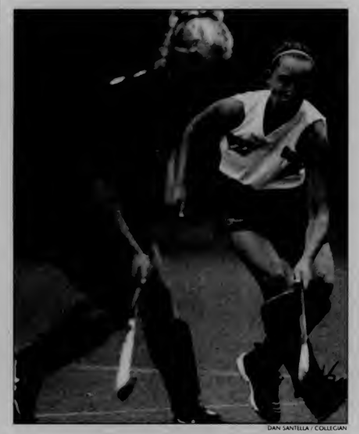
In a pair of games this weekend, the Massachusetts field hockey team used decisive action within their opposing team's circles to put crooked numbers on the scoreboard, and keep hosts La Salle and West Chester staring at more circles—zeroes, in fact— in their conference win columns.

The Minutewomen (7-8, 3-0 Atlantic 10) relied on a full cast of superb individual performances in a 2-1 comeback victory over La Salle on Saturday, and a 3-2 overtime win over West Chester yesterday. Team scoring leader Anke Bruemmer once again assumed her roll as penalty corner sniper, accounting for all of UM's scoring in Saturday's action against the Explorers, precisely as she had in Wednesday's win over Providence. The German back also rocked the Rams on Sunday by scoring UM's first goal and assisting on the game-winner by forward Kristen Schmidt.

Saturday's trial against La Salle (5-7, 0-2 A-10) pitted two teams on decidedly different points along the momentum curve. The Explorers had dropped four of their previous five games, including shutouts at the hands of Towson and Temple. The Minutewomen were riding high after winning two of three, having sunk Ocean State adversaries Providence and Rhode Island within the last two weeks.

La Salle got on the board first just over 15 minutes into Saturday's action, Explorer Kaitlin Coupe took a feed from teammate Jill Seely and beat UM keeper Zowie Tucker to stake La Salle to a 1-0 lead, an advantage Coach Jenn Harpel's squad would hold through halftime.

UM coach Patty Shea tinkered with her offense during the break and seemed to right the ship somewhat, as stepped-up pressure by UM's offensive attack resulted in a Maroon and White penalty corner 12:48 into the second frame. Co-captain Lucy Koch pushed the ball out to back Patty Robinson, who executed a perfect stick-stop as the Explorer defenders exploded out of their goal and headed straight for Robinson and Bruemmer.



But Bruemmer, the reigning A-10 player-of-the-week, calmly stepped forward and belted in her 10th goal of the season to lock the contest at one-all.

Shea's troops didn't let up from there, pressuring La Salle keeper Lindsay Block with an onslaught of shots throughout the second half. Roughly ten minutes after Bruemmer's first score, a La Salle infraction in front of its goal again set up the UM penalty corner trio for a shot at greatness.

The Minutewomen did not disappoint, as Bruemmer again crushed a cruise missile that Block couldn't stop. The Maroon and White's scoring leader had her 11th goal and 23rd point of the '99 campaign, and UMass had a 2-1 lead that it wouldn't surrender.

Statistically, the Minutewomen dominated their combat with the

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 9

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

UM running back Marcel Shipp rolled over the Maine Bears for an astonishing 256 yards on 30 carries in the Minutemen's 38-17 victory Saturday.

Hockey stumbles out of gate with loss to Colgate

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

HAMILTON, NY – The friendly confines of Starr Rink were anything but that for the Massachusetts hockey team on Saturday night.

Facing host Colgate in their 1999-2000 season opener, the Minutemen had problems adjusting to the smaller rink. As a result, UMass was forced into a host of defensive turnovers and had problems generating offensive chances, allowing the Red Raiders to come away with a 3-2 win in front of a sellout crowd of 2,246.

All three Colgate goals were the finished product of UMass giveaways, but the backbreaker came with 7:29 remaining in the game. The Minutemen defense tried to clear the puck along the left-wing boards in its own zone, but three Colgate players forced a tie-up along the wall. The puck eventually ended up at the left-point, where defenseman Corey Potter fired a shot towards the UMass cage. Sean Nolan tipped the shot past Markus Helanen for the game-winning tally.

"We had a lot of turnovers, especially in our own zone. That's something that I think is very important. You can't just give momentum over to your opponent," Massachusetts hockey coach Joe Mallen said.

UMass had some opportunities to net the equalizer in the final minutes of regulation, but fell short thanks mainly in part to the efforts of Colgate netminder Shep Harder. The senior made 19 saves to help preserve the win for the Red Raiders.

"Down the stretch, when we were only up a goal, he made some big saves for us. He's a gamer," Colgate hockey coach Don Vaughan said. "I know that he wanted that second one back, but I also knew that after he gave up that goal he was going to bear down and focus. I knew that was it for them [UMass] after Shep allowed the second one."

Trailing 2-1 early in the third period, UMass got a goal from junior defenseman Joe Culgin. The Framingham native lofted a wrist shot from the right point through the pads of Harder to knot the score at 2-2.

From there, UMass kept the pressure on Harder for the next few minutes, but Nolan's go-ahead goal took some of the wind out of its sails.

Turn to ICE HOCKEY, page 9

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 30 — Tuesday, October 19, 1999

Safety discussed in Committee

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

Solutions to continuing safety issues around campus were presented yesterday at the Campus Safety Committee meeting. The summit included discussion on topics ranging from new restricted routes on campus to the escort service.

One of the main issues presented revolved around a proposal to create designated routes on campus for approved service vehicles. These areas would be restricted only to service and emergency vehicles, prohibiting all general public access. Electronic gates that would only allow people with the proper service card into the area would enclose the limited-access routes. The proposal aims to reduce pedestrian-vehicular conflicts.

"The $3.2 million modifications are meant to help provide adequate maintenance services to buildings that won't affect the campus," said Marc Fournier, assistant director for Grounds Management. "We want to keep vehicles off the main campus, by Herter and the library. We're looking for less turf damage and thinking of the safety of the community."

In addition to adding restricted areas on the main part of campus, restricting access in the Southwest Residential Area was also proposed. A gate would be placed at the entrance so that vehicles would no longer be allowed in on a regular basis.

A concern for the residents of Coolidge in particular was addressed, as residents would have no vehicle access to their building. The Vehicle Access Team that is proposing the route said it is more important for the safety of pedestrians to terminate the excessive vehicle traffic around the dorms.

"It's going to create a problem in the spring for the great volume of students, especially from Coolidge," said Jennifer Teixeira, associate speaker of the Student Government Association (SGA). "People are going to be upset, but I also understand the safety issue behind the gates."

Arrangements could be made on days in which students have to move in and out, but otherwise the area would be off-limits to any vehicles without permission. This change would also prohibit all delivery cars from driving straight up to the dorm.

Fournier said the team is hoping to have approval on the gates by this winter, in order to begin piloting them for the upcoming spring.

The status of the Escort Service was also discussed at the summit. There is a fixed route that the van drives, but the route goes all around campus, forcing students to remain on the van for a long time before they get to their destination. The idea of another van was discussed, but the additional money it would cost has postponed any further discussion at this time.

Larry Holmes, deputy chief of security, said students who want to return home safely are not the only ones using the Escort Service – it has become a way to receive a ride instead of having to walk.

"We have a service and it works. Students use it as a ride," Holmes said. "It's a ride when it's raining or when you don't feel like walking. When four or five people call, that's not a safety matter. We have a fairly lit campus, especially compared to other campuses."

Not everyone at the meeting agreed with this idea.

"I'm a little discouraged about the discussion on the Escort Service, and I'm not in the opinion that everyone is using it for just a ride," Teixeira said. "I know it's an issue of money, but I think we need to look at this."

Holmes concluded the subject by saying that the service would be conducting a survey of the students that use the van and that the matter would be looked into again toward the end of the semester.

During the summit, Fournier also gave an overview of the completed grounds management projects. Some of the improvements made around campus included turf repair, weed control, additional lighting in various locations on campus and speed bumps in several parking lots.

The new path created by the University Health Services building to prevent students from using the old "Goat path" was also an issue at the meeting. The path, which was frequently used by students living in Orchard Hill and Central, was extremely dangerous because of the steam line failure. The creation of a new path that extends from the already existing staircase is meant to prevent individuals from getting hurt and burned from the steam rising and the need for more lightening in the area. The problem could not be properly fixed because of a lack of

Turn to SAFETY page 3

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

Standing alone...

This tree, sitting in a field in South Hadley, awaits the onset of winter..

Driver that stuck professor cited

Micheal Pallica, 22, of Marshfield, has been cited in the Oct. 7 automobile accident involving a University of Massachusetts professor. Palica was the driver of the automobile that struck visiting professor Ruth A. Abrams.

Abrams, a 53-year-old assistant professor of Judaic and Near Eastern Studies, was injured in the accident. She is listed in good condition at Baystate Medical Center, where she was hospitalized following the accident.

Palica, a senior landscape architecture major, struck Abrams in his car on the westbound side of Massachusetts Avenue between the Whitmore Administration Building and the Rolsham Visitor's Center at 5:30 p.m. on Oct. 7.

Palica is being cited for failure to yield to a pedestrian in a crosswalk and negligent operation of a motor vehicle

Sam Wilkinson

Amherst looks to clarify parking system

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

AMHERST – Some progress was made last night defining parking regulations during an Amherst Select Board meeting at Town Hall.

Last week, the town delayed the proposed enforcement of a new parking permit system for another two weeks after it was determined that there needed to be more clarification concerning parking restrictions in downtown Amherst.

The original plan would prevent some 280 parking spaces around downtown from being occupied by University of Massachusetts students and faculty members. Due to the lack of available parking on campus, many UMass students and faculty have been parking around the town streets and commuting to campus by use of the public transportation system. Pioneer Valley Transit Authority Town Manager Barry Del Castilho said the town is concerned because many students, faculty and staff from Amherst College and UMass are using these downtown parking spaces to park their vehicles and commute to campus. This is limiting the number of spaces available for Amherst patrons during the daytime.

Because the town of Amherst is dealing with the same lack of parking availability, they have spoken against college students and faculty parking downtown and are asking for stricter regulations.

Parking Supervisor Iris Galarza said in a MassLive article last week that illegally parked cars in permit spaces won't be ticketed until Oct. 29. Warnings will be distributed for now.

"Warnings are being given out so people are fully aware they are parking in spaces that will require permits," Del Castilho said. "Letters have gone out but we have obviously missed some people, and we want to be sure to let them know before we start issuing tickets."

Those streets nearest to UMass, including Amity, North/South Prospect, McClellan, North/South Pleasant, Spring, Churchill and Sceleye will be regulated to prohibit UMass students or staff from parking and then walking to campus.

"We want to free up more spaces at meters so we're enforcing meter feeding," Del Castilho said. "We want to free them up for people who want to come downtown to shop."

Once these spaces become available downtown workers who now feed meters will have a place to legally park all day. Only downtown residents, employees and property owners can apply for permits.

Meter feeding will also be enforced to prevent downtown employees from parking in a one- or two-hour metered space all day.

Elie Wiesel speaks at AC

By Neal Alpert
Collegian Correspondent

AMHERST—As we approach the end of the century, the main threat that we, as a society, are facing is fanaticism according to author, humanitarian, and Nobel Prize recipient Elie Wiesel.

Wiesel, who spoke at Amherst College last night as part of Amherst College's ongoing lecture series, "Dialogues on Race," said that political and religious fanaticism "is growing everywhere," and that no group of people is immune to it.

"Fanaticism even touches my people," said Wiesel, referring to his Jewish background. "Yitzhat Rabin was killed because of a Jewish fanatic," he said.

Wiesel's lecture, entitled "Building a Moral Society," focused on the values of the moral society versus the values of the immoral society, and he said that fanaticism has no place in a moral society. Wiesel also explained his views on what the differences between a moral and an immoral society are.

"An immoral society is based upon indifference. When we allow those on top to impose their will on us, it gives evil the strength to operate," he said.

Turn to ELIE page 2

U.S. leadership evaluated

By Roy Gutman
Newsday

WASHINGTON – The condemnation was unusual, and the words used were harsh, but for the most part the foreign reaction was low-key when the Republican-led Senate last week rejected the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty.

The reason, according to foreign affairs experts, is because major U.S allies and the world at large have already written off the ability of President Clinton to deliver on foreign policy promises in his final 15 months in office. Now, his humiliating defeat is going to make it that much harder to lead until a new president is installed in 2001.

"It isn't that they [foreign governments] don't think it important. Their passivity comes from their not being surprised," said Leslie Gelb, president of the Council on Foreign Relations in New York. "Most countries have already discounted America's leadership on a lot of fronts," he said. A parade of leaders whom he has met in the past two months cite a range of problems — from economic issues to arms control to how to deal with Saddam Hussein — where they look to the United States for direction. "They are miles apart from where we are. It's a huge gap."

Gelb, who once held a senior arms control position in the Carter administration, shared his view that the United States is losing its ability to lead with Chester Crocker, who had a top State Department position during the Reagan administration. He said U.S. foreign policy in a wide range of areas is now the "politics of gesture" and "a charade."

"There is a long list of areas where we talk the talk but don't walk the walk," Crocker said. "We can't pay for anything we propose. It is always with other people's money." For example, the administration has negotiated Third World debt relief with leading industrial powers, but its only commitment in the talks is to promise to ask Congress for the money, Crocker said. We call for the U.N. to pull up its socks and reform itself, but we can't get that funded."

Some of the countries that have temporarily stopped nuclear testing — China, India and Russia — have said they will uphold the moratorium for the time being, indicating that they view international stability and nonproliferation as a higher priority than their domestic defense imperatives.

In most capitals, the disappointment was universal. "We had hoped for United States leadership in nuclear disarmament and in preventing nuclear proliferation," said Japan's Foreign Minister Yohei Kono. "So the result is very regrettable." But news of the Senate rejection was inside news in many foreign newspapers. The strongest criticism was that the Senate had placed narrow partisan interests ahead of world peace. In Britain's Guardian newspaper, respected commentator Martin Woollacott charged that Senate Republicans had put "the passing interests of party above those of their country and the world. They have also sent out a dismal message — of American selfishness, American foolishness and American readiness to put her own safety first, whatever the consequences for the rest of us."

Hungry get a shot at 'Piece of the Pie"

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

The Food Bank of Western Massachusetts will host their eleventh annual "Piece of the Pie" day tomorrow to raise money to benefit the fight against hunger.

The event is sponsored by NEWS40. The Advocate Newspapers, Massachusetts Restaurant Association, Springfield Advertising Company, Springfield Food Service and all Piece of the Pie restaurants.

A record 132 restaurants will donate 10 percent of their gross receipts from this day toward providing food for those most in need.

"For each dollar we raise, we can provide $8 dollars worth of food and we are able to provide two or three meals for someone in need," Harrison said.

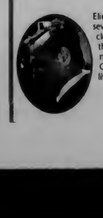
The Food Bank has raised as much as $18,000 dollars in the past as a result of the local community dining out and Harrison said she wants to try to beat that amount again this year.

"We're hoping to increase the amount we've raised because the needs increased in our region and we think that's possible," Harrison said. "There's more restaurants participating than ever but people really need to help by going out to eat and supporting it."

According to a Food Bank press release, with a 30 percent increase in people seeking assistance since 1997, the funds are needed more than ever.

Acting as the main source of food for 400 local programs that feed people of greatest need in Western

Turn to PIE, page 3



KARA STORES / COLLEGIAN

Judie's is one of the many restaurants in the pioneer valley participating in this years "Piece of the Pie" fundraiser on Wednesday.

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 53 LOW: 30	HIGH: 52 LOW: 36	HIGH: 56 LOW: 38

SOURCE: CNN.COM

Never Forget

Elie Weisel, the author of several novels that chronicle his experience during the Holocaust, spoke last night at Amherst College. Read about his life and lessons inside.

NEWS P.AGE 3

Legends Never Die

Jimmy Page took the stage with the Black Crowes, while former Led Zeppelin mate John Paul Jones hit Pearl Street. Also, the Internet site of the week and drug induced insights on Generation X.

ARTS P.AGE 5

Meyers and the Minutewomen

Jill Meyers and the Massachusetts volleyball team took on George Washington and Virginia Tech over the weekend. To see how they did, turn to page 12.

SPORTS P.AGE 12

Arts & Living 5
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Police Log

Accident - Pedestrian
Oct. 17.
A vehicle operated by Christina Brissette, of Field Residence Hall, struck a pedestrian, David Chabot, of Hampden. Chabot was transported by the Amherst Fire Department to Cooley Dickinson Hospital where he was treated and released. The accident is under investigation.

Annoying Behavior
Oct. 17
Fireworks and objects were reported being thrown from Coolidge Residence Hall.
Oct. 17
Three individuals were removed from the University Health Center for interfering with staff.
Oct. 16
An individual was taken into protective custody at Thoreau Residence Hall.
Oct. 15
An individual reported a broken mirror on a vehicle.
Oct. 15
A skateboarder was reported at Tennis Courts.

Assault and Battery
Oct. 17
An individual reported being struck with a bat.

Drug Law Offenses
Oct 15
Edmund L. Feliciano, 18, of 1061 East 104th St., Brooklyn, N.Y., was arrested at Pierpont Residence Hall and charged with possession of a class D substance and underage possession of liquor.

Hazmat Spills, Etc.
Oct. 17
Porta-Potties were tipped over in Lot 11. The Physical Plant was notified of the incident.

Larceny
Oct. 17
A telephone valued at $100 was reported stolen from a room at Gorman Residence Hall.
Oct. 17
A bicycle valued at $150 was reported stolen from Brown Residence Hall
Oct. 16
A wallet was reported stolen from John Adams Residence Hall.
Oct. 16
A wallet was reported stolen from the Mullins Center.
Oct. 15
A credit card was reported stolen from Coolidge Residence Hall.
Oct. 15
A vehicle in Lot 44 was broken into and a stereo valued at $250 was reported stolen.
Oct. 15
A parking decal was reported stolen from a vehicle in Lot 25.

Robbery
Oct. 15
An individual in Brown Residence Hall reported confrontation with three individuals who demanded money.

Suspicious Person/Activity
Oct. 17
James S. Dalton III, 18, of 21 Robbin Rd., Canton, was arrested in Lot 32 west, south of Massachusetts Avenue, and charged with disorderly conduct and wanton destruction of property valued at over $250.
Oct. 17
Matthew S. Gamby, 18, of 38 Richards St., Lowell, was arrested in Lot 22, west of University Drive, and charged with nighttime breaking and entering for a felony, larceny over $250 and underage possession of liquor.
Oct. 17
A suspicious person was reported at Coolidge Residence Hall.
Oct. 17
A suspicious person was reported at the Pyramids in Southwest Mall.
Oct. 17
A suspicious person was reported in Lot 32E.
Oct. 17
A suspicious person was reported in Lot 44.
Oct. 17
A suspicious person was reported at Washington Residence Hall.
Oct. 17
A suspicious person was reported at Gorman Residence Hall.
Oct. 16
A suspicious person was reported at Emerson Residence Hall.
Oct. 16
A suspicious person was reported at Memorial Hall.
Oct. 16
A suspicious person was reported at the University Health Center.
Oct. 16
A suspicious person was reported at the Fine Arts Center.
Oct. 16
Robert C. Fagan, 22, of 357 Reading St., Fall River, and Eric J. Rocha, 20, of 118 Dowling St., Fall River, were arrested at John Adams Residence Hall and charged with disturbing the peace.

Traffic Stop
Oct 15.
Frank J. Mannix, 27, of 19612 Ford Dr., Cleveland, Oh., was arrested on Commonwealth Avenue and charged with unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle.

Vandalism
Oct. 18
Three parked vehicles in Lot 13 were reported to be damaged.
Oct. 16
A vehicle in Lot 22 was reported to be damaged.
Oct. 16
A window was smashed on a parked vehicle in Lot 32.
Oct. 16
Homophobic graffiti was reported written on a door in Brett Residence Hall.
Oct. 16
A window was smashed on a parked vehicle in Lot M9.
Oct. 16
Two vehicles in Lot 22 were reported to be damaged.
Oct. 16
A Sani-Can was overturned in Lot 11.
Oct. 16
A parked vehicle in Lot 22 was reported to be damaged.
Oct. 15
An elevator in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall was reported to be damaged.
Oct. 15
A soda machine in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall was reported to be damaged.

Weapons Violation
Oct. 17
A weapon was confiscated on Massachusetts Avenue. Court action will be sought.

Write for the Collegian...my mom says you should.

■ Elie

continued from page 1

He went on to recall his first impressions of the American South in the 1950s, saying that he "was shocked that the racism was written into the law. Where was the Supreme Court?" He also wondered why there were no voices of dissent against such injustice. Wiesel said that he had the same feelings when he visited South Africa in the mid-1970s.

Wiesel continued to stress, in the course of his hour-long speech, that a moral society is based upon a sense of communal responsibility and respect. Recalling a visit to the site of Aushwitz several years ago, where he spent time during the Holocaust, he was shocked to realize that the death camp was not segregated from the town, but was quite close by. He spoke to a man that had lived in the town during World War II and asked him, "Could you see the people being marched to the concentration camps?" to which the man replied that he had. Wiesel than asked, "How is it that nobody helped those people? Why were they so indifferent to the fate of these people?"

The Nobel Prize winner also incorporated biblical stories into his lecture, at one point mentioning the story of Noah's Arc. He said that after reading the story, which concludes with God stating that he would not destroy the world again, he realized that the message of the story is that "if the world is to be destroyed, it will be the fault of mankind."

Wiesel concluded his lecture by stating, "Those who control the past control the future," meaning that those who control what we remember of the past control what we are able to learn from and build upon. He stressed that we must never forget the horrors of the Holocaust, or the loss of freedom experienced in the Soviet Union.

Reaction from the audience to Wiesel's speech was mixed. While Wiesel received a standing ovation upon his conclusion, several people expressed the feeling that Wiesel was preaching to the converted.

"He said a lot of things that the audience would naturally agree with, and he never delved deep under the surface," said Amherst College senior Naila Moreira. But another '00 senior, Molly Eaton, had a different view of the speech.

"It was beautiful. He asked us to challenge ourselves to rise above our despair to become more caring people," she said.

Wiesel had the final words of the evening. When asked after the speech what he hoped the students in the audience would take away from his lecture, Wiesel simply replied, "sensitivity."

MELISSA SHERMAN/COLLEGIAN

Nobel Prize winner Elie Wiesel meets with students after speaking at Amherst College last night.

Juvenile crime plunges

By Eric Lichtblau
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – As crime continues its record-setting decline, FBI figures released Sunday show that arrests nationwide are dropping even more quickly among juveniles than among adults – despite a wave of public concern over a barrage of violent episodes in U.S. schools.

Juvenile arrests for serious and violent crimes fell nearly 11 percent from 1997 to 1998 – doubling the 5.4 percent decline for adults, according to the FBI's annual statistical report on crime. Robbery showed the steepest decline among serious juvenile arrests, plummeting nearly 17 percent, while drug violations, weapons charges and other offenses saw substantial reductions as well.

Although juvenile crime has been dropping steadily since about 1993, federal officials say this is the most significant decrease in recent years – and the widest gap between arrests of youths and adults.

The decline is even more impressive given that the juvenile population – classified by the FBI report as those under 18 – has continued to grow, now numbering about 70 million people.

"This is more good news, no doubt about it," said Shay Bilchik, who heads the U.S. Justice Department's Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention.

"You have a horrific incident like the Columbine shootings, and that paints a picture of a continuing problem that has not gone away. But people are shocked when you try to tell them that juvenile crime is actually going down."

The gruesome assault at Columbine High School in Littleton, Colo., six months ago was just one of more than a dozen deadly school attacks by gun-wielding students in the last two years. Other high-profile crimes – such as allegations in Minneapolis three weeks ago that an 8-year-old girl was sexually assaulted by seven boys, ages 6 to 13 – have fanned fears that society is raising a new "Lord of the Flies" generation, ever more prone to violence and crime.

Amid such concerns, many states have pushed for tougher sentencing laws for juvenile offenders in the last several years.

FUEL

EDU.COM PRESENTS FUEL WITH SPECIAL GUESTS. OCTOBER 29TH AT AVALON. GO TO WWW.EDU.COM AND ENTER TO WIN FREE TICKETS!

 V.I.P. PARTY BEFORE THE CONCERT FOR EDU.COM TICKET WINNERS ONLY!

AVALON WBCN 104.1 FM edu.com students get it™

■ safety

continued from page 1

funds.

"We have no money, so we came up with a temporary solution for the next few years until we can find a better one," Fournier said. "Hopefully it is a lot safer than it use to be."

The problem of the steam line will be looked at during this fiscal year.

Jeff Howe, SGA president, expressed his dissatisfaction with the new path.

"When this was looked at last semester, an issue brought up during the Safety Walk, we suggested a railing on the old path and I just see this solution as a waste of resources," Howe said. There was also concern that there were no students, the primary users of the path, involved in the final decision.

Fournier said grounds management had asked for the opinions of students on campus this summer when the project was completed. Students responded by saying that they thought the idea was a good idea. He agreed to look at the path again with Howe and other interested community members.

■ pie

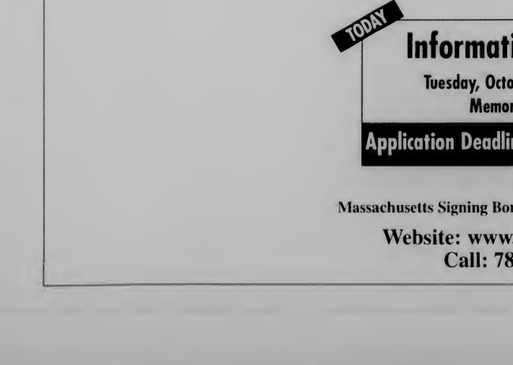
continued from page 1

Massachusetts, the Food Bank has been gathering food from the food industry that would otherwise go to waste, and distributing it to local food pantries, soup kitchens, homeless shelters and other community programs.

Last year alone, the organization distributed 4.2 million pounds of food to more than 106,000 people. According to Harrison, it is her hope to distribute close to 5 million pounds of food this year and she said it isn't possible without community support.



Harrison said they get an average of approximately three truckloads of food day. The donations are usually from local organizations, farmers and individuals within the community.

"It's really good to know that people care through the support we receive," Harrison said. "It shows people really care about people who aren't doing well in our economy and struggle; those people's support are what keeps us afloat."

Harrison commented on how something as simple as eating out can go a long way in helping fight hunger.

"I think it may seem like a small thing to do, but eating out will help us raise funds this year and keep this event successful so we can continue to do this every year."

MANDATORY Night Supervisors Meeting TONIGHT at 9:00 pm

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Waiting for the mail...
A Saab sits patiently by a mailbox in Pelham.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Amherst or bust!
This scarecrow has been trying to hitch a ride on route 9 for a few weeks now.

Indonesia looks for new leader

By Keith B. Richburg
Washington Post

JAKARTA, Indonesia – For more than three decades, Indonesia's People's Consultative Assembly has been largely a rubber stamp, ratifying the appointment of presidents already in place.

Now, as the 700-member assembly meets for its first session in Indonesia's new era of democratic reform, no one – including the members themselves – has a clue who Indonesia's next president will be.

And the election is supposed to be 48 hours away.

The incumbent, President B.J. Habibie, made it clear Monday he is in the race to stay, despite huge daily demonstrations against his rule and sharp criticisms from assembly members.

Trying to oust Habibie is the hugely popular but politically inexperienced opposition leader, Megawati Sukarnoputri, the daughter of Indonesia's founding father, Sukarno.

Her supporters staged one of their daily demonstrations Monday in Jakarta's central business district, turning a traffic circle into a sea of red – her trademark color – and warning that unless she is elected diehard followers will stage what they call "revolution."

Raves engender both interest and concern

By Geoff Boucher
Los Angeles Times

ADELANTO, Calif. – On most nights, the dust that cloaks Highway 395 in this tiny high-desert town are pierced only by the headlights of passing big rigs and the glowing red-and-white sign of the new Dairy Queen. So it was easy to imagine locals rushing to their porches on a recent Saturday night when green laser beams strafed the sky and a throbbing pulse began echoing above the desert winds.

The origin of the eerie commotion could be found at the pitcher's mound of the city's baseball field, where a nest of special-effects machines and speakers had, for one night, replaced the national pastime. Now the ballpark belonged to one of those mysterious, fleeting festivals of youth known as a rave party, a singular marathon of electronic music and sensory overload that thrills its followers and terrifies parents and authorities.

This rave would follow the form of most: a mass of young people, many brimming with the giddy high of drugs such as Ecstasy, dancing madly until dawn to dense bass and beats at a remote site. The average age? About 17. This one drew about 6,000 ravers, but recently others have pulled in triple that number.

The scene's music, graphic designs and fashions are percolating into mainstream culture, but for the most part the rave phenomenon remains well below the radar of the general populace. Or at least until there is a casualty.

"Yeah, as soon as I heard about those kids driving off the mountain I knew people would be giving us grief again," said a 17-year-old raver from Riverside who identified himself only as "Racer X." He was referring to the five young people who died in August when their car plunged off a highway in the San Gabriel Mountains east of Los Angeles. The group had been on the way home from a rave at a ski resort, and then autopsies turned up traces of Ecstasy and speed.

"People hear that 'Racer X' continued, "and they think raves are all about drugs. It's really about the music, about the love and dancing."

Massachusetts is looking for outstanding individuals to TEACH in our public schools.

Could this be YOU?

Teach in Massachusetts

- $ 20,000 Signing Bonus
- Intensive summer training
- Job placement assistance
- Mentoring and support

All Majors Welcome!
(Math, Science, and Foreign Language encouraged)
Current Seniors • Grad Students • Mid-Career Professionals

TODAY
Information Session
Tuesday, October 19 • 5:00pm
Memorial Lounge
Application Deadline: February 2, 2000

Massachusetts Signing Bonus Program for New Teachers
Website: www.doe.mass.edu/tqe
Call: 781.338.3231

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

A note to all our readers:

We have received some excellent letters to the editor recently, and we would like to print them. However, we do not print submissions that are hand-written. Additionally, we cannot print unsigned letters: letters must include the name, phone number and address of the writer(s). The Collegian editorial staff reserves the right not to run submitted letters according to editorial discretion. Furthermore, the number of letters we can print is limited by space constraints. We enjoy reading your letters, so please continue to submit them.

Thank you.

The Editorial/Opinion editors

It's dinnertime

It's food, not music, that can soothe the savage beast. And I can be a savage beast.

Truth be told, I'd actually been having a fairly good afternoon last Friday. Skipped a class in the morning, went to a discussion, hung out in the office for a while, and went to see an exhibit at the University Gallery. Also saw a friend of the family, and, much to my surprise and enjoyment, I got an email from my beautiful girlfriend Bobbi. She usually sends letters, so getting an email made the sun shine a little bit brighter.

These are the things that make a day good. But in my busy-ness, I hadn't eaten, and around four o'clock, my stomach was rumbling and growling.

I went home, sat around, talked to some friends, and we plotted and planned to go to dinner. It isn't that I don't like the Dining Hall. It's just that sometimes, a person wants to eat something a little warmer, with a little more texture, and a little more taste. And Friday was one of those times.

By six o'clock, my stomach was actively upset at me for not filling it with food. By seven, it had folded its arms and was pouting. And at eight, I pulled on up to the table.

While food is an important part of life, there are some people who are irritatingly obnoxious about their food. They won't eat this food and they won't eat that food and the fact is, there are foods that I won't eat. But there are a lot more foods that I will. And if it's real good, I'll put on an exhibition in overindulgence, eating 'till I'm sick and loving every minute of it.

Chili's is a restaurant that is absolutely impossible to distinguish from Applebee's, which is absolutely impossible to distinguish from TGI Fridays. They all serve the same cows and chickens and weird specials and alcohol.

But I was at Chili's, my heaven for the evening. Chili's was home to food, and I had twenty bucks burning a whole in my pocket.

We were seated in one of the big booths and we waited. It must have been almost five minutes, and at that point my stomach was forcing my mouth to water, my muscles to clench, and my mind to wander to visions of pork chops and salads and roast beef and Mom's spaghetti.

Sam Wilkinson

Surrounded in a beam of light come down from the heavens, there she was: Jocelli, our waitress. She was the kind of waitress that didn't fool around. She didn't have a pad of paper to write down our order. She just asked what we'd like.

I ordered some salsa and chips. I got them, and was working on them when, miracle of miracles, the rest of our order showed up. I don't remember what the other two people at my table ate, as I wasn't really looking at their food. I was focusing on the burger in front of me. It was a serious burger, and not one of the silly vegetarian variety that is sometimes served in the dining hall. It was the kind of burger that makes vegans squirm.

Cooked just enough so that it wouldn't moo when I bit into it, the cheese was melted on just right. Burgers take no time to eat, so it amazes me when there are people who can't finish one. It's really disturbing to watch things like that happen, and it makes me worry about the future of America.

I was hungry, and I didn't have time to worry so I ate that burger in something like three minutes. My fries were left, so I ate those. Nothing like A-1 to make potatoes better. Took sips of the four root beers I was drinking to wash things down and then my cheese sticks showed up, all eight of them, and in my stomach they went. The two buffalo wings that were on the table that hadn't been finished were the next to go, and I finished with a piece of celery for desert.

Jocelli, may God bless her forever, was amazing. We ended up leaving a ten-dollar tip, which probably wasn't justice for just how good she was to us.

Maybe it was wrong to indulge like that. Maybe it was sinful to eat the flesh of a dead animal and enjoy it. Maybe I should have had healthy food. Maybe I shouldn't have told my heart and arteries to go to hell.

But good God damn was it tasty, and given half the chance to eat like that again, I'll certainly pull a chair up to the table.

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian columnist.

Thoughts

Just a few things.

The first issue that I would like to address is this current wave of Red Sox Fever. Now, I realize that every single person reading this column is a lifelong Sox fan, some of you for a whole two weeks now. I know that these playoff games are important to you. I also know that you need to get a life.

Rob Schulze

I am going to come out right here, right now, for the second time this semester and say that that Red Sox are not going to win the World Series. This is simply a fact. The Sox buried my grandfather, my father's getting kind of up there, and I, myself, have no expectations of ever seeing a Boston championship. They will never, ever, ever do it. You people are getting yourselves all riled up over nothing, because even if they beat the Yankees (and I hope to God sweet God above that they do) they will find a way to lose the Series. Live with it.

When they do lose, do not have a repeat performance of last weekend. Do not go directly underneath my window and scream insults at Derek Jeter. Derek Jeter is not in my room. I promise that if Derek Jeter ever does show up in my room, he will be immediately turned over to the nearest convenient lynch mob. Thank you.

Moving on, I really hate the marching band. I don't have a problem with the band as individuals who have absolutely no ability to dance whatsoever, but with the fact that the band has the arrogance to view themselves as being, and I will here quote directly from that guy who shouts even going to list all the things that come to my mind when I attempt to come up with things that are more suited to that title than the UMass marching band. A marching band. Hell, if any band were going to get that title, it'd have to be Aerosmith or Godsmack or something, not a bunch of nerds with funny uniforms.

What does this say about the rest of the school? When people ask me what the Power and Class of my school is, I am technically supposed to respond "the marching band." Not "the math department" or "the high academic standards." If I had known when I was a senior in high school that the best thing about UMass is a marching band, I would have just spared myself the humiliation and attended Cape Cod Community College (Four C's all the way, baby) and salvaged at least a little self-respect.

I want to congratulate the cop who was up on Orchard Hill last night giving parking tickets. It's about damn time, if you ask me.

On a somewhat related note, as long as we're talking about Orchard Hill and parking, will whoever is in charge of maybe paving that new lot up there please just go ahead and do it – for me? I don't even have a car and I want that lot paved just so everyone will shut up about it. Don't talk to me about the environment, either. Paving a little square of mud that used to be grass but has already been ruined by people parking on it anyways is not going to cast Mother Earth straight to hell. In fact, screw the environment altogether – they can pave the lot in whale skins, asbestos, and spotted owl eggs for all I care, as long as it gets done.

No, I don't care what kind of Earth my children inherit from me. The little snots won't deserve what they do get.

It has been over a month now and nobody has asked me to join his or her religion. I think that I owe all of this campus a big "thank you" for this. I don't even like my own religion. I really don't need another one. Towards the end of last year, not a week would go by without having someone accosting me about Jesus or other sundry things, but that has not happened this year. I still don't care about Jesus – I guess they've just accepted that.

OK, I am totally out of ideas. As far as I am concerned, the rest of the world is pretty damn peachy. I'm happy, my friends are happy, the weather's good, there's a new Simpsons tonight, and life is too sweet to be sour, which kind of sucks because it leaves me with no material. Sorry. I'll do better next time. One week from today I promise you'll fall to the ground in an orgy of laughter, if that can at all be arranged.

I am so ashamed of myself.

Rob Schulze is a Collegian columnist.

A Mother's care

You guys finally get your way. This is not an incredibly serious issue, but it has to do with the presidency, kind of. Enjoy!

Parental support. It's one of the greatest contributors to a person's success. Not only do I believe this, the presidential hopefuls also believe this. They credit their mothers for making them successful," reported The Boston Globe. While their fathers were out tending to the business of the nation, their mothers were taking care of business at home. They were making sure that the most current candidates were being raised to the White House liking, so they could take over where their fathers left off. What their mothers ended up doing was, in fact, shaping their personalities, building their characters, and organizing their views on values and politics.

What I find fascinating is that, according to political scientist Charles O. Jones, the six most important Presidents in this century (Thomas Woodrow Wilson, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, Lyndon Baines Johnson, Richard Milhous Nixon and Ronald Wilson Reagan) all kept their mother's family names. "The mothers appear to be the ones who were nurturing and stimulating leadership in future presidents," says Jones in The Globe.

Another kind of cool fact is that five of the 10 candidates for the major party nominations have mothers that are still alive. They are: Mrs. Hansford (98 years old, and the oldest), Mrs. Bush (74, and the youngest), Betty Bauer (76), and Pauline Gore and Mrs. McCain (both 87).

In the past, many of the politicians have turned to their mothers for support, advice, mentoring and inspiration. Some examples of them are George Bush, Al Gore and Elizabeth Dole. I know you'd expect Al Gore to have to turn to his mother for help and political mentoring. In my mind, Dan Quayle would need it more (perhaps for spelling lessons), and he does not admit it. But I would never expect George Bush or Elizabeth Dole. That shows guts and faith.

Both John Hansford and his sister Elizabeth strongly agree with this. They always wanted to please their mother, so they worked as hard as they could. Elizabeth climbed the ladder and was a two-time Cabinet secretary while being married to the former presidential candidate Bob Dole.

The situation was quite similar with Bill Bradley and his mother Susie Bradley. As you are hopefully aware, Bill Bradley is the former New Jersey senator. Anyway, he credits his success from being a New Jersey senator to getting into the NBA Hall of Fame to his mother. She pushed him, and he achieved great success.

This goes for present as well as past. John McCain can, at times, get a little heated, but he can always count on his mother to cool him down when necessary.

I credit part of my success to my parents and their constant pushing me to do better, but not to be perfect. They were happy if I tried (C's), ecstatic if I did well (B's), and beyond amazement if I did really well (A's). Because of them, my grades are fairly good, I got into a good college (I truly believe that what you get out of your UMass education is exactly what you put into it. Work and you will do well.), and my dreams are very high. I am going to go to law school (I know – more studying to do very well, and my dream is to become a lawyer. What do you call a boat full of lawyers chained to the bottom of the ocean? A good start.), and my parents are behind me 100 percent. I can't honestly say that it was all due to my mother, though. She was a great mother, no doubt. Hell, she raised me and I turned out pretty damn good. The other part wasn't all due to my father, either. I guess you could say that I grew up with three different mothers and a father. No, my father wasn't popular with the ladies like that (I would've killed him), I had my mother who gave birth to me, my Aunt Diana who was like a second mother to me (she really felt like my first mother because I felt that I could tell her things that I was uncomfortable telling my mother), and Mrs. Kinney, the G-House secretary in my high school. Mrs. Kinney was like a mother in the way that I could ask her questions that I could not even ask my Aunt Diana. There was almost nothing that I felt uncomfortable discussing around Mrs. Kinney. She was, and is, great. My mother brought me up with the right values – the don'ts: thou shall not smoke, thou shall not do drugs, thou shall not drink until 21, thou shall not have pre-marital sex, thou shall not steal, thou shall not lie. These were always followed by the do's: thou shall study, thou shall work hard, thou shall follow all of the rules (but don't read the directions or ask for directions – both of my parents), thou shall be the designated driver, etc.

Emily Vacanti

What my Aunt Diana taught me was more of a life lesson. She always told me not to be pressured, but to take my time. She likes to know that I'm dating, but she also does not want me to rush into anything. I have my whole life, why rush it? Aunt Diana just wants me to work hard and do my best, and let certain things happen naturally.

Mrs. Kinney, on the other hand, is a minute-by-minute teacher. She would counsel me on my choices of colleges to go to. Mrs. Kinney supported my playing ice hockey. She got a kick out of my social life (or lack thereof). She appreciated how much volunteer work I did for her (filing, typing, mail delivery, message delivery, etc.). She was all-in-all a really cool person who was both a mother and a sister-like figure to me.

Mothers are wonderful. They are the builders of most children. I am by far not discounting a father's importance in bringing up a child (I know some families where the fathers are more important than the mothers), I'm just saying that in history women have been the ones to take care of the children more than fathers. Both parents are great. I just see mothers more as the parent that builds and takes care of the child. It has worked for past presidents, families, etc., and it will work forever. Hail to the mothers!!

Emily Vacanti is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor

Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Maurer Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor

Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Position Vacant Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Development Systems Editor

Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Multicultural Affairs

Tuesday, October 19, 1999

Speaking Spanglish

By Lenny Holston
Collegian Staff

It is a wide spread myth among Americans that the newest ethnic groups in this country do not assimilate. The Hispanic population of the U.S. is very often seen that way by the misinformed. It would be a mistake to think that Latinos are not influenced by America. You can even say that it would be stupido. The latter was just an example of hybrid language called Spanglish, a combination of English and Spanish.

Miami natives Bill Teck and Bill Cruz have authored a book entitled "The Official Spanglish Dictionary: Un User's Guia To More Than 300 Words That Aren't Exactly Espanol or Ingles." The title speaks for itself. It also shows how some Hispanics blend both Spanish and English into their daily speech that it seems almost natural.

"It is natural for (Hispanics) to speak like that," says Jennifer Colon, a sophomore anthropology major from Smith College. "I am half Puerto Rican and half Irish. My parents raised me to be very proud of both of my identities. I spoke English and Spanish and most of the time it would just come out (Spanglish)."

Bill Teck, in a Miami Herald interview, says that the mixing the two languages is necessary to convey a proper thought. "Sometimes there just isn't a word in English that really captures what we're trying to (say)." In the book introduction he writes, "In our attempt to meld both languages and capture the vibe of one culture in the tongue of another (we get) Spanglish."

Most non-Hispanics have not clue that Spanglish even exists, let alone what it is. One self-proclaimed "English as the official of America" advocate (who agreed to be quoted in this article on the grounds of anonymity) states "when you mix languages like they do with this Spanglish thing, you are doing two thing. You encourage those (Hispanics) who don't speak English to never learn it. How will they function in society like that? You are also polluting both (languages)."

> "Sometimes there just isn't a word in English that really captures what we're trying to (say)."
>
> Lenny Holston

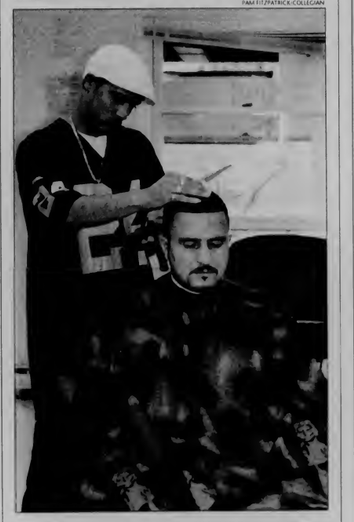
Teck asserts that "this is the generation (of Hispanics who) grew up speaking English at school and Spanish at home." Teck believes that "such newly-coined words not only make language more colorful, they represent a cultural solution for Hispanics like himself who grew up with these two cultures."

Jorge Rivera, a Dominican born in Springfield and now living in Amherst, says that "English is all mixed up anyway. Do you guys have an original word at all? You got this word that is Latin, this one is Italian, it is just crazy."

Teck and Cruz say that Spanglish in and of itself is not a perfected language. There is no uniformity in it. It is pretty much a regional thing. Areas like New England and New York, with a heavy Puerto Rican and Dominican population, speak a very different form of Spanglish that they do in Texas and California, both of whom boast higher Mexican descendants.

Spanglish is not like Ebonics, which has a set of rules that it follows. But there is a practical function to both. The African-American and Hispanic cultures are at times so far removed by the mainstream white cultures that it creates this rift in lexicon. There are just words that are untranslatable. How do you describe words like picardia or bibaporu to those who only speak English? How can you explain Ebonic speech to the uninitiated, like rapper E-40's "slanguage."

"Yo, pop a collar and we can bubbleate, it's tah-eezy."



Teck and Cruz's dictionary features examples of the language of Spanglish that actually make sense once you read it. Parqueo means "to park," foni is "funny," and flonquean is to "flunk."

The phenomenon of Spanglish may become so pervasive that it may become the language standard. Hispanics will soon be the largest ethnic population in America. Judging from their influence on music this year, language cannot be far behind.

Heads Up!

Q&A's Barber Shop, at 233 North Pleasant St., is a popular place for haircuts in Amherst.

PAM FITZPATRICK/COLLEGIAN

Poem of the Week

I Can't Ah...
Eh-Yo...
AHIGHT!
Here we go...droppin' a line
Makin' music like sublime..
Or tryin' to make a dime...
You see my hat?
Perhaps I can buy a lime....
I only protect myself with that...
I have my drum..
Don't pretend to hum..
Unless you leave me a bill..
So that I can fill..
My belly.
Last night-I had a bowl of jelly.
That was my line long before it was Santa's
They yell in my language "I CAN'T-Ah, I CAN'T-Ah.."
I Can't a pay..for nuthin'
But I got somethin' you ain't got..
I got soul..
So when you see my bag...
Don't fill it..
Kill it!

T.O.R. is a UMass student

Executed man turns out to be village Chief

By Anthony Kuhn
Special to the Los Angeles Times

ZHENGZHOU, China _ At first glance, it was an unremarkable news item. Nine convicts had been executed here in the capital of Henan province, the Zhengzhou Evening News reported last fall. But one thing seemed wrong. The paper listed only eight names.

A day later, a notice posted outside a municipal courthouse confirmed what many locals had feared. The ninth man, executed in secret, was Cao Haixin, the democratically elected chief of a village within the Zhengzhou municipality. The notice said that Cao had shot a man in 1995 over an "ordinary dispute."

But supporters say Cao was the victim of a most heinous form of judicial corruption known in China as "buying a human head."

The practice of bribing judicial and law enforcement officials to eliminate one's opponents has a long history in China. Many such cases are still studied by law students, such as the case of Tao Ercang, an 18th century scholar who bribed a local judge to try his lover's husband on false charges. The judge had the husband beaten to death while interrogating him in court.

But the case of Cao Haixin, whose lawyers say he killed an intruder in self-defense, may suggest that such corruption is not just a thing of the past.

The story started in Xi Han Zhai, the village where Cao Haixin lived. The village, originally on the desolate outskirts of Zhengzhou, was quickly swallowed up by the expanding city, turning it into just another urban neighborhood of about 500 residents.

Cao Haixin's predecessor, Cao Xinbao, presided over the land rush, and news accounts allege that he skimmed about 25 million yuan ($3 million) from sales of village land use rights.

He also forged powerful official connections by selling land at discounted prices to both the provincial supreme court and prosecutors for them to build housing on, news reports allege.

When the village held its first democratic elections in 1995, residents voted for Cao Haixin, a soft-spoken 34-year-old former army engineer and the village treasurer. He won by a clear margin over Cao Xinbao's brother, Cao Xinchun.

Cao Haixin did his best to repay voters' trust, increasing their welfare benefits, upgrading the village's power and water supplies and publicizing village finances on a blackboard. He also opened official investigations into Cao Xinbao's alleged corrupt dealings.

According to one magazine article written by several top journalists, including a former vice head of the official New China News Agency, villagers claim to have heard Cao Xinbao say: "We've got people in the provincial and city governments, the police, the (prosecutors) and the courts. We'll buy Cao Haixin's head even if we have to spend 2 million yuan!"

Not long after, on the night of Sept. 28, 1995, witnesses say Cao Xinbao's brother, who had lost in the elections, stormed into Cao Haixin's home. The brother and three others beat Cao Haixin until he managed to flee upstairs and grab his hunting rifle. The brother caught up, seized the rifle, and as the two struggled over the gun, it went off, killing the brother.

Cao's trial on June 13, 1996, seemed anything but impartial. Cao's lawyers argued that he had shot his assailant in self-defense. But the judges rejected as "false" or "useless" the eyewitness testimony of Cao Haixin's family and their videotapes of the scene of the incident. Cao's rifle was not introduced as evidence (except as a photograph), and no fingerprints were taken from the scene. In May 1997, Cao Haixin was convicted of murder and sentenced to death.

Incensed over the case, between 100 and 500 protesters went to demonstrate in support of Cao Haixin before the courts, the police, the city and provincial governments. Each time, officials came out and assured the protesters that the case would be handled fairly.

After the protests, New China News Agency reporters wrote three high-level internal reports to bring the case to the attention of top leaders in Beijing. The first report, headlined "Zhengzhou Homicide Trial Triggers Peasant Protests," detailed villagers' allegations of corruption.

The report was read by the then-head of China's judiciary, former Supreme People's Court chief Ren Jianxin, who instructed judiciary officials to "handle (the case) carefully." The instructions were handed down to the country's justice ministers, who then instructed Henan judicial officials to "handle (the case) themselves," leaving the matter unresolved.

Sources close to the case say municipal court judges privately told Cao Haixin's lawyers that, based on the facts of the case, Cao should not be executed. But the judges also admitted that they were being pressured by provincial legal officials to apply the death penalty.

China delegated authority over capital punishment to provincial governments in 1983, but the Supreme People's Court in Beijing has the right to grant stays of execution or overturn death sentences.

In late 1997 the Supreme People's Court removed Cao's case materials to Beijing. The court's vice president, in charge of capital punishment cases, assured Cao's supporters that this intervention amounted to a stay of execution.

At this point, villagers allege, Cao Xinbao drove to Beijing carrying more than 1 million yuan ($122,000) in cash . No evidence of bribes has been uncovered. But within days, the case materials were inexplicably back in the hands of the provincial government, according to the magazine article and lawyers and journalists involved in the case.

Still, the Supreme People's Court repeatedly called Henan officials to emphasize: "Cao Haixin must not be killed."

But on the morning of Sept. 25, 1998, a motorcade of 45 vehicles wended its way toward the execution ground. Following Cao Haixin's execution, his family wasn't allowed to retrieve the body, which was cremated and returned to them a week later.

The case has raised a public outcry, particularly among leading journalists, lawyers and scholars.

For such a sacred organ as the courts to be this corrupt really makes people worry," said Li Rui, former personal secretary to Mao Tse-tung. "The circumstances pertaining to this case should be printed in the (Communist Party flagship) People's Daily."

But so far, neither the People's Daily nor other major media have reported the case. Of the dozen or so smaller regional papers that have, at least one has been shut down by authorities.

After the execution, several journalists wrote a report on the case for Premier Zhu Rongji, who sources say ordered the Supreme People's Court to investigate.

But the court organized an investigative team composed of the same provincial legal and party officials who had allowed Cao's execution. The team predictably reported back to Beijing that nothing was amiss.

Three times, the case reached the highest levels of the Chinese government. Each time, it ended up back in the hands of the local officials who had handled the case in the first place. As Chinese governments have done for centuries, it appeared that Beijing had once again instructed officials to investigate allegations of their own corruption.

In August of last year, Xi Han Zhai village held democratic elections for a second time. The new vice chief of the village held office for about a month before being stabbed to death. One of the men who had stormed into Cao Haixin's home in 1995 was arrested in the case.

Meanwhile, Cao Haixin's widow and 14-year-old daughter struggle to survive. Many of the villagers, lawyers and journalists who fought for more than two years to stop Cao's execution remain depressed and cowed.

"I feel powerless and frustrated," said one of Cao's lawyers. "I ask myself, did I help to deceive the masses by even participating in this sham trial?"

Write for our Diversity pages!!

Calendar Of Events

Tuesday 19

Lecture "Imagined Latino Communities: The Challenge of the Coming Century," Arturo Madrid, Norine R&T. Frank Murchison Distinguished Professor of the Humanities, Trinity University, san Antonio, Texas. MHC. New York Room. Mary F. Woolley. 4pm.

Symposium "From the Salem Witch Trials to Black Elk: American Religion in the Liberal Arts Curriculum. Ann Braude. Director. Women's Studies in Religion Program, Harvard Divinity School. The third lecture in the Religion in America Smith College Symposium. Free. SC. Seelye 106. 5pm.

Wednesday 20

Lecture "The Problem of Religious Diversity." Jamal Elias, Professor of Religion, Amherst College. Inaurination of the AC Center for Religious Life. Followed by reception. Free. AC. Center for Religious Life, 58 Woodside Avenue. 5:30pm.

Music "Trio Voronezh." A trio of Russian virtuosos performs works of Bach, Vivaldi, Tchaikovsky, Russian and Gypsy songs, and popular music on traditional folk instruments. $20; $15; 17 & under $8; Five College students $7, $5. 545-2511 UM. Bowker Auditorium. 7:30pm

Thursday 21

Comnunity National Young Women's Day of Action. Women at the will be coordinating a series of events on this day around a reproductive and human rights agenda. Civil Liberty and Public Policy Program. HC. All five campuses. TBA.

Lecture GLBT Lunch Lecture series-Butch/femme: Destabilizing Gender and Sexuality. Robin Maltz. Adjunct Professor in the Department of Performance Studies at New York University. Accessible. 545-4824. UM. Campus Center, Room 804-08. 12:30-2pm.

Lecture The Second Amendment and Gun Control. Speaker: Glen Caroline, the grass-roots organizer for the National Rifle Association. Sponsored by UMass Republican Club. RSO. Accessible. Free. 545-3517. UM. Campus Center. Accessible. 7:00pm.

Lecture Yaffa Eliach. "There Once Was a World: A 900-Year Chronicle of the Shtetl of Eishyshok." Five College Women's Studies Research Center. MHC. Odyssey Bookshop. South Hadley, MA. 7:30pm.

Theater Latina Performance Artists. "Exotic Memeories: Tropicana's Milk of Amnesia" given by Lillian Manzor, Associate Professor, and "Beyond Metaphor: Laura Esparra's Performance IN and Of the Flesh" given by Ligia Aldana, Ph.D. Candidate, Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures at the University of Miami. Free. SC. Neilson Browsing Room. 5pm.

Monday 25

Lecture "Tangible Vibrations of Rastafari Women's Roots Reggae." An analysis through Ceramic Sculpture, Ella Maria Ray. University of California, Davis African-American and African Studies. Accessible. MHC. Dickinson House. 4:30pm.

Wednesday 27

Lecture "Touching Tales of Turks, Germans and Jews: Cultural Alterity Historical Narrative, and Literary Riddles for the 90's." Professor Leslie Adelson, Cornell University. Accessible. MHC. New York Room. Mary E. Wooley. 7:30pm.

Thursday 28

Lecture GLBT Lunch Series-Dequeering Gay Identity: AIDS, Sentimental Pedagogy and the Nation Form in Philadelphia. Speaker: Robert J. Corber, Professor of Queer Studies at Trinity College and author of "Homosexuality in the Cold War America: Resistance and the Crisis of Masculinity." Accessible. 545-4824. UM Campus Center, Room 804-08. Accessible. 12:30-2pm

Lecture Ehud Ya'ari. Chief political columnist for The Jerusalem Report, will speak on the Mideast Peace Process. Sponsored by Hillel at Smith College. Free. 585-2754 SC. Neilson Browsing Room. 7:30pm.

Friday 29

Lecture Negotiating National Identity: Japanese and Arab Immigrants and the Struggle for Ethnicity in Brazil. Jeffrey Lesser, professor of history, Connecticut College. All welcome. Accessible. MHC. 301 Reese. 3pm.

Theater "MotherSON." A one man play exploring the hilarious and poignant relationship between a Jewish mother and her gay son by Emmy Award-nominated writer/performer Jeffrey Solomon. $10; $5. 545-2511. UM. Bowker Auditorium 8pm.

IT IS TIMES TO STAND UP AND BE COUNTED. WRITE FOR MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS AND REPRESENT YOUR PEOPLE. CALL LENNY AT 545-1762.

The Crowes, Page and Perry; legends surprise

By Brooke Werley
Collegian Correspondent

Black Crowes and Jimmy Page
Worcester Centrum
October 16, 1999

Rich Robinson stood right next to guitar god Jimmy Page Saturday night with Marc Ford on the other side of the stage as the Black Crowes select tour with Page hit Worcester, MA. The only thing that could have made for a greater guitar showing was if Randy Rhodes decided to come back from the dead to play the Worcester Centrum, or maybe if Ice Perry came on stage for the encore – which just happened to main Yes- about halfway through the show Aerosmith's Joe Perry brought his six-string out on stage to make it a total of four guitars, as if Jimmy Page plus two just wasn't cutting it. This stepped off what was a guitar-centered concert from the first note.

I had to agree with the drunk fan behind me in a faded tie-dyed Zeppelin t-shirt who slurred comments about how Jimmy Page was beginning to show some signs of aging, but I'll only go so far as to say that those signs are purely visual. When Jimmy Page was under that spotlight, the guitar notes were merciless, and when he broke out that slide, he spared no prisoners.

Predictably, the show was heavily weighted on the Zeppelin side. Black Crowes fans left wanting a lot more Crowes songs. They played "Hard to Handle" and "Mellow Down Easy", but only two or three others off of their own albums, including "Shake Your Money Maker" which wasn't written by the Black Crowes. The lack of Crowes songs wasn't all bad; it gave a lot of space for the massive amounts of Zeppelin that supplemented the rest of the concert. They played a lot of early Led Zeppelin music – the songs off of I and II seemed to excite the crowd most. Both "You Shook Me" and "Your Time is Gonna Come" off of Zeppelin I set the crowd afire, along with "Whole Lotta Love" and "Heartbreaker" off of II which all sounded incredibly Zeppelin-authentic. Which leads me to the man I've been neglecting for half of this article.

Chris Robinson did such an unbelievable job with Robert Plant's vocals that there were times that you could close your eyes and become instantly transported back to a 70's Led Zeppelin concert. Chris Robinson has such a presence of his own, that he doesn't need anyone's shadow to stand in, shoes to fill or Plant's vocals to resemble, but when you can play with Jimmy Page and do justice to Robert Plant – you have got some incredible vocal skills. Even the flamboyant, attention-demanding aura of Chris Robinson was sacrificed to the guitar gods Saturday night.

Eddie Harsch (keyboard) and Steve Gorman (drums) were only extended one solo each; it's not likely that many people even noticed the bassist was even on stage most of the night – Johnny Colt kept to himself over on stage right working on John Paul Jones' skill. Though I doubt there were any complaints from anyone on that stage or from the audience. When Jimmy Page took to his six-string every head on that stage shook in amazement. To the Crowes and Jimmy, I'm sure I speak for the audience —yeah, you shook me.

BROOKE WERLEY- COLLEGIAN

The Black Crowes and Jimmy Page take turns tearing up the Centrum.

COURTESY UMASS FINE ARTS CENTER

Tim Voronezh brings the music of Russia to Bowker Auditorium this Wednesday at 7:30.

Russia comes to UMass as Trio plays Bowker

By Kristi Ceccarossi
Collegian Staff

The folk music of Russia is coming to UMass Wednesday evening. Real live Russians, artistically known as Trio Voronezh, will play Bowker Auditorium at 7:30. The ensemble plays traditional Russian instruments with a repertoire that ranges from classical Vivaldi, Tchaikovsky and Schubert to gypsy dances and popular songs.

Although classically trained at the Conservatory Voronezh, the trio started their career by playing in the streets, subways, and small clubs in a variety of European cities. It wasn't until the internationally renowned conductor Helmuth Rilling spotted the musicians playing for Frankfurt's public transporters that they achieved recognition. After Rilling's discovery they became the sleeper hit of the summer, selling out three concerts! Their careers have been overrun with fame since then, as they have made a series of appearances in Europe, filmed a music video in the U.S. and shook the Oregon Bach Festival.

Working the gamza in a way you've never imagined, Vladimir Volochin makes up 1/3 of this musical sensation. Playing since the tender age of six, one of his most celebrated awards is the National Championship in the "All Russian Domra Competition." Sergei Teleshev brings his bajan skills to the trio. He has not only mastered the bajan, but has also impressed audiences with his piano skills. Valeri Petruchin, like the other two, is a multi-faceted artist. He's played piano, accordian, trombone, and the double-bass balalaika.

Take advantage of the opportunity to catch these refined musicians and a piece of cultural enlightenment before the Trio Voronezh become complete sell-outs like so many of the idealistic, up and coming folk threesomes do. Tickets for this performance are still available by calling the Fine Arts Center box office at 545-2511.

THE MP3.COM MUSIC AND TECHNOLOGY TOUR

Free Music and Giveaways!
Come Down and Check Out
The MP3.COM Village!
Admission is
FREE!!!

Eight Hours of Great Music!
Win a Trip to Jamaica!
Win an MP3 Player!
Enter to Win a VW Bug!

The MP3.COM Village is a day-long event which features performances by the hottest MP3.COM artists including:

Lyricist Lounge, Fern, Thrillcraft, Fono, Moke & Genaside II

Stop by the MP3.COM Music and Technology tent to sign up your band, get free prizes and learn about the coolest new music site on the Internet.

Companies including Collegeo.com, Gearscout, Kinko, My Virals, BodyOfMost, Rev2000, Beenz.com, Live 365, PowerStudents.com, VIBE, Virgin, Real Names and more will be holding special contests and giveaways all day long!

Near Mullins Center Arena
Oct. 20th 1-8pm

Warehouse Selectors Needed!

If you need a job that fits into your busy school schedule, then look into the outstanding opportunities available at C&S, the nation's fastest growing wholesale food distributor. We have immediate openings for enthusiastic, team-oriented students to play an integral role in our expansion.

JOIN US NOW AND RECEIVE A $500 SIGN-ON BONUS

BRING YOUR FRIENDS!
- Flexible Schedules
- Great Pay
- FREE Transportation on weekends from Mullins Center on Campus

We'll train you, give you $12.50 per hour working part-time, extend your hours to full time during breaks, and offer you a dynamic work environment. For more information about these exciting Part Time opportunities visit us at our Job Fair, call 1-800-621-5953, or apply in person Monday-Friday, 8am-4pm (Tuesday & Wednesday till 7pm), or Saturdays from 9am-1pm, at: Employment Center, C&S Wholesale Grocers, Inc., 142 Elm Street, just off Route 91, Exit 21, Hatfield, MA

VISIT US ON-CAMPUS
Thursday, October 21st
From 9:30am - 4pm
in the Student Campus Center

C&S WHOLESALE GROCERS, INC.

C&S is an Equal Opportunity Employer and does not discriminate on the basis of age, gender or any other protected category in accordance with applicable law.

Looking for the perfect PART-TIME job?

The Fantasia Continues...

Internet Site of the Week
http://disney.go.com/disneypictures/fantasia2000/

Adam Martignetti

As of late, Disney seems to be an evil word. Not only is their stock price wallowing at all-time lows, but the company has also been attacked for everything from corrupting classic tales, to hiding pornography in their animation, to having a secret hidden agenda with their film. Still, there's something pure about Fantasia. Just fanciful characters set to beautiful music in the age of absolute innocence.

Well, get ready for the magic all over again. On January 1st, Fantasia 2000 hits Imax in a big way. Fantasia 2000 is the fist ever full-length feature produced exclusively for an Imax format, which is ten times the size of a conventional 35 mm frame. The film will run a special and exclusive four-month time at selected Imax theaters around the country to give audiences the best experience of the film possible.

This site details Disney's plans to launch the movie, including special inside features, a couple of different trailers, which are nothing short of spectacular, and information for buying tickets in advance. And this might not be a bad idea because come January, this is going to sell out every show for a long, long time.

Here's my personal favorite take on e-commerce thus far. V-store.com let's anyone create their own on-line store by simply opening a free account. Anyone who opens an account will receive 25 percent in commissions for everything sold at their store. V-store.com is set to open its, or your, doors today. So check it out.

Union members should check out workingfamilies.com. This is the new website from the AFL-CIO, intended to connect its 13 million members on-line. The site will also act as an ISP, providing Net access for no more about $14.95 a month.

WCBS in New York, a CBS affiliate, has become one of the first T.V. stations in the country to offer video-on-demand. The station is now offering searchable video news on the Internet. Using technology provided by MediaSite Inc., WCBS-TV Web users can search a database of past newscasts and watch video clips of news stories.

Wahingtonpost.com is set to go bananas. Traditional media giant, The Washington Post, is planning to spend upwards of $6 million to promote their new website.

Also, the 110-year-old Los Angeles-based Northern Trust Bank recently announced the launch of their Private Passport banking site. northerntrust.com/privatepassport will serve high net worth clients. Normal banking transactions will be posted several times daily for all those millionaires who need up to the second coverage of their accounts.

Net music fans should be happy as they will no longer need to download any software to use Spinner.com. The company, which was recently purchased by AOL, offers more than 130 channels of genre-based music on their website. The new software, which will be built into the 5.0 version of AOL, adds numerous personalization features including capabilities to identify favorite channels and songs.

In a slightly more innovative Internet music move, SonicBox has chosen Netradio.com as a content provider. SonicBox essentially lets users listen to Internet delivered radio within 100 feet of a PC. The device will be available for less than $50 sometime early next year.

Is imitation the best way to learn? It's a good question and one to which Isong.com answers yes. The site is essentially an all-in-one on-line music lesson. The new company and its Web will offer everyone the chance to learn from greats like B.B. King and Keith Richards. Users will download an audio/video player and lessons that let them synchronize a music track, an instructional file showing sheet music and a video of the artist playing. The company has relationships with musicians or estates like Jimi Hendrix, Alanis Morisette and the Wallflowers. These artists' original hit recordings are all included in the "how to" lessons.

People go to Universal Studios to have fun, to escape reality and maybe even to just relax. Well, starting soon, there will be a new attraction for visitors to enjoy. AOL kiosks. That's right, AOL will put various kiosks around the theme park so people can check their e-mail and get access to the Internet away from home. Yes, now when I'm on vacation, I can read lame e-mail jokes like "How men really think."

Don Peppers and Martha Rogers, the gurus of One to One personalized marketing recently announced that Amazon.com, American Airlines and Biztravel.com are the top three companies at using the Internet for customer service. The stud of 150 different Web companies also put Charles Schwab and E-Trade tops for using the Internet most effectively by providing financial information and customizable tools to manage personal portfolios.

If you've been to Amazon.com lately, then you know about "Wish List." This is the site's desperate attempt to capitalize on the rise in e-commerce during the holiday season. Basically, shoppers who can't afford an item at the time, or people "just browsing" can put items on their "wish list" for later purchase.

Adam Martignetti is a Collegian Staff Member

Pursuing Mozart's nemesis: New staging of Amadeus

By Marjorie Miller
Los Angeles Times

LONDON — One of the many ways David Suchet prepares for a theatrical role is by making private lists of the attributes he shares with his character and those he doesn't. Seeing him without the weight and waxed mustache of Agatha Christie's Hercule Poirot, then, it's fun to imagine what he might have in common with the brainy, pompous, irritating and charming Belgian detective with whom he has become so identified. It is somewhat more daunting, however, to consider what the 53-year-old Suchet might see of himself in the character of Antonio Salieri, Mozart's nemesis in Peter Shaffer's "Amadeus," now playing in Los Angeles before heading for Broadway.

The play had been in rehearsals at the Chelsea Center Theater here after a run at the Old Vic.

Salieri, as many film and theater fans will recall, is the Hapsburg court musician who agonizes over his own mediocrity in the face of Mozart's genius and feels betrayed by God, who gave such musical gift to a giggling, scatological upstart instead of to the devoted Salieri.

Exactly how he identifies with Salieri, the highly successful British character actor isn't saying. A private list is private, after all. But Suchet will say why he thinks the tortured man who tried to silence Mozart's music strikes a chord with so many people, himself included.

"Salieri represents all of us- in his envy and jealousy, in his hopes and ambitions and his realization of the fact that there are going to be people better than him," he said. "It is something that every person past 35 is aware of."

"A lot of people start life with huge hopes. There is such a thing as the American Dream. We all have dreams and get caught out by our dreams."

Shaffer's Salieri, however, might be more actively vengeful than most people. The play is based on rumors that circulated after Mozart's death that Salieri had killed the younger composer. He didn't, but he worked hard to ensure that Mozart lacked gainful employment and that his brilliant operas were heard by as few people as possible. He tried to kill Mozart's music.

But Suchet insists that Salieri is no two-dimensional villain.

"He is a very complex man. He has evil intent," he said. "But the play starts with Salieri as an old man who desperately wants to confess. One only wants to confess if one feels shame. Throughout the play, when he is narrating, he is not just saying, 'Look how clever I am, I destroyed Mozart.' He is well aware of the shame.

"He never asks for forgiveness. He asks for understanding. If you understand him, you won't sympathize with him, but you have a deeper appreciation of why he did what he did."

In his efforts to understand Salieri, Suchet visited the composer's birthplace in the Italian village of Legnano. He made his way from there to "the huge, baroque city of Vienna," as Salieri might have seen it.

"He arrived with a chip on his shoulder. He was an outsider, proving himself, trying to maintain respectability," Suchet said. "He tried to behave well, to please God and the emperor.

"He is essentially a weak man, not a natural courtier. He is a small-town man, sort of out of place in the city. His music was quite good, but it was court music that he wrote to order. He was a conservative, traditional musician, not a Mozart, who felt he had to write. Who needed to write."

Suchet seems to need to act. At least, he seems to have been born to the medium. His mother was an actress, his father was a successful gynecologist, and Suchet was expected to follow in his father's scientific footsteps until he proved hopeless at physics.

He made his stage debut at age 5 as an oyster in "Alice Through the Looking Glass," and at 25 became what might be the youngest Shylock in British stage history. The stocky, deep-voiced Suchet quickly made his mark as a character actor.

"My gift, if I have a gift, is to be different people, to understand people and to become them. I'm told there are not many of us around anymore," he said. "There have always been film stars who will put bums in the seats and make the film industry a success. I

Turn to MOZART, page 8

At Western States Chiropractic College, we take an integrated approach to chiropractic. We teach traditional application and practice, as well as prepare our students to work as equals with medical doctors, and to deal successfully with HMOs. It's the shape of health care to come, and if you have the ambition and passion to be a part of it, call today for our informational brochure or visit our website. The future is in your hands.

WE'LL PUT THE FUTURE OF HEALTH CARE IN YOUR HANDS.

WESTERN STATES CHIROPRACTIC COLLEGE
800 641 5641
PORTLAND, OREGON
WWW.WSCHIRO.EDU

The "World Famous" Lipizzaner Stallions are trotting to the Mullins Center this Friday at 7:30. Twenty-three million people all over the world have seen and grown to love this equine wonders. Their most recent program includes new music and new choreography and lots of memories for the entire family!

Legends Never Die: Jones Plays Pearl Street

By Stefan Von Imhof
Collegian Correspondent

John Paul Jones
Pearl Street Ballroom
October 12, 1999

It's been almost 20 years since Led Zeppelin, one of the most influential rock bands of the century, finally called it quits following the death of drummer John Bonham. Since then, bassist John Paul Jones has continued his musical career in many ways, including producing and recording, but up until this past Tuesday touring wasn't on his list.

In support of his first solo album, Zooma, Jones kicked off his three week U.S. tour at the Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton, with his bandmates Nick Beggs and Terl Bryant, on guitar and drums, respectively. Moments before the show began, there was a sense of tension in the air as many people in the crowd weren't sure exactly what to expect from the star bassist/keyboard player. But before long, Jones came out and opened the set with three amazing new tracks from Zooma that left the fans in the Pearl Street Ballroom in awe as well as answered any questions they may have had concerning Led Zeppelin material.

The fourth number, entitled "Smile of Your Shadow," saw Jones perform on a lap steel guitar combined with mild distortion, to produce a tight, bluesy, almost shrilling sound. The crowd watched tenaciously as Jones wailed away while his bandmates kept the groove going strong.

Following "Smile of Your Shadow," Jones performed the first Zeppelin tune of the night – a beautiful version of "No Quarter" in which he played both the guitar and vocal lines on his keyboard while the crowd chanted along.

After a brief intermission Jones returned to the set to play four more tracks from Zooma, including "Bee Fingers," another song in which Jones exercised the lap steel guitar, as well as an absolutely remarkable five-minute [illegible] not found on his new album, entitled "Crackback."

Jones ended his set with the long-time favorite Zeppelin song "When the Levee Breaks." The concluded what was an overall outstanding performance by the man, to say the least – but it was not enough. The fans wanted more. Roaring chants of "John Paul-Jones..." brought the band back to the stage for an encore where they played the driving beat oriented Zeppelin song "Trampled Under Foot."

A thunderous applause followed by more chanting and foot stamping brought Jones back once again, for what was arguably one might's greatest moment; a stellar electrified lap steel version of the age old Led Zeppelin classic "Black Dog." The ballroom erupted as Jones played the song's opening vocal melody on the lap steel guitar, ending the show with the same amount of musical energy he began with.

chili's GRILL & BAR

All You-Can-Eat Fajitas
Every Tuesday!

Just $8.99*

The best fajitas anywhere and plenty of them. Flame grilled steak or chicken with peppers and onions served with warm tortillas, guacamole, pico de gallo, cheddar cheese & sour cream.
All-You-Can-Eat Shrimp Fajitas...Just $9.99

*Per person, dine in only at Hadley Chili's • 426 Russell Street (Rt. 9) • 413-253-4008

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Tuesday, October 19, 1999

The Crowes, Page and Perry; legends surprise

By Brooke Werley
Collegian Correspondent

Black Crowes and Jimmy Page
Worcester Centrum
October 16, 1999

Rich Robinson stood right next to guitar god Jimmy Page Saturday night with Marc Ford on the other side of the stage as the Black Crowes select time with Page hit Worcester, MA. The only thing that could have made for a greater guitar showing was if Randy Rhodes decided to come back from the dead to play the Worcester Centrum, or maybe if Joe Perry came on stage for the encore — which just happened to occur. Yes, about halfway through the show, Aerosmith's Joe Perry brought his six-string out on stage to make it a total of four guitars, as if Jimmy Page plus two just wasn't cutting it. This stopped off what was a guitar-centered concert from the first note.

I had to agree with the drunk fan behind me in a faded tie-dyed Zeppelin t-shirt who slurred comments about how Jimmy Page was beginning to show some signs of aging, but I'll only go so far as to say that those signs are purely visual. When Jimmy Page was under that spotlight, the guitar notes were merciless, and when he broke out that slide, he spared no prisoners.

Predictably, the show was heavily weighted on the Zeppelin side. Black Crowes fans left wanting a lot more Crowes songs. They played "Hard to Handle" and "Mellow Down Easy", but only two or three others off of their own albums, including "Shake Your Money Maker" which wasn't written by the Black Crowes. The lack of Crowes songs wasn't all bad: it gave a lot of space for the massive amounts of Zeppelin that supplemented the rest of the concert. They played a lot of early Led Zeppelin music – the songs off of I and II seemed to excite the crowd most. Both "You Shook Me" and "Your Time is Gonna Come" off of Zeppelin I set the crowd afire, along with "Whole Lotta Love" and "Heartbreaker" off of II which all sounded incredibly Zeppelin-authentic. Which leads me to the man I've been neglecting for half of this article.

Chris Robinson did such an unbelievable job with Robert Plant's vocals that there were times that you could close your eyes and become instantly transported back to a 70's Led Zeppelin concert. Chris Robinson has such a presence of his own, that he doesn't need anyone's shadow to stand in, shoes to fill or Plant's vocals to resemble, but when you can play with Jimmy Page and do justice to Robert Plant — you have got some incredible vocal skills. Even the flamboyant, attention-demanding aura of Chris Robinson was sacrificed to the guitar gods Saturday night.

Eddie Harsch (keyboard) and Steve Gorman (drums) were only extended one solo each; it's not likely that many people even noticed the bassist was even on stage most of the night — Johnny Colt kept to himself over on stage right working on John Paul Jones' skill. Though I doubt there were any complaints from anyone on that stage or from the audience. When Jimmy Page took to his six-string every head on that stage shook in amazement. To the Crowes and Jimmy, I'm sure I speak for the audience —yeah, you shook me.

BROOKE WERLEY/ COLLEGIAN

The Black Crowes and Jimmy Page take turns tearing up the Centrum.

COURTESY/ UMASS FINE ARTS CENTER

Ivo Voronezh brings the music of Russia to Bowker Auditorium this Wednesday at 7:30.

Russia comes to UMass as Trio plays Bowker

By Kristi Ceccarossi
Collegian Staff

The folk music of Russia is coming to UMass Wednesday evening. Real live Russians, artistically known as Trio Voronezh, will play Bowker Auditorium at 7:30. The ensemble plays traditional Russian instruments with a repertoire that ranges from classical Vivaldi, Tchaikovsky and Schubert to gypsy dances and popular songs.

Although classically trained at the Conservatory Voronezh, the trio started their career by playing in the streets, subways, and small clubs in a variety of European cities. It wasn't until the internationally renowned conductor Helmuth Rilling spotted the musicians playing for Frankfurt's public transporters that they achieved recognition. After Rilling's discovery they became the sleeper hit of the summer, selling out three concerts! Their careers have been overrun with fame since then, as they have made a series of appearances in Europe, filmed a music video in the U.S. and shook the Oregon Bach Festival.

Working the domra in a way you've never imagined, Vladimir Volochin makes up 1/3 of this musical sensation. Playing since the tender age of six, one of his most celebrated awards is the National Championship in the "All Russian Domra Competition." Sergei Teleshev brings his bajan skills to the trio. He has not only mastered the bajan, but has also impressed audiences with his piano skills. Valeri Petruchin, like the other two, is a multi-faceted artist. He's played piano, accordian, trombone, and the double-bass balalaika.

Take advantage of the opportunity to catch these refined musicians and a piece of cultural enlightenment before the Trio Voronezh become complete sell-outs like so many of the idealistic up and coming folk threesomes do. Tickets for this performance are still available by calling the Fine Arts Center box office at 545-2511.

The Fantasia Continues...

Internet Site of the Week:
http://disney.go.com/disneypictures/fantasia2000/

Adam Martignetti

As of late, Disney seems to be an evil word. Not only is their stock price wallowing at all-time lows, but the company has also been attacked for everything from corrupting classic tales, to hiding pornography in their animation, to having a secret hidden agenda with their film. Still, there's something pure about Fantasia. Just fanciful characters set to beautiful music in the age of absolute innocence.

Well, get ready for the magic all over again. On January 1st, Fantasia 2000 hits Imax in a big way. Fantasia 2000 is the first ever full-length feature produced exclusively for an Imax format, which is ten times the size of a conventional 35 mm frame. The film will run a special and exclusive four-month time at selected Imax theaters around the country to give audiences the best experience of the film possible.

This site details Disney's plans to launch the movie, including special inside features, a couple of different trailers, which are nothing short of spectacular, and information for buying tickets in advance. And this might not be a bad idea because come January, this is going to sell out every show for a long, long time.

Here's my personal favorite take on e-commerce thus far. V-store.com let's anyone create their own on-line store by simply opening a free account. Anyone who opens an account will receive 25 percent in commissions for everything sold at their store. V-store.com is set to open its, or your, doors today. So check it out.

Union members should check out workingfamilies.com. This is the new website from the AFL-CIO, intended to connect its 13 million members on-line. The site will also act as an ISP, providing Net access for no more about $14.95 a month.

WCBS in New York, a CBS affiliate, has become one of the first T.V. stations in the country to offer video-on-demand. The station is now offering searchable video news on the Internet. Using technology provided by MediaSite Inc., WCBS-TV Web users can search a database of past newscasts and watch video clips of news stories.

Washingtonpost.com is set to go bananas. Traditional media giant, The Washington Post, is planning to spend upwards of $6 million to promote their new website.

Also, the 110-year-old Los Angeles-based Northern Trust Bank recently announced the launch of their Private Passport banking site. northerntrust.com/privatepassport will serve high net worth clients. Normal banking transactions will be posted several times daily for all those millionaires who need up to the second coverage of their accounts.

Net music fans should be happy as they will no longer need to download any software to use Spinner.com. The company, which was recently purchased by AOL, offers more than 130 channels of genre-based music on their website. The new software, which will be built into the 5.0 version of AOL, adds numerous personalization features including capabilities to identify favorite channels and songs.

In a slightly more innovative Internet music move, SonicBox has chosen Netradio.com as a content provider. SonicBox essentially lets users listen to Internet delivered radio within 100 feet of a PC. The device will be available for less than $50 sometime early next year.

Is imitation the best way to learn? It's a good question and one to which bsmg.com answers yes. The site is essentially an all-in-one on-line music lesson. The new company and its Web will offer everyone the chance to learn from greats like B.B. King and Keith Richards. Users will download an audio/video player and lessons that let them synchronize a music track, an instructional file showing sheet music and a video of the artist playing. The company has relationships with musicians or estates like Jimi Hendrix, Alanis Morissette and the Wallflowers. These artists' original hit recordings are all included in the "how to" lessons.

People go to Universal Studios to have fun, to escape reality and maybe even to just relax. Well, starting soon, there will be a new attraction for visitors to enjoy. AOL kiosks. That's right, AOL will put various kiosks around the theme park so people can check their e-mail and get access to the Internet away from home. Yes, now when I'm on vacation, I can read lame e-mail jokes like "How men really think."

Don Peppers and Martha Rogers, the gurus of One to One personalized marketing recently announced that Amazon.com, American Airlines and Biztravel.com are the top three companies at using the Internet for customer service. The stud of 150 different Web companies also put Charles Schwab and E-Trade tops for using the Internet most effectively by providing financial information and customizable tools to manage personal portfolios.

If you've been to Amazon.com lately, then you know about "Wish List." This is the site's desperate attempt to capitalize on the rise in e-commerce during the holiday season. Basically, shoppers who can't afford an item at the time, or people "just browsing", can put items on their "wish list" for later purchase.

Adam Martignetti is a Collegian Staff Member

Pursuing Mozart's nemesis: New staging of Amadeus

By Marjorie Miller
Los Angeles Times

LONDON — One of the many ways David Suchet prepares for a theatrical role is by making private lists of the attributes he shares with his character and those he doesn't. Seeing him without the weight and waxed mustache of Agatha Christie's Hercule Poirot, then, it's fun to imagine what he might have in common with the brainy, pompous, irritating and charming Belgian detective with whom he has become so identified. It is somewhat more daunting, however, to consider what the 53-year-old Suchet might see of himself in the character of Antonio Salieri, Mozart's nemesis in Peter Shaffer's "Amadeus," now playing in Los Angeles before heading for Broadway.

The play had been in rehearsals at the Chelsea Center Theater here after a run at the Old Vic.

Salieri, as many film and theater fans will recall, is the Hapsburg court musician who agonizes over his own mediocrity in the face of Mozart's genius and feels betrayed by God, who gave such musical gift to a giggling, scatological upstart instead of to the devoted Salieri.

Exactly how he identifies with Salieri, the highly successful British character actor isn't saying. A private list is private, after all. But Suchet will say why he thinks the tortured man who tried to silence Mozart's music strikes a chord with so many people, himself included.

"Salieri represents all of us in his envy and jealousy, in his hopes and ambitions and his realization of the fact that there are going to be people better than him," he said. "It is something that every person past 35 is aware of."

"A lot of people start life with huge hopes. There is such a thing as the American Dream. We all have dreams and get caught out by our dreams."

Shaffer's Salieri, however, might be more actively vengeful than most people. The play is based on rumors that circulated after Mozart's death that Salieri had killed the younger composer. He didn't, but he worked hard to ensure that Mozart lacked gainful employment and that his brilliant operas were heard by as few people as possible. He tried to kill Mozart's music.

But Suchet insists that Salieri is no two-dimensional villain.

"He is a very complex man. He has evil intent," he said. "But the play starts with Salieri as an old man who desperately wants to confess. One only wants to confess if one feels shame. Throughout the play, when he is narrating, he is not just saying, 'Look how clever I am. I destroyed Mozart.' He is well aware of the shame.

"He never asks for forgiveness. He asks for understanding. If you understand him, you won't sympathize with him, but you have a deeper appreciation of why he did what he did."

In his efforts to understand Salieri, Suchet visited the composer's birthplace in the Italian village of Legnano. He made his way from there to "the huge, baroque city of Vienna," as Salieri might have seen it.

"He arrived with a chip on his shoulder. He was an outsider, proving himself, trying to maintain respectability," Suchet said. "He tried to behave well, to please God and the emperor.

"He is essentially a weak man, not a natural courtier. He is a small-town man, sort of out of place in the city. His music was quite good, but it was court music that he wrote to order. He was a conservative, traditional musician, not a Mozart, who felt he had to write. Who needed to write."

Suchet seems to need to act. At least, he seems to have been born to the medium. His mother was an actress, his father was a successful gynecologist, and Suchet was expected to follow in his father's scientific footsteps until he proved hopeless at physics.

He made his stage debut at age 5 as an oyster in "Alice Through the Looking Glass," and at 25 became what might be the youngest Shylock in British stage history. The stocky, deep-voiced Suchet quickly made his mark as a character actor.

"My gift, if I have a gift, is to be different people, to understand people and to become them. I'm told there are not many of us around anymore," he said. "There have always been film stars who will put bums in the seats and make the film industry a success. I

Turn to MOZART, page 8

The "World Famous" Lipizzaner Stallions are trotting to the Mullins Center this Friday at 7:30. Twenty-three million people all over the world have seen and grown to love this equine wonders. Their most recent program includes new music and new choreography and lots of memories for the entire family!

Legends Never Die: Jones Plays Pearl Street

By Stefan Von Imhof
Collegian Correspondent

John Paul Jones
Pearl Street Ballroom
October 12, 1999

It's been almost 20 years since Led Zeppelin, one of the most influential rock bands of the century, finally called it quits following the death of drummer John Bonham. Since then, bassist John Paul Jones has continued his musical career in many ways, including producing and recording, but up until this past Tuesday, touring wasn't on his list.

In support of his first solo album, Zooma, Jones kicked off his three week U.S. tour at the Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton, with his bandmates Nick Beggs and Ted Bryant, on guitar and drums, respectively. Moments before the show began, there was a sense of tension in the air as many people in the crowd weren't sure exactly what to expect from the star bassist/keyboard player. But before long, Jones came out and opened the set with three amazing new tracks from Zooma, that left the fans in the Pearl Street Ballroom in awe as well as answered any questions they may have had concerning Led Zeppelin material.

The fourth number, entitled "Smile of Your Shadow," saw Jones perform on a lap steel guitar combined with mild distortion, to produce a tight, bluesy, almost shrilling sound. The crowd watched tentatively as Jones worked away, while his bandmates kept the groove going strong.

Following "Smile of Your Shadow," Jones performed the first Zeppelin tune of the night, "No Quarter," in which he played both the guitar and vocal lines on his keyboard, while the crowd chanted along.

After a brief intermission Jones returned to the set to play four more tracks from Zooma, including "Bee Hinges," another song in which Jones exercised the lap steel guitar, as well as an absolutely remarkable five-minute bass solo not found on his new album, entitled "Crackback."

Jones ended his set with the long-time favorite Zeppelin song, "When the Levee Breaks." This concluded what was an overall outstanding performance by the man, to say the least... but it was not enough. The fans wanted more. Roaring chants of "John Paul-Jones..." brought the band back to the stage for an encore where they played the driving, beat oriented Zeppelin song "Trampled Under Foot."

A thunderous applause followed by more chanting and feet stamping, brought Jones back once again for what was arguably the night's greatest moment, a stellar electrified lap steel version of the age old Led Zeppelin classic, "Black Dog." The ballroom erupted as Jones played the song's opening vocal melody on the lap-steel guitar, ending the show with the same amount of musical energy he began with.

THE MP3.COM MUSIC AND TECHNOLOGY TOUR

Free Music and Giveaways!
Come Down and Check Out
The MP3.COM Village!
Admission is
FREE!!!

Eight Hours of Great Music!
Win a Trip to Jamaica!
Win an MP3 Player!
Enter to Win A PSX Bag!

The MP3.COM Village is a day-long event which features performances by the hottest MP3.COM artists including:

Lyricist Lounge, Fern, Thrillcraft, Fono, Moke & Gonaside II

Near Mullins Center Arena
Oct. 20th 1-8pm

Warehouse Selectors Needed!

If you need a job that fits into your busy school schedule, then look into the outstanding opportunities available at C&S, the nation's fastest growing wholesale food distributor. We have immediate openings for enthusiastic, team-oriented students to play an integral role in our expansion.

JOIN US NOW AND RECEIVE A $500 SIGN-ON BONUS

BRING YOUR FRIENDS!
- Flexible Schedules
- Great Pay
- FREE Transportation on weekends from Mullins Center on Campus

We'll train you, give you $12.50 per hour working part-time, extend your hours to full time during breaks, and offer you a dynamic work environment. For more information about these exciting Part Time opportunities visit us at our Job Fair, call 1-800-621-5953, or apply in person Monday-Friday, 8am-4pm (Tuesday & Wednesday till 7pm), or Saturdays from 9am-1pm, at: Employment Center, C&S Wholesale Grocers, Inc., 142 Elm Street, just off Route 91, Exit 21, Hatfield, MA

VISIT US ON-CAMPUS
Thursday, October 21st
From 9:30am - 4pm
in the Student Campus Center

C&S WHOLESALE GROCERS, INC.

C&S is an Equal Opportunity Employer and does not discriminate on the basis of age, gender, any other protected category in accordance with applicable law.

Looking for the perfect PART-TIME job?

At Western States Chiropractic College, we take an integrated approach to chiropractic. We teach traditional application and practice, as well as prepare our students to work as equals with medical doctors, and to deal successfully with HMOs. It's the shape of health care to come, and if you have the ambition and passion to be a part of it, call today for our informational brochure or visit our website. The future is in your hands.

WE'LL PUT THE FUTURE OF HEALTH CARE IN YOUR HANDS.

WESTERN STATES CHIROPRACTIC COLLEGE
800 641 5641
PORTLAND, OREGON
WWW.WSCHIRO.EDU

chili's GRILL & BAR
All You-Can-Eat Fajitas
Every Tuesday!
Just $8.99*
The best fajitas anywhere and plenty of them. Flame grilled steak or chicken with peppers and onions served with warm tortillas, guacamole, pico de gallo, cheddar cheese & sour cream.
All-You-Can-Eat Shrimp Fajitas Just 1999
*Per person, dine in only at Hadley Chili's • 426 Russell Street (Rt. 9) • 413-253-4008

Raves Embody Generation X?

By Geoff Boucher
Los Angeles Times

ADELANTO, Calif. — On most nights, the darkness and dust that cloak Highway 395 in this tiny high-desert town are pierced only by the headlights of passing big rigs and the glowing red-and-white sign of the new Dairy Queen. So it was easy to imagine locals rushing to their porches on a recent Saturday night when green laser beams strafed the sky and a throbbing pulse began echoing above the desert winds.

The origin of the eerie commotion could be found at the pitcher's mound of the city's baseball field, where a nest of special-effects machines and speakers had, for one night, replaced the national pastime. Now the ballpark belonged to one of thosemysterious, fleeting festivals of youth known as a rave party, a singular marathon of electronic music and sensory overload that thrills its followers and terrifies parents and authorities.

This rave would follow the form of most: a mass of young people, many brimming with the giddy high of drugs such as Ecstasy, dancing madly until dawn to dense bass and beats at a remote site. The average age? About 17. This one drew about 6,000 ravers, but recently other have pulled in triple that number. The scene's music, graphic designs and fashions are percolating into mainstream culture, but for the most part the rave phenomenon remains well below the radar of the general populace. Until there's a casualty.

"Yeah, as soon as I heard about those kids driving off the mountain I knew people would be giving us grief again," said a 17-year-old raver from Riverside who identified himself only as "Racer X." He was referring to the five young people who died in August when their car plunged off a highway in the San Gabriel Mountains east of Los Angeles. The group had been on the way home from a rave at a ski resort, and their autopsies turned up traces of Ecstasy and speed.

"People hear that," Racer X continued, "and they think raves are all about drugs. It's really about the music, about the love and dancing."

Like many others at the ballpark, he was chomping on a plastic baby pacifier, a "de rigueur" totem among the ravers that eases the teeth-grinding side effects of Ecstasy. He also had a surgeon's mask slathered with Vick's VapoRub, which some say enhances the drug's high. He smiled when asked if he was "dosing." "Hell yeah, man, everybody is."

To the scene's faithful, it is a celebration of cyber-hippie ideals and a forum for a genre of music that may be the most exciting and least commercial outpost on the pop music landscape.

To the scene's foes, however, it is nothing more than an elaborate ritual for young people to explore drugs and debauchery. And, perhaps worse, it often takes them to distant, dangerous locales and leaves them bleary and spent when it's time to drive home at dawn's light.

"Without Ecstasy, most of these events would not exist, no doubt about it," says consultant Trinka Porrata, a former Los Angeles Police Department narcotics investigator whose rave expertise is now focused on helping federal lawmakers to curb the scene's drugs. "I'd estimate that 80 percent of most rave crowds are using Ecstasy or another drug. They're not driving hundreds of miles for the music."

The all-night dances are mounting a comeback, and have grown so popular that they have evolved from ragged, outlaw events into quasi-concerts, with permits, big budgets, vendors and security teams. Rave fashions and music are also becoming staples in American malls, films and television commercials as touchstones of the new youth.

Several cities in Florida have outlawed raves, and this month state officials there announced they would crack down further after a Miami rave was connected to one death, 10 hospitalizations and 30 arrests, all drug-related. Arrests and deaths have been tied to rave gatherings in more than a dozen Southern California communities, and with each incident it seems someone suggests stamping out the parties.

"We've been getting calls from other communities asking what's going on down here, why we're letting this thing go on," said Adelanto City Councilman Richard Althouse. The wide-eyed city elder was watching early arrivals for the rave in his city's California League baseball stadium. "I'm not sure what to expect. We're doing this because our city budget is in a negative deficit. We need money, honestly. But I came down to see what it is."

What to expect is the syncopated sensuality and abandon of disco; the formalized drug culture of psychedelic rock and the bonhomie of the Grateful Dead society; the chaotic populism and anti-establishment stance of punk; and the turntable science and audience response of hip-hop.

But walk through the chugging sound and dazzling glare of a rave and you will also find some unique hallmarks, most dramatic among them the hypnotizing, high-tech sound that fans say resonates with their Information Age sensibilities. The special effects of lasers, glowing orbs and latticework towers at the desert raves makes the sites seem like alien way stations, but the ravers say they find a warm humanity within the cold, machine-like sounds and cosmic imagery.

"It's not passive, they're not bowing down to some rock star, because they see that as false, fake, and the kids now don't want that," says Mark Lacey, president and CEO of Raveworld, a Lake Forest-based company whose eponymous Web site has become a hub for the global rave community. "They're turned off of rock. After grunge what's left to do in rock? This music sounds like the future to them, and when they're at a rave they can touch the future. And at a rave the future is utopian."

In the search for the heart and history of rave culture, X marks the spot. It was in England at the tail end of the 1980s that two American imports — the designer drug Ecstasy (a.k.a. X or E) and the electronic music sired in Detroit and Chicago — were combined to create a sensation. The music had a mechanized, relentless beat and shimmering sound-scapes that, to someone high on Ecstasy, creates a magical sensory experience.

Ecstasy's proper name is MDMA (methylene dioxymethamphetamine), and although it was patented in Germany more than 80 years ago, it more or less disappeared until U.S. researchers revived it for experimentation in the 1960s. The drug creates some hallucinatory effects similar to LSD and jacks up the nervous system like speed, but toxicologists say it also creates a sense of well-being, euphoria and empathy that make it a pharmacological curiosity — and a touchstone for the rave culture's trademark communal vibe. A study published last year in the Journal of Toxicology catalogs a host of physical dangers as well: possible neural damage, fainting, hyperthermia, nausea and hypertension among them.

But Simon Reynolds, author of "Generation Ecstasy," says his research has shown that the psychological dangers might be more profound — the vivid world Ecstasy creates in a rave might leave young users with psychological effects as their daily life becomes a dreary, gray desolation. The party is fleeting as well. The euphoric power of the drug diminishes as it builds up in the system of a regular user, so while the speedlike effects remain, the sparkling perception enhancement fades.

Perhaps this "honeymoon high" of the drug explains why the rave remains a romance for the young but has little a hold on longtime participants. Many promoters note that ravers typically move on by their 20s, graduating from the overnight rave adventures to a less grueling club scene or a more workaday life. But even if the rave is solely a rite of passage, it has become a near-global one. Raves have wound their way to Rotterdam and Johannesburg, Bangladesh and Paris, and, of course, Los Angeles.

The rave scene began in L.A. in abandoned or rented warehouses downtown, but police eventually cracked down, citing the recipe for danger with fire code violations, vandalism and friction between the mostly suburban ravers and the inner-city youth who viewed the parties as an unwelcome invasion.

As the raves grew in size, promoters moved them to the deserts and mountains, where they could find viable sites with less danger of getting shut down. The budgets swelled as the audience expectations grew, with one recent rave costing $400,000 and drawing a crowd on 14,000.

At any given rave today, many in the crowd will be sober or using legal stimulants such as the trendy "smart" drinks, caffeine pills or ginseng. Alcohol is almost completely absent, in part, no doubt, because it mars the effects of Ecstasy.

At the Adelanto rave, marijuana smoke wafted among the laser lights and groups of ravers huddled among the bleachers snorting lines of methamphetamine. In the dirt parking lot, furtive teens sold blotter hits of LSD and Ecstasy tablets, while inside, some stumbling, wild-eyed revelers were quite clearly under the influence of some substance. Although the city's police force and the event's security guards kept a constant patrol — and searched every raver at the admission gate — these types of drugs are easily secreted or simply ingested outside.

To some people, the rave is perhaps the safest music event for young people. Lacey said that compared to the looting, arson and rape reports at Woodstock 99 and the violent imagery of many rap acts, the rave culture's neo-hippie motto of "PLUR" (Peace, Love, Understanding, Respect) should be enticing to worried parents.

Still, the totems and excesses of this newest tribal dance scene are disturbing for many people, and the age of its audience seemingly guarantees a certain degree of irresponsibility and occasional tragedy. The Adelanto rave ended with one overdose and no arrests (the site averages 11 arrests at rock concerts), but as stragglers left the parking lot about 6 a.m., sirens broke the misty morning air.

An 18-year-old driver had drifted across the double yellow lines of Highway 395 about five miles from the ballpark. Her Honda Accord rammed a San Bernardino sheriff's vehicle, and she and her 23-year-old male passenger were airlifted to hospitals. The sheriff's investigator suffered only minor injuries, and the ravers are recuperating from broken bones. They are also facing drug charges after California Highway Patrol officers discovered an unspecified stimulant in the crumpled car.

That Ol' Dirty Bastard is back

Old Dirty Bastard
NA PLEASE
Elektra

Auditory pornography. Although one of the more refreshing qualities of this mind-grinding album is its brash, nonsensical, adolescent humor, lyrically Dirt Dog approaches Na Please like a drunken masturbation fantasy. Although his clamorous, sexually degrading rant/rhymes elicit emptiness in the department of semiotics, they do manage to inadvertently carry the listener on a quasi-pleasurable regression of guilty boyhood nostalgia. It is the rap version of a Friday night Junior High larceny of forbidden alcohol and Spice channel thrills. From the dizzy perspective of a sloppy alcoholic, he gives us a foggy widow to his perverse, liquor-sloshed thoughts. Yet it is almost admirable that we get to hear his honest, freestyle fumblings and innermost passions. It is as if O.D.B. has grown, through all his legal problems, bullet wounds and paternity suits, in the absence of maturity. And judging from his absent-minded, semi-poetic dialect, he is content with himself and his continuous turmoil.

However, as an emcee manifesting a legitimate hip-hop rendering, Old Dirty and his sophomore album fall flat on its face. The culmination of excessively profane immaturity and musically hollow production eventually overwhelms the grimy yet jovial concept. Chris Rock, whose tiresome comedy immediately disinisses the possibility of a jump-start, handles the introduction. "I Can't Wait" is an interesting parody of Miami's bass-bounce style but never quite gets going. The next track is hilarious rendition of the old Rick James pimp-thoughts. Yet it is almost admirable that we get to hear his honest, freestyle fumblings and innermost passions. It is as if O.D.B. has grown, through all his legal problems, bullet wounds and paternity suits, in the absence of maturity. And judging from his absent-minded, semi-poetic dialect, he is content with himself and his continuous turmoil.

David Katzoff

However, as an emcee manifesting a legitimate hip-hop rendering, Old Dirty and his sophomore album fall flat on its face. The culmination of excessively profane immaturity and musically hollow production eventually overwhelms the grimy yet jovial concept. Chris Rock, whose tiresome comedy immediatedly

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free CD of Cool Indie Music when you register at MyBytes.com, the ultimate wesite for your college needs

AUTO FOR SALE

87 Honda Accord Sedan white 125,468 miles $1,200 or BO 546-4513

1992 Jetta GL CD, A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500 546-1773

1992 Mercury Sable Wagon 120K miles. Good condition. Plus 4 snow tires. Call 256-0067

92 Saab 900S Good Condition lots of extras $3500.00 413-545-0136 or 413-967-7145

87 VW JETTA-GLI $1,000 5Spd. Runs strong, good tires, recent clutch, exhaust. 256-6235

EMPLOYMENT

The Student Government Association is now hiring staff for the RSO Resource Center. We are accepting application for the positions of Receptionist, Computer Technician, and RSO Resource Center Manager. Pick up applications in the SGA office, 420 Student Union and please return them to Sandra Brookley by October 20th. If you have any questions, please call Sandra at 545-0343

EMPLOYMENT

Part-time phone reps needed for wicked cool candy company located in Amherst. We have two-hour shifts available between 10AM and 5PM. Monday-Friday. You must work a minimum of three shifts per week. Base pay, plus commission on all new sales. Average pay $10-$12/hour with commission included. Must be outgoing with some sales/customer service experience, however, personality is most important. Please contact Beth McCabe for more information: 888-556-5599

Spring 2000 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary—training provided. Contact the Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center

Coaching Positions Girls JV Basketball and Diving. Contact Rick Frances Williston-Northampton School-Easthampton (413) 529-3253

Bakers Wanted Part-Time or Full-Time. Early morning hours. Apply at Rao's Coffee in person.

EMPLOYMENT

Teachers Aides

Wanted for small innovative learning programs in Amherst. Tutor and supervise small groups of students in elementary, middle, or high school classrooms. Training provided. Great opportunity to prepare for a career in education for for interested individuals. Mass. Dept of Ed Approved Site Based Certification Program H.S. or equivalency required. college training recommended. Full employment benefits available

Submit a resume and cover letter to Jone Messmer #116 30 Industrial Drive East Northampton MA 01060

AA EOE ADA

Experienced House Cleaner for family home in Leverett $8hr. Susan 548-9870

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phsically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

Baker/Cook/Customer Service Prepare foods,batters, doughs, recipes. In Village Market. FT/PT PM/Weekends 1 mile from campus. Cushman Village 413-549-1953

DP Dough is hiring drivers and kitchen help. Must be able to work nights. Approximately $20/hour. Apply at DP Dough.

EMPLOYMENT

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals - Free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Queen Size Bed with beautiful headset and pillows $200.00 Got to move. Call Antonio at 549-0661

Skiing and Snowboarding season passes only $300! Stratton and Okemo Call Michael 549-6494

Couches, Beds, Desks, chairs, tables, bureaus, shelves, etc. Free delivery 253-7554

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons by retired pro Djata Bumpus in Amherst on UMass Bus Rte. Call 256-0364

INSTRUCTION

Casco Bay Bartending Classes start soon student discounts call for information 1-800-467-2028 Space is Limited

LOST & FOUND

GM Key Found in SW Purple Lot 253-1691

LOST CAT: Near Leach, Orange Tabby Please Call 665-9950 Leave Message REWARD

SERVICES

Know Your Rights! Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

TRAVEL

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

Browse icpt.com for ALL Springbreak "2000" hotspots. Need Student Orgs & Sales Reps. Fabulous parties, hotels, prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

YOUR AD COULD BE RIGHT HERE!!

ALL YOU HAVE TO DO IS CALL TODAY!! 545-3500

WAIT!!

WHERE ARE YOU GOING?

HEAD DOWN TO THE DAILY COLLEGIAN IN THE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT AND PLACE YOUR ADS RIGHT NOW!!

TIME IS PRECIOUS! DON'T WASTE IT!

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, OCT. 19

Lecture – A lecture entitled "Imagined Latino Communities: The Challenge of the Coming Century" will be held at 4 p.m. in the New York Room of Mars Woolley Hall at Mount Holyoke College.

THURSDAY, OCT 21

Panel – Environmental Justice panelists will explore questions concerning environmental inequities, how much risk is acceptable and who should make that decision, and how we can distribute the burdens of environmental hazards more evenly across economic groups and nations at 7:30 p.m. in Gamble Auditorium at Mount Holyoke College.

Art – The Wheeler Gallery will present "Cellblock Visions: Cell Division- Prison Art in America," on display until Nov. 7. The Gallery is located in Central Residential Area.

Art – The Student Union Visual and Performing Art Space will be showing an exhibit of undergraduate artwork, focusing on the self-portrait, until Oct. 29. Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday, 9:30 a.m.-5 p.m.

NOTICES

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is now open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops call 545-2046, or stop by the Craft Center.

Support – The Counseling Services Program at the Everywoman's Center is offering a free support group for women living with bipolar disorder on Wednesdays from 3:15-4:45 p.m. There will be four consecutive sessions held in Wilder Hall at the Everywoman's Center. Call 545-0863 for more information or to register.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

UStore CAMPUS CENTER Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 19, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	Voyage to the Milky Way		Nova "The Killer's Trail"		Frontline "The Lost Children" (In Stereo)			Sports Heroes
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	JAG "Front and Center"		60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Judging Amy "Witch Hunt"	News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Front and Center"		60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Judging Amy "Witch Hunt"	News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Spin City	It's Like, You	Sharma-Greg	Sports Night	Once and Again (In Stereo)	News	Nightline
WLVI	6		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Angel "In the Dark" (In Stereo)		News	Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Major League Baseball Playoffs: NLCS Game 6 – Diamondbacks or Mets vs. Braves or Astros				News		Tonight Show
WTXX		8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Real TV (R)	Shasta Mc.	Grown Ups	The Strip "Send Me an Angel"		News	Caroline	Change-Heart
WWJ		10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Wheel-Fortune	Major League Baseball Playoffs: NLCS Game 6 – Diamondbacks or Mets vs. Braves or Astros				News		Tonight Show
WTIC	8	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Ally (In Stereo)	70s Show	Party of Five "Bye, Bye Love"		News	Friends	Frasier
WWLP	9	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Major League Baseball Playoffs: NLCS Game 6 – Diamondbacks or Mets vs. Braves or Astros				News		Tonight Show
WGBY	10	4	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	Voyage to the Milky Way		Nova "The Killer's Trail"			Frontline "The Lost Children" (In Stereo)		Charlie Rose
WGGB	40	29	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Spin City	It's Like, You	Sharma-Greg	Sports Night	Once and Again (In Stereo)	News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Shasta Mc.	Grown Ups	The Strip "Send Me an Angel"		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)	Blind Date	Ricki Lake
WTBS	20		Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	"Mortal Kombat" (1995, Adventure) Robin Shou, Linden Ashby				"The Punisher" (1990) Dolph Lundgren
A&E	41		Simon & Simon	Law & Order			Biography "Fred Gwynne"		Investigative Reports (R)		City Confidential	Law & Order	"Prisoner of Love"
CNN	42	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand	Sports	Moneyline
COM	43	28	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	"Blazing Saddles" (1974, Comedy) Gene Wilder, Cleavon Little, Harvey Korman, Slim Pickens, Madeline Kahn, Mel Brooks				Lounge Lizards	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	44		Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Tiger		On the Inside "Killer Floods"		New Detectives		FBI Files "Cracking the Cartel"	On the Inside	"Killer Floods" (R)
ESPN	45		Sportscenter		Outside the Lines (R)		Cheerleaders Wonderful World of Golf				Billiards	Sportscenter
LIFE	46		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		"The Other Mother: A Woman of Two Minds" (1995, Drama)			New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	47		Global Groove	MTV Jams	Beat Suite	TRL Wanna	TRL (R) (In Stereo)		Say What Kris	Real World	Making-Video	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	48		All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Skeeter	Brady Bunch	I Love Lucy	Jeffersons	Sanford & Son	All in Family	Meude
SCIFI	51		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Sentinel "Vow of Silence"		Sentinel "Reunion" (In Stereo)		Sentinel "Flight" (In Stereo)		Sentinel "Deep Water"	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales
TLC	49	26	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "In the Danger Zone"		Trauma: Life in the ER		Greatest Supermodels		What Do Women Really Want?	Trauma: Life in the ER
TNT	54		Due South "Chicago Holiday"		ER "Another Perfect Day"		"Top Gun" (1986, Drama) Tom Cruise, Kelly McGillis,				"Aces: Iron Eagle III" (1992) Louis Gossett Jr.
USA	52		Baywatch "Surf's Up"		JAG (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger		"Boomerang" (1992, Comedy) Eddie Murphy, Halle Berry. (In Stereo)				Baywatch
HBO	59		"In the Heat" (1991, Drama) Anne Bancroft, (In Stereo)		Dinosaur Discovery (Live)		Chazz Palminteri,		"Event Horizon" (1997) Laurence Fishburne,			Reverb
MAX	60		"Scream Bloody Murder" (1997) Alicia Silverstone,				"Pet Sematary" (1989) Dale Midkiff,		"Phoenix" (1998, Drama) Ray Liotta, (In Stereo)				"Midnight"
SHOW	61		(5:30)		"Beloved" (1998),		"Mad Love" (1995, Drama) Chris O'Donnell,				"The Last Days of Disco" (1998, Drama) Chloe Sevigny,		"Lawn Dogs" (1997)

HSCN 4 — Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Ch.
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WCCH & HSCN
14 International
15 UMass Academic TV
16 WB/New Haven
17 HSCN Programming
18 The Learning Channel
19 UVC-TV19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
21 Cornell to Cornell
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 Sundance
24 Bloomberg Financial
25 CTN
27 TBS
28 BET
29 TV Land
30 Univision
31 Comedy Central
32 Cartoon
33 Much Music

Quote of the Day

"My mother was a fifteen year old French prostitute named Chloe with webbed feet."

–Dr. Evil

Spunk By Michael LaRiccia

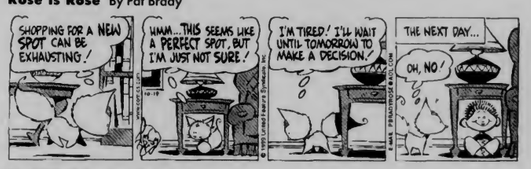
Joe Banani By JD S hneider

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere



Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Be discreet today, and don't give away your plans prematurely. The wrong remark to the wrong person might ruin things for you.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) - Don't be so quick to get annoyed with friends or family members today. Remember that we all have our idiosyncrasies, and we all must deal with them.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Don't let quick reactions to things give away what you're really thinking. Some things are best kept secret at this time.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Trial and error is the only way you'll know for sure just what works for you today, particularly when dress or appearance are concerned.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Unusual behavior today will be recognized as something quite different, and may actually lead to remarkable rewards. Experiment freely.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – What you are facing today is not a test. You must be willing to take even the most improbable developments quite seriously at this time.

Aries (March 21-April 19) – You've been bellowing someone else's suggestions for long enough. Today, it's time to get to that special list you've made up for yourself.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – Despite what you've been told, there is a far greater chance for you to prevail in a current struggle than usual. Luck and timing will be on your side.

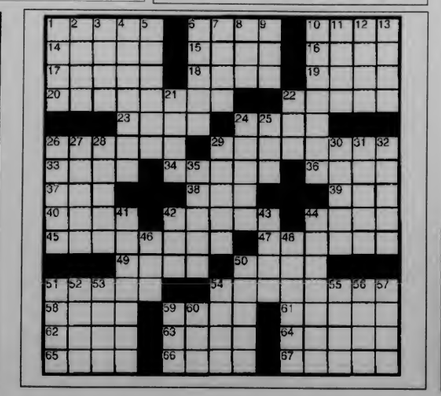
Gemini (May 21-June 20) – It's time for you to set aside any kind of bias or prejudice today and jump into a new situation with an open mind and a willingness to have fun.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – Take time out to relax and think back over the past few days or weeks. You can restore your energy simply by letting things happen without you.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – The consequences of your own actions will become all the more apparent to you today, and you may be compelled to break a few bad habits.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You can accomplish much today when you set your mind to it, and when you actually accept your own limitations. You mustn't procrastinate!

Leold www.leold.com
by Roger and Salem Salloom© 1997

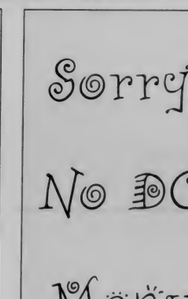


Last night I had a dream that there was a parade downtown last Saturday.

I liked the bands and the old soldiers, but my favorite was the people marching under the banner.....
"Society for those living in Shame, and Near Poverty."

I was marching with them.

Their meetings must be interesting..... a little quiet maybe.



ACROSS

1 Requested
6 Ore deposit
10 Nautical maneuver
14 Hogs
15 October's stone
16 Estrada of TV
17 Swiftness
18 Act like a lart
19 Responded to the alarm
20 Coordinated outfit
22 Water and Hackman
23 Court (on)
24 Lannein source
28 Withdraw formally
29 Like a virgin
33 Trudge
34 Grammarian's concern
36 Ivy League school
37 Turkish title
38 Mimic
39 Hwy.
40 Haworth or Coolidge
42 Aromas
44 It could make you sick
45 Sweaters and scarves
47 Black-and-white animals
49 Sour
50 Kind of bean
51 Hardest roughly
54 Amusement-park transport
58 Thing
59 Grouch
61 Get away from
62 Chris
63 Thyme, e.g.
64 Mr. Abzug
65 Fast mn.
66 Black

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

© 1999 United Feature Syndicate

6/ Did some math

DOWN

1 Arthur of the courts
2 Ugly Duckling really
3 Burst
4 Went inside
5 Considered
6 Humble
7 Sheen, Andy's son
8 Newsman Rather
9 Antlered animal
10 Tiffany's wares
11 Rust component
12 Cycle
13 — out: makes do
21 French color
22 Guns
24 Bet
25 Cheer for a toreador
28 Flash of light
27 Basketball star Baylor
28 Raccoon's cousin
29 Gas
30 Plowed
31 Very wary
32 Appears to be
35 Sneer
36 Egyptian leader
41 Try
42 Above, poet
43 Washer cycle
44 Knotty
46 Roll of bills
48 Microscopic animal
50 Hotel aides
51 Fruit seeds
52 To — precisely
53 Shed tears
54 Twain
55 Dec. 31 word
56 Not in use
57 Do first
59 Greek letter
60 Skimpy's pal

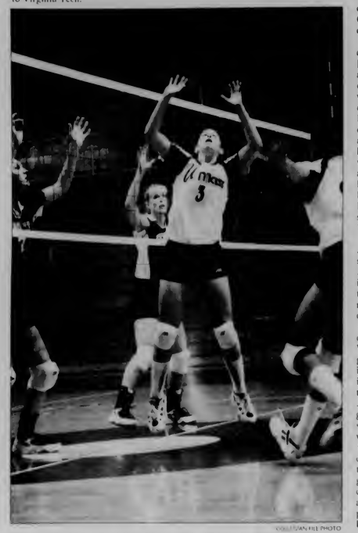
Sorry, No DC Menu for today!

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Seth Koenig
Photo Technician — Dan Santella
Copy Editor — Sam Wilkinson
Production Supervisor — Jeanette Santoro
Production Staff — Janine Tangney, Vlad Zakashenko

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.



The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Tuesday, October 19, 1999

Minutewomen take on Hokies and come up short

By Seth Szilagyi
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts volleyball team traveled south this weekend, as they conquered the Colonials, but couldn't figure out what "Hokie" meant, taking a loss to Virginia Tech.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Heather Holtsberg and the Massachusetts volleyball team split its two matches over the weekend.

The first match of the weekend was a tough test for the Minutewomen, as it took them five games to put George Washington away, 15-9,1-15,15-11,9-15,19-17. With the win, UM improves to 11-7 overall and 5-5 in the Atlantic 10 Conference, while GW fell to 9-7 overall and 4-4 in the A-10.

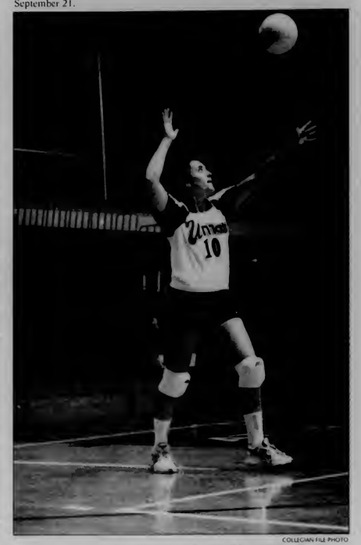
Four UMass players registered double-doubles in the 5-2 win. Senior Jill Meyers led the team with 17 kills and 24 digs. Junior Rebecca Hasson equaled Meyers team-high in kills with 17 of her own and added 10 digs. Senior co-captain Kari Hogancamp put forth another solid effort tallying 16 kills on 53 attacks and 25 digs, but also had the dubious honor of leading the team in errors with 10. Sophomore Janeen Demarte also had a strong contribution with 13 kills and 14 digs. Junior Jennifer Drennan and sophomore Heather Holtsberg continued to share time at setter, as they posted 16 assists and 39 assists respectively.

Overall the Colonials team hit .229, while the Minutewomen hit a similar .155, as they hit as low as -.063 in game two and as high as .381 in game four. Gabriela Mojska led her team with 20 kills and 14 digs on the night, while Tracee Brown was right on her heels with 16 kills and 10 digs.

In the second match of the weekend, the Minutewomen traveled to Virginia to take on the Hokies. Every game was hard fought for UMass, but in was eventually Virginia Tech coming out on top, 3-1. In the first game the women out-hit the Techies .294 to .170, winning it, 15-13. The second game saw the two teams flip-flop scores, as the Hokies posted a 15-13 win of their own. In the game, VT had 18 kills on 52 attacks with only 4 errors. The Minutewomen helped out the opposition with 9 errors in the game, coupled with a low hitting percentage of .155. Game three was another close call with the Hokies pulling it out 15-12, overpowering UMass with 23 kills on 56 attacks. In game four, UM tried to stave off the Tech attack, but couldn't find their flow, as the Hokies put the match away with a 15-10 win. Neither team hit especially well in the last game, which saw Virginia Tech hit an anemic .054, while the Minutewomen had a rough .075.

The loss takes UMass to a record of 11-8 overall and 5-4 in the conference, while the Hokies improved to 6-3 in the conference, but only 7-12 overall.

Meyers and Hogancamp again powered the Massachusetts offense. Meyers posted a team-high 19 kills along with 9 digs and Hogancamp had yet another double-double, tallying 14 kills and a team-high 20 digs. Hasson showed her defensive prowess, swatting a career-high 11 blocks with 9 kills and 15 digs. Sophomore Lymaric Llovet narrowly missed a double-double with 9 kills and 12 digs, while the setting duo of Drennan and Holtsberg had 26 assists and 22 assists.



With a win and a loss behind her, head coach Bonnie Kenny can look forward to November 23 when she will be inducted into the Connecticut volleyball Hall of Fame in New Haven.

Kenny was a member of the Francis T. Maloney high school volleyball team that went undefeated in her four-year tenure. In her years there, she was an All-State selection and received the honorable Giuffrida Award, which is given to the most outstanding female athlete in Connecticut.

After dominating the high school ranks, Kenny moved on to college where she attended the University of Tennessee. She lettered in each of her four years, while leading the team to two Southeastern Conference Championships, three NCAA tournaments and a four-year record of 157-56. 1985 saw Kenny reach national prominence earning All-America and All-SEC honors.

Kenny then continued her volleyball career in the coaching ranks, as she started at South Carolina University, where she became the school's all-time winningest coach with a 171-137 record in nine seasons.

In 1993, Kenny moved north to take over the helm at UMass. She holds a record of 133-86 in her seven years and in '96 was named the Atlantic 10 Coach of the Year. In her tenure, she has led the Minutewomen to four A-10 semifinals and recently earned her 300th career win against Fairfield on September 21.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Kari Hogancamp had a solid weekend for the UMass volleyball team.

Sloppy Sox put NY back in World Series

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

With the absence of a truly dangerous lineup, the Boston Red Sox relied on pitching and defense to get them through a sloppy-back season and into an American League Championship showdown with the defending World Champion Yankees.

And when both areas failed them in last night's Game five, it spelled the end of their glorious run at '98 postseason greatness. New York took advantage of two huge errors by the Sox to take the decisive game 6-1 and the series, four games to one.

What was supposed to be the series of the century had suddenly taken a nosedive into an ocean of frustrated fans, bad baseball and, even worse officiating after Sunday's Game four. The Fenway faithful, branded as villains for showering the woeful proceedings the night before with an abundance of mysteriously-empty beer cups and bottles, were left to pray for a Monday miracle that would keep the Sox alive in their door-die fight with New York.

The Yankees left the job of driving the final nails into Boston's coffin to their highly effective defector, Cuban right-hander Orlando Hernandez. The man dubbed "El Duque" by Big Apple scribes had chucked a gem in Game One of the series, permitting only a pair of earned runs over eight stanzas at Yankee Stadium and setting the stage for teammate Derme Williams's decisive round-tripper in the home half of the tenth.

The Red Sox countered with southpaw Kent Mercker, who had set to pitch into the fifth frame in his two post-season starts for the Sox.

It didn't take the people in pinstripes long to start roughing up the Boston lefty. Chuck Knoblauch opened the game with a single to right center, and had to stand on the bag for exactly four pitchers before Yankee shortstop Derek Jeter cranked a two-run bomb over the triangle in centerfield. Mercker would settle down and escape the frame without further abuse, and then Hernandez appeared just as hit-prone in the home half of the first. BoSox leadoff man Jose Offerman greeted El Duque with a base knock to right, and an ensuing single by John Valentin put runners on the corners with nobody out. It appeared as though another scoreless was indeed underway.

But Hernandez then displayed the composure that has made him manager Joe Torre's go-to guy this postseason, setting down the heart of Boston's order with a strikeout of Jason Varitek and pop-outs by Nomar Garciaparra and Troy O'Leary to finish the inning. Neither team could generate any offense in the second, despite walks to Mike Stanley and Trot Nixon by Hernandez. Mercker got into a groove once his all-speed stuff starting hitting the strike zone, as he rang up Yank DH Chili Davis with a steady diet of changeups to close out the third.

The southpaw's luck would run out in the fourth, however. After plunking Tino Martinez and subsequently picking the NY first baseman off, Mercker walked Jorge Posada and Scott Brosius on 3-2 counts before surrendering a sharp single by Knoblauch that juiced the bases. Sox skipper Jimy Williams had seen enough, and summoned Derek Lowe to quell the Yankee uprising. For the third time in as many starts, late-season acquisition Mercker proved to be a post-season bust.

Lowe would salvage the frame by enticing Jeter to tap into a fielder's choice via Valentin, and the 26 year-old right continued his already impressive playoff performance from there. Lowe combined his dirt-dart sinker with a nasty curve to baffle the Yanks over the next two-plus frames, striking out a trio of Bronx Bombers. The Red Sox offense, however, remained dismally inefficient against Hernandez. After a leter miscue put Garciaparra on to lead off the home half of the sixth, Boston's bats again went cold and failed to bring the shortstop home.

The wheels would come off defensively for the Sox in the seventh. The first of two big errors occurred when Garciaparra's high throw on a one-out leter grounder was too much for Stanley to handle, resulting in an E-3 that put the Yankee shortstop on second. After a single by Paul O'Neill and a base-on-balls to Bernie Williams loaded the bases, Jose Offerman booted a soft grounder off the bat of Davis for Boston's 10th error of the series. Martinez followed with a soft liner that dropped in front of Sox centerfielder Darren Lewis, and suddenly

Turn to SOX, page 9

UMass water polo drops two matches

By Matt Bencal
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's water polo team returned from the New England Invitational in the Bronx, NY with one win and two big losses. The weekend featured a Minuteman win over George Washington, but disappointing upsets from No. 15 Queens College and No. 13 St. Francis University.

"I coached as badly as I could have and the players played poorly," UMass coach Russ Yarworth said. "We were not mentally ready to play. The defense was confused and our intensity was weak."

UMass started the weekend off with a Saturday morning win over the George Washington Colonials, 12-7. The offense was paced by senior standout Pat Kain, who netted four goals during the victory.

Sophomores Greg Trayer (three goals) and Carlos Ramos (two goals) each played a big part in the match, combining for five tallies.The defense once again proved to be strong, led by All-American Richard Huntley, who denied 10 shots on net.

Unfortunately for UMass, the rest of the weekend would prove to be unsuccessful.

The matinee of the day featured the Minutemen losing a close battle against Queens, 9-7. Kain continued to lead the offense, as he has done so many times this season, with another three bombs to the back of the net. Evan Lutz, another up-and-coming sophomore, added two of his own in the loss.

Queens held their ground late in the game and won the close match by a mere two goals. The Maroon and White defense played tough and held Queens to only 13 shots on net.

UMass' play in the New England Invite concluded with a frustrating loss to the St. Francis Terriers, 13-11. Trayer fired three in the net and Kain added two more to his collection, as UM lost another squeaker by only two goals. Six other Minutemen connected with the back of the net, once again proving that anyone in the deep UM offense could score when needed to.

Huntley rejected 10 shots in the loss.

The Minutemen had lost a close one earlier in October to the Terriers by two goals and were unsuccessful in their pursuit of revenge. For the season, UM falls 1-3 against St. Francis.

When all was said and done and the Invite was over, Kain finished the weekend with nine scores and Huntley added 24 more stops to his All-American resume.

Yarworth contributed the poor performance to the accumulation of stress that consecutive weekend road trips come with. Also, two of UMass' key starters, Mike Foley and Brook O'Neil, did not play. Foley, who is a top-notch offensive force when healthy, has been battling a thumb injury.

Despite the tough criticism, Yarworth was able to find some good in the two losses.

"There was a silver lining in the whole thing. We played as badly as we could have, and only lost by two in each game. That shows we had a lot of heart," he said.

None of the games were league games. The Maroon and White are 19-5 on the season, and 9-1 in the Collegiate Water Polo Association.

Massachusetts stumbles at Connecticut

By Jen Cormier
Collegian Staff

After last week's three-match sweep of Boston College, Connecticut, and Boston University, it seemed that everything the Massachusetts men's tennis team touched turned to gold.

Fast-forward one week to a lackluster performance at the UConn Invitational has abated the euphoria of last week's triumphant trifecta. Considered among the elite contenders at the Storrs, CT, tournament, the Maroon and White received a dose of reality this weekend after a collection of sub-par performances.

In Flight A singles, No. 2 seed sophomore Steve Prisco, who received a first round bye, cruised to a 6-2, 6-4, victory over RI's Phil Johnson in second round action.

Prisco then fell in the third round, bettered by Seton Hall's Alex Militiec by a score of 6-1, 7-5.

In other Flight A action, senior Parsa Samii suffered a first-round loss at the hands of Providence's Paco Fabien. Samii could only manage to capture two games from Fabien, losing 6-0, 6-2.

Freshman Will Shaw, who was Flight B's No. 1 seed, overpowered BU's John Koetzle, 6-1, 6-0, in the second round. Shaw went on to lose in straight sets by Po Phinvongsa of UConn, 6-3, 6-0. Meanwhile, junior Fabien Rabanal was also a straight set victim, bowing to St. John's Andre Vanier, 6-1, 6-1, in the first round.

Flight C singles action featured junior Bill Greener and No. 2 seed sophomore Todd Champeau. Greener advanced to the third round without dropping a set before losing to No. 1 seed Todd Corbit of Rhode Island, 6-2, 6-1.

Champeau, who received a first round bye, lost to Marist's Elliot Hoodman in straight sets, 6-2, 6-1, in the second round.

In an ironic twist of events, Flight D singles featured both the high and low points of the tournament for the squad.

Emerging from the mediocrity of the tournament was senior Josh Bainton, who performed admirably, advancing to the finals before bowing to No. 1 seed Max Zubatsky of UConn, 6-2, 6-3.

Flight D singles proved to be a much more harrying experience for senior Marco Casesa. He advanced to the second round only to default the match to BC's Damon Vartabedian because he broke the strings on his only two rackets.

Much to the dismay of assistant coach Scott Wilkins, Casesa retired instead of attempting to borrow a racket from another player. Wilkins was critical of the way Casesa handled the situation.

"He was kind of an idiot," Wilkins said.

This is the second on-court incident involving Casesa this season. Last week, Casesa used foul language during a pivotal doubles match versus UConn. He was penalized, and as a result, UConn walked away with the doubles point.

Despite Casesa's hot temper, Wilkins was quick to point out the advantages to having a vocal and intense player.

"He's very emotional. It can be

Turn to TENNIS, page 9

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

The UMass men's tennis team struggled over the weekend in a tournament at the University of Connecticut.

The Massachusetts

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVJ Issue 31

Wednesday, October 20, 1999

Driver found to have gun;

Man arrested for larceny in UMass Parking Lot 22

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

This past Sunday, a University of Massachusetts police officer got an unexpected surprise when he pulled over a driver on Massachusetts Avenue for making an illegal U-turn.

"When the officer reached the vehicle, he could only see one of the driver's hands," Jack Luippold, UMass chief of police, said. "The officer asked if the driver had any weapons, and the man in the car said he did."

According to Luippold, the officer advised the man to keep his hands on the steering wheel. The officer then found a .32 caliber Beretta under the man's coat.

"The gun was unloaded and was not in a secure container," Luippold said. He added that ammunition was in the automobile. "He had a valid license to have the gun, but it is illegal, regardless of license, to have a gun on a campus."

The man, a 40-year-old from South Hadley, was cited for making the illegal U-turn and has been issued a show cause. An issued show cause requires an individual to show up in court at a later date. At this particular show cause, Luippold said, a charge of possession of weapon on a campus will be pursued.

UMPD officers also pulled over a vehicle after being tipped off by a passing motorist that suspicious persons had been seen in Lot 22. According to Luippold, the officer then alerted the station and officers reported to the scene.

"They observed a Jeep with a cloth top that had been broken into," Luippold said. "Two males were observed in the parking lot, and when they spotted the officers, they began to talk nervously, saying they couldn't find their car."

According to Luippold, the individuals matched the description given by a passing motorist. Upon questioning, Matthew Gamby, 18, of Lowell, voluntarily opened his backpack, where officers discovered a JVC CD Receiver, JVC face carrier, JVC stereo face, JVC remote, stereo cable, radar detector, compact disk, Kenwood CD receiver face and a Bud Light. Police who had called his name in also discovered that he was wanted on a warrant in Lowell.

UMass police arrested Gamby and charged him with felony breaking and entering, larceny over $250 and underage possession of liquor.

He acknowledged that he had taken the equipment out of the Jeep, and said he'd taken care of the issue of the warrant earlier.

The second individual, who Luippold declined to identify, was not involved, according to Gamby.

Also on Sunday, Christina Brissette, a sophomore animal science major, struck David Chabot, a sophomore exercise science major, near the Orchard Hill Residential Area. Chabot was then transported by the Amherst Fire Department to Cooley Dickinson Hospital where he was treated and released. No citations have been issued, but the incident is still under investigation.

On Saturday, the UMPD arrested two individuals in John Adams Residence Hall. Robert Eagan, a 22-year-old senior sociology major, and Eric Rocha, a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences, were arrested and charged with disturbing the peace. They had, apparently, been knocking on a door, shouting obscenities and threatening to beat up whoever was behind the door. Individuals in the room were afraid, according to Luippold, and refused to answer the door. Police arrested both individuals after a brief discussion.

Yesterday, the UMPD responded to a reported bat on the fourth floor of Van Meter Residence Hall.

Luippold said "it must be getting close to Halloween."

NICOLE GOTTWALD / COLLEGIAN

Hot Spot

One of the more popular places in Amherst to read or socialize.

UMass hosts annual contaminated soil & water Conference

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Gathered in the basement of the Campus Center, men dressed in suits and ties came from many companies around the world to talk about plain old dirt.

The 15th Annual International Conference on Contaminated Soils & Water, hosted by the University of Massachusetts, is being held from Oct 18 to 21.

According to Conference Director Dr. Paul Kostecki, who has always been the director of the national conference, UMass first held the conference when he needed to bring people together to get information about a personal project that he was working on at the time. The idea just seemed to grow from there with time.

"We were working on a project with Department of Environmental Protection concerning petroleum contaminated soils, and we held the conference to bring people together who were working on similar projects or that would have information," Kostecki said. "We did this, initially, only out of our own need."

But according to Kostecki, the next year, he started getting more and more phone calls about holding a similar conference again, and so, two years later, the second annual conference was held. The conference is the largest academic conference hosted by UMass.

"These kinds of conferences come and go," Kostecki said, "but only when this is a hot topic. For example, Superfund in Washington, D.C., used to have a similar conference, but they don't anymore. We persevered through everything."

The conference is free to UMass faculty, as well as staff in campus departments that have to do with the environment.

"It doesn't just help to bring people together from around the country," Kostecki said. "It helps us here."

The conference encourages everyone from government officials and business executives, to environmental consultants and real estate representatives to attend the conference. Aside from an exhibit floor where vendors can meet and greet one another, there are special, focused sessions about various topics of intetest.

This year, attendees can visit presentations about anything from Radionuclides to Chlorinated Hydrocarbons.

John Whitechurch of TraceAnalytical, a company that analyzes levels of contamination, said he'd visited them in San Diego and Monterey. TraceAnalyitical's home office is in Menlo Park, California.

"This is going very well for us," Whitechurch said, adding that it was the first time TraceAnalytical had been to the UMass conference.

Steve Jenson, also of TraceAnalytical, hadn't had a chance to get to any of the presentations, but commented they were out of his realm of expertise.

Art Kwerneland, another first-year attendee, represents Rocky Mountain Remediation Services, a soil stabilization technology for heavy metals vendor. This is the 12th such show he's worked this year. RMRS is based in Denver.

"I've met some real interesting people here," Kwerneland said. "But I haven't had a chance to get to any of the presentations because I'm alone here."

Scott Dokum, whose Strategic Environmental Research & Development Program is a sponsor of the conference, had been to previous conferences, but found this one to be informative and helpful.

"It's a good conference, and so far we've gotten a lot of response," Dokum said.

SERDP funds other groups to develop clean-up technologies.

"I've been to a few of the sessions and they've been really good," Dokum said.

Starr resigns, hands over Clinton probe to aide

By Bill Miller
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – Kenneth W. Starr Monday officially relinquished control of his five-year investigation into President Clinton, passing the baton to a top assistant, Robert W. Ray, who was sworn in to succeed him.

Starr submitted his resignation to the three-judge panel that had appointed him, ending a tenure that generated 14 criminal convictions, the impeachment and acquittal of the president, and a cascade of criticism from Democrats. In his resignation letter, Starr complained about "the intense politicization of the independent counsel process."

"To reduce the unfortunate personalization of the process, in particular in the wake of the inherently divisive impeachment proceedings, the wiser course, I believe, is for another individual to head the organization," he wrote.

Starr, who has talked of returning to his private law practice for months, initially had asked the Justice Department to take over any issues remaining from his probes. But the Justice Department declined to do so, and Starr began pushing for the appointment of one of his top deputies to succeed him. Although Congress allowed the independent counsel statute to expire last summer, three investigations already under way were permitted to continue.

Ray, 39, vowed on Monday to "live up to the finest traditions of what it means to be a professional prosecutor" and carry out his duties in a "prompt, responsible and cost-effective manner." Ray joined Starr's office in April, after a four-year stint working on independent counsel Donald Smaltz's investigation of former agriculture secretary Mike Esp, who was acquitted of corruption charges last December.

Starr, whose investigations have cost more than $47 million, leaves Ray with some critical unfinished business, including questions about whether Democratic fund-raiser Nathan Landow tampered with potential witness Kathleen Willey in the Paula Jones sexual harassment case and whether any crimes were committed in the White House travel office scandal.

Ray will also oversee the preparation of a final report summing up the office's many investigations, which cover activities dating to the Clintons' days in Arkansas. Depending upon its timing and content, the report could emerge as an issue in next year's presidential race or in Hillary Rodham Clinton's anticipated Senate campaign.

Noting Ray's role in the Esp case, the White House immediately questioned his promotion last week. But Ray also has years of experience as a successful federal prosecutor in New York, where he helped win convictions that dismantled a gang believed responsible for 80 homicides.

NICOLE GOTTWALD / COLLEGIAN

Fountain of Youth

Ian Rozin, senior psychology major, maintains his equilibrium.

Nissan cutting jobs in Japan

By Mark Magnier
Los Angeles Times

TOKYO – Nissan Motor Co., once a high-flying icon of Japanese economic might, on Monday announced a restructuring plan providing both a stark reminder of its fall from grace and the most dramatic evidence yet that Japan is on the road to meaningful restructuring after years of paralysis.

Any thought that new Nissan Chief Operating Officer Carlos Ghosn might go easy on his Japanese colleagues was dashed when he unveiled the plan – more sweeping than even the most dire predictions – to close five factories, cut 21,000 jobs, pare $9 billion in costs, overhaul its supply system, stop selling bland cars and fundamentally alter its Japanese management practices.

The precedent-being set by Nissan – albeit one forced on the company by a non-Japanese partner, Renault of France – may encourage other Japanese companies in overbuilt smokestack industries to follow suit.

It also underscores a stunning reversal from the '70s, when Japanese automakers had forced their American counterparts to undertake the same kind of painful downsizing now facing Nissan. Its fall has been spectacular – a $19-billion debt, losses in six of the last seven years and a humbling capitulation in which it had to sell a controlling interest to Renault in March. Marketing blunders, symbolized by Nissan's decision to stop selling vehicles in the United States under the Datsun name, and lackluster vehicles conspired to stall sales in key markets around the world.

In a 90-minute, rapid-fire presentation Monday, former Renault executive Ghosn outlined a few of the problems he identified during a four-month review of Nissan Motor Co., which remains Japan's No. 2 automaker behind Toyota Motor Corp.

These include Nissan's crushing debt, a steady drop in market share, little long-term planning, no sense of urgency and a habit of looking to competitors rather than customers for cues.

"Nissan is in bad shape," he said.

Ghosn, who moved over from Renault after the French automaker agreed to inject $6.8 billion for a controlling 37 percent stake, said the plan is only the first step. The far more difficult job is making it work. Nor can cost-cutting alone direct Nissan out of trouble, he added. Ultimately, the company needs exciting, well-designed cars the public wants.

Nissan said it will reorganize its design department and release a slew of new models in major markets, including a new version of the Datsun Z, a distinctively styled high-performance sports car in the United States.

"Product development will be at the heart of Nissan's revival," Ghosn said.

Analysts said the plan is welcome, comprehensive and long overdue. The key to its success, and Nissan's future, however, will be whether suppliers and employees accept the drastic cuts, an end to long-term relationships that no longer make sense and the new corporate focus on individual performance over seniority.

"The next three months are going to be the most critical," said Stephen C. Usher, senior analyst with Jardine Fleming Securities (Asia).

The fact that the changes are being forced on Nissan by a non-Japanese partner may actually help, some said, by allowing Japanese managers to take tough steps while blaming them on foreigners.

Arts & Living 6
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Forecast for Amherst

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 52 LOW: 35	HIGH: 54 LOW: 41	HIGH: 53 LOW: 39

SOURCE: WWLP.COM

Troubled Times

In response to the recent death of gay college student Matthew Shepherd, President Clinton calld for tougher hate-crime laws, yesterday.

ARTS PAGE 3

Ga-ga for Goo Goo

The Goo Goo Dolls come to the Mullins Center tonight. Check out our interview and other cool stuff in today's Arts & Living.

ARTS PAGE 6

Live or die with Zowie

Zowie Tucker and the UMass field hockey team head to the Granite State this afternoon to take on the New Hampshire Wildcats. Check out the back page for more.

SPORTS PAGE 12

NICOLE GOTTWALS/ COLLEGIAN

Loungin'

UMass' own oasis of cows.

Despite crackdown, Hamas still a threat in Mid-East

By Matthew McAllester
Newsday

GAZA STRIP – When the Jordanian security forces arrested three senior Hamas officials in late September, Israeli commentators and politicians cheered the crackdown on the hard-line Palestinian group.

The spiritual head of Hamas had a different response.

"Every action has a reaction in the same strength from the opposite direction," said Sheikh Ahmed Yassin, whose organization has been responsible for numerous violent attacks on Israelis. "Hamas was never weakened by being hit. It gives Hamas more strength and power. No one has declared that actions have stopped.

Read either as defiance or a threat, Yassin's words do have one clear meaning: Hamas still represents the biggest single threat to the continuation of the peace process between Israel and the Palestinian Authority. Senior officials from both sides acknowledge that large attacks by Hamas would force Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak to pull out of negotiations. But as Israel, the Palestinian Authority, Jordan and even Syria make it increasingly harder for the militants' military wing to operate as the mainstream leaders of those nations shuffle toward peace, Hamas is finding itself squeezed on all sides like never before.

"I think in general what we're seeing here is the tide is turning against the rejectionists" of peace, said a State Department official. "It's a sign that people are getting on the bandwagon. Those staying on the outside are finding the company thinner and thinner."

Jordan King Abdullah II's decision in late September to issue the arrest warrants of the three senior Hamas figures when they were out of the country signaled the effective end of Hamas' operations in Jordan, a strategic location for the organization to orchestrate attacks on Israel. With Syrian President Hafez Assad making it clear to Hamas that it can only use Damascus as a political and not military base, diplomatic sources say, and with Palestinian Authority President Yasser Arafat stamping down hard on the military wing of Hamas in Gaza and the West Bank, the group's main traditional bases of operation have turned into unfriendly territory.

For years, Hamas operated with impunity inside Jordan under the reign of the late King Hussein. Two things appear to have altered the relationship between the radicals and the palace.

Some Jordanian officials have said that Hamas was trying to recruit members from the Islamic Brotherhood, the Islamic fundamentalist party in Jordan that is tolerated by the regime. That – and an amassing of weaponry – was seen as a breaking of the rules. "It was the training, the arms and the question of the Muslim Brotherhood," a senior palace official said.

But some observers believe the new king also wanted to send a very public message to Israel and the United States that Jordan would no longer provide shelter to an organization determined to wreck the peace process.

Yassin insists that the young king only cracked down on the Hamas leaders, who were arrested when they flew back to the country, because of political pressure from Israel and the United States.

"The incident in Jordan is considered as a new wave of confronting Hamas by American pressure," said senior Hamas official, Ismaeel Abu Shanab, a former prisoner. "We know it's the Americans who are behind all these things, maybe pushed by the Palestinian Authority and Israel, to besiege Hamas. We consider it part of the reality we have to face in this time of American hegemony."

The palace official said the king acted without pressure from Israel or the United States.

Radwan Abdullah, a jordanian political analyst, said the king was also making another kind of statement – about his strength. "He has established himself more firmly now, in case anybody thought he was weak," Abdullah said.

While Yassin's veiled threats may hint at retaliation within Jordan, Hamas' potential to destabilize the king is considered negligible. Unlike the open warfare that King Hussein fought and won against Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization in the "Black September" of 1970, Hamas would be no match for the Jordanian security forces.

One of the Hamas leaders was quickly deported after arriving in Amman while the other two, who are Jordanian citizens, are due to stand trial. Radwan Abdullah expects the courts to impose stiff sentences and the king to pardon the men as a gesture of conciliation with Hamas.

The palace's self-assurance in the face of Hamas' fury at the arrests says as much about the state of Hamas as it does for the confident new king.

Man guilty; body missing

By Katherine Shaver and Michael E. Ruane
Washington Post

Hadden Clark was convicted Monday of second-degree murder in the 1986 disappearance of Michele Dorr, bringing to a close one of Montgomery County's (Md.) most notorious missing child cases, but leaving unsolved the mystery surrounding her whereabouts.

Michele hasn't been seen since she walked out of her father's Silver Spring, Md., home on a hot spring day in a pink-and-white polka-dot bathing suit headed for a turtle-shaped play pool in the back yard. Prosecutors and police, who have dug up tracts all along the East Coast searching for the 6-year-old's body, say only Clark knows what happened to Michele.

Michele's teary mother, Dee Dee Appleby, said of the verdict and the emotional three-week trial, "Sometimes you have to go to hell to find the devil."

Montgomery State's Attorney Douglas F. Gansler said he hoped, now, that Clark would have "the moral courage to come forward and tell us" where Michele is.

But Assistant State's Attorney James Trusty said he isn't counting on it.

"He had that secret when the trial began," Trusty said, "and he can have it for the rest of his life." The case is believed to be only the second successful murder prosecution in the state in which the body has not been found.

When Clark is sentenced Wednesday morning, he faces a maximum of a 30-year prison term that could run consecutive to the 40-year sentence he already is serving.

He was sentenced to 30 years for the 1992 slaying of Laura Houghteling, 23, who vanished from her Bethesda, Md., home. Clark led police to Houghteling's shallow grave off Interstate 270 in 1993, after he pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in her slaying. Clark, 47, also was sentenced in May to serve a 10-year consecutive prison term for a 1988 theft from a Bethesda family from whom he rented a room. Another 30-year term essentially would amount to life in prison for him.

Clark, who glared at police and others in the courtroom audience throughout the trial, stared straight ahead and barely moved as the forewoman announced "not guilty" on first-degree murder and "guilty" on a second-degree murder charge.

Jurors interviewed after the verdict said they were initially divided on whether Clark killed Michele Dorr. But after listing the evidence against him on a chalkboard, several jurors said, they decided that he intended to kill the child but that prosecutors had not proved that the slaying was premeditated.

Clark's prosecution was considered a tenuous and difficult case for the state, and it held so much emotion for police and prosecutors that Edward Tarney, the lead detective on the case for seven years, broke into tears when he heard about the verdict by phone. Assistant State's Attorney Debra Dwyer called the conviction "the proudest day of my professional career."

Gansler noted that the prosecution had no motive, no eyewitnesses and no body to prove that there even was a crime.

Moreover, jurors did not know about Clark's previous murder conviction. Montgomery Circuit Court Judge Michael D. Mason ruled that it would be unduly prejudicial for the jury to consider it.

Perhaps most damaging to the prosecution was the fact that Michele's father, Carl Dorr, had confessed to police that he had killed his daughter. Prosecutors argued that Carl Dorr, who was going through a nasty divorce from Michele's mother, became so distraught after Michele vanished in his care that he "snapped" under the police scrutiny and suffered a psychotic breakdown.

Carl Dorr said he was "very satisfied" with the second-degree murder verdict, saying he had feared that the jury might acquit Clark altogether.

Much of the prosecution's case also relied on the credibility of prison informants who testified that Clark confessed to them that he'd come across Michele playing with dolls alone in his niece's bedroom and that he had slashed her across the chest and then slit her throat so fiercely that he nearly decapitated her.

Prosecutors argued that Michele had gone over to the home of Clark's brother, who lived two doors down from Carl Dorr, and had wandered inside looking for Clark's niece, who was her favorite playmate. Clark's fellow prison inmates testified that he told them he shoved her body into a duffel bag and carried it out to his truck.

OUTSTANDING ADVISOR AWARD

COLLEGE OF FOOD AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Students, faculty and staff invited to submit nomination forms for the 1999-2000 award

Advisors in the following programs are eligible for nomination:

Animal Science • Building Materials and Wood Technology
Apparel Marketing • Entomology • Environmental Design
Environmental Sciences • Family and Consumer Sciences • Food Science
Forestry • Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration
Landscape Architecture • Microbiology • Natural Resource Studies
Plant and Soil Sciences • Resource Economics
Sport Management • Wildlife and Fisheries Conservation

• Forms available in 113 Stockbridge and departmental offices •

Stop gun violence! Protect your 2nd Ammendment Rights!

From the Left

John Rosenthal:

Founder of the Stop Handgun Violence Foundation.

From the Right

Glen Caroline:

National Rifle Association; Grassroots Director.

Gun Control Debate
Thursday, October 21
7:00 PM, Herter 231

Sponsored by the UMass Republican Club and the University Democrats. Call 545-3317

Hate-crimes measure out

By Richard Simon
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – Prospects for expanding federal hate-crime laws to include sexual orientation, gender and disability dimmed Monday when congressional Republicans stripped the provision out of a spending bill.

House-Senate negotiators pulled the hate-crime provision from an appropriations bill for the Commerce, Justice and State departments less than a week after President Clinton called for passage of such a law, citing the first anniversary of the beating death of Matthew Shepherd, a gay college student from Wyoming.

The provision could be revived in negotiations between the GOP-run Congress and Clinton. A White House spokesman said: "This does not relieve them of the obligation to pass the hate-crimes legislation at the earliest possible date."

The Senate in July included the legislation in its version of the spending bill but the House measure did not include such a provision. Ultimately, the Senate leadership urged that the hate-crime legislation be dropped from the spending bill when negotiators from the two chambers met to reconcile the two pieces of legislation.

"This was one elephant too much for this boa constrictor," said Sen. Judd Gregg, R-N.H.

Current law gives prosecutors the right to investigate and prosecute hate crimes motivated by bias against a person's religion, race, national origin or color.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., led the effort to expand the law to cover hate crimes based on sexual orientation, gender and disability. His proposal also would give federal authorities broader power to investigate and prosecute hate crimes.

Critics, such as the Traditional Values Coalition, said the legislation was unnecessary because such crimes already are prosecuted under existing criminal laws.

Jackie Payne, policy attorney for the NOW Legal Defense and Educational Fund, called the conference committee action "irresponsible," given a recent string of hate crimes.

NICOLE GOTTWALS/ COLLEGIAN

An artistic gathering

Visiting photographers check out Amherst and it's picture perfect potential.

Pakistan's new ruler: moderate?

By Pamela Constable and Kamran Khan
Washington Post

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan – The first image of Pakistan's new ruler to flash before the world after the Oct. 12 military coup was ominous – a film clip of a stocky general in fatigues, cigarette clenched in a corner of his mouth, fiddling with an automatic pistol.

The second image of Gen. Pervaiz Musharraf, 56, came five anxious days later, when he addressed the nation Sunday night. This time, the impression was more reassuring – a graying man in impeccable khaki, seated next to a portrait of Pakistan's revered civilian founder, speaking gravely of the need for sacrifice at home and moderation abroad in the face of a national crisis.

Over the past week, both Pakistanis and foreign governments have wondered what kind of man is now in absolute control of 140 million people and a military arsenal that includes nuclear weapons. The portrait that has emerged from aides, colleagues and diplomats has people asking: Which is the real Musharraf?

Is he the aggressive former commando who sent troops and paramilitary forces into the Indian portion of Kashmir this spring, triggering a 10-week border conflict, and who last week mounted Pakistan's first military takeover in 22 years?

Or is he the bridge-playing sketch artist who has begun his rule by withdrawing some troops from the Indian border and gone out of his way to project himself as a moderate Muslim and responsible executive?

For now, some observers, particularly U.S. diplomats, have seized with relief on Musharraf's reputation as a modern thinker and religious moderate, even though he heads an army that reportedly is rife with Islamic zealots.

"I don't believe he is an extremist; quite the opposite," U.S. Ambassador William B. Milam told journalists Monday. "I am confident he is a moderate and patriotically motivated."

But Milam and others say it will be some time before it becomes clear whether Musharraf will follow through with his pledges to implement reform and exercise restraint, or succumb to the temptation to wield arbitrary power if such efforts falter.

Musharraf (whose full name is pronounced pur-VEHZ mu-SHAH-rahv) has already been working overtime to try to convince the West – on which his floundering country will depend heavily for financial assistance – that he has no desire to be a strong-armed tyrant even though he is a military dictator.

Musharraf has a reputation for toughness as a veteran of three military conflicts with India and a former member of the elite Special Services Group of army commandos. But military and civilian observers alike said his actions in the past week have almost nothing in common with the debut of Pakistan's last dictator, the ambitious and ruthless Gen. Mohammed Zia ul-Haq, who ruled from 1977 to 1988, when he died in a plane crash.

"We all had mixed feelings when Zia took over; this time there are none," said Assad Durrani, a retired Pakistani army general and former intelligence chief. He and others said Zia used harsh Islamic law to intimidate average Pakistanis while wheeling and dealing with a corrupt civilian elite. At least at the start, Musharraf has vowed to promote a moderate version of Islam and prosecute wealthy scofflaws without favor.

Drug linked to war syndrome

By Paul Richter
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – A Pentagon-sponsored study has found grounds to suspect that an experimental nerve gas antidote given to as many as 300,000 U.S. troops during the Persian Gulf War may be a cause of the mysterious "Gulf War syndrome."

Contradicting earlier official studies, the two-year analysis by the Rand Corp. think tank – which was released yesterday – has concluded that the drug pyridostigmine bromide "cannot be excluded as a contributor" to a malady blamed for symptoms afflicting tens of thousands of veterans.

Since 1994, the Pentagon has spent $133 million researching the syndrome, whose symptoms include chronic pain, digestive problems, nausea, skin rashes, fatigue, aching joints, memory loss and concentration problems.

But this is the first time that government-approved research has sustained, rather than diminished, suspicions about a possible cause, officials said.

Defense officials stressed that the findings, which are based on an analysis of scientific literature, are not conclusive but pointed up the need for further study. "This is not a 'Eureka!' " Dr. Sue Bailey, assistant secretary of defense for health affairs, said in an interview.

Even so, the findings are likely to stir controversy. Pyridostigmine bromide, commonly called PB, was an experimental drug in December 1990, when the Pentagon convinced the Food and Drug Administration to permit its use as American troops flooded into the Persian Gulf to push Iraqi invaders out of Kuwait. Rand said that 700,000 Americans were deployed and that between 20,000 and 100,000 may have "unexplained" symptoms.

Defense officials acknowledged that it is still unclear what the best dosages for different individuals may be.

And, despite the findings of the Santa Monica, Calif.-based research group, defense officials said they consider PB an invaluable tool against poison gas and will order troops to take the drug if the military believes enemies may strike with nerve gas.

"It is life and death, vs. the possibility of some long-term side effects," Bailey said.

Officials also acknowledged that questions about the substance may further complicate their efforts to persuade some reluctant troops to participate in the military's continuing anthrax vaccination program.

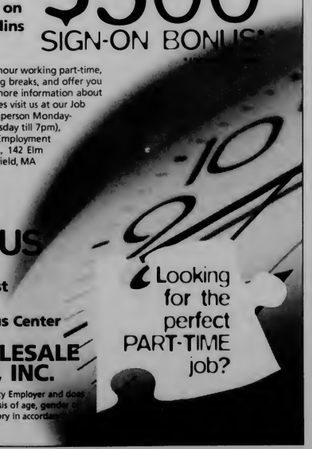
There are concerns "acknowledged Bernard Rostker, undersecretary of the Army, who formerly headed a special Pentagon task force that looked into the problem.

Of the $133 million spent on researching Gulf War syndrome, $20 million has been earmarked specifically for research into the effects of PB. Rostker said the government will consider whether to accelerate that research in view of this study.

PB is believed to be the only defense against soman, the fastest-acting of the nerve gases. It is used as a "pre-treatment" before exposure. Injections of additional medications are required afterward.

The treatment calls for troops to take 30-milligram tablets three times a day for as long as the threat of nerve gas continues. Officials believe that this dose should help them withstand exposures of up to five times the usual lethal dose.

Warehouse Selectors Needed!



If you need a job that fits into your busy school schedule, then look into the outstanding opportunities available at C&S, the nation's fastest growing wholesale food distributor. We have immediate openings for enthusiastic, team-oriented students to play an integral role in our expansion.

JOIN US NOW AND RECEIVE A $500 SIGN-ON BONUS

BRING YOUR FRIENDS!
- Flexible Schedules
- Great Pay
- FREE Transportation on weekends from Mullins Center on Campus

We'll train you, give you $12.50 per hour working part-time, extend your hours to full time during breaks, and offer you a dynamic work environment. For more information about these exciting Part Time opportunities visit us at our Job Fair, call 1-800-621-5953, or apply in person Monday-Friday, 8am-4pm (Tuesday & Wednesday till 7pm), or Saturdays from 9am-1pm, at: Employment Center, C&S Wholesale Grocers, Inc., 142 Elm Street, just off Route 91, Exit 21, Hatfield, MA

VISIT US ON-CAMPUS

Thursday, October 21st
From 9:30am - 4pm
in the Student Campus Center

C&S WHOLESALE GROCERS, INC.

C&S is an Equal Opportunity Employer and does not discriminate on the basis of age, gender or any other protected category in accordance with applicable law.

THE MP3.COM MUSIC AND TECHNOLOGY TOUR

Free Music and Giveaways!
Come Down and Check Out
The MP3.COM Village!
Admission is
FREE!!!

The MP3.COM Village is a day-long event which features performances by the hottest MP3.COM artists including:

Lyricist Lounge, Fern, Thrillcraft, Fono, Moke & Gonaside II

Stop by the MP3.COM Music and Technology tent to sign on your band, get free prizes and learn about the coolest new music site on the Internet.

Companies including Collegeclub.com, Scour.net, Bluedot, Big Words, BodyOfBeat, NowZen, Boom.com, Live 365, PowerOnBoards.com, Wild, Trulan, Real Names and more will be holding special contests and giveaways all day long!

Near Mullins Center Arena
Oct. 20th 1-8pm

For More Information: tour.mp3.com

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Wednesday, October 20, 1999

Field of cars

Anyone been to Orchard Hill recently? No, you've avoided it? Really? Well, I suppose that's understandable, seeing as The Hill has had a few "issues" in recent days (read: issues as something between minor problems and total upheaval, and read days as being the entire semester to date).

There is plenty of stuff people are complaining about everywhere on campus (I won't mention the Red Sox or the dismal turn-out of people for Midnight Madness), but I've narrowed my focus to the small area of mud, grime and dead grass that was once a lovely field of flowers, and has since become a impromptu parking lot.

There are plenty of reasons for people to be against using this area as a parking lot. For example, last year people often played football or Frisbee or other games on what used to be one of the few flat, open areas on The Hill. In addition, there is also an environmental aspect to the question of the parking area: how healthy is it for the environment to tear up a field and spread oil and other car related fluids across it?

There are a whole lot of other reasons why this area shouldn't be used as a parking lot, but I want to focus in on a rather simple one: it's wrong.

You see, last year the same members of the Student Government Association (SGA) went through the process of trying to change the field into a parking lot. Somewhere along the line, the motion failed, leaving the field as a field and not as a parking lot. Thus, parking in the field is wrong because it's not a parking lot. Violating this policy is not on the level of murder, but parking in the field is a violation of the rules that we, as a community, have set down so that life in the community will be bearable for all those who live within it. Ignoring the policies of the community contributes to its destruction, not because the actual violation means much, but because the community's ability to govern itself is weakened.

Chris Collins

Anyone who looks at the parking lot situation is going to become disdainful of the authority of Parking Services because they are not towing people who are illegally parked. In addition, people may start to question the motives of Parking Services for allowing people to park there.

"...people may start to question the motives of Parking Services for allowing people to park there."

To look at the situation another way, if I drove my car down to the field next to the campus pond and parked it there, I would be towed and fined. Essentially, this is what people are doing in the field next to Grayson, except that they are getting away with it because there are a lot of them. No official change in the parking policy for that field occurred, as far as I know, but Michael Brennan, the director of Parking Services, has decided to let them be.

There's nothing wrong with wanting to change policies because we feel they are wrong, but there is something wrong with breaking them to accomplish this. The SGA is set up as a system where students can contribute to changing the policies that affect students, not as a system that can be by-passed by those who disagree with things as they stand. We all have to play by the rules, and the rules say that no one should park on the field next to Grayson. I think that those people who are parked there should move their cars. Otherwise, they should be towed. If they want to change the parking situation, then it is their right to participate in SGA and get the policy changed. Until then, they are bound to play according to the rules; otherwise, we can only look forward to chaos. Most people agree that chaos is a pretty bad thing.

Some people might argue that I'm being a little absurd about a parking lot, but the fact of the matter is that I think the campus is ugly enough without having another flat area paved over and painted with straight white lines. Look at the campus: it is sterile and lifeless without paving over a field just so an extra dozen purple stickers can be sold.

This type of "progress" can always occur at some time in the future. If the school really needs a new parking lot there in 20 years, then maybe one should be put in. However, at the present time there is no reason that a few simple limitations on permit sales or some other workable solution could not be implemented to save a small piece of land from being another piece of parking area.

Chris Collins is a Collegian Columnist.

The forest and the trees

Last week was a good week to be a forest. On Oct. 13, President Clinton took a bold step to save some of America's last and best wild places, and to establish for himself a conservation legacy rivaling that of Teddy Roosevelt. Defying logging companies and the Congressmen they support, Clinton announced plans to protect at least 40 million acres of pristine National Forest land, a move that would more than double the size of the country's official Wilderness Areas.

Although the president and Forest Service chief Mike Dombeck seem serious about preserving these sensitive lands for future generations, the battle is far from over, and winning out over the natural resource special interests will require widespread public input over the next few months. However, generating public support for the policy is no problem. According to several different polls, including those conducted by the Forest Service, the large majority of Americans stand behind permanent protection of remaining wild forests. Economics and ecology both reveal the wisdom in such a measure. It remains to be seen, though, whether public opinion, scientific data and common sense will finally be able to win out over the corporate and Congressionally sponsored policies of forest mismanagement that have prevailed for a century.

Megan Jennings

Since the time Europeans began appearing on this continent, America has lost about 96 percent of its ancient forests. The remaining 4 percent lie primarily within our National Forest System, which consists of 192 million acres of both old-growth and previously logged areas. About 34 million acres (18 percent) have gained protection from road construction, logging and other harmful activities since the 1964 passage of the Wilderness Protection Act. Unfortunately, 31 percent of road-less areas in blocks of 1000 acres or larger remain unprotected, at least until the proposed policy goes into effect. Our National Forests contain over 400,000 miles of roads – a distance over eight times the length of the entire interstate highway system and long enough to circle the globe 17 times. While these roads are built primarily for access to timber, they may actually cause more ecological damage than logging itself, through stream sedimentation and habitat fragmentation. Clinton's directive would stop the construction of new roads into roadless areas and prohibit the clear cuts that have turned Western forests into giant checkerboards.

This kind of protection would be a major victory for the sensitive fish and wildlife species that live in our National Forests, which include 25 percent of all endangered species. It would also be a victory for taxpayers who subsidize the incredibly wasteful federal timber program. Because timber companies don't have to pay for road construction or restoration for public land sales, they are able to increase their profits while taxpayers foot the bill. What we get in return is a program that lost $7 billion between 1980 and 1994, and $800 million in 1998 alone, according to the General Accounting Office. By ending the federal road-building and logging program, there would admittedly be an immediate loss of jobs, but this loss would occur in an industry that has cut thousands of jobs in the past two decades anyway, due to increased exports and technology. This loss could be more than offset by the dramatic increase in new jobs in recreation and restoration. The Forest Service's own data show that recreation in National Forests should supply 38 times more jobs than logging by 2000.

The list of reasons to support Clinton's proposal could go on and on. So could the list of excuses the timber companies and their Congressional allies give to oppose the plan. They say that logging is necessary to maintain forest health – not realizing, apparently, that forests did just fine on their own for thousands of years before we came along with our enlightened management practices. They claim the push is to turn the forests into museums, while in reality it is simply to let them be forests and to allow people to enjoy wilderness instead of just genetically engineered tree farms. They argue that they need the high-quality timber on those 40 million acres to stay in business, but in truth less than 5 percent of timber in this country comes from public forests, and only 5 percent of that now comes from road-less areas. The real motivation is clear. The companies want to sell off our trees while we pay for their roads and the restoration of the areas they clear cut.

President Clinton has recognized the truth of the matter and understands the wisdom in setting aside some space for the future. But this is politics we're talking about; the truth is rarely enough. The Clinton administration and Congress need to hear from the public, and comments are now being solicited.

As citizens, you now have an opportunity to participate in shaping the greatest conservation policy of the century. Don't miss out – write a quick note to your senator or representative voicing your support, or look out for the postcards circulating on campus. Just a few seconds can help ensure that your grandchildren never have to wonder what ancient forests were like.

Megan Jennings is a UMass student.

Privatization and Your RSU

So, now we are against privatization. That's what the Radical Student Union (RSU) tells students. So do any number of other groups on campus.

Apparently, these corporations want to come into the Campus Center, among other locations, displace the student run businesses that we currently have, and install instead their heinous alternatives.

A huge evil bookstore (Barnes and Noble) would replace our friendly Campus Store; a huge evil coffee shop (Starbucks) would replace our lovely little coffee kiosk; and a horrible fast-food restaurant (McDonalds) would take over our precious Bluewall, to cite some examples.

Hey, maybe Yard will open up a dealership on Garber Field.

Exactly who will come is not yet clear. But whatever happens, it will be horrible, according to a yellow piece of paper that was given to interested students at a desk overseen by the RSU that claims:

1) Students would lose their jobs.

2) Businesses would not be accountable for their actions.

3) Students would lose control.

4) Privatization supporters refuse to recognize the differences between college campuses and corporate America.

Sam Wilkinson

The answers to the first three are easy. In fact, they're quite obvious. If McDonalds is going to come in here, contractually require that they hire a certain percentage of students, and maintain at least the number of students that currently work at the Bluewall. As far as the idea that businesses would not be accountable to the community, that is technically true. So what? Does that mean that the community cannot possibly respond should McDonalds start feeding us fetuses? Of course we can. We are adults. We can boycott. And as for the final assertion that students would lose control, that, too, would happen, which would be good in the sense that it would prepare them for the real world; there aren't too many students who leave college and immediately take positions in upper management.

The reality is that shrewd contracting on behalf of UMass could save students from any of the horrible things, which will supposedly occur if UMass privatizes.

But let's not worry about all the other fears that are currently held about privatization. This idea that supporters of privatization refuse to recognize the difference between college campuses and corporate America is absolutely inane. If anyone, honestly, truly, deeply and in a heart-felt way believes that college campuses are so different from "Corporate America," those individuals have been sitting in a cave on Mars with their fingers in their ears and their eyes tightly shut.

Even the Radical Student Union should recognize the inherent similarity between UMass and everywhere else in the United States.

The gentleman sitting in the Campus Center distributing anti-privatization information was sitting in a building built of concrete that was purchased from a corporation. He was sitting on a folding chair built by a corporation. His body was covered in clothes made by corporations. The distributed pieces of paper that came from a corporation. On the paper was ink from a corporation. The copies of the yellow paper I received from him came from a Xerox machine. He used a printer made by a corporation to print out the original list of anti-privatization statements. He used a computer made by a corporation to type up his complaints. His computer used corporate electricity.

Corporations own our lives and affect everything that we do, and if we are honest, we love it. We absolutely love it. There are some people who would contend with that idea, and those people are lying to themselves.

We go out to dinner in big restaurants, we buy our food at big supermarkets, we love our CD players and VCRs. We go to big movie theaters. We buy our books in big bookstores.

And it isn't just the majority of Americans who live in a corporate society; it's everyone in America.

You drive an automobile? Corporate.

Ride a bike? Corporate.

See a movie? Corporate.

Read a book? Corporate.

So if the RSU, and for that matter any of the other groups on campus that are so religiously against privatization, want to change minds, they need to really change themselves.

It's time to give up the computers they use to type up their complaints and it's time to give up the cop machines they use to duplicate those same complaints. Give up the food they buy in stores and the clothes they buy in stores and give up the razors they buy in stores and everything else they buy in stores.

Move out of the houses that were built using corporate materials, don't ride on the bikes built by corporations, and refuse to use telephones overseen by corporations.

And before the RSU or any group does any of that, they should quit trying to go head to head with the University on the privatization issue, as it is hypocritical to so willingly use so many of the things that corporate America provides, and to then attempt to take a position that is against that same corporate America.

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian columnist.

Write for Ed/Op!!!!!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Mariely Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor

Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor

Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Position Vacant Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor

Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

With intellectual honor

Why do people of all levels of intelligence often persist in holding onto beliefs when equally viable, and sometimes rationally superior views are presented? And why does intelligent, honest disagreement often evoke uneasiness and even anger?

Everyone has a view of the world founded on their own principles, and many people have opinions on controversial issues (even skeptics like myself believe in the illegitimacy of belief). At a university, these opinions exist in an atmosphere of innumerable and opposing ideas. And the stakes are high for those of us who still retain the youthful "we-can-change-the-world mentality." As we become more educated, we can either gain a legitimate foundation for our beliefs, or reconsider them and change our worldview. But it seems that in many cases new information is only used to back the views that people already hold, and people's opinions do not change much even when presented with a logical counter-argument.

What I am suggesting here is that not all opinions have a legitimate foundation. It often seems that self-righteousness, rather than reason, accounts for many of the beliefs we hold. By self-righteousness I mean the founding of ideas in anything other than truth. Often self-righteous people are not open to opinions that differ from their own.

Many factors other than reason can influence what we believe. We may find comfort in false certainty. We may hesitate to question our beliefs if they bring us a feeling of connectedness to a particular group. A person with a weak sense of self-worth is not likely to welcome self-criticism if a feeling of worth, no matter how false, can be found in thinking his beliefs are true. We all have a need for self-expression, no matter how irrational the views that we express may be. And of course no one can live for long without searching for some sort of meaning in the world. Many people sacrifice the legitimacy of their beliefs in order to fulfill their need for meaning.

Tom Devine

One problem with this kind of thinking is a tendency to use whatever available arguments, however weak, to back up irrational opinions. Some of these arguments are no stronger than those supporting an opposite perspective. Others have value only at the surface and can be easily refuted. But people who lack an objective commitment to reason rarely search below the surface of their views. They are set in their beliefs, and internally their tenuous arguments suit their purpose when an external force calls their beliefs into question.

Examples of this kind of narrow-mindedness are all around us, and right here on campus. Consider the certainty with which members of the Radical Anti-Imperialism League decry American values, and deny any credit to our free society. On a much more subtle level, citizens tenaciously hold onto their unchanging republican or democratic political views. Are these people interested in truth or merely interested in just believing in something?

This mentality, I believe, is pervasive and the needs to which I refer here are often the root of the beliefs that we hold, instead of reason. So what is the nature of legitimate belief? What does it mean to have intellectual honor?

In essence, to have intellectual honor is to refuse to allow any force, other than reason to dictate one's ideas. It means to consciously separate "being right" from one's self-worth (it is proper, surely, to pride oneself in being rational). It means respecting the groups one affiliates with by holding their ideas to the test of reason. It means having the humility to admit when one is wrong, and to be at ease with uncertainty. It is to be confident in the mental process by which one properly judges ideas.

This does not call for the cold rejection of another's ideas that do not stand the test of reason. Religion, for example, should not be entirely rejected by skeptics. We must be sensitive to the value that others attach to their beliefs whether we share them or not. And we must be willing to understand why people come to believe as they do. However, in the issues that matter to us, anyone taking a stand must be called upon to rationally demonstrate the groundings of his views. Everyone has a right to his beliefs, of course, but no one can escape from the fact that his beliefs may be false.And this does not mean one should not fight for the causes close to one's heart. Only that reason should determine which causes one believes in. But one's life experiences, heritage, unique character and personal preference should properly influence which causes one chooses to spend his or her limited resources actively supporting.

Self-righteousness brings people further apart at times when we need to come together and face society's challenges. Only intellectual honor – that is, the unrelenting commitment to reason and openness to disagreement – when implemented by both sides of issues can engender mutual respect and optimism. It can bring forth a feeling of benevolence toward one another and hope of a better world. The choice to base our views in reason or unreason, which rests in the hands of every individual, is a simple one. But it asks the best of us.

Tom Devine is a UMass student.

Not so smart

To preface this, I think that I am one of the most horrible decision makers. I'm just not a smart person sometimes – okay, most of the time.

I have a really funny story related to the fact that I make poor decisions, which I thought I would share will you all. Some of you might laugh at my expense, but oh, well. Here it goes...

During my sophomore year here at UMass, my friend Matt and I decided to go to the bars in Springfield because, well, we had never been there. Eventually, we picked a Thursday night to go; it was the Thursday before Easter that year.

Okay, so we were on our way to Springfield, totally ready to have a good night, drink some beer or whatnot, and maybe get some digits. We arrived at the first bar, I think it was called Fat Cats or something like that, but it wasn't that cool, so we headed off to another bar that I can't remember the name of. We sat down, had a beer, and I spied a really attractive girl from across the bar. After a couple of cold ones, I got the nerve to walk over to her and make the move. My friend was pre-occupied with a girl whom he had met so I said, "What the hell do I have to lose?"

"After a couple of weeks she was telling me how much she loved me, and that "I was the one."

I sidled up to the empty seat next to her, ordered another beer, and made eye contact. I introduced myself and she told me her name – we'll call her Jen. We talked, found that we had a couple of things in common, and generally had good time. The end of the night rolled around, and while we were both heavily sedated by alcohol, we ended up exchanging phone numbers as well as lip locking outside the bar. I remember that I told her, "Yeah, give me a call in a couple of days, that would be cool."

Wes Wrightson

The very next morning I got a call from her saying that she would meet me at Pruddy's that weekend. I was a little weirded out by her coming on so strong, but decided maybe to try this out. We had a good time, but then ...

The e-mails started to pour in from her, as well as the endless phone calls. I was like, "Ohhhhh, man, what the heck should I do?" This Jen girl would even send me packages of cookies and whatnot. After a couple of weeks, she was telling me how much she loved me, and that "I was the one." My friends were all getting weirded out by all of this, not to mention the fact that I was as well.

Now, here is where my stupidity comes into play. About two days before I was leaving to spend my summer on Martha's Vineyard, I decided to write a long e-mail to my dad, because he is the person who gives me advice on these issues. I explained the situation in this e-mail. I told him how crazy this girl was, and how I stopped liking her basically at "Hello" (a blatant Jerry Maguire reference here). I was scathing.

The funny thing is that I responded to one of her e-mails thinking I was responding to one of my father's. Yes, that's correct. You know how on the UMass e-mail system you just click "Reply" on the e-mail of your choice? I chose the wrong name to reply to.

To make a long story short, I got a phone call from her bright and early in the morning. She was sobbing, yadda, yadda, yadda, we broke up right then and there. The funny thing is, I had told her of my plans on the Vineyard that summer, and half way through the summer, I found out she was working down the road from me. Right: she had followed me to the Vineyard.

So it all goes to show you that I don't make great decisions all of the time. Actually, some of the decisions I have made (or girls that I have gone for), have contributed some punch-lines to jokes among my friends. I don't know what it is about me, but if I find a way to screw things up in a relationship, I will.

Some of my decisions are legendary, but the one I just let all of you in on takes the icing on the cake, though I have come close on other occasions. For example, another Wrightson blunder occurred that same summer when I was on a date. At the end of the dinner, the bill came and I was all ready to pay... but I had left my wallet on the bedside table in the house where I was staying. I had to borrow the girl's car, race back home, and grab my wallet because she didn't have enough money. Embarrassing, huh? Well, this guy has been through it all.

I think I'll eventually find the right girl out there, and maybe she will be like me and will have made some equally bad decisions. In the meantime, you have my permission to laugh it up.

Wes Wrightson is a UMass student.

What were they thinking?

Perhaps one of the biggest screw-ups in UMass history was the construction of the Sylvan Residential Area. The "City on the Hill," as some people call it, is actually more of a brick fortress in the boonies, a far cry from any idea of what most people think of as a city.

When I reply to those who ask, "Yes, I live in Sylvan," they send sympathy my way, along with cringes and the occasional "Ouch, I'm sorry, man!" We all know that those who send their condolences wouldn't trade places with me in a second, although I suppose it's the thought that counts. Then again, why do people feel the need to say anything when I reveal my secret – like I don't already know that Sylvan is a crappy place to live. Please, people, it's not like I need a constant reminder that I live in misery. It's like telling someone who broke their ankle, "Hmm, I bet that hurts!" I didn't choose to be here, and neither did the majority of us who were "placed according to our preferences" by that department of fools we call Housing Services.

Sean Scanlon

HA! They say that 85 percent of the student body is happy with their housing assignment. I think it is more accurate to say that 85 percent don't bother to complain. The fact that Sylvan was my last choice and the last choice of many other students here leads me to question the figures that claim students here have roughly an 80 percent chance of being placed in their first or second choice of housing.

How does Housing Services collect this data? The results don't seem likely at all considering that, if this were true (there's a question for you math majors), what would be the chances that you would end up living in misery in your last choice out of five? I don't know the exact numbers, but I'm willing to wager that they are pretty low.

Seeing that my struggle to get out of this dump seems never ending, I might as well accept the fact that I am at least stuck here for the semester. For any of you who are considering a move to Sylvan, let me fill you in on what you have to look forward to.

First of all, the rooms are great... if you like small! My room is at least half the size of many others at UMass, not to mention the fact that my suite's "common living area" is as big as my friend's room in Northeast. Fitting seven guys into that room to watch a baseball game was rather amusing. I was lying on the floor with my legs under and over furniture. The only way we would have all fit comfortably is if we took the furniture out of our room. Yeah, that could work, we could all do yoga in our suite and sit with our legs crossed on pillows in front of the TV!

Second of all, you'll meet interesting people...in your suite! Even the most outgoing of people find life in Sylvan difficult. The stereotype portrays us as unsociable hermits (whoever made that one up obviously never lived here), who lock ourselves away from the outside world. We aren't hermits – believe it or not, we're just like you. However, it's the conditions in which we live that is the problem. The suite living arrangement makes it relatively impossible to meet anyone other than suitemates. We aren't even allowed to leave our hall doors open because it is a "fire hazard," if you can figure that out. So while the shyest of people have the opportunity to meet others in a real dorm because doors are open and people hang out in hallways, balconies, or lounges, Sylvan residents do not have this advantage.

"Whoever the genius was who designed this place should receive credit for the world's worst suites. What were they thinking?"

You would think that having a suite would allow you to throw some kickin' "get togethers" in your rooms. Maybe... if anyone wanted to come by. If you mention that anything is happening, people laugh or mysteriously feel the need to wash their hair or catch up on some homework due next month. Although the Resident Assistants try, there is really no sense of "floor unity here," so good luck trying to organize anything, or face the DC food with a group.

My third complaint is the beautiful architecture... everywhere else but here. Whoever the genius was who designed this place should receive credit for the world's worst suites. What were they thinking? Even Amherst's sister school, UMass-Lowell, has a better suite layout. I went there last year, and though their campus is ugly, their suite design is much better. The typical suite design places the common living area in the center of the suite, with the rooms branching off of it, much as an apartment is laid out. In many cases, the living room is rather large, and most people chill there during their spare time. Rooms are also larger and at some schools, there are even two bathrooms. At other campuses, living in a suite is something that the upperclassmen look forward to, because it is the best place to be. Unfortunately, at UMass Amherst, Sylvan is a place where unsuspecting transfers and freshmen get shafted into living in isolation. The contractors must have had a long night before they designed this place.

To my dismay, the U.S. Army isn't going to accidentally bomb Sylvan anytime soon, so it looks like the legacy of torture will live on – and there is a legacy. People that have never even stepped foot inside a building here run when they hear the names of MacNamara, Cashin, and Brown. All I can say is that if you should ever get stuck here, just know that you are not alone, and I wish you the best of luck. Perhaps living in Sylvan will be a character building experience like raking leaves or shoveling the driveway. I'm hoping my dad is right and that living here will build mine.

Sean Scanlon is a UMass student.

A note to all our readers:

We have received some excellent letters to the editor recently, and we would like to print them. However, we do not print submissions that are hand-written. Additionally, we cannot print unsigned letters; letters must include the name, phone number and address of the writer(s). The Collegian editorial staff reserves the right not to run submitted letters according to editorial discretion. Furthermore, the number of letters we can print is limited by space constraints. We enjoy reading your letters, so please continue to submit them.

Thank you.

The Editorial/Opinion editors

inx

Women in the Military

Lotte Lederis

UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE

200 MADISON AVE
NEW YORK, NEW YORK 10016 (212) 293 8500

One hit and you're out

After a long baseball season, the time has come for me to write an obituary. No, this is not for the beloved Red Sox who won more games this year than I ever dreamt they would, overcoming adversity and returning to glory; this is for some kid who wore his "Boston Sucks" T-shirt for the benefit of a certain college newspaper.

You all may have seen his shirt and that look on his face. I had to do something, so I took out a hit on his life. (For God's sake, I'm not serious about taking out a hit, but hear me out.) I wasn't that upset with him until I started thinking about the situation and talking with other writers. It seems our friend (I'll call him John Doe to protect myself from self-incrimination) wasn't even wearing that "Boston Sucks" T-shirt until he met the staff members covering the riot. John told them to wait while he got his filthy "Boston Sucks" T-shirt, so he could be seen around campus.

That really pissed me off. First of all, he wasn't even wearing it to begin with; he put it on to show the entire campus his ignorance. When you go to the University of Massachusetts, and support the overpaid Yankees, you must know that you are outnumbered by Red Sox fans. You must know that you are only pissing people off. Maybe if you are lucky, we can pour you into the concrete at the new Fenway.

Second, Red Sox fans don't wear "Yankees Suck" shirts. They don't insult the fine city of New York where many Yankees fans live and work. There are no "New York sucks" shirts floating around.

Matt Frascella

What really made me angry was the fact that the Yankees don't even deserve to win anyway. To prove my point I have compiled a list of reasons why.

First: Teams that need translators to talk to their players should never be allowed to win. If you can't speak the King's English and refuse to learn the language written on the currency you are paid in, then start a league in a country where you can read the money.

Second: Teams with Derek Jeter must lose. Why? He dated Mariah Carey and lost her to Puff Daddy. He must be a loser. When you date Mariah Carey, life can only go downhill from there. Get used to it, Derek. Your best moments are just a "sweet, sweet fantasy baby..." now.

Third: Teams and fans that worship crack and cocaine fiends should never win again. What kind of a country do we live in where we let athletes commit murder (quite literally, look at O.J.), buy drugs and solicit prostitutes, and then embrace them again? Daryl Strawberry is a loser. He is a bad human being. He should not be seen as a hero or be allowed to ever step onto a baseball field again. Doc Gooden wrote a book chronicling the glory days with Daryl and the Mets. He recounted how he would pick up the outfielder on the way to the game, and he could tell that he was irate. They would drive to home games and Strawberry would sit in absolute silence. When they got to the park, Strawberry would want Gooden to drive him back home, so that he could yell at his wife some more. He makes Pete Rose look like a saint. The Straw should be in jail. The Sox let wife-beater Wil Cordero go because our team has a conscience. Only in New York is this man a hero. The good thing about his being in New York is that now the Straw can go partying with Latrell Spreewell and they can do some lines, choke some people, get some hookers and get louder praise the next day.

Fourth: Steinbrenner. I nough said.

Fifth: Teams that are bought should lose. Money is why the Yankees won. The Red Sox didn't stand a chance. Baseball, unlike the almost socialistic National Football League, is based on markets. The larger the market, the more the TV rights are worth, giving owners in larger markets more monies to use in paying players' salaries. If the Red Sox had won, something would have been wrong with our greedy society.

Sixth: Scott Brosius. He looks like Goofy. Any team with a guy who plays and looks like a Disney character deserves to lose all their games. They deserve to lose to the lowly Expos. My neighbor is from Massachusetts, born and raised, yet he roots for the Yankees. For the longest time I couldn't figure out why, and then I realized that he looks like Goofy, too.

Seventh: I can play second base better than Chuck Knoblauch can. I have never played baseball, not Little League nor Tee Ball nor coed softball. The closest I came was covering the UMass women's softball team last year, yet I am sure I can field the ball better than he can. I have seen pregnancy tests make fewer mistakes than he does. I have seen horny drunken friends at parties with beer goggles thicker than Kareem's make fewer mistakes than he does.

Eighth: It is a shame that Roger Clemens saved his best game at Fenway for this late in his career. He pitched the Red Sox to their only win of the series. Too bad you're on the other team now, Rocket! You are a fat washed-up sellout, and you don't deserve to wear a Boston uniform or ever win a championship.

Having come to these conclusions it became obvious to me that someone must pay for the injustice. Since I am always right, I feel like I was wronged by the Yankees victory. Actually, it wasn't as much a Yankees win as it was a Red Sox win; they beat themselves. After weighing the consequences of ruining, I decided it would be easier to skip all that nois nonsense and just kill someone. Since I am a lazy American, I decided to pay someone to do it. (Remember I am kidding.)

A Yankees fan should die to make an example for them all. You can't come into my state and insult my team without paying the price. One death is enough to instill fear into the hearts of the masses, or in this case the swine that cheer for the pinstripes. This was all the convincing that the bank needed to grant me my $100,000.00 loan for "other expenses." That was all the money I needed for a first-rate hit man.

After a day and a half of searching through all the punks with Yankees hats and undercover fans secretly leaning their lives, our perpetrator was discovered. He was real hard to spot in a pack of kids with black leather jackets announcing how everyone else's team could "Fogetabouta" in the World Series. Eventually I found someone Red Sox nation, I did this for you 1918 was so long ago. All the frustration has mounted and now we have finally won.

Hey, the worst that can happen to me is that I'll be convicted, but I'll come back in a few years. I'll get louder cheers than any athlete before me ever did. I'll make it into the Hall of Fame.

Matt Frascella is a Collegian columnist.

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Wednesday, October 20, 1999

Goo Goo Dolls to headline Mp3.com Music and Technology tour tonight

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

"I may was down. I don't think I'll make it on my own," sings John Rzeznik on the Goo Goo Doll's A Boy Named Goo.

Fortunately for this close-knit trio, the road back to the top has been very sweet indeed. Most people don't know that the Goo Goo Dolls had five albums before they released their multi-platinum, Dizzy up the Girl. Most people don't know about the years of playing local clubs, of personnel changes, of record disputes, and of personal growth. But, the Buffalo-based Dolls certainly know all about this.

The band, formed in 1987 by current members, the aforementioned Rzeznik and Robby Takac, has come along way from their punk roots and has finally arrived to stay. Tonight, the Goo Goo Dolls will be joined by Tonic as they hit the Mullins Center for what should be a memorable show.

When asked about their up and down career, bassist Takac said, "Well, lately it's been and up and up." He went on to say that it's been nice because the band has been able to "do it at our own pace," not expressing any frustration with their years of unrewarded toil in the music industry.

And that's how the Goo Goo Dolls strike you, as immediately down to Earth just like small town boys from Buffalo. Therefore, it comes as no surprise that the band was completely taken aback by their first commercial success, "Name." In a matter of weeks, "Name" became one of the most played singles of 1995 and rocketed to the top of the charts.

"'Name' was a shock period," exclaims Takac. "It's just one of those situations where we felt that we should go around to the radio stations and thank them for playing our song."

Almost three years later in 1998, the Goo Goo Dolls, while working on their soon to be released Dizzy Up the Girl, recorded "Iris" for the City of Angels soundtrack and it happened all over again. "Iris" was easily the most played song during the summer of 1998 and broke all sorts of records for time atop the charts.

In the midst of so much success for "Iris", Takac believes "'Slide' was a really important track for us. Just to prove that it was no fluke." And now "Black Balloon" is popping up on radio play lists across America.

Early on in their careers, the Goo Goo Dolls were doing the "post-punk Mid-western thing" as Takac put it. They sight bands like The Ramones and Soul Asylum as musical influences. He recalls how "most of the people we knew who listened to Led Zeppelin were morons."

And, with that realization, the Goo Goo Dolls were born, so to speak. Starting as teenage punk rockers and being refined by time, the Goo Goo Dolls have arrived at the kind of slide rock, no pun intended, which defines their music.

Takac explains, "We were at the point, 19 or 20, and there's three or four things we like, so we'll borrow from those things we like." While imitation may be the highest form of flattery, Takac is careful to explain, "It's not like we heard Grave Dancers Union by Soul Asylum and said we're going to do that album." He went on to say that you have to come at things from your own perspective and put your own interpretation on the music.

When asked if he minds being called a "boy band," Takac jests, "We're a man band." He then went on to say that "boy bands" are put together by a producer and disappear two years later. He categorizes the Goo Goo dolls as one of the 20 or so real rock bands out there right now.

How does he respond to the fact that those 20, including Matchbox 20, Sugar Ray, Fastball, and even Tonic, all sound the same? Takac attributes this to the current wasteland of modern radio, "What radio has allowed to get big is very limited." Takac said the group stresses the importance of an entire album and live performances like the one tonight, where fans can appreciate all of a group's music.

This is also where Mp3s and digital music can enter the picture, Takac believes. Commenting on the sponsor of their current tour, Takac reasoned, "Mp3 can open other avenues of music." However, he equated Mp3 to a double-bladed sword saying, "We're the most pirated band on the Internet right now." He added, "Bands are used to getting ripped off. Record companies aren't."

Takac believes that the major label eventually will find a way to prevent rampant piracy and that everyone will inevitably receive their music digitally.

For now, though, the Goo Goo Dolls are happy with the popularity of their album and are currently seeking to increase their fan base by touring. They'll be doing a military benefit tour soon, including a trip to Bosnia, and they'll be playing Times Square on New Year's Eve. Congratulations, boys, you really have made it.

The Goo Goo Dolls will be playing at the Mullins Center tonight at 7p.m. Tickets are available at the Mullins Center box office or through Ticketmaster. The band requests that anyone attending tonight's concert bring canned goods for an organization called USA Harvest. The donations go directly to helping the local community and, to date, over 650,000 cans have been collected.

The Goo Goo Dolls' Robby Takac (far left) talks about the success of his band.

COURTESY LANCE STADLER

Stereolab's latest pop-y fun

COURTESY DAVID COWLARD

Stereolab from left: Tim Gane, Mary Hansen, Laetitia Sadier, Simon Johns and Morgan Lhote.

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Staff

STEREOLAB
Cobra and Phases Group Play Voltage in the Milky Night
Elektra

Having a two-year gap between Stereolab albums is like having a two-minute gap between breaths. It's just not natural. Since their birth in 1991, Stereolab has made breakthroughs in electronic and experimental pop. Their latest release, the first after a two-year hiatus, Cobra and Phases Group Play Voltage in the Milky Night may be their most accessible, but that doesn't mean that just anyone can listen to it unprepared. The sonic arrangements of Cobra and Phases... are enough to ward off anyone with just a casual interest in the band, it the title weren't enough.

Throughout the 15 tracks of the disc, written by founding members Tim Gane and Laetitia Sadier, it seems as though the demented stylings of the band have obviously taken a step towards the mainstream; though not a huge step, mind you. They still have quite a long was to go.

Stereolab is a band that you either love or hate. There is no middle ground. Those of us that love this band would hate to see the experimentation and inventiveness depart — traits that are present in abundance on Cobra and Phases... Here, Stereolab has almost created a collection of insanely catchy pop songs. Instead, they have put together a few twisted versions of pop songs, sprinkled with a dose of freak-show jazz. "Infinity Girl" is a standout track that is a perfect example of such a song. Other traits of the deviant pop syndrome are strange time signatures (in songs such as "Free Design"), free association lyrics, and some songs entirely in French ("Strobo Acceleration").

With Stereolab, eccentricity has always been a help rather than a hindrance. The just plain weird quality to their music is what made their 1996's Emperor Tomato Ketchup so great. "Blue Milk" is the highlight of the album, a venture so far into the abyss, out of the solar system and back again, that you'd swear that the band has satellites up there trying to steal our brainwaves. It just wouldn't be a Stereolab album without a song like that, now, would it? The chirpy tune "Come and Play in the Milky Night," resonates with glee as it closes the album.

The level of accessibility achieved with Cobra and Phases... may be more so than accomplished with 1997's Dots and Loops. It seems as though the minimal level of normality is the price Gane and Sadier are paying before clutching your hand as they plunge headfirst into a melodic and bizarre soundscape. With a sound this aggressively strange, it can only be Stereolab. A-

COURTESY PHIL CARUSO

Bring out your dead
Nicolas Cage, Patricia Arquette, and Marc Anthony star in Martin Scorsese's Bringing Out the Dead, which opens Friday.

Friendly Fire a success

"Friendly Fire." Few word choices could better illustrate the atmosphere of a piece of American classical music such as this. Initially the engagement comes off as a jam session – a chance for two heavy improvisers to blow and share some compunitions – an impression which Joe Lovano and Greg Osby are quick to modify. Their music reaches directions that no cutting session would have the opportunity to touch upon, exploring the possibilities of a number of original tunes (three offered by each saxophonist), as well as some choice standards: one each by Eric Dolphy, Ornette Coleman, and Thelious Monk.

Jazz/Blues Weekly

By: Charlie Apicella

The music puts out a comfortable, adventurous vibe, which never once decays into excess or a lack of attention to the tunes. It is evident that the saxophonists are playing for themselves and for each other, but not at the expense of the rest of the ensemble – and certainly not at the expense of the music. The rapport between Lovano and Osby is consistently fresh, as neither one is willing to take a back seat to the other, creating a noticeable attentiveness to one another's ideas. True, this is a session with two front-men, yet this takes nothing away from the rest of the ensemble, as it is their communication which allows for the joint explorations of the front line. By staying committed to the dynamics of the tunes and to the evolution of each arrangement, the band is able to define new directions in each tune every time the soloist switches.

Pianist Muran offers exciting, tense comping throughout, creating common electricity from one soloist to the next. His solo on "Alexander the Great" – fueled by Idris Muhammad – is one of the highlights of the record. For instrumentalists as heavy as Osby and Lovano, sharing the weight of the session is a concept which each accepts with open ears. They share the enjoyment of listening to each other, as well as a joy for improvisation and an excitement by the loose, evolving arrangements of the tunes. Lovano and Osby counter and complement each other's playing to the utmost, as they are able to blow among and into one another without ever colliding melodically, rhythmically, or dynamically – as evident in "Ico Tico" as well as the climax of Ornette Coleman's "Broad Way Blues." Here Osby is first to solo over a light, rubato bass- and drumscape provided by Brown and Muhammad. Pianist Jason Moran then enters under Lovano and then solos himself before giving way to the idea exchanges between the horns. Following, the standards conclude with a duet on "Monks' Mood" in which Osby's alto is accompanied by Moran for a slow, bare-bones, ballad reading of the tune.

An angular, riff-based Lovano original "Idris" pays tribute to the legendary drummer in the form of an Art Blakey style drum-centered arrangement. Osby and Lovano play soprano saxophones among Muhammad's initial variations, before Lovano switches to flute and is accompanied by Brown for a rubato interaction with "Idris." Osby then takes an alto solo over drums while Brown lays a rapid cycle of changes. "Truth Be Told," an Osby original follows, and proves to be a highlight, featuring an interesting melody with changes that have an inherent groove, which the band keeps driven in the pocket.

Charlie Apicella is a Collegian columnist.

Disney's Blue Velvet?
Director David Lynch on the set of his new film, The Straight Story, from Walt Disney Pictures.

Channel surfing on Sunday

It was Sunday, and I was aimlessly channel surfing, waiting for the endless coverage of pro football to begin. Channel surfing is a great way to see what's on television without really committing to a show. Two or three seconds, tops, and then I'm outta there. It's a hit and run mission: see what's on FOX and then get back to watching whatever is on Comedy Central. God forbid that I, or any other television fan of the last 10 years (or since the invention of the remote control), should actually sit down and watch a show that we were not planning to watch. Damn spontaneity. Anyway, there I was channel surfing and I actually stopped.

That's right, I stopped. I broke the first commandment of channel surfing: DON'T STOP. But for some uncontrollable reason I did. Maybe because I yawned, or stopped to get something to drink, or perhaps the phone rang, but the point is I stopped. As my eyes focused on what was on the screen in front of me, I sat in disbelief.

One of my brother's friends once said that people will pay to view scantily clad women and guys beating the hell out of each other with explosions and loud music. Of course, this was responded to with everyone yelling at him and telling him such a thing already existed, and it was called pay-per-view wrestling. But on this Sunday, I bested that theory. I found a show that had all the things that people like about "rasslin" but with an added bonus for those people who really despise sensible thought. It's a show called "Battledome."

"Battledome" is a hybrid of other sports entertainment shows, like "American Gladiators," and many of the different professional wrestling telecasts out there. Like "American Gladiators," it throws normal everyday people in contests of brute strength against living and breathing walls of steroid-enhanced muscles. But unlike "Gladiators," the characters don't even pay attention to the challengers; instead the pillars of human tissue compete for the "Battledome Belt," which is a championship belt that changes hands each week. All the characters have their own theme music, and, as it is in all new shows on weekend mornings, a barrage of half-naked women. If you haven't guessed, this is a male-oriented show.

Nicholas Pizzolato

It answers the calls from all those hundreds of thousands of males yelling for more testosterone in television. They don't want to see Tim Russert interview Rudy Giuliani; they tune into "Meet the Press" to wait until Gov. Jesse "I'm going to spout taxes in half" Ventura speaks so they can pick up more words of wisdom. Well, television executives heard their cries and designed a show for those "real men" who want to see not only athletic, but scrawny, high-school teachers slug it out with ex-boxers, but also those same Dukes of Anaholica compete with each other, while their managers (beautiful women who could probably barely manage a check book, never mind a professional athlete) clap their hands, shake their peroxide heads, and jump up and down in tight outfits. And television executives wonder why people say that television is a bad influence on children.

Possibly the best thing about this show is that Steve Albert, the brother of Mars "Yes, I am a sex fiend" Albert, is the play-by-play announcer. Thus proving that you can go even further down the professional ladder after being a part of USA sports. He is accompanied by that guy with a raspy voice that hosted MTV's extreme sports weekend last year, giving the show a certain appeal to youth viewers, who by the end of the month will be dressing up as their favorite "Battledome Warrior" for Halloween.

I know wrestling is bad, but this is ridiculous. Does the south and unfortunately some of the adult population of America need another outlet for violence? What surprises me even more is that these shows get ratings. People actually enjoy this stuff. I mean, there is more depth in Steven Seagal's movies than there is in this show. Which brings up the question: Is our society a more violent society? Because of shows like "Battledome" and "RAW is WAR," has society become so disillusioned that we think it's OK to spit in someone's face and then throw them to the ground yelling, "Suck it." The calling card of the WWF's rouge group Degeneration X or as it's called affectionately by wrestling fans: DX? In fact, according to sales figures of WWF merchandise, the T-shirt sporting the logo of DX is the third highest grossing merchandise in the company, right after Stone Cold apparel and Rock gear. So that means that hundreds of thousands of impressionable kids in the United States are flipping off their teachers, telling their principal, "It doesn't matter what you want," and screaming at their parents to "Suck it" while they piss all their pants. The question that should be pondered is: Is this just good old harmless fun, or something even worse? Well, neither I nor anyone else holds the answer to that question, but it's something to think about next time you're channel surfing.

Nicholas Pizzolato is a Collegian columnist

Ginger writes, but can she read? Halliwell's book one to avoid

By Rinker Buck
The Hartford Courant

IF ONLY
Geri Halliwell
Delacorte Press

We all remember, of course, how devastating it was for America's musical adolescents when Geri Halliwell quit the Spice Girls last year. But when Ginger stiffed her four tart-tongued colleagues on the Girls – Sporty, Posh, Scary and Baby – she wasn't abandoning art for some tacky, inconsequential cosmetics or movie deal. Instead, she holed up in Beverly Hills and devoted herself to that ultimate edification of the mother tongue: writing a book.

If Only, Ginger's surprisingly understated title, is just out, and nobody needs to worry. It turns out that Ginger, who credits no ghost writer – is one hell of a writer. After dispensing with the preliminary requirements of all celebrity tell-alls – a father who died young, a mother who cleaned shopping malls, serious bouts with overspending and bulimia – she gets down to the kind of extremely vital and fascinating information that entices readers to pay $21.95 for an autobiography like this: to wit, what she wore the day she tried out for The Spice Girls.

Experience...
Collegian
.....Arts

GENERAL MEMBERSHIP MEETING
THE GOLDEN KEY NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY WILL MEET TONIGHT!!!
116 HERTER HALL
@ 6:30PM

A+
...for the teacher.

OUTSTANDING TEACHER AWARD
COLLEGE OF FOOD AND NATURAL RESOURCES
Students and faculty invited to submit nomination forms for the 1999-2000 award
Faculty in the following programs are eligible for nomination:
Animal Science • Building Materials and Wood Technology
Apparel Marketing • Entomology • Environmental Design
Environmental Sciences • Family and Consumer Sciences • Food Science
Forestry • Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration
Landscape Architecture • Microbiology • Natural Resource Studies
Plant and Soil Sciences • Resource Economics
Sport Management • Wildlife and Fisheries Conservation
• Forms available in 113 Stockbridge and departmental offices •

Attention!!! .....
UMass students and Daily Collegian fanatics
VOTE!!! For the 10 best movies and 10 best albums of the 90s. Either bring your entry down to the Collegian Office (Campus Center Basement) with your name and phone number or e-mail it to us at Daily_Collegian@hotmail.com. That's "Daily" underscore "Collegian." At the end of the semester, all votes will be tallied and the results will be published on the final 2 Arts covers. I encourage everyone to participate in both contests, but please limit your entry to one per person. Thanks, Adam Martignetti

todd oldham
dirty wash jeans
ZAMA
downtown Amherst

On Sale Friday Sept. 24 at 10:00am
MUSIC AND TECHNOLOGY TOUR '99
PLUS
The Village
featuring the goo goo dolls
TONIC
Top Local MP3.com Artists Will Be Performing in The Village All Day Long
Wed. Oct. 20
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
Advance tickets available at the Mullins Center Box Office and all Ticket Master locations.
To charge by phone call Ticketmaster at (860) 525-4500 or (413) 733-2500.
Purchase online at ticketmaster.com.
For additional info call the Mullins Center at (413) 545-0505
Presented by Jack Utsick Presents and Massconcerts
www.massconcerts.com

Thinking about grad school?
Talk isn't cheap...
it's free.
Saturday, October 30
Boston
Radisson Hotel Boston
• Meet one-on-one with over 100 Graduate School Representatives
• Learn how to prepare for the GRE tests
• Attend workshops and discussion of various graduate disciplines
• Obtain catalogs, applications, and financial aid information
Registration begins at 8:00 a.m. - Workshops begin at 8:30 a.m.
Graduate school exhibits open from 10:00 a.m. - 3:30 p.m.
Admission $5.00 or bring this ad and get in FREE!
For more information, call 1-609-771-7670 or check out our Web site at www.gre.org
GRE
ETS
Sponsored by the GRE Board and the Council of Graduate Schools. EDUCATIONAL TESTING SERVICE, ETS, GRADUATE RECORD EXAMINATIONS and GRE are registered trademarks of Educational Testing Service. The modernized ETS logo is a trademark of Educational Testing Service.

Collegian Sports sends it's sympathy to all Boston Red Sox fans!!

KARA STOKES/COLLEGIAN

Sticking it to the A-10

After downing the West Chester Rams on Sunday with an overtime goal, Kristen Schmidt and the Minutewomen will look to tame the UNH Wildcats this afternoon.

KARA STOKES/COLLEGIAN

Net Gains

The UMass volleyball team had mixed results over the weekend, beating George Washington but falling short against the Hokies of Virginia Tech.

Lady Tonya Harding attempts comeback

By Jennifer Frey
Washington Post

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. – She swore they weren't going to change her.

Back when she was 21, 22, 23, back before Nancy Kerrigan and the kneecapping, before the probation restrictions that crimped her travel, before she sold her wedding-night videotape to Penthouse, before her name started appearing in the same sentences with Joey Buttafuoco and John Wayne Bobbitt, a punch line to every trailer-trash joke in America, Tonya Harding was rough around the edges, and she didn't give a lutz. You grow up the way she did, and you don't have time for the snooty-tooty folks who think you aren't acting enough like a lady.

What did they know? Did they live in a trailer without electricity? Did they go to school wearing a bad wig after a free beauty school treatment burned their scalp bald? Did they wear polyester polka-dot pants homemade by a mama who seemed hellbent on making them the freakiest-looking kid in the class? Were they abused by the guy they married at 19 because, well, it's hard to leave someone who says he loves you when you're pretty sure you're fat and ugly and there's nobody around to tell you otherwise?

"I'm a '90s woman," Harding told a magazine years ago. "I speak my mind. I don't let anyone else tell me what I should or should not do. ... I'm: The women in the middle class and up are, like, 'You are a lady and a figure skater. You should act like a lady.' I'm not prissy."

A lady. Oh, how that word used to bother her. When Harding thinks about the way they used the word around her, "they" for Harding being the figure-skating world, some of the media, some of her neighbors and pretty much all the upper- and middle-class women who ever looked down on her, her tiny face scrunches up a bit. With her delicate fingers, she makes an almost involuntary quotation-mark gesture around the word.

Only it's okay now. Because, at 28, as she makes her professional comeback in West Virginia, Tonya Harding is determined to be a lady. She's convinced that she's all grown up. Just look at her – poised, polite, sweet-tempered as can be. She wants the world to know that it's really okay to let her back into the pristine world of figure skating. That she's not who they think she is anymore.

"I'm almost 29, and I've grown up," she says. "I'm a lady now."

Harding is in the lobby of a Holiday Inn, sipping coffee, smiling, rising occasionally to give a hug of greeting to one figure skater or another whom she hasn't seen in years. It was suggested by a publicist that this meeting would involve kicking back with a few beers, but Harding was having none of that. Coffee is fine. And then room service. A little television watching, and straight to bed.

It's a big week for Harding. On Oct. 18, she made her competitive professional debut here at the Huntington Civic Center in the USPA Professional Skating Championships. She fell twice in her program, then threw up her hands in a gesture that seemed to say "Hey, I tried," as the crowd of about 3,000 gave her a decent ovation, nary a boo to be heard. Highlights of the two-day event will be aired on ESPN on Oct. 25.

"I was very nervous," said Harding, who was in fourth place among five skaters after the first night. "My legs were pretty shaky, but the audience was absolutely wonderful and all the skaters here were totally awesome. ... I went out and did the best that I could after being off the ice for such a long time." For Harding, though, it's not the results that matter so much as the moment. This is her comeback. After five-plus long years, maybe she's finally being let back into the club.

They kicked her out in 1994, after the Kerrigan incident. Kerrigan was Harding's bitter rival leading up to the 1994 Winter Olympics, the one who got smacked a potentially crippling blow on the knee with a metal pipe in a whacked-out conspiracy that involved Harding's ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly, and her former bodyguard Shawn Eckardt. They claimed Harding was in on the plot; she swore she wasn't.

Whatever the case, Kerrigan wound up at the Lillehammer Olympics anyway, where she won the silver medal. Harding collapsed in tears at the event, got a second chance to perform because her skates weren't properly laced, then went home in disgrace and wound up pleading guilty to "hindering prosecution," a Class C felony.

The U.S. Figure Skating Association (USFSA), which controls eligibility for all amateur figure-skating events, including the world championships and the Olympics, banned her from competition for life. And the little girl who grew up with dreams of escaping the bad life with an Olympic gold medal found herself with no place to skate except the rink at the mall.

She thought she'd get a second chance, maybe after she finished her community service and paid her fines. She watched Darryl Strawberry get in trouble for all kinds of junk, cocaine use, tax fraud, soliciting prostitution, and wind up back in a Yankee uniform. She watched Mike Tyson get out of jail for rape, bite off somebody's ear, fly into a road rage, and still get opportunities to step into the boxing ring. She is an athlete, after all, and isn't there no limit on second chances for athletes in our world?

Apparently, not for Harding. Not in figure skating. Not for a bad girl in a sport that prided itself on having only two kinds of competitors, little girls made up to look like fairy princesses, and ladies. Ladies.

Harding didn't qualify.

Once the USFSA said no, and her attempts to skate the 1998 Olympics for another country failed, Norway said no, too, Harding hoped for the professional circuit. But she found the doors shut there, too. Basically, other skaters refused to compete with her out of fear of repercussions.

"There was an unspoken rule that she was to be blackballed," says Christopher Bowman, the former skating star who does television commentary on skating events. "The USFSA always says that's not true, but it's the perception, the idea. That's the thing about figure skating, there doesn't have to be a blacklist for there to be a blacklist, if you know what I mean."

So while figure skating got its best ratings ever, the sport enjoying a huge boom in popularity, Harding did what she could. She painted houses. She worked for a construction company. She got a bit part in a cable movie. She sold wedding-night videos of herself and Gillooly to Penthouse. She lost her house, ran out of money, kept skating at the mall.

Every once in a while, Harding's name would show up in the papers: She got married, and divorced, again. She sang in a rock band. She saved a woman's life by performing CPR in a bar. She was kidnapped by someone she described as a "bushy-haired" man and was forced to drive her truck into a tree. (No charges were ever filed.) She performed at halftime during a minor league hockey game in Reno, Nev.

"At first, there were a lot of boos, but then I got a standing ovation," Harding says. "Afterward I stayed and signed every single autograph, and there were, like, 400, and only one person said something that wasn't nice."

That was in early 1997, when Harding was still angry at the world, and working with an agent, David Hans Schmidt, who touted her as someone with a "trailer-park following." And it was right about when she decided it was time she had no choice but to grow up.

Harding moved from Portland, Ore., where she'd spent her whole life, to Vancouver, Wash., in July 1997. It was a symbolic move, really. Vancouver is right across the river from Portland, just a few miles away. But it was a big deal for Harding.

"It was, like, I'll leave the past over there, and I come over here and I'm in a new life."

She has shed all the people she knew in 1994, she says, including her mother, LaVona, whom she now refers to as her "biological mother." She has adopted a new family, Linda and Greg Lewis, a songwriting couple who met her a few years ago and formed an almost immediate bond. She has had the same boyfriend, a union electrician named Darren (she refuses to give his last name), for 27 months, and they live together with a dog Harding adores.

She also has dumped agent Schmidt, whom she describes as "not looking out for my best interests," and signed on with Michael Rosenberg, who represents a long list of well-known skaters.

"(Schmidt) wanted an image that wasn't me. He wanted the bad girl image and that's not who I am. ... I'm not going out to bars and partying and drinking and all that stuff. I'm usually home in bed by 10:30, and on the weekends by 11. I'm a homebody."

But what about that bad-girl image? It didn't come from nowhere.

"That's because the media portrayed me like that and because of the people I was associated with, and all of it kind of whirlwinded, and that's what they came up with," she says. "Now people realize that 'she's not a bad girl, she's a very nice lady,' and that's the way I want people to see me, that I'm a lady."

She's working very hard at it. At the rink, for her afternoon practice, she smiles graciously at everyone and waits politely for her turn. She gushes about how the photographers were so kind about not using too many flashes, while she practiced her jumps, to minimize distractions. She is pleased to meet everyone who wants to shake her hand. She is impossible not to like.

Harding is genuinely thrilled to be in this West Virginia town where Marshall University football's block-buster season is the biggest topic of local conversation, and a satellite feed of a World Wrestling Federation event drew a packed house to the local Family Fun Center on a Sunday night. When Rosenberg called and told her that she had finally, finally been invited to a competition, she didn't even ask where. She just cried for joy.

"I've been through the worst," Harding says, "and nothing can be as bad as it was in '94."

Even her skating is different than it was in 1994, changed just as she is. Once known as the big-jump skater, she is one of only two women to land a triple axel in competition, she now has a smoothness, a grace, that was lacking before. She is smaller, too, than she was when she skated in 1994, her body more delicate.

"Her skating really is more polished now," says Bowman, after Harding's pre-competition practice. "She's different than she was before."

Different, yes. But she's no skating Barbie doll, this new Tonya Harding. She still likes to drive big, souped-up trucks, her current model, a Ford pickup, stands 8 feet 6 inches high. She still puffs on a cigarette now and then despite the asthma that sends her rinkside for regular puffs on an inhaler during practice sessions. She still says what she thinks.

Collegian sports runs through Wendell Kim stop signs!!

Council Travel
4 Days Only
Sale Extravaganza
LONDON $86
MILAN $145
SHANNON $105
Ask about South American Sale Fares!
44 Main Street
Amherst MA
413-256-1261

Learn to Meditate!
Meditation Workshops
UMASS Campus Center

THE MONKEY BAR & GRILLE
WEDNESDAY NIGHT IS PROMO NIGHT
with DJ Fooz
This Week Features
Guinness
Come in and Win Free Prizes
THE ONLY PLACE TO DANCE IN WEDNESDAY NIGHTS WITH A DJ
GUARANTEED TO MAKE YOU MOVE
The Monkey Bar Features Cajun Cuisine
Featuring Daily Luncheon and Dinner Specials
63 N. Pleasant St. 259-1600

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
-DISCOUNT OIL-
NORTHAMPTON • HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

Women's rugby mauls the competition

Club status doesn't keep Mad Dogs from dominating N.E.

By Catherine Turner
Collegian Staff

As the afternoon sun shone across the mountains to the west of campus yesterday, the air was crisp and perfect for an afternoon workout. From under the sparse canopy of autumn trees emerged the giant expanse of greenery that is the playing fields behind the Mullins Center.

Even from afar, the colossus that is the Massachusetts women's rugby team is noticeable. At 4:00 every afternoon, you can find this committed and intense group of women on the field, preparing for another battle.

So far this season, the Mad Dogs (not the Minutewomen) are number one in their division with a record of 4-0, and no one seems able to stop their winning tirade. Last weekend, they beat Dartmouth 37-0 with trys by senior captain Jen Linker and Sophomore Anne Garrison.

In the last couple of years, UMass has definitely become a clean-up team. Last season they gave up only three points the entire season and made it to the Nationals. As they climbed to the top of the ladder, they gained a reputation for being hard-core winning machines and for taking no prisoners, as they dominated the Northeast league.

This season, all three sides have won every game, which is another clear indication that their current supremacy will continue into the future.

Despite popular belief, this sport is not the barbarous bloodbath that people often picture. Nor is it just a cross between soccer and football, or just a bunch of wild women running around a field trying to beat the crap out of one another for 80 minutes. Rugby is actually a complex and organized sport that anybody could easily get into within minutes of witnessing a game.

And anybody will get the opportunity to witness a game this upcoming Saturday at noon, as the Mad Dogs face Boston College at the fields behind the Mullins Center. The team will undoubtedly pluck the feathers from the Eagles and remain at the top of their division.

With their season ending around the November 15th, the pack of 50 women are ready to serve up some beat-down at their next three games, all of which are at home. The ambulances are ready to attend to any injuries that might occur, from broken collarbones and sprained ankles to concussions and torn ACLs. Scratches and lacerations don't stop the combat though, as the running clock keeps the game rolling and teams must substitute on the fly.

The intensity of the players doesn't cease when the game ends. All the women live, eat and breathe rugby. They are always psyched for new fans and are always eager to take time out to explain any play or rule. A lot of the players admitted to joining the team after going to games and falling under the spell of the action.

Junior Sarah Piccioli described her experience on the team as "a great game, a great sport. All my friends are rugby players; it's turned into my life." This sentiment is shared across the field, from the hard-rucking forwards to the open-field running backs.

When the spring season begins in February, the Mad Dogs will be practicing in the purple lot near Southwest. The off-season includes indoor workouts and plenty of R&R. But until then, the women are enjoying themselves and their phenomenal record.

With little support from the school and even less funding from the Student Government Association's Registered Student Organization fund, it's up to the players and fans to keep the women's rugby program alive.

As the sun set over the Berkshires yesterday afternoon, the shadows of soaring rugby balls lined the grass behind the Mullins Center. The school week drudges on, but attention remains focused on the battle ahead. Spirits are high and adrenaline is pumping for the UMass-BC conflict Saturday.

Catch more of the action and learn about the game on their website, www.ecs.umass.edu/rugby/UMass/rugby.html.

DAN SANTEE/COLLEGIAN

After an amazing '98 season in which they didn't allow a single try and advanced to the Sweet Sixteen, the women's rugby club is off to another great start this year.

football

continued from page 12

lege football. Marques Tuiasosopo has led the Huskies to victories over conference rivals Colorado and Oregon. Saying that meant more five years ago, much like a victory over Washington would have. The PAC-10 has fallen out of the top five, for sure, in conference rankings, as embarrassing losses by Arizona (41-17 against Penn State) and Arizona State (35-7 hosting New Mexico State) have hammered away at the team's power rankings.

The worst part about its decline is how the parity in the conference takes away from what used to be college football's biggest and best bowl, the Rose Bowl. While the Big 10 continues its assembly line of Top 5 teams, the PAC-10 is on the verge of turning the game into a one-sided comedy. Case in point, UCLA, who had BCS hopes themselves until falling four points short at Miami, were knocked off by a good, but not great Wisconsin squad 38-31. While the Badgers clearly had a great season, finishing with just a 27-10 loss at Michigan, the catch is that it was a home game for the Bruins. The conference went just 1-4 in Bowl games, its only victory coming when Arizona knocked off Nebraska in the Holiday Bowl. Even then, the 'Huskers had a huge down year, losing four games in Frank Solich's first season at the helm.

California is a prime suspect to provide even more equality from top to bottom. At 3-3 and coming off a big victory at UCLA, the road ahead looks treacherous and victories will not come any easier than at home against an average Washington team.

Sticking with home 'dogs, I'll go with California getting three against the Huskies.

With the rest of the world of college football, I'll take Oregon on the road at Arizona, getting three, Texas Tech, giving nine at Baylor and Minnesota, giving 2 1/2, hosting Ohio State.

Feverish fans still couldn't break Boston's dumb luck

By Thomas Boswell
Washington Post

BOSTON – Just the Red Sox' luck. Their Fenway Park fans finally get tough, do their ugliest imitation of Yankee Stadium goons, and what happens? In the next game, the Yanks send Orlando Hernandez to the mound, a guy who defected from Cuba in an open boat.

Do you think "El Duque" stayed up all night tossing and turning before Game 5 of the American League Championship Series worrying that some looped college box might toss an empty plastic soda bottle at him?

"What's to scare him after leaving Cuba? We really don't know what size boat he came over on, but ... he had to slide out of the country ... hide somewhere and be found," said Yankees Manager Joe Torre. "That's not the way we got to the ballpark. I know that. So, this is just a game to him."

So, Orlando, how do they compare for ferocity to Cuban fans?

"In Cuba, they throw from rocks to tomatoes, to anything they can find onto the field," said Hernandez through his translator, coach Jose Cardenal. "If you win, the opposing fans, they're going to try to beat you any way they can. Then if you lose, your own fans are going to try to kill you. So, it's one way or another. We don't have a choice."

Hernandez had to suppress his mirth. Which towns were tougher than Boston? "Santiago, Villa Clara, Havana," said Hernandez. That doesn't even count all the other Caribbean countries where Cuba's national team plays in legendarily hostile parks. Latin baseball, especially what Cuba faces in international play when they wear the black hats, makes the big leagues look like a church picnic.

Maury Wills, managing in winter ball, once returned to the dugout after removing a favorite local pitcher. The fans poured a bucket of urine on his head. Now that's grass-roots public opinion in action. Hernandez grew up in a baseball culture where rival fans don't even sit on the same side of the stadium. By staying apart, they can use slingshots to lay siege to each other. Hernandez pitched in parks where, over the years, sections of bleachers were broken up to start good-luck bonfires.

When the wind-chill factor is 26 degrees, the crowd is howling and the Green Monster seems to loom about 10 paces behind your shortstop, it's good to have those memories of Santiago and Villa Clara. The Red Sox had Hernandez, who was 17-9 this season, in plenty of jams. Yet the hot water just seemed to warm him up.

look who the Yankees send to the mound. The bald guy with the high-knee kick, the mysterious birthday and the best cell-block stare since Dave Stewart.

Collegian Sports gets the green on 3-0

Keep your summer tan!
Special: 1 month unlimited only $49.99
Regency Hairstylists
184 N. Pleasant St.
253-9526

Great Reasons to use UHS Eye Care Services
1 A great place to get contacts lenses.
2 Free sample start-up contact lens solutions
3 Savings on routine eye exams for students at UMass.
4 Same day replacement of disposable contact lenses, in many cases.
5 FREE eyeglass adjustments and one year warranty on frames.
Frederick H. Bloom, O.D. Director, UHS Eye Care Services
University Health Services
For appointments or questions, Call 577-5244

THE WALK-IN CLOSET!!
$1.00 OFF
OPEN W,TH,F 10AM-5PM SUNDAYS 11Am-5Pm CLOSED MONDAY & TUESDAY
Rte. 9
206 Russell St., Hadley, MA 01035
(413) 584-5677
Used Clothing Shoes Accessories
$1.00 OFF
Any purchase over $5 with this coupon

■ men's x-c

continued from page 12

the Maroon and White had to overcome at the competition. Many of the runners were fighting to recover from a bout with the flu, which they had experienced just the week before. The illness had left them feeling drained, and just short of their peak performance level.

"I had taken a couple of days off because I had been sick and I had missed a couple big workouts, so I wasn't really sure how it was going to pan out," said lead runner Corbett. "But that race was more of a mental effort than any of the races before, and I was really happy that I could run that fast with the amount of time I had taken off."

One thing that may have worked in favor of the Minutemen at the enormous race was the course at Franklin Park. While certainly a challenge, it is not as demanding as the course that they will encounter in two weeks when they travel to the Atlantic 10 Championships.

"It's basically flat, with one piece of hill, and the times are generally really fast there," said Corbett.

In comparison the course that they will be expected to run at the Atlantic 10 championships is slightly more treacherous.

"The course in Philadelphia is a little bit more demanding. There's one hill that's almost straight up for a good bit, and there are a couple of hills that keep winding up. So it's a different course. It's a more strength demanding course than Franklin Park," Corbett said.

The Minutemen will next be in action October 30th at Belmont Plateau in Philadelphia at the Atlantic 10 Championships. There they'll come face to face with the likes of Virginia Tech, Dayton, and St. Joseph's.

Following that, they'll be traveling to the Lemon Bowl of Indiana in Bloomington, where they'll compete in the NCAA Championships.

women's x-c

continued from page 12

Last year, as a freshman, Kristin Ciosowki astonished many by winning the individual title at the A-10 Championships. Also, she was named the conference's Most Outstanding Rookie. Ciosowki was the first freshman to ever have won the A-10 race. This year she has given the Minutewomen most of their third place finishes, except for the Vermont meet in which she finished second.

Sally Hirsch and Melissa Henderson also have a history with the A-10 Championships. Both earned All-Conference honors for two consecutive seasons. Hirsch placed third at the Championships and Henderson finished sixth.

Also pacing the field for the Maroon and White in the race will be Nicole Way, Shannon Hennessy, and Elizabeth Shepeck.

Next: With his finishing first or two in all of the Minutemen the past five meets, Jason Varitek has also added a strong second place finish at the UMass Open. Will he be able to continue his streak, or should someone finish in front of him at the end of the season? Stay tuned. Also get the A-10 Championship Meet first hand.

Sources: Sharon Hirsch and Elizabeth Shepeck have both been of experience with the UMass track. Hirsch set Amherst records in the 5K and 10K last year.

Through darkest of times, Sox fans play waiting game

By Bill Plasche
Los Angeles Times

BOSTON – Twenty minutes past midnight, wading through the trash and remorse of Fenway Park Section 17.

Jose Offerman hits a weak grounder to first base.

"Ohhhhhhhh," shouts an elderly man, slapping his mitten against his thigh.

John Valentin hits a fly ball to center field.

"Don't come down, don't come down!" shouts another man, pleading with two chapped hands, in vain.

Jason Varitek hits a fly ball to left. This, too, unfortunately comes down.

The New York Yankees race to the middle of the field and pile on top of each other on their way to the World Series. The Boston Red Sox disappear into their dugout to face another winter like the 79 winters before it.

After spending the last three days shouting a nasty chant at the Yankees and umpires and opposing fans, the Fenway folks stare at the field and chant it at themselves.

"This (bleeps), this (bleeps)," says Ace Trainor, a 23-year-old man who no doubt learned such things from neighbors three times his age.

And so it has happened, as it most certainly had to happen, as it could happen forever in this place bathed in the eerie glow of failure.

The Boston Red Sox have lost another postseason series, they could have won. This time it was with a 6-1 loss to the Yankees on Monday that gave their detested rivals a four games-to-one victory in the American League championship series. But this

MASSACHUSETTS SCHOOL OF LAW

Although it also produces highly intellectual engineers and over 500 television stations and a general intellectual magazine that is read across the country, MSL's main focus is on teaching you the practical skills you need for success in law, business and government. We teach you to analyze legal, business and human problems, analyze facts, and organize them logically, write well, be persuasive both orally and in writing, negotiate, arbitrate and mediate, try cases, and write specialized legal documents. And at MSL, you will be taught by experts who regularly practice these skills.

The non-specialized skills that we teach you such as the ability to analyze problems, amass and organize facts, and write and speak persuasively, are needed not only in law, but are greatly desired in business.

MSL teaches you all these crucial skills at a tuition that is by far the lowest of any law school in New England – about half of the median tuition elsewhere in New England. The following chart of full-time tuitions illustrates this:

School 1	$25,550	School 7	$21,750	School 13	$17,075
School 2	$24,448	School 8	$21,200	School 14	$15,950
School 3	$24,090	School 9	$20,200	School 15	$14,950
School 4	$23,520	School 10	$20,150	MSL	$10,800
School 5	$22,708	School 11	$19,084
School 6	$22,054	School 12	$17,986

• LSAT not required • Rolling Admissions
Classes enter in January 2000 and August 2000
500 Federal Street, Andover, MA 01810 • (978) 681-0800
WWW.MSLAW.EDU

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free CD of Cool Indie Music when you register at MyBytes.com, the ultimate wesite for your college needs

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 Bedroom Atp. in Sunderland on bus route, Ht/HtW, electricity included. Well kept good location 665-4120

Apt. Available 2-Bedroom. A/C, Dishwasher, Washer/Dryer, Pool, Volley and Basketball Courts. Ht/HtWtr included on bus router 397-9870

AUTO FOR SALE

87 Honda Accord Sedan white 125,468 miles $1,200 or BO 546-4513

1992 Jetta GL CD, A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500 546-1773

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know you legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

1992 Mercury Sable Wagon 120K miles. Good condition. Plus 4 snow tires. Call 256-0067

92 Saab 900S Good Condition lots of extras $3500.00 413-545-0136 or 413-967-7145

AUTO FOR SALE

87 VW JETTA-GLI $1,000 5Spd. Runs strong, good tires, recent clutch, exhaust. 256-6235

COMPUTERS

Computer Problems? We've got solutions. New systems to technical service. Call 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Personal Care Attendent for male quad. Mornings $9.50/hr. Call 546-0666

SUMMER MANAGEMENT INTERNSHIP On Campus Information Interviews Thursday October 21st Position pay from $5000-$15,000 For details visit www.univpaint.com To schedule interview Call Diane 1-800-390-4848 Ext. 100

Bakers Wanted Part-Time or Full-Time. Early morning hours. Apply at Rao's Coffee in person.

Experienced House Cleaner for family home in Leverett $8hr. Susan 548-9870

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phsically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

EMPLOYMENT

Part-time phone reps needed for wicked cool candy company located in Amherst. We have two-hour shifts available between 10AM and 5PM. Monday-Friday. You must work a minimum of three shifts per week. Base pay, plus commission on all new sales. Average pay $10-$12/hour with commission included. Must be outgoing with some sales/customer service experience, however, personality is most important. Please contact Beth McCabe for more information: 888-556-5599

Spring 2000 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field--work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary--training provided. Contact the Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center

Baker/Cook/Customer Service Prepare foods,batters, doughs, recipes. In Village Market. FT/PT PM/Weekends 1 mile from campus. Cushman Village 413-549-1953

EMPLOYMENT

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

Coaching Positions Girls JV Basketball and Diving. Contact Rick Frances Williston-Northampton School-Easthampton (413) 529-3253

DP Dough is hiring drivers and kitchen help. Must be able to work nights. Approxiametly $20/hour. Apply at DP Dough.

FOR RENT

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deducions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Offfice, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Fridge Rentals - Free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Queen Size Bed with beautiful headset and pillows $200.00 Got to move. Call Antonio at 549-0661

Skiing and Snowboarding season passes only $300! Stratton and Okemo Call Michael 549-6494

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons by retired pro Djata Bumpus in Amherst on UMass Bus Rte. Call 256-0364

Casco Bay Bartending Classes start soon student discounts call for information 1-800-467-2028 Space is Limited

LOST & FOUND

GM Key Found in SW Purple Lot 253-1691

LOST CAT: Near Leach, Orange Tabby Please Call 665-9950 Leave Message

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate Wanted to share 1bdrm in 2bdrm apt in Sunderland 15min from campus $365/mo + utilities. Call Paula 413-397-9768

SERVICES

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

Browse icpt.com for ALL Springbreak "2000" hotspots. Need Student Orgs & Sales Reps. Fabulous parties, hotels, prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

TRAVEL

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nice in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplash-tours.com

Check This Out!!

Your Ad could be right here in this very space!!

Call 545-3500

Are you looking to advertise to THOUSANDS of students....

You found the right page!!

Come by The Daily Collegian located in the Campus Center Basement room 113!! or just call: 545-3500

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, OCT 20

Seminar – There will be a one-hour stress reduction seminar for students from 9:30-10:30 a.m. at the Synthesis Center in Amherst. Call 256-0772 for more information.

THURSDAY, OCT 21

Panel – Environmental justice panelists will explore questions concerning environmental inequities, how much risk is acceptable and who should make that decision, and how we can distribute the burdens of environmental hazards more evenly across economic groups and nations at 7:30 p.m. in Gamble Auditorium at Mount Holyoke College.

NOTICES

Art – The Wheeler Gallery will present "Cellblock Visions: Cell Division – Prison Art in America," on display until Nov. 7. The Gallery is located in Central Residential Area.

Art – The Student Union Visual and Performing Art Space will be showing an exhibit of undergraduate artwork, focusing on the self-portrait, until Oct. 29. Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday, 9:30 a.m.-5 p.m.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is now open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops call 545-2096, or stop by the Craft Center.

Support – The Counseling Services Program at the Everywoman's Center is offering a free support group for women living with bipolar disorder on Wednesdays from 5:15-6:45 p.m. There will be four consecutive sessions at the Everywoman's Center in Wilder Hall. Call 545-0663 for more information, or to register.

Support – A grief support group for undergraduate and graduate students is available starting Tuesday, Oct. 27 from 6-7:30 p.m. Telephone prescreening is required. Call 577-5316 or 545-0041 if interested.

Volunteer – Volunteers are needed to help clean up the campus pond as part of Make a Difference Day. The cleanup is on Saturday, Oct. 23 at 9:30 a.m. Anyone interested can call 545-0199, or just show up on Saturday.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413-545-2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 20, 1999

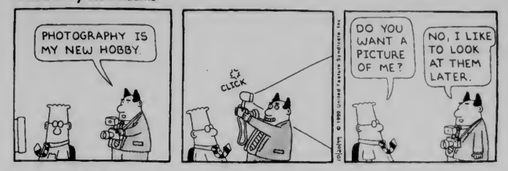
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	32	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Mark Russell	Great Performances "The Gershwins' Crazy for You" (In Stereo)				Happy Birthday	Gershwin
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Cosby	Work With Me	★★ "Eye for an Eye" (1996, Drama) Sally Field. (In Stereo)			News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Cosby	Work With Me	★★ "Eye for an Eye" (1996, Drama) Sally Field. (In Stereo)			News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Two Guys-Girl	Norm	Drew Carey	Oh Grow Up	20/20	News	Nightline
WLVI	6		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		Roswell "Monsters" (In Stereo)		News	Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Major League Baseball Playoffs: NLCS Game 7 – Diamondbacks or Mets vs. Braves or Astros				News	News	Tonight Show
WTXX		6	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Reel TV	Reel TV (R)	7 Days "For the Children"		Star Trek: Voyager "Alice"		News	Caroline	Change-Heart
WVIT		30	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Major League Baseball Playoffs: NLCS Game 7 – Diamondbacks or Mets vs. Braves or Astros				News	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	61	Baseball Playoffs		Seinfeld	Friends	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Get Real "Anatomy of a Rumor"		News	Friends	Frasier
WWLP	9	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Major League Baseball Playoffs: NLCS Game 7 – Diamondbacks or Mets vs. Braves or Astros				News		Tonight Show
WGBY	10	4,	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Mark Russell	Great Performances "The Gershwins' Crazy for You" (In Stereo)				Charlie Rose	(In Stereo)
WGGB	40	29	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Two Guys-Girl	Norm	Drew Carey	Oh Grow Up	20/20	News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	7 Days "For the Children"		Star Trek: Voyager "Alice"	Blind Date	NHL Hockey: Bruins at Kings
WTBS	72		Rosanna	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★★ "Grease" (1978, Musical) John Travolta, Olivia Newton-John.				★★★ "Michael" (1996, Fantasy) John Travolta.
A&E	69		Simon & Simon		Law & Order "Privileged"		Biography: Ray Walston		Investigative Reports (R)		American Justice (R)	Law & Order "Renunciation"
CNN	43	21	Worldview	Moneyline News	hour	Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand	Sports	Moneyline
COM	65	28	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stain's Money	★★★ "Dirty Rotten Scoundrels" (1988, Comedy) Steve Martin,			South Park	Man Show	Dairy Show	Stain's Money
DISC	67		Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery	Hidden	On the Inside "Coma" (R)		In a Volcano's Path		Riddle of the Desert Mummies	On the Inside "Coma" (R)
ESPN	51		Sportscenter		Extreme	Sweet Science			Billiards	PBA Bowling Track/Dexter Open		Sportscenter
LIFE	45		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait "Patti LaBelle"		Chicago Hope "Karmic Relief"		"My Little Assassin" (1999, Drama) Gabrielle Anwar.			New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	70		Global Groove	MTV Jams	Beat Suite	TRL	TRL (R) (In Stereo)		Biorhythm (R)	True Life	Biorhythm	Loveline	(In Stereo)
NICK	46		All That	Celdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Rocket Power	Brady Bunch	I Love Lucy	Jeffersons	Sanford & Son	All in Family	Meude
SCIFI	66		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Sliders "The King Is Back"		Sliders "Luck of the Draw"		Sliders "Into the Mystic"		Sliders "Love Gods" (In Stereo)	Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales
TLC	68	26	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours (R)		Extreme Machines (R)		Greatest Engineering Feat		Mega Tech (R)	Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	50		Due South (In Stereo)		ER "9 1/2 Hours" (In Stereo)		★★★ "The Breakfast Club" (1985, Comedy-Drama) Emilio Estevez.			★★★ "Shine" (1996, Drama) Armin Mueller-Stahl, Noah Taylor.
USA	49		Baywatch "Leap of Faith"		JAG "With Intent to Die"		Walker, Texas Ranger		★★ "Reality Bites" (1994, Comedy-Drama) Winona Ryder.			Baywatch "Face of Fear"
HBO	59		4:00) ★★★ "Titanic" (1997)		★★ "The Golden Child" (1986, Comedy) Eddie Murphy. "PG-13"				★★★ "Beverly Hills Cop" (1984, Drama) Eddie Murphy. "R"			Chris Rock	Oz (In Stereo)
MAX	60		★★★ "Geronimo: An American Legend" (1993) Jason Patric.				★★ "Digging to China" (1998) Kevin Bacon. "PG"		★★½ "The Sex Monster" (1998, Comedy) Martin Hemingway. "NR"			Pleasure Zone
SHOW	69		(4:15) ★★ "Last Action Hero" (1993, Adventure) Arnold Schwarzenegger. "PG-13"				★★★ "As Good as It Gets" (1997, Comedy-Drama) Jack Nicholson. "PG-13"					Beggars

HSCN Hearing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gravel to Gravel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	26	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere



Joe Banani By JD Schneider

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Fox Trot By Bill Amend

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You can impress a loved one today simply by getting down to business when the time comes. Distractions and hesitation are not for you at this time.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You may receive an invitation that is difficult to turn down today, but your schedule may simply be prohibitive.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Look past the obvious today and trust that your own special insights will shed light on one or two difficult issues.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Now is the time to put that bad habit to bed for good – or if not for good, at least while someone you love is watching!

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Something unexpected and highly unusual is likely to happen to you today that will affect the coming week in a subtle but important way.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – What you want and how you can get it may be unclear during the first part of the day, but later on, certain events will clarify much for you.

Aries (March 21-April 19) – You needn't subject yourself to anything that doesn't suit either your mood or your taste. Be sure your refusals are polite and tactful.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – You will want to find a way out of a difficult personal or professional situation today. There is more to this problem than the environment, however.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – You'll get a valuable, up-close view of something quite new and intriguing today. A loved one has a surprise offering in store for you later on.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – A little flattery can get you everywhere with a loved one today, but take care that it isn't just empty words. Notice the little things!

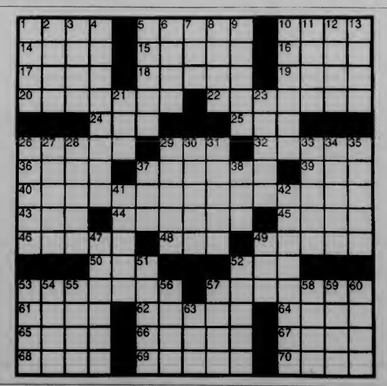
Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – Earning power may be a major issue today, and someone close to you may raise unexpected objections when you describe a new strategy.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – It may be time for you to trade places with a loved one so that you can both learn a few important and timely lessons about each other.

Quote of the Day

"...and that's why I stopped wearing underwear."

-Overheard, walking through campus



Close to Home By John McPherson

The latest fad to sweep the nation's high schools: trampoline shoes.

ACROSS
1 Envelope part
5 "Beat it!"
10 Lab-culture medium
14 A Chaplin
15 Andes beast
16 Anger
17 Oodles
18 Gung-ho
19 Zone
20 Massaged
22 Snacked
24 Party staple
25 Yes, Henri
26 Fix the clock
29 Harem chamber
32 Western
36 Actor Thicke
37 Badly
39 Gold: Sp.
40 Paul Anka hit song
43 Choose
44 Orchard fruits
45 Director Kazan
46 Lacks
48 Female bird
49 Atelier item
50 FedEx rival
52 Dedicated to 53 Deny
57 Related
61 Out of control
62 Radium discoverer
64 Wander
65 Go out with 66 Whale's diet
67 Ajar
68 Herring's cousin
69 Got up
70 Coops

DOWN
1 Type of dance
2 Symbol of craziness
4 Rose Bowl site
5 Resting state
6 Attired
7 Type of doll
8 Preacher's word
9 Lanza of opera
10 Saudi —
11 Female
12 Out of the wind
13 Use the library
21 Morse-code signal
23 Channel markers
26 Synthetic fabric
27 Marry in haste
28 Fry lightly
29 Attractiveness
30 Holmes creator
31 "Our Miss Brooks" star
Eve —
33 Works hard
34 "Sesame Street" regular 35 Shade of blue
37 Energy
38 Guitarist Paul
41 Coarse files
42 Pendant shape
47 Immersed
49 A very long time
51 Bags
52 Meadow
53 Flits about
54 Asian nurse
55 Jot
56 Nomad's tent
57 2.2 pounds
58 Hemp product
59 Tied
60 Lairs
63 Carnival city

ASKED LODE JIBE
SMIME OPAL ERIK
HASTE WINK WOKE ENSEMBLE GENES RELY WOOL
SEGEDE VALOROUS
PLOD USAGE YALE
AGA APE RTE
RITA ODORS GERM
KNITMEAR PANDAS
TART LIMA PAMED MONORAIL
ITEM GRAB ELUDE
PEEP HERB BELLA
SEPT TINKY ADDED

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Adam Martignetti
Photo Technitian	Nicole Gottwald
Copy Editor	Tamar Carroll
Production Supervisor	Joylyn Lombard
Production Staff	"berto" Delgado, Melanie Thomas

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Wednesday, October 20, 1999

OSU tries to lasso K. State

They were laughed at, falling into the Bowl Championship Series trap that was conveniently set for them at the end of the year. It will go into BCS history as the timeliest collapse ever.

For their soft schedule, they took nationwide flak, as they were on the verge of playing for a national championship without having beaten anyone. They are the Kansas State Wildcats and Manhattan is giving them another shot.

Not much has really changed, but the 'Cats look to be more sound and more determined than last year's squad who often relied on the athletic, but sometimes inconsistent Michael Bishop. Their quarterback seemed like their only hope, as fans saw the finish line ahead, but knew that if a Tennessee or a Florida State crossed first in 1998, the 'Cats would be out of luck in '99, graduating eight seniors on offense.

Brett Mauser on College Football

Or so they thought.

While Texas remains its only test, KSU has ridden its defense to a 6-0 record and the eighth slot in the latest Associated Press Top 25 poll. While the offense has put points 35 points or more on the board in each of its games, the defense truly sets the stage, allowing just seven rushing yards in last week's 40-0 drubbing of Utah State.

This week, the Wildcats head to Stillwater to battle an Oklahoma State team that has already proven its worth. While sporting just a 3-2 record, the Cowboys' ugly losses have come to perennial power Nebraska and returning SEC West champion Mississippi State, both on the road. A week after the Cornhusker loss, OSU bounced back with a 41-21 win over Texas Tech, who seems to have taken a step up even with the loss of Ricky Williams.

Kansas State suffered last year with a short secondary, giving up big play after big play as teams ran play-action fakes to spring open receivers. This was evident when Texas A&M beat the Wildcats with a sound passing scheme in the league championship, and then Purdue followed suit in the Alamo Bowl.

This season, the 'Cats have clawed their way back to the top, but many are doubting KSU already, despite not having tested its merit just yet. Colorado and Nebraska still lurk in November, both likely to be challenging for the Big 12 at that point, but the Wildcats were lucky when Tech and A&M failed to show on their schedule.

The Cowboys will come at KSU on the ground, pitting strength against strength. But they really have no choice. Yes, they gained 243 yards against the Red Raiders two weeks ago, but the passing attack has become a moot point, as B.J. Tiger hardly invokes fear upon an opposing defense. Nebraska found that weakness, forcing Tiger and backup Ben Bowling into a 7-for-21 performance, tossing for only 85 yards. OSU's only score in its 29-11 loss to Mississippi State came on defense, its rushing attack settling for just 85 yards. The Tigers still haven't lost but, like Kansas State, haven't beaten anyone yet.

Quarterback Jonathan Beasley may be the best thing that has happened to Stillwater. Just a junior, Beasley's 6'1" frame gives the 11-year head coach a dropback quarterback that plays more into the hands of the Big 12 style of play, one that demands a ground game and shies away when confronting a passing attack. In the team's closest contest thus far, Iowa State forced Beasley out of the game due to ineffectiveness. His replacement, Adam Helm, along with solid special teams work, guided KSU all the way back from a 28-7 deficit to defeat ISU in Ames, 35-28.

Problem. Iowa State hasn't been a Bowl since 1978 and has no business going blow for blow with the Wildcats.

This time, the 'Cats won't be so lucky. Night will fall on Manhattan earlier than expected. On the road, getting a meaty 7 1/2 points, I'll choose Oklahoma State in a Big 12 upset.

Last week: 4-1
Overall: 15-9-1

Rick Neuheisel inherited a football powerhouse, as Colorado had slowly fallen from grace. The days of Mark Brunell are gone, but quarterbacks have continued to filter in and out of Seattle. The Huskies have slipped a step but each and every year, especially with a name like Neuheisel at the helm, one cannot write off Washington until a couple losses in.

With one of the great surnames in col-

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 9

Field hockey set for New Hampshire war

UMass must overcome grass and scrappy 'Cats

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

They will have to fend off both the field and the foes to finish first in this fight.

The Massachusetts field hockey team (7-8, 3-0 Atlantic 10) will be in search of its fourth win in a row as it heads into a natural-grass battle with New Hampshire (9-5, 4-1 America East) in Durham, N.H. at 3:30 this afternoon.

The host Wildcats will stumble into battle having dropped three of their last four games, including humbling shutouts at the hands of Dartmouth and Old Dominion.

The Minutewomen, meanwhile, have hit their stride with the onset of the regional and conference portion of their '99 slate. Inspiring victories over A-10 foes La Salle and West Chester this past weekend rocketed UM to the top of the conference standings, and a sudden surge of offensive power has the Maroon and White licking its chops for a shot at downing UNH and returning to the .500 mark.

"We're excited, but we also know that UNH is a tough team," said UM scoring leader Anke Bruemmer. "This will be one of our tougher grass games."

The fact that today's action will unfold on a natural surface should mean a slower game, where fundamental hockey will spell the difference between victory and defeat. While the Minutewomen are undoubtedly built for the speed of the Astroturf game, coach Patty Shea has already addressed the grass issue with her troops.

"We are on the alternate surface more than a lot of other schools," Shea said. "It's tough to switch from surface to surface. I tell them that regardless of the playing surface, you can't use that as an excuse. You've got to come out, play your game, and be disciplined."

While the field surface is likely to slow the game's tempo, it should have little effect on the scintillating style of Bruemmer. The German back earned A-10 Player of the Week honors for the second consecutive time after going on a five goal, 11 point tirade that lifted UM to a 3-1 record in its last four contests.

Bruemmer is now tied for the conference lead in goals scored with 11, and sits at third on the A-10 points list with 23 in 15 games. She credits much of her success to a retooled offensive scheme that has her teammates up front playing with heightened passion and enthusiasm.

"We've just gotten a little more aggressive inside the 25," Bruemmer said. "We're not taking the extra pass; instead we're cutting on an angle and going to goal. That's what has made us successful."

Bruemmer also dismisses the prospect of a grass game as just a matter of making simple adjustments.

"It's more a game of dumping the ball to space and running," Bruemmer said. "It's more work physically; individually we just have to work on the little things like passing."

The little things may not be enough against the Wildcats, who have scratched out their impressive record with startling precise shooting. While only Vermont has taken fewer shots in the America East, the Cats trail only Boston University for the conference lead in goals scored. And of UNH's 52 scores thus far, 12 have arrived via the stick of senior midfielder Kristin Iarrusso. The native of nearby Southwick may rule the America East scoring roost with 19 points in '99, but Bruemmer refuses to consider her a threat to the Maroon and White's success.

"We don't care who their top scorer is," Bruemmer said. "We're just going to play our game, and I think we can beat them."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Two-time Atlantic 10 Player of the Week Anke Bruemmer has emerged as UM's most lethal weapon as they prepare to battle UNH today.

LA hopes Jackson's triangle puts them back on NBA peak

By Mark Heisler
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES – It's a new chapter in Laker history, with a new coach who hrings with him an exotic new offense that comes all the way from ...

Jefferson and Figueroa?

There in the Shrine Auditorium, USC's basketball team played most of its home games in 1946 with a squad that included a little senior guard named Tex Winter, a hot-shot freshman named Bill Sharman and a returning Army veteran named Alex Hannum.

The coach was Sam Barry, who ran something called "the center option," a forerunner of the offense Winter would devise, the "triangle," that he taught the Chicago Bulls under Phil Jackson, after which they won six NBA titles in the '90s.

Hannum also used it with the Philadelphia 76ers, who won an NBA record 68 games in the 1966-67 regular season. Sharman's Los Angeles Lakers then won 69 five years later, using some triangle, a record that stood until the Bulls won 72 in 1996.

"The funny thing was, we didn't win with it," says Sharman, remembering their days at USC. We were 10-14.

"Then Hannum plays it with the 76ers, and they win 68 games. Then we used it a little bit with the Lakers, and we win 69. Then Tex runs it with the Bulls, and they win 72."

Of course, the 76ers had Wilt Chamberlain, Billy Cunningham, Chet Walker, Luke Jackson and Hal Greer. The Lakers had Wilt, Jerry West and Gail Goodrich. The Bulls, who eclipsed both, had Michael Jordan, leading some skeptics to describe the triangle as "three ways to get the ball to Jordan."

Nor were skeptics hard to find in a league in which almost everyone runs the static "pro set," in which the offensive team throws the ball to its best post-up player – an easy matter since the rules limit sagging and hard double-teaming off the ball – hopefully forcing a double-team which leaves three defenders on four offensive players. In practice, few players move and teams go deep into the clock, as the defense waits as long as it can to double-team, running the offense out of time.

Also, in practice, scoring went into a steep, decade-long decline in the '90s when the pro set became the standard.

Nevertheless, it's easy to run, compared to the fluid triangle, which has no set plays, only passes and cuts, with players constantly forming triangles, all based on reading the defense.

In recent years, Jim Cleamons, a former Bull assistant who has rejoined Jackson with the Lakers, installed it in Dallas and was fired soon thereafter. Cotton Fitzsimmons, a Winter disciple, put it in Phoenix, started 0-8 and promptly retired for good.

"You can't run a continuity offense in the NBA," says a former assistant coach. The problem is the 24-second clock.

"The Bulls couldn't have done that without Jordan. How many times did you see the 24-second clock run down at the end and then Michael save them – 15 times a game?"

Nevertheless, purists love the triangle. San Antonio Coach Gregg Popovich, who uses the standard NBA dump-it-in scheme, once sneered at his own offense, noting one of his reserves, former Bull Steve Kerr, had recently run "a real offense," as opposed to "this pro thing" the Spurs were using.

"It (the triangle) is the best offense in the NBA from my point of view," says Pete Newell, former California coach, now a Cleveland Cavalier consultant.

"Offensively, players are moving all the time. That makes it hard to double the ball. It makes it difficult to help out because you're worried about somebody picking you off."

"One of the reasons Michael was as great as he was, the spacing was always so good, it was very difficult to double-team him. You have to go quite a distance to get a second man on him."

Of course, Michael would make any offense look good but no other offense would have made him look as good." In fact, the Bulls' opponents found they were doomed if they double-teamed, and also if they didn't.

After Jordan made a last-second 20-footer in Game 1 of the 1997 finals, Utah's Jerry Sloan was criticized for playing him one-on-one. In a similar situation in Game 6, Sloan sent a second man at Jordan, who quickly passed to Kerr, who knocked down the series-winning shot.

OK, now all the Lakers have to do is become the second team in the '90s to successfully put the triangle in, and time's running out.

After USC, Winter became an assistant at Kansas State under Jack Gardner, another Barry pupil, and ultimately the head coach there. Tex started refining his theories of offense, based on things he had learned from Barry, Newell and another great, Everett Dean and published "Triple Post Offense" in 1962.

His later career included stints coaching the San Diego Rockets (hired by Newell, then GM) and Long Beach State. He was semi-retired in 1985 when Jerry Krause, a young scout he had befriended, became the Bulls' GM and brought the 63-year-old Winter to Chicago.

Krause's enthusiasm for the triangle wasn't shared by Krause's pro-style coaches. Stan Albeck and Doug Collins. However Jackson, taking over in 1989, had played for the New York Knick champions in 1970 and 1973 that were known for unselfishness and movement. In Chicago, where Jordan owned the ball, Jackson wanted an offense that would engender a new spirit.

"We were together as assistants," Winter says, "and we used to talk about how stereotyped pro offenses were getting. He was looking for a system that was similar to the way they played in New York, when he played there, when they won those championships. That was a team that read defenses beautifully and moved the ball.

"I just think I happened to be at the right place at the right time. He embraced it. I was very fortunate to be there or I probably would have been long ago retired."

Jordan, who couldn't understand why it was better to have the ball in Horace Grant's hands than his, called it an "equal opportunity offense," which he didn't mean as a compliment. Nevertheless, Jordan tried it, and the Bulls caught on.

"It was very simple," says West, who ran the triangle in the '70s. "This offense to some degree is simple, but players have to change their thought process a little bit. It becomes a little more of an instinctive thing..."

UM's Corbett runs over New England

By Farrah Alexander
Collegian Staff

Sophomore sensation Ryan Corbett once again stood out among his peers this past weekend at the New England Championships, where Massachusetts finished 15th with 406 points. For the third consecutive time, Corbett was the first runner to cross the finish line for UMass in the event, which Brown won with 69 points. Boston College took the number two spot with 100 points, followed by Providence, Keene State, and Yale.

Corbett finished 58th overall in the competition with a time of 25:40, followed by teammate Colin Baughman who finished 61st overall with a time of 25:44. Matt Ely came in third for the Minutemen with a time of 26:00, which placed him 85th overall. Kevin Curtin and David Prasse rounded out the top five with times of 26:01 and 26:18 respectively.

While the Minutemen already competed in a meet at the Franklin Park course earlier in September, this past weekend's competition differed in that it was much more demanding.

All three divisions were present, equaling a total of 42 teams, and just over 300 runners. There were two Division 1 teams that were nationally ranked in the top 25, and also quality division two and three teams that were ranked in the top 10 nationally.

Not only was there steep competition at the event, but the stakes were high as well. "If you don't run as well in a smaller meet, 10 seconds may make the difference of one or two places," Corbett said.

"But 10 seconds in a race like this may set you back anywhere from 15 to 20 places, which means a higher team score. So you really have to stay focused the whole race and make sure that your running is really on that day. So it's a little bit more pressure."

Nationally ranked competitors were not the only obstacles that

Turn to MEN'S X-C, page 9

Cross country rocks through tournament

By Trisha Turcatte
Collegian Correspondent

Last Friday, the University of Massachusetts women's cross country team placed eighth in the New England Championships with 251 points. The meet was held at Franklin Park in Boston, with 42 teams in attendance. The teams that placed in the top five were Providence College with 59 points in first, Boston College coming up closely behind in second with 49 points, and Dartmouth College in third with 130 points. Harvard captured fourth place with 154 points, and Vermont took fifth place with 175 points.

Among the top five runners for UMass was senior Nicole Way, with a time of 18:19, coming in 28th place over all. Junior Melissa Henderson had a time of 18:34 in 47th place, and directly following for third, again, was sophomore Kristin Cisowski in 48th place overall with a time of 18:36. Senior Elizabeth Sheptyck came in right behind Cisowski with a time of 18:42 for a 57th place finish. Coming in fifth to finish scoring for UMass was senior Sharon Tillotson in 71st place with a time of 18:50. Unfortunately for UM, Sally Hirsch had a sprained ankle.

The Minutewomen have been rated as number one in the Atlantic 10 conference for Women's Cross Country. For them to keep this rating, they must have consistency from all of their runners.

The women have next week off, but will return to try and capture the Atlantic 10 Championship in Philadelphia on Saturday, Oct. 30.

Turn to WOMEN'S X-C, page 9

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 52 — Thursday, October 21, 1999

SGA debates campus safety and UPC concert funding

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

One of the main motions of the evening at a meeting of the Student Senate last night was over the approval of a Safety Select Committee.

The primary goal of the committee would be to look at pedestrian safety, which became a concern on campus following the deaths of two students in pedestrian-automobile accidents last year. The committee would be separate from the already existing Safety Summit Committee and therefore able to focus more closely on the safety of pedestrians, instead of dealing with campus safety issues as a whole.

SGA passed the motion with an attached amendment stating that a written purpose for the Committee would first need to be completed before the group could begin taking any action. The acceptance of this amendment has delayed the committee from beginning its tasks and will not allow the group to do anything beyond what is written in the charge.

After debate over the issue of process, the motion to allocate $1000 to University Productions and Concerts (UPC) from finance reserves was passed. UPC, a Registered Student Organization that puts on concerts for students, is in need of money for the Funk Master Flex show it has organized for next week.

UPC's budget is not large enough to cover the expenses it costs to put on a show while keeping the ticket prices for students as low as possible. Representatives from UPC came in front of the Senate last night to ask for help to minimize their deficit, because currently they were unable to reach their goal of breaking even.

The debate that arose became more an issue over Senate process than whether to give the money to the UPC. Some members of the SGA said the motion should be tabled or sent into committee, where the Finance Committee would look it at in greater detail.

The job of the Finance Committee is to decide where the money in the finance reserves is allocated; the committee said UPC's situation was not an emergency, and that the Senate did not need to pass the motion before UPC's financial situation was looked at closer.

Some senators, on the other hand, said UPC needed the money for expenses by next week and that the motion should go through immediately.

"Our job is service to the students. We can't be obsessed with process," said Seth Avakian, student trustee. The motion was passed with a vote of 34 in favor and 16 opposed.

Also passed at the meeting were committee appointments and several positions were appointed. In response to flyers and comments made by Michael Whitehouse, Orchard Hill at-large senator, that the Commonwealth College was planning to turn the Field Residence Hall lounge into a classroom, SGA President Jeff Howe made a point of the importance of the Senate remaining united.

"When one speaks, we all speak," Howe said.

He stressed that senators need to fully research a motion before bringing it to the Senate and the campus community. Howe said he contacted Housing Services, and was informed that the office has no intentions of eliminating the lounge.

YAMI FITZPATRICK/COLLEGIAN

Love for the e-mail
Dressed in a heart costume, Eric Pinto sets up his free e-mail account in the Mullins Center.

Jeep flips over on Wednesday; no one injured

No students were injured in a Wednesday morning two-vehicle automobile accident that left one car flipped completely over.

A white Ford was traveling east on Massachusetts Avenue when it struck a black Jeep Cherokee. The Jeep Cherokee had turned in front of the Ford from President's Drive and flipped over after being struck, according to University of Massachusetts Deputy Police Chief Barbara O'Connor.

Jaime Picone, a senior apparel marketing major and the driver of the Cherokee, was cited in the accident for failure to yield, Gretchen Allidi, a junior theater major, was not cited.

An ambulance and the Amherst Fire Department were called to the scene, but everyone involved refused treatment.

Both vehicles in the 9:34 a.m. accident had to be taken away by area wreckers. The site of the accident was cleaned up by 11:00 a.m.

–Sam Wilkinson

Curriculum changes loom

By Elana Premack
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts is considering revamping general education requirements, but the resources necessary for change are not currently available.

According to John Jenkins, head of the Chancellor's General Education Task Force and a professor in the department of music and dance, the development of new courses, including pairs of related classes and computer literacy requirements, cannot take place until new faculty are hired and additional technology is implemented in classrooms.

Jenkins and members of the task force updated the University's Resource Network on the revision of the general education program at a meeting yesterday. The Resource Network is an informal group that meets weekly to discuss the climate of the campus.

The task force has spent the past three years exploring how different educational approaches can be phased into the general education program. Committees concentrating on three academic divisions – scientific inquiry, ethics and values and historical, humanistic and aesthetic inquiry – have discussed how changes in ways of teaching, modes of learning and class sizes could make general education courses more positive experiences for students.

Almost universally, students the University interviewed regarding general education requirements "believe it is something like bad medicine," Jenkins said. "They clearly did not see any relation among courses they were required to take, or any overriding purpose of general education."

The goal of general education requirements, according to the task force, is to "empower lifelong learning" by giving students inquiry, investigation, creative problem solving and critical thinking skills.

But the program may not currently be meeting its goals.

"It seems that Gen. Eds represent majors and departments rather than concepts or ideas," said Patrick Callahan, a freshman Student Senate representative.

Callahan said other schools have general education programs that emphasize interdisciplinary learning, "rather than having students take classes outside of their major that they'll never use again."

Committees concentrating on three academic divisions – scientific inquiry, ethics and values and historical, humanistic and aesthetic inquiry – have discussed how changes in ways of teaching, modes of learning and

The value of some courses could change with broadened definitions. While "scientific inquiry" courses have traditionally fallen into the science and math departments, students in liberal arts majors are also learning analysis skills.

"Creative problem solving is not exclusively a scientific endeavor," said Lilha.

The task force will recommend to Chancellor David K. Scott that a pilot test of a new general education program take place in the fall of 2001. Testing would allow the University to integrate the new program with the existing system.

"There's a lot of good in the existing curriculum," Jenkins said.

General education requirements have not been restructured since 1986, according to Malia Lilha, an assistant registrar.

The task force has considered the possibility of departments like engineering creating courses that could be general education requirements, open to students in the department and to students in other majors.

"To get any measure of general education, an engineering student has to get to an area where general education is valued," said Paul Shuldiner, a member of the ethics and values committee of the task force and a professor of civil engineering.

The value of some courses could change with broadened definitions. While "scientific inquiry" courses have traditionally fallen into the science and math departments, students in liberal arts majors are also learning analysis skills.

"Creative problem solving is not exclusively a scientific endeavor," said Lilha.

The task force will recommend to Chancellor David K. Scott that a pilot test of a new general education program take place in the fall of 2001. Testing would allow the University to integrate the new program with the existing system.

"There's a lot of good in the existing curriculum," Jenkins said.

General education requirements have not been restructured since 1986,

Semester mid-point marks deadline for class withdrawl

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

It is better to have a "W" than an "F" on a transcript, according to Susan Machala, an Academic Advisor for the Pre-Major Advising Services.

"To withdraw from a class has no adverse effect upon your grade," Machala said.

Up until the mid-point of each semester, students at the University of Massachusetts have the option of withdrawing from any class that they feel may be weighing them down academically. This semester the final day for students to drop a class with a "W" or a withdraw notation, is on Oct. 25.

According to Machala, because many students do not realize that a "W" will not negatively affect a transcript, they do not drop classes that they need to remove from their schedule and risk being placed on academic probation.

Elaine Parmett, Academic Advisor and Assistant to the Dean in the Pre-Major department, explained a student must have below a grade point average of 2.0 in order to be placed on academic probation.

When students are first placed on academic probation, they are asked to see their academic dean in order to reassess the reason for the academic shortcoming. Parmett explained that these meetings are "meant to help" students better themselves academically.

The second time a student is placed on probation, at any time during his or her academic career, the student must put in an appeal for the probation. If the appeal is successful, the student will be reinstated to the school. If the appeal is unsuccessful, the student will face a semester suspension from the University.

Following this suspension is an automatic reinstatement and a "second chance" at academic success. The department and academic advisors deal with any academic problems following the suspension seriously and deal with resolutions on a case-by-case basis. Any students that experience any kind of academic difficulties are encouraged to let their advisors know about their problems academically.

According to Parmett, students who plan on withdrawing from a class must be aware of the number of credits they are required to take per semester. A full-time student needs at least 12 credits per semester, carrying fewer than 12 credits may impact a student's financial aid and health insurance, Parmett explained. She also stressed that it is important for students to "talk to professors and teaching assistants" about any academic problems.

Academic advisors are planning to run programs within individual departments in order to help give students direction. Among these events is the upcoming annual Majors Fair. In addition to this event, the advising staff also distributes deadline and event information and academic tips to students on campus.

Lack of money forces Dole to abandon race

By David Von Drehle
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – Short of money and sinking in the polls, Elizabeth Dole abandoned her campaign to be America's first woman president Wednesday morning, saying that "over time it became nearly impossible to sustain an effective campaign."

She declined to comment on speculation that she might wish to be the Republican vice presidential nominee.

"In the real America, it's more important to raise issues than campaign funds," Dole said, during a poised and smiling speech to supporters and reporters at a Washington hotel. But even though she had scheduled more than 100 fund-raising events this year, she said, Texas Gov. George W. Bush and millionaire publisher Steve Forbes "would have enjoyed a 75-to-1 or 80-to-1 cash advantage. I can handle 2-to-1 or even 10-to-1," she said, "but not 80-to-1."

Thus ended an effort that began with high hopes nine months ago, when Dole stepped down from her post as president of the American Red Cross. She promised to call the country "to her better nature," and immediately jumped into a strong second place in surveys of likely Republican voters. Her well-known name and strong reputation made her the most formidable woman ever to run for the White House.

But despite large crowds at every campaign appearance, and a strong third-place showing in the August Iowa Straw Poll, Dole was unable to turn respect and curiosity into organization and donations. In recent months she was hurt by several senior staff defections, and her summer fund raising lagged behind the other top candidates.

Dole reminded her audience of the issues she championed on the campaign trail, from gun con-

Turn to Dole, page 2

YAMI FITZPATRICK/COLLEGIAN

It beats walking
Junior Political Science major Tom Hoffey spends his rainy day driving students around to keep them out of the cold rain.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 57 LOW: 35	HIGH: 53 LOW: 38	HIGH: 54 LOW: 36

SOURCE: SUN.COM

SUN.IN

Indonesia Get Political

In world news, a clinically blind and ailing Moslem cleric, Abdurrahman Wahid, was elected Indonesia's fourth president in a vote yesterday. Read about the elections inside.

PAGE 2

ARTS

Smashing Success

The Smashing Pumpkins have found themselves a new manager. To find out who, check out our music notes column. Also, The Source is just a few pages away with all the info on this weekend's events. So read Arts, it brings out the dead.

PAGE 5

SPORTS

Two-way Threat

Cindy Carceau has become a weapon on both offense and defense for head coach Jim Rudy's UM women's soccer team this season. Zowie Tucker and the field hockey team are hoping they can shoot down cross-state rival Boston College tonight at Carber Field.

PAGE 14

Arts & Living 5
Comics 13
Crossword 13
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 14
Classifieds 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Eating 'Piece of the Pie'

Freshman Jennifer Rockwell and mom support the eleventh annual "Piece of the Pie" day in raising money to benefit the fight against hunger. They share dinners at Pasta y Basta.

Dole

continued from page 2

trol – on which she took an early and controversially liberal stand – to defense, foreign policy and education, on which she was a more traditional establishment Republican.

She announced her decision with her husband at her side. Former Sen. Bob Dole was the Republican nominee for president in 1996 and in recent weeks he has been canvassing his contacts for money to keep his wife's effort afloat. However, Bob Dole also damaged his wife's hopes by giving several interviews in which he indicated that he thought she was a long shot.

The GOP field is shrinking rapidly. Former Vice President Dan Quayle and former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander have left the race since August, also citing money problems. Television commentator Patrick J. Buchanan is expected to leave the Republicans next week to run in the Reform Party.

Dole's departure underlines once more Bush's dominance in the GOP field. A Washington Post poll completed early this week found Bush is the favorite of 63 percent of Republicans surveyed. Dole was a distant second with 12 percent – about half the support she had when she entered the race last spring – and the other candidates were in single digits.

Election surprise catapults blind Muslim cleric to front of Indonesian government

By Keith B. Richburg
Washington Post

JAKARTA, Indonesia – In a stunning political upset, a clinically blind and ailing Moslem cleric, Abdurrahman Wahid, forged a coalition of Islamic "greens" long sidelined from politics and the re-formed Golkar ruling machine of ex-president Suharto, to become Indonesia's fourth president in a vote yesterday by the country's highest legislative body.

Wahid, 59, won a two-way race with his erstwhile ally, the popular opposition leader Megawati Sukarnoputri. She had been considered the front-runner since her party won last June's elections for parliament. Thousands of Megawati's supporters, known as the "red army," immediately took to the streets in angry protest, hurling Molotov cocktails and setting fire to the Jakarta Convention Center.

Both Wahid, who was sworn in Wednesday night as president, and Megawati, who conceded she had lost, urged her followers to respect the result. But the violence continued after nightfall, with police firing tear gas and rubber bullets to try to clear the protesters from the streets.

One car exploded during the melee, close to the assembly hall where the presidential vote was held, and four people were reported injured and one may have died. An earlier, smaller explosion at a downtown traffic circle packed with Megawati supporters also injured four people.

Wahid, popularly known here as "Gus Dur," used his acceptance speech tonight to tell all factions to "put aside our differences." Referring to the deep political, religious and ethnic divisions that have riveted this vast archipelago over the last 17 months, he said: "At this time we are torn apart by profound misunderstandings."

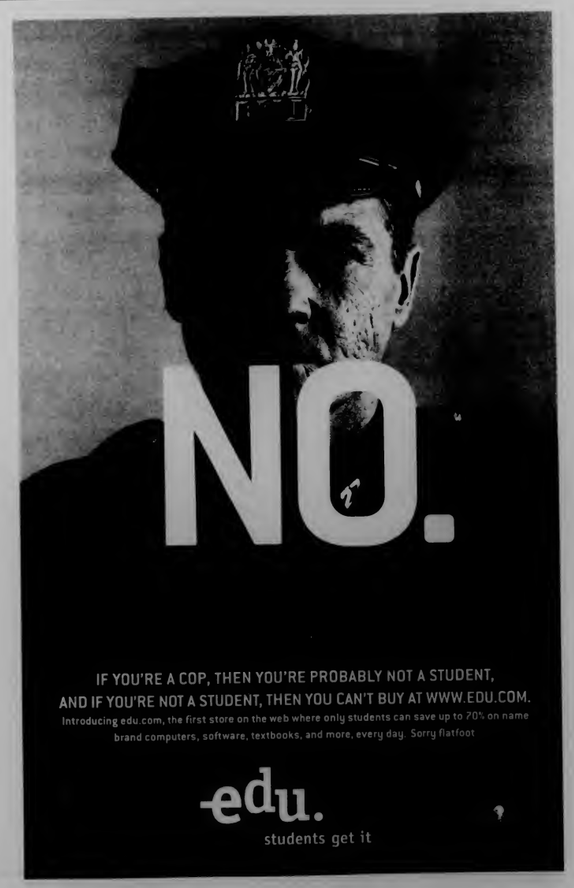
He also offered "my deepest appreciation to my good friend and brethren Megawati Sukarnoputri," who sat stone-faced throughout the brief ceremony.

Wahid won 373 votes in the assembly to 313 for Megawati, with 5 abstaining. It was a surprisingly decisive win in a contest that had been expected to be much closer, and demonstrated how in the hours and minutes before the vote, Megawati's support began eroding from among the major factions in the divided assembly.

But the nationally-televised scene of Wahid's swearing-in provided some disturbing images: the country's new president had to be helped to the stage, and to the podium to deliver his acceptance speech, by two aides clutching each of his arms. And when he needed to sign his name, and shake hands, he clearly was unable to see, and his hands had to be guided by aides.

Wahid has suffered two debilitating strokes, and underwent corrective eye surgery in Salt Lake City, Utah, but still suffers from impaired vision. He was also recently taking regular vitamin injections at a local hospital. His frail health raised immediate questions about whether he would be physically able to confront the rigors of the presidency, and whether he would be able to complete a full five-year term.

"Maybe this is the first time in the world, maybe its in the Guinness Book of World Records, that a blind man is president," one of Megawati's aides said bitterly after the result.



The health questions also focused new attention on who he would choose as a vice-president, who will be voted on separately today. Megawati and her aides had ruled out any chance she would take the vice presidency, and some said her Indonesian Democratic Party of Struggle was prepared to become the leader of the opposition in parliament, where the party controls about a third of the seats.

Other possible candidates for vice-president were the Golkar leader, Akbar Tandjung, who threw his support behind Wahid in the hours just before the vote, insuring his victory, or the armed forces commander, General Wiranto.

Wiranto had turned down an offer from the unpopular incumbent, B.J. Habibie, to be his running mate, and the rejection was seen as a near-fatal blow that badly damaged Habibie's re-election chances. But the armed forces Wednesday welcomed Wahid's election, and the military spokesman, Maj. Gen. Sudrajat, said that Wiranto would now consider being vice-president if all the factions in the assembly asked him.

Until yesterday, Wahid's candidacy for president seemed more quixotic than real-he was considered the third man, and the potential spoiler, in a field that included Megawati and Habibie. But Habibie unexpectedly withdrew from the race early yesterday, just hours after the assembly narrowly voted to reject his so-called "accountability speech" for his 17-month tenure, effectively rendering a vote of no-confidence in Habibie's administration.

A third candidate, Moslem cleric Yusril Ihza Mahendra, then withdrew, leaving the contest a two-person race between Wahid and Megawati.

festival of (de) lights!
Please join INDIA HOUSE in celebration of the Indian New Year
SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 7
45 State Street · Northampton · 586-6344
Serving dinner Tuesday through Sunday

you look Mavi-lous.

Mavi Jeans at Zanna
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

Ringing up in the annex

Alex King, a junior economics major, rings up some Italian tapes for a customer while working.

Florida hands tobacco companies defeat

By Myron Levin
Los Angeles Times

Tobacco companies suffered a jarring defeat Wednesday in a ruling by a Florida appeals court that raises the likelihood of a multi-billion dollar punitive damages award in a landmark class-action case.

The ruling means that the same civil jury that already found cigarette makers guilty of fraud and conspiracy may now award damages in a lump sum to an immense class of sick and deceased Florida smokers numbering in the hundreds of thousands, as opposed to awarding damages to one claimant at a time.

Some analysts said the ruling raises the chance that tobacco companies will push for a settlement, even on harsh terms, to eliminate the threat of damages so huge that they could not afford to post an appeal bond.

Tobacco stocks were clobbered as investors fled in droves on news of the ruling, issued in the first class action case by smokers ever to go to trial.

Philip Morris, the world's biggest tobacco company, saw its shares fall $3.75, or more than 12 percent, to $27. RJ Reynolds Tobacco Holdings Corp., the second biggest U.S. cigarette maker, and Loews Corp., owner of Lorillard Tobacco, also saw their shares plummet to the lowest levels in more than a year. Reynolds fell $3 to $22.94 and Loews dropped $2.25 to $67.75.

For the industry, "the outlook just got tougher, the stakes just got higher, and the obvious outcome to both those [factors] is a settlement," said Martin Feldman, a tobacco analyst with Salomon Smith Barney.

Under a gag order issued by trial judge Robert Kaye, plaintiff and defense lawyers weren't commenting on the ruling, which sets the stage for the second phase of the byzantine case to begin Nov. 1 in Miami-Dade County Circuit Court.

In July, after months of testimony and a trove of incriminating documents, the six member jury ruled that cigarette makers had lied for decades about the risks and addictiveness of smoking, and were liable for a host of life-threatening diseases.

That outcome launched a second trial phase to rule on damages for a small number of class representatives. But Judge Kaye also ruled that jurors in the second phase could establish a single punitive damage award to be later divided among members of the class.

Tobacco executives rejoiced in early September when the appeals court overturned Kaye's ruling, declaring that damages must be determined on an individual basis. In effect, this meant that apart from general findings favorable to plaintiffs, the industry could maintain the successful strategy of battling claimants one at a time.

But the three-member appeals panel agreed to reconsider, and without saying why, reversed itself yesterday.

The ruling means that when the jurs reconvenes to decide the claims of three class representatives afflicted with lung and laryngeal cancers, it will also determine whether to punish the industry on behalf of the entire class.

Arsonists to blame for series of wildfires

By Eric Bailey
Los Angeles Times

SACRAMENTO, Calif. – A handful of arsonists on the loose in Northern California are suspected of causing several of the wildfires that have scorched the region in recent weeks, state fire officials said Tuesday.

"We figure we have four or five serial arsonists working the north state," said David LeMay, fire prevention chief at the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection. "We've had problems in Tehama, Butte, Napa, Lake, Shasta, Sonoma. All have experienced a significant number of arson fires."

One blaze of suspicious origin has burned 40,000 acres in parts of Napa, Lake and Yolo counties and consumed a ranch over the weekend. The fire kicked off in a remote canyon already hit by more than 15 suspected arson fires since the start of summer. All the pre-dawn fires were contained before they could do much damage.

Authorities are seeking information from the public about the three-county fire and a blaze in Shasta County, where flames bypassed across 20,000 acres in the hills east of Redding last weekend, destroying 128 homes and forcing the evacuation of 2,000 residents.

The so-called Jones Canyon fire started near an isolated campground at the southern edge of Lake Shasta and appears to be of human origin, but the exact cause remains under investigation.

French expedition in Siberia unearths woolly mammoth

By Guy Gugliotta
Washington Post

A French-led expedition has chopped the fully preserved carcass of a 20,000-year-old woolly mammoth from the permafrost of Arctic Siberia, in the first successful salvage of an intact specimen of this ancient behemoth, expedition members said yesterday.

The recovery will allow scientists an unprecedented opportunity to analyze the fur, organs and other soft tissues of an animal that has been extinct for 10,000 years. The team hopes to recover DNA – even sperm from the carcass – if it is a male – and either attempt to clone a mammoth or artificially inseminate a modern-day elephant.

A helicopter lifted the 25 ton chunk of permafrost containing the mammoth from the tundra of central Siberia Sunday, and, dangling it from a harness, flew it 150 miles to an ice cave in the town of Khatanga, where scientists plan to carefully defrost it with hair dryers over a period of months.

While mammoths have been found relatively often in the bleak wilderness above the Arctic Circle, the current specimen, called the Jarkov Mammoth for the Siberian family who first saw it, is the first to be unscarred and undisturbed by fabricators for scientific study.

"I've been working on mammoths for more than 25 years," Dutch paleontologist Dick Mol told reporters during a telephone news conference to announce the recovery. "This is a dream for me – to find the soft parts and touch them and even smell them. It's very exciting."

Mol and teammate Larry Agenbroad, of Northern Arizona University, will supervise the analysis, probably to begin sometime next April in the cave laboratory, chopped from the ice by Soviet convicts during the Stalin era.

The scientists, working a half-hour at a time in temperatures of 11 degrees Fahrenheit, will thaw the frozen block of earth and ice "millimeter by millimeter," Mol said, to examine not only the carcass, but also the sediments that surround it.

Mol noted that the mammoth lay atop clay soil filled with frozen plants that "still had their original green color." And for paleontologists, he continued, "this is very important, because it indicates a lake and pond 20,000 years ago, and might tell us about the climate and temperature at the time."

It also might shed light on why the mammoths, whose remains have been found on every continent in the world except Australia and South America, died out despite a lack of natural predators and an ability to function without visible hardship in extreme environments.

Agenbroad noted, however, that the new discovery predates species extinction by several millennia. Still, he added, the Jarkov Mammoth was 47 to 48 years old when it died – the prime of life. "We hope to find viruses in its internal parts," he said.

French explorer Bernard Buigues, who led the expedition, said the team would have to spend considerable thawing and analyzing the mammoth before work could begin to try the unprecendented feat of producing a live animal.

Know what's up.
Read the Collegian every-day.

Teen pumpkin thief shot and killed in CA

By Jack Leonard and Meg James
Los Angeles Times

BUENA PARK, Calif. – A 17-year-old Buena Park teen died Tuesday after being shot by a homeowner apparently upset over the theft of a plastic, light-up pumpkin from his front yard, police said.

Pete Tavita Solomona, 47, was booked on suspicion of murder.

Until Solomona came out of his house waving a loaded .357 revolver, most saw him as a kindly neighbor and loving grandfather. And the young man he confessed to shooting, Brandon Kesdever, was a popular high school athlete and fun-loving prankster.

Now the tragic shooting, which Solomona insists was accidental, has traumatized a normally quiet subdivision and posed disquieting questions for those trying to sort out what happened and why.

Neighbors described a chaotic scene Monday night in the neighborhood, less than a mile from Knott's Berry Farm, after Solomona allegedly fired a shot into a Ford Escort carrying three teen-agers. The bullet police said struck the head of 17 year-old Brandon Kesdever, a popular Kennedy High School student and athlete.

Solomona then froze in the middle of the street, visibly stunned witnesses said.

"He was standing out there in a daze," said neighbor Marsha Long. "He couldn't believe what he had done."

ON SALE SAT. OCT. 23 at 10AM

Thursday Night
NOV. 18th
7:30 pm!

Mullins Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA

Live On Stage! - One Night Only !!

BOB DYLAN AND HIS BAND!
Plus
PHIL LESH AND FRIENDS

All Tickets $30.00!

Don't You Dare Miss It !!!

ON SALE SAT. OCT. 23 at 10:00 AM

Tickets available at the Mullins Center Box Office and all Ticket Master locations. To charge-by-phone call TicketMaster at (413) 733-2500. Purchase online at ticketmaster.com.

Presented by MassConcerts • www.massconcerts.com

All's fair in the war of love.

Matthew PERRY
Neve CAMPBELL
Dylan McDERMOTT

three to TANGO

WARNER BROS. PRESENTS
IN ASSOCIATION WITH VILLAGE ROADSHOW PICTURES AND VILLAGE HOYTS FILM PARTNERSHIP AN OUTLAW PRODUCTION
MATTHEW PERRY NEVE CAMPBELL DYLAN McDERMOTT OLIVER PLATT "THREE TO TANGO"
MUSIC BY GRAEME REVELL CO PRODUCERS JOHN M. ECKERT KERI SELIG EXECUTIVE PRODUCERS LAWRENCE B. ABRAMSON AND BRUCE BERMAN
STORY BY RODNEY VACCARO SCREENPLAY BY RODNEY VACCARO AND ALINE BROSH McKENNA PRODUCED BY BOBBY NEWMYER JEFFREY SILVER BETTINA SOFIA VIVIANO DIRECTED BY DAMON SANTOSTEFANO
VILLAGE ROADSHOW PICTURES
PG-13 PARENTS STRONGLY CAUTIONED
WARNER BROS.
www.3totango.com

OPENS OCTOBER 22

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

The Travel-less Wilburys

Kathleen Kelly

My friend Deb and I made a pact this past spring to visit the Nantucket Nectars plant in Nantucket for the sole reason that we love the little messages on the caps. In fact, we are such fans and such exciting and interesting people to boot, that we feel there should be a cap about us. But we thought we had to prove our devotion with a personal visit before they mint one.

Alas, like many road trips planned safely in the distance, they never seem to happen. I worked nights and weekends and she worked days in Boston and spent her weekends in York, Maine. Luckily, we are not competing for who had the better work schedule.

The point is that not only did we not make it to Nantucket, but that we have never been there. Ever. Yes, as lifelong Massachusetts residents, eastern Mass. residents to be specific, we have yet to grace the island with our presence. In fact, I have yet to eat at the famous Salty Dog on Martha's Vineyard or at least buy a silly dated sweatshirt because I have not been there either. Deb, however, has a leg up on me on that one, so to speak.

I admit I have longed to brush up beside a Kennedy in town (not standard in everyone's dream, but you'll deal with it) on my way to those mythic warm Atlantic waters, which I have never felt north of Myrtle Beach. Maybe I could jump in a movie as an extra. Better yet, I could play the perfect small town girl who attracts the attention of the new and exciting boy from the big city only to be ditched as he leaves for some Ivy League school in the fall. The last play I was in I collapsed into a corner laughing so I can only improve on that performance.

I'd like to take the afternoon off from sloshing my red-headed self with sunscreen to rent bikes and calmly peddle along the cigarette-free sand dunes with friends. Maybe I will even toss a sweater around my shoulders because I need to.

"You want to stop for a picnic? Why, I just happen to have a basket of your favorite goodies strapped to my bike." I could say. "Oh look, there are the gingerbread houses in Oak Bluffs! Simply charming! Look at those silly out-of-state tourists gawking at them!"

In preparation for my big adventure, I decided to do my research online to find out exactly what shops and beaches I have been talking about.

According to the Martha's Vineyard Resort, "There is only one Martha's Vineyard - visited by presidents, kings, queens and the everyday vacationer. It is charming, unhurried – where the centuries have exchanged whaling vessels and trading posts for sailboats, bicycles and luxurious resorts."

I think I could stand it.

I spent a semester in South Carolina and avoided the issue of what Martha's Vineyard was like while watching the first I amily on TV, enjoy the sunny Massachusetts bay I have yet to experience.

Them: "Oh yeah, it's like their third trip back. What's it like?

Me: "Uh, a small island... with lots of little shops and stuff... beaches and you know, vacation things..."

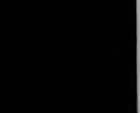
I guess I am what you might consider a slow traveler. It took me 14 years to leave the enveloping New England states when I went on a three-day whirlwind class trip to Washington, D.C. I spent Smithsonian Day watching the Hari Krishnas dance outside instead of checking out our nation's treasures.

And I think my family is one of nine left in the United States who has yet to take a trip to either Disney World or Disneyland. Some friends are on their tenth trip back there while I still dream of getting Goofy's autograph.

Deb and I are not the only ones scarred by lacking this experience. My friend Courtney spent a year in Europe, backpacking to such places as Belgium and Siena. The first time she planted her first step in New York City was just three months ago. What prodded her to make the trip? Did she just wake up one night and in a fit of disgust, drove pell mell to the Big Apple? Not likely. She was sent there to train for her summer job.

My solo escapade to NYC consisted of driving in a downpour for three hours and watching a Hari Krishna parade down Fifth Avenue. Notice a pattern developing?

I have come to find out that this is a common thread for everyone, to dream about faraway destinations. Or of those that are in the same state as the one you live in. It's a goal you feel you will eventually do, but never really sit down to set the date. It's kind of like organizing your schedule on your PC or vacuuming the interior of your car.



So what would it take for me to finally put the plan into action? Will I be a 75-year-old woman giddy with excitement at getting out of the house for the weekend to venture on a senior citizen bus-trip? I'd like to think not.

But maybe that would be the only way for Deb and I to make a Nantucket Nectar cap. It could say, "Deb and Kathleen are the very last Massachusetts residents to make their last trip to the island – Welcome."

Or maybe I should set aside potential Spring Break plans that include a tropical island or the Grand Canyon and head east to the islands.

Kathleen Kelly is a Collegian columnist.

All in the family

Dan Viens

Sex in the 1990s can be a terrifying thing. We have to worry about more now than ever before. Twenty-five years ago all anyone had to worry about was pregnancy and silly stuff like The Clap. Now, not only do we have to worry about those things, we also have to worry about herpes and the fatal epidemic AIDS. Sure, girls can go on the pill and guys can always wear condoms, but nothing's fool proof.

This is all plenty to worry about, but can you imagine having to worry about the fact that the person you're sleeping with may be your brother or sister.

This incestuous thought may be repulsive to many of you, but hear me out. If you are adopted then there is the distinct possibility that you have a twin brother or sister out there somewhere. Some random night you could be in a bar and become particularly attracted to a certain person of the opposite sex. You can't explain it, but there is a certain magnetism between the two of you. You can't control yourselves. You end up going home together and hing hang boom: you're gettin' it on with your sibling.

Please do not think that you are in the clear if you're not adopted. One or both of your parents may be holding a deep, dark secret and it ain't no chocolate rabbit. You may have a whole or half sibling somewhere out in the world that your parents are too ashamed to tell you about. Every person that you meet from here on in could be your long lost sibling.

You may think that these previous scenarios are outrageous. If you are one of the ones in denial then I have three words for you: Star Wars. I hope that all of you will recall that there was a while there when Princess Lea wasn't sure whether she was more attracted to Han Solo or Luke Skywalker. Hell, she even kissed Luke once. Thank God for their sake that they never went all the way because in Return of The Jedi it becomes apparent that they are actually brother and sister. That would have really shaken things up huh? ... a little incest between main characters.

Well thanks to the FOX network we have another incestuous story line on the horizon. As many of you may or may not know, Sarah (Jennifer Love Hewitt) has, as of two nights ago, officially left the show Party of Five. She has left for New York to search for her biological parents. That is all the information that the average person has up to this point. I, however, am not the average person.

My father's partner's sister is an executive at FOX. She and I have been in contact over the past couple years because I am a Communication major interested in working in some facet of media. Anyway, she got her hands on the scripts for the next three years of Love Hewitt's new show which is called Time of Your Life. However, she is illiterate so she sent them to me so I could tell her what was in store for the network.

The show starts out fairly tame. Sarah meets some new people. She dates a few new guys. She parties, gets a tattoo and grows dread locks. The entire time she is searching for her parents. There are no real breakthroughs until the last few episodes of the second season. In the third to last episode she gets hot on the trail of her birth parents. Then in the next episode she is devastated when she finds out that her parents have died. The agency gives her the choice of knowing their identities or just going on with her life. This is the cliffhanger to the last episode of the second season.

The very last moments of the second season are as follows.

Sarah: (pacing back and forth in her Central Park West apartment with envelope in hand) Oh my god! I... I... I can't decide whether or not I should even open this envelope. I mean all that it has in it is the last name of my birth parents, how they died, where they were from and the names of any other children they may have had. Now that they are dead what does it matter? Gosh, now I know how Bailey has felt all these years. Your hopes and dreams ripped away from you in one quick moment. Now I feel the pain that no other incredibly beautiful girl with ample breasts has ever felt. I have to know. I have to know. (She tears the envelope. Pulls out the paper and reads it. In slow motion we see her eyes well up in tears, the paper falls to the ground and she faints).

The last shot is of the paper that has fallen beside her. In bold print it says "Salenger, car crash, San Francisco, Charlie, Bailey, Julia, Claudia and Owen."

It turns out that Sarah, Bailey's ex-girlfriend, happens to be the sixth sibling on Party of Five. During season three she spends two episodes shower-ing trying to wash all of the incest off of herself. Then she decides that she has to go back home and tell Bailey and the rest of her family the good news.

When she gets back Sarah finds it extremely difficult to tell anyone her secret. Bailey is thrilled to see her because he hasn't gotten laid in the two years that she has been gone. Every time she tries to tell him that they are brother and sister, Bailey starts kissing her neck. Then Sarah freaks out and leaves. This starts to really piss Bailey off. Eventually he decides that he really needs some action so he slips a Rufie into Sarah's drink at dinner. When she starts dozing off he takes her upstairs and nails her.

The next day when she realizes what has happened she breaks down and tells Bailey. At first he is perplexed. Then he frowns and says, "Does this mean that I don't get no mo' lovin' sis?"

Sarah decides that she should never have opened that envelope and then kills herself.

Please take this story line as a warning. The next time you decide to become sexually active with a person and you go to get tested for STDs maybe you should also give DNA samples.

Dan Viens is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Schulze's column, way out of line

To the editor:

In response to the October 19, 1999 article by Rob Schulze, I have just a few things to say. First, not everyone on this campus is a Sox or Yankees fan. I don't like either of them. I don't even like baseball. But everyone is entitled to their own opinion, whether you think it is right or wrong.

Also, you obviously have never been in a marching band. For the past three years, I was in a band, though I am not in it here. Although I am not in band, my roommate is. I know how time consuming it is and how hard she works. First, one must learn to play an instrument, which is difficult enough in itself, but it also requires conflicting movement with feet. It's not easy to play and "march with style," but the band members have to march or move in certain patterns.

I know that it requires more dedication than most other extracurricular activities because my roommate, and hundreds of other people across campus, comes in at 5 a.m. from trips or has to get up at 6 a.m. on a Saturday morning to practice drills in the rain, freezing wind or excessive heat. I complain about walking up Orchard Hill in the heat, but the band has to do repeated drills for 4 hours out in the blazing sun.

This is not to suggest that other groups do not have dedication. I have friends who fence, run track or do martial arts, and I hear about what they endure. But don't diss the band. Why not make up your own "group" name if you feel so insecure. Maybe you could be the Glower and Crass of New England. And just because the band kids get better grades than you because music elevates the I.Q. is no reason to lash out and call them nerds.

And I do agree that it is necessary to start enforcing the Orchard Hill parking lot, although I don't have a car. People who have purple lot stickers have them for a reason.

And finally, I agree that a new lot would be beneficial, as it will get icy in the winter where people are parking now. It needs to be built for safety's sake, though I do not recommend whale skins, asbestos or spotted own eggs. They tend to be slippery, too.

And just a "thought" for you... it's not too late to transfer, you know.

Jaimee Swenson
Orchard Hill

Author should think before he speaks

To the editor:

I am writing in response to the column entitled "Thoughts" written by Rob Schulze, which ran in the October 19 issue of the Collegian. As a member of the UMass Minuteman Marching Band, and a person proud to be a part of the "Power and Class of New England," I found this column and its comments toward the band extremely insulting and highly unprofessional.

I find it hard to believe that someone could form such strong and hostile feelings towards the band; to the best of my knowledge, the band never did anything to personally harm or insult the author. In fact, the band has never done anything to harm or bother anyone – except perhaps for waking up the residents of Southwest on some Saturday mornings.

Perhaps Mr. Schulze should take a look at the band before he begins to lambaste it. The band is one of the hard-st working organizations on this campus – note there is no arrogance in that statement, just simple fact. We practice for an hour and 20 minutes every day, rehearse for several hours prior to football games and that's not even mentioning the separate additional practices most sections of the band have regularly. And as a member of the Band Service Organization, I have seen firsthand all the wonderful things this band is capable of.

People in the band come from all majors, different states and different walks of life. We do all share one thing though: a desire for excellence and the dedication to what we do. It's characteristics like these that make us an award-winning band, and it is through years of hard work that we have earned our title, "The Power and Class." As for the person who "shouts crack and then gets on the loudspeaker" every time we perform, George Parks is one of the most respected leaders in the marching band world and the band would thank you to give him the respect he deserves.

You see Mr. Schulze, you really have no idea what you are talking about. It seems that you are still adhering to the stereotype that we all knew in high school – that of the typical "band geek." If we are indeed a collection of 320 "band geeks," then this group of losers is one of the largest recruiting and publicity tools the University has.

Have you met President Clinton, Mr. Schulze? The band has. Have you traveled to the Football Championships? The band has. Not too shabby for a bunch of band geeks – and this coming from "one of those dinks" who "goes about waving the little flags." (And by the way, our flags are about 7 feet tall... think you could toss one in a strong wind, Mr. Schulze, and not hurt yourself? I didn't think so.)

Finally, I would just like to comment that since the author felt the need to say such things about one of the oldest traditions on this campus, it's evident that he really has no idea what it means to have power or class at all.

Colleen Giaimo
Southwest

You have the opportunity to reach 17,000 people every day with your ideas.

Use It.

Write for Ed-Op.

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lillien Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor

Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Hana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mayser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor

Jolyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Jolyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor

Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majewski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Lortewsic Graphics/Business Advisor
Ben Alamed Co-Webmaster
Jeremy Pfeifer Co-Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts academic semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

A different perspective on fashion

Arts & Living

"Because of the way I dressed, people thought I was deviant that I didn't care, people didn t think I have ambitions, but I'm very serious about school. People judge, it's unconscious. People tend to put people in different categories. People would say, Oh she wants attention or she wants to be different. But I just felt like dressing that way. It's just an impulse thing. There's nothing behind it. So what if I feel like dressing in vinyl, or Goth, or Punk?"

Rose Bagalawis
Sophmore, Legal Studies

"I just dress to be comfortable. I'm more utilitarian. I don't care what people think. I don t dress to please others. I don't shop at the Gap or anything."

Bret Anderson
Freshman
Mechanical Engineering

"I think fashion ties into a social issue, when you come from. About me, it portrays where I come from and what neighborhood. From what someone's wearing, you can tell what type of music they like, what parties they go to. You can tell a lot."

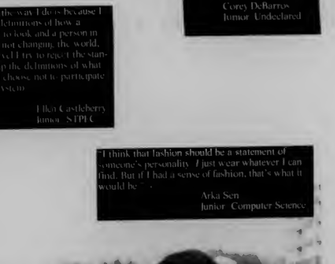
Corey DeBarros
Junior Undeclared

Oh, what is fashion?

Trends in clothing exist. People like to wear the stuff that falls into those trends, although it's easy to wonder why. Cool sneakers cost an obnoxious amount of money and the latest styles are imposing with their space age decor. Old Navy tech vests are completely ornament; doing so little for us beyond their aesthetic purposes. Those shoulder bags are really less sensible than backpacks, can't hold nearly as much, and will eventually leave us all with scoliosis. The cross-gender love of pea coats makes us all look analogous and often fails to protect us from the cold as much as another jacket might. And invariably when the next set of currents overwhelmingly arrives, we'll look back at this one with chagrin and wonder why we ever paid so much money for an outfit that made us look ridiculous and poofy.

Somewhere in our cultural history the notion that too look good one has to maintain a strict wardrobe of what's mainstream and recent established itself. Although not everyone pays attention to this idea, enough people do so that we submit to the huge financial demand in vogue stores make. Does that mean fashion is born of nothing but clever marketing schemes? I think that this summer's Gap commercials support that theory. They began subtley. Public transportation would post pictures of emaciated models sporting vests. Next their photo layouts became the highlights of magazines. Then those psychologically irresistible ads with the same models singing old Madonna songs invaded. Now 75% of the campus owns a fleece vest.

It seems like the consequences of hip and in clothing are too obvious to explore the issues they suggest about that grossly misused term, "society." Beyond that business though, what does it say about the people who either can't or chose not to work within those norms? Look around Umass. There are so many that break pop conventions. But here's the paradox: even those who don't wear official approved attire start to get stuck in other trends. Because of course if you refuse to be a clone, you're making a deliberate decision to fit into another, specific group. Which, in effect, means you're a clone anyway. And who wants to be defined by the clothes they choose to wear?



Well, everybody, kind of. So when faced with the difficult challenge to bring the issue of dress up to a higher level of insightful discourse, (disclaimer) I concede to bring it down to its basest elements with a blatantly trivial and stereotyping description of the options immediately before you on campus. Maintain one of these styles, subsequently alter your personality, and create who you want to be.

"With the clothes I wear, I intend to implant conflict and weird ideas in the eyes and brains of my peers. But there's more then meets the eye, and can't judge somebody by what they wear."

Dan Cushman
Communications

"The reason I dress this way I do is because I feel there are too definitions of how a woman is supposed to look and a person in general. Maybe I must change, the world, but on a personal level I don't want to fit the standard. Who am I to say what the definition of what define a woman? I choose not to participate in that pursuit. Fuck Axiom."

Ellen Castleberry
Junior, STPEC

"I think that fashion should be a statement of someone's personality. I just wear whatever I can find. But if I had a sense of fashion, that's what it would be."

Arka Sen
Junior, Computer Science

Remember tie-dye? Z-Cavaricci's and Starter jackets? Polo shirts? And every other notable trend that is often reminisced in the dining hall when discourse falters and we're forced to rely on the standard discussions that everyone's had before? Just like these fashions, our current predominant looks will fade and die, with a memory only present as conversation fillers. Here are a few presumptions of what futo-students will be talking about after these hypothesized trends run their course.

In the year 2000 a powerful resurgence of late 80's-early 90's clothing will arrive, as people clean out their attics to welcome a great sense of new beginnings. Due to a financial depression, an obvious result of Y2K, most people can no longer afford to invest in new clothes and turn to this practical and convenient alternative to make a statement. Tight rolled, tapered-leg jeans, L.A. Gear and British Knight sneakers, and faded I.O.U. sweatshirts will dominate the fashion world. A frantic search for forgotten b.u.m. equipment sweats and Cross Colors attire will begin. And the coolest kids will sport Skidz overalls with their leg warmers.

Inanimate objects and fruit will become more than just utilitarian, as the standards of art are broken down and items like lamp shades, milk crates, and banana peels become paradigms for what is visually beautiful. Entire outfits will be made from bubble wrap, kiwi scraps, and picnic baskets, defying once and for all that comfort is style.

Turn to FASHION, page 7

The Five College Area's Source for Discovering the Weekly Happenings of New England and Beyond

THE SOURCE

Another Fine Product of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Every Thursday!

UMass' very own Tave Hu is at Live & Water Cafe in Northampton tonight with their own unique blend of folk and funk. They have recently gained new drummer, Vin, of Ruby Dune fame. Boston's latest pop craze, Hummer is at the Baystate having recently been placed on an impressive emerging artist compilation released by Irieshtracks.net. The disc also features cuts from the Pat McGee Band, Big Sky, Soup, and the String Cheese Incident, among others. Elvis Costello is at the Orpheum in Boston.

Friday night head to Chemistry Friday at Pearl Street as Frankie Bones from Sonic Groove, NY is the weekend guest DJ. Look for Babaloo at the Horse while opening this weekend in the theaters are The Loss of Sexual Innocence, Illuminata, Bats, Three to Tango, Bringing Out the Dead, Crazy in Alabama, and The Best Man.

Saturday morning tickets go on sale for Bob Dylan at the Mullins. Head to that venue later in the evening to witness UMass Hockey take Massachusetts rival Boston College in Hockey East play. Afterwards head uptown. Else your best bet is the hilarious antics of Mission Improvable in the Campus Center.

The UMass Football game at Delaware presents a significant milestone for rookie professional sports broadcaster Mike Corey of WRDX. Corey, a recent UMass alumnus spent two years as the Sports Director of student radio station, WMUA, implementing a complete station overhaul and drastically increasing the expectation level of the station. He garnered AP awards for best college play-by-play for two years in a row. Signed quickly after graduation to the 50,000 watt Rock of Delaware, at 21, Corey is one of the youngest in the history of his profession to broadcast Division One sports at a corporate station. For this one tune in online and listen to the game at www.wrdx.com.

Basketball tickets are available all day Tuesday. Study that night at Fire & Water in Northampton and listen to a performance by Mark Erelli.

On Wednesday, Jonatha Brooke is at the Amherst College Frontroom. Fuel is in Providence, while Kid Rock, Powerman 5000 and DDT are at Tsongas Arena.

Author Richard Minear speaks about his book, Dr. Seuss Goes To War, that afternoon. His book has sparked international interest and has been featured on a handful of popular television shows.

The American Red Cross is in need of blood while the Salvation Army's is seeking volunteers for their annual winter kettle campaign.

Thursday, Oct. 21

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Ray Mason, 10 p.m., 21+
BAYSTATE
Down All The Days plus Hummer, 21+
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Coretta Sellars, 8 p.m.
Kate Messmer, 9 p.m.
Tave Hu, 10 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Margo Adam, 7 p.m.
Mike Watt, 10 p.m.
ORPHEUM THEATER
Elvis Costello plus Steve Nieve

Dance Clubs
HOT CLUB
Techno and Top 40 with DJ Bill
MARS NIGHTCLUB
Top 40, Hip-Hop, R&B with DJ's KLS or MLE, 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+

Performing Arts
TOTMAN 101 - UM
Ballroom Dance Club, 6:45 p.m.
FINE ARTS CENTER CONCERT HALL – UM
Lyle, Lyle, Crocodile, 10 a.m.
WEBSTER STUDIO THREE – AC
Raving, 8 p.m.
THEATER 14 – SC
How I Learned to Drive, 8 p.m.

Sports
BLUE WALL
WMUA's Sportsline, 5:30 p.m.

Friday, Oct. 22

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Love Bomb, 10 p.m., 21+
BAYSTATE
Ostrich Farm, 21+
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Alasatair Moock, 8 p.m.
Erin Mckeown, 9 p.m.
The Humming, 10 p.m.
IRON HORSE
A Night in Havana: Barbarito Torres, 7 p.m.
Babaloo, 10 p.m.
PEARL STREET
Zen Tricksters, 8:30 p.m.

Dance Clubs
CLUB METRO
House with DJ Ranpage, 9 p.m.-2 a.m.
HOT CLUB
70's and 80's Hits with DJ Donnie
MARS NIGHTCLUB
Disco with DJ Michael Kane, 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+
PEARL STREET
Chemistry Friday with Frankie Bones and Chris Thorpe, 10 p.m.
THE GROTTO
Dance with DJ Otis, 10 p.m.-2 a.m., 18+

Performing Arts
CURTIN THEATER – UM
Ha, 8 p.m.
THEATER 14 – SC
How I Learned to Drive, 9 p.m.

Karaoke
WORLD WAR II VETERANS ASSN.
9:30 p.m., 21+

Sports
TOTMAN FIELD
Men's Soccer vs Lasalle, 3:30 p.m.
GARBER FIELD
Field Hockey vs St. Joseph's, 7 p.m.

Additional On-Campus Events
METAWAMPEE LAWN
Teathered hot-air balloon rides, 4:30 p.m. to 7 p.m.
BLUEWALL
Something Every Friday with comedian Eric Nieves and movie The Sixth Sense, 5 p.m.

Saturday, Oct. 23

Notices
Tickets go on sale at 10 a.m. for Bob Dylan at the Mullins Center on Thursday, November 18.

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Lucky Johnson, 10 p.m., 21+
BAYSTATE
New Radiant Storm King, Spouse and Billy Puplit, 21+
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Dr. B, 6 p.m.
Daniel Jacob, 8 p.m.
Jazzotree, 10 p.m.
HOTEL WARREN
Schwa, 9 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Jon Pousette-Dart Trio plus Guy Forsyth, 7 p.m.
Big Bad Bollocks, 10 p.m.
PEARL STREET
Tony Vacca and the Rhythm Griots, 7 p.m.
WORCESTER PALLADIUM
Medeski, Martin & Wood

Dance Clubs
CLUB METRO
All ages dance, 8 p.m.-1 a.m.
HOT CLUB
House, Dance and Top 40 with DJ Andy
MARS NIGHTCLUB
House and Techno with DJ Dave "The Wave," 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+
PEARL STREET
Merengue and salsa with DJ Oliveras, 10 p.m., 21+
THE GROTTO
Dance with DJ Steve, 10 p.m.-2 a.m., 21+

Performing Arts
CURTIN THEATER – UM
Ha, 2 p.m.
THEATER 14 – SC
How I Learned to Drive, 8 p.m.
HALLIE FLANAGAN STUDIO THEATRE – SC
Baby with the Bath Water, 8 p.m.
FINE ARTS CENTER CONCERT HALL – UM
The Millennium Musical, 8 p.m.

Comedy & Improv
CAMPUS CENTER
Mission Improvable, 8 p.m.

Sports
ON RADIO
Football at Delaware on WMUA 91.1 FM, 1 p.m.
MULLINS CENTER
Men's Hockey vs Boston College, 7 p.m.

Sunday, Oct. 24

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Agiochook, 9 p.m., 21+
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Steven Gellman, 8 p.m.
Odd Music, 10 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Kate Clinton, 7 & 9:30 p.m.

Dance Clubs
MARS NIGHTCLUB
Upscale Hip-Hop and R&B with DJ Kurupt, 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+

Sports
GARBER FIELD
Field Hockey vs Temple, 12 p.m.
TOTMAN FIELD
Men's Soccer vs Fordham, 1 p.m.

Additional On-Campus Events
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
Movie The Sixth Sense, 8 p.m.

Monday, Oct. 25

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Amherst Jazz Orchestra, 8:30 p.m., 21+
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Open Stage, sign-up at 6:30 p.m., starts at 8 p.m.
Trytone, 10 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Kate Clinton, 7 & 9:30 p.m.

Tuesday, Oct. 26

Notices
Ticket pickup from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at Curry Hicks Cage for Men's Basketball vs Converse All-Stars

Music
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Amelia White, 8 p.m.
Mark Hershler, 9 p.m.
The Kitchen Table with Erelli & Plavin, 10 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Shannon Curfman, 7 p.m.

Performing Arts
TOTMAN 101 - UM
Ballroom Dance Club, 6:45 p.m.
STUDIO ONE – AC
Nrityanjali, 7:30 p.m.

Sports
GARBER FIELD
Field Hockey vs Dartmouth, 7 p.m.

Wednesday, Oct. 27

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Michael Gregory & Friends, 10 p.m., 21+
AMHERST COLLEGE FRONTROOM
Jonatha Brooke plus Anne Weiss, 8 p.m.
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Open Poetry, sign-up at 6:30 p.m., starts at 8 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Adrian Legg, 7 p.m.
LUPO'S HEARTBREAK HOTEL
Fuel
TSONGAS ARENA
Kid Rock, Powerman 5000, DDT

Dance Clubs
NORTHAMPTON CENTER FOR THE ARTS
Swing and salsa with DJ Jitterbug, lessons from 7-8:30 p.m., Open Dance 8:30-11:30 p.m.
THE GROTTO
DJ Dance Party, 10:30 p.m.-2 a.m., 18+

Performing Arts
THEATER 14 – SC
How I Learned to Drive, 8 p.m.

Film

Call for latest movie times or go to excite.com and click on movie listings for zip code 01003 for desired date.

Academy of Music Theatre
274 Main Street, Northampton (584-8435)
Trick

AMC Mountain Farms 4
Mountain Farms Mall - Route 9 Hadley (584-9153)
Blue Streak, Random Hearts, The Sixth Sense, Three Kings, Three to Tango

Amherst Theatre
30 Amity Street, Amherst (253-5426)
200 Cigarettes

Greenfield Cinemas
Route 2, The Mohawk Trail, Greenfield (772-0298)
Double Jeopardy, Drive Me Crazy, Random Hearts, The Story of Us, The Sixth Sense, Three Kings

Pleasant Street Theatre
27 Pleasant Street, Northampton (586-0935)
American Beauty, The King of Masks, Wrestling with Alligators, Illuminata, The Loss of Sexual Innocence

Showcase Cinemas
864 Riverdale Street, West Springfield (733-5131)
The Adventures of Elmo in Grouchland, American Beauty, Blues Streak, Double Jeopardy, Drive Me Crazy, Fight Club, Random Hearts, The Sixth Sense, Stigmata, The Story of Us, Superstar, Three Kings, Bats, The Best Man, Bringing Out the Dead, Crazy in Alabama, Three to Tango

Tower Theatres
19 College Street, South Hadley (533-3456)
Double Jeopardy, Random Hearts

Outdoors & Trips
UMass Ski 'n' Board Club
434 Student Union (545-3437)
30- Annual Ski 'n' Board Sale (Student Union Ballroom), Nov. 18-

Turn to Source, page 7

8 9 MICHAEL'S BILLARDS AND SPORTS BAR
10A Belchertown Road, Amherst, MA 01002 256-8284

Everyday from 3 -7pm and all day Sun -Wed $4.00/hour pool

- 15 9' Tables
- 63" Big Screen TV
- Great Selection of Beer on Tap
- Awesome Jukebox

Live music every Thursday, Friday and Saturday

JAI
Friday at 10 pm
Empty Bottle Saviors
Saturday at 10pm

Best! 1998 UMASS Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Located across the street from Colonial Village and the NEW Cumberland Farms on Rte. 9

UMass Alumni Association
"Leaders in the Making" Scholarships

Applicants must be full-time junior undergraduate students to be eligible. Applications may be picked up Monday through Friday at the Alumni Relations Office in Memorial Hall from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. They must be completed and returned to Jason Germain in the Alumni Office no later than November 19, 1999. Winners will be recognized at a ceremony in April.

For more information, please contact
Jason Germain at
545-2317 or alumni@admin.umass.edu

UMASS Alumni Association®
University of Massachusetts Amherst

KLEIN'S ALL SPORTS
UNBEATABLE!!!
GRAND OPENING AT HOLYOKE MALL
NO MATTER WHAT YOUR SPORT, KLEIN'S HAS YOU COVERED
Hockey ★ Ski ★ Snowboard ★ In-Line Skate ★ Exercise Equipment ★ Baseball
Athletic Clothing ★ Winter Clothing ★ Athletic Footwear and More!

Converse Classic 19.95
Basketball Shoes Your Choice 39.95
Borbor & Fleece Vests 17.99
Rollerblade Violblade 39.99
Basketball or Football 6.99

www.kleinsallsports.com
5TH SECOND LEVEL • NEXT TO FILENE'S • USE RUBY TUESDAY'S ENTRANCE

■ The Source

continued from page 6

20
Learn-to Ski/Board (Killington, VT), Dec. 12
Quebec Weekend, Dec. 3-5
Millennium Ski and Party Weekend (Quebec, Canada), Dec. 30 – Jan. 2 or Dec. 29 – Jan. 2
Winter Gateway Weekend (Quebec, Canada), Feb. 18-21
Escape to the Rockies (Location TBA), March 12-17
Mount Tremblant (Montreal, Canada), March 12-15
Jamaica, March 12-17

Outing Club
432C Student Union (545-3131)
Rock Climbing every Wednesday meeting at 2:20 P.M. at the Student Union steps

Pioneer Valley Sierra Club
586-5586
Quabbin Reservoir Hike led by Alexandra Dawson and will be approximately 5 miles, Oct. 30

Other Activities

If the previous events fail to catch your attention then consider disco bowling at Northampton Bowl; biking, rollerblading, or running the Rail Trail from Northampton to Sunderland; hiking, mountain-biking or rock-climbing one of the area mountains; visiting Puffer's Pond; shopping at the Hampshire or Holyoke Mall; hayride at the Bison Farm in Hadley; mini-golf on route 9; billiards in the UMass campus center, Mike's Billiards in Amherst, or Packard's in Northampton.

Volunteer Blood Drive
Campus Center Concourse, UMass (1-800-462-2229). The American Red Cross will be holding blood drives during this month. Monday, October 25, Wednesday, October 27 and Thursday October 28 from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Xmas Bell Ringers Needed!
27 Brewster Court, Northampton (585-8729). Join in the spirit of giving by volunteer to be a bell ringer for the Salvation Army's kettle campaign during Nov. and Dec. Flexible hours, outdoor work, sites in Northampton, Amherst, Hadley and Easthampton. Last year the Salvation Army spent $185,926 in Hampshire County alone, helping 4,308 residents with emergency needs. Help raise money for this worthy cause.

Lectures & Discussions
Lizards and Landsat: Using Remtote-Sensing Data to Monitor Habitat Conservation Planning
Thompson Hall 620, UMass (545-3940). The Center for Public Policy and Administration welcomes Charlie Schwiek and Craig Thomas. Monday, October 25 at 12 p.m.

Living the Legacy: Reciem and Resistance in the Academy
Campus Center 174, UMass (545-2517). Brainstorm how we should move forward in the effort to re-instate a race-based Affirmative Action admissions policy at UMass. Tuesday, October 26 at 7 p.m.

Advising and the Student information System (SIS), Part II
Campus Center 904, UMass (545-3670). University Resource Network continues Registrar Elizabeth Pyle and SIS Project Manager Bo Mack's presentation on the current status of the SIS Project and outline of how both advising and advisors would likely be affected. Wednesday, October 27 at 12 p.m.

Dr. Seuss Goes To War
Herter 227, UMass (545-3670). An illustrated lecture by Richard H. Minear author of Dr. Seuss Goes To War. Wednesday, October 27 at 4 p.m.

Domestic Violence
MRC, 236 North Pleasant Street, Amherst (253-9887). Presentations by men and women sharing their experiences and discussion mederated by Steven Botkin, Executive Director of MRC. Wednesday, October 27 at 7:30 p.m.

Book Readings
Hazel Carby
Food For Thought Books, 106 North Pleasant, Amherst (253-5432). Hazel Carby is the Chair of African American Studies at Yale University and author of Reconstructing Womanhood: The Emergence of the Afro-American Woman Novelist and Race Men. Thursday, October 21 at 7 p.m.

Art Galleries
Bridges and Boudaries: African Americans and American Jews
University Gallery, UMass (545-3670). An exploration of relationships between African Americans and American Jews that combines scholarship, historical documentation, and fine arts. Tue-Fri 11 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Sat-Sun 2-5 p.m. through October 22.

Primary Source
University Gallery, UMass (545-3670). Participating artists Roger Ackling, Doug Bradshow, and Sandy Gellis collaborate with light, rainfall, and mineral compounds. Tue-Fri 11 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Sat-Sun 2-5 p.m. through October 22

Poiesis: The Language of Imahes
Augusta Savage Gallery, 101 New Africa House, UMass (545-5177). Books, paintings, and drawings by Leandro Soto, a Cuban artist and visiting professor at Mount Holyoke College. Mon-Tue 1-7 p.m., Wed-Fri 1-5 p.m. starts October 26.

I Want to Feel the Way You Do, All the Time
Hampden Gallery, Southwest Residential Area, UMass (545-0680). An installation contrasting nature and culture by Hirokazu Fukawa. Mon-Fri 3-7 p.m., Sun 2-5 p.m. through October 30.

Think Again
Hampden Film / Photo Gallery, Hampshire College (559-5447). An exhibit of print works by a collaborative team of two artists, S.A. Bachman and David Attyah, who create agitprop art with a political twist. Mon-Thurs 9-12 a.m., Fri-Sun 1-6 p.m. through October 29.

Documents
Hampshire College Main Gallery (559-5544). Paintings and drawings by Cynthia Gaash, Susan Nelson Rogers, and Danica Phelps (three Hampshire alumni) dealing with time, evidence, and the self. Mon-Fri 10:30-4:30 a.m., Sun 2-5 p.m. through October 23.

Libraries

Only regular hours listed, call for holidays.

Biological Sciences
214 Morrill Science Center, UMass (545-2674)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-9 p.m.
Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-9 p.m.

Forbes Library
20 West Street, Northampton (587-1011)
Monday 1-9 p.m.
Tuesday 9 a.m.-6 p.m.
Wednesday 9 a.m.-9 p.m.
Thursday 1-5 p.m.
Fri-Sat 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Coolidge Room: Mon-Wed 12-3 p.m.

Johnson Library Center
Hampshire College (559-5418)
Mon-Fri 8:30 a.m.-midnight
Sat-Sun 10 a.m.-midnight

Keefe Science
Amherst College (542-2076)
Mon-Thurs 8:30 a.m.-1 a.m
Friday 8:30 a.m.-10 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Sunday noon-1 a.m.

Mount Holyoke College
MHC Main Library, 50 College Street, South Hadley (538-2225)
Mon-Fri 8 a.m.-midnight
Saturday 9 a.m.-midnight
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Neilson
Smith College (585-2910)
Mon-Thurs 7:45 a.m.-midnight
Friday 7:45 a.m.-11 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-1 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Physical Sciences & Engineering
Lederle Lowrise, 2nd floor, UMass (545-1370)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-9 p.m.
Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-9 p.m.

Robert Frost
Amherst College (542-2319)
Mon-Thurs 8:30 a.m.-1 a.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m.-midnight
Saturday 9:30 a.m.-11 p.m
Sunday 10 a.m.-1 a.m.

Vincent Morgan Music
Amherst College (542-2387)
Mon-Thurs 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Friday 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday noon-5 p.m.
Sunday 2 p.m.-11 p.m.

W.E.B. DuBois
UMass Main Library (545-0150)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-midnight
Friday 8 a.m.-10 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.-10 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Upcoming Concerts

BELA FLECK & THE FLECKTONES
Oct. 28, Calvin Theater
FUEL
Oct. 29, Avalon
THE PIETASTERS, SPRING HEELED JACK & THE PILFERS
Oct. 29, Amherst College Frontroom
THEY MIGHT BE GIANTS
Oct. 29, Toad's Place
TYPE O NEGATIVE, PUYA
Oct. 30, Avalon
UNCLE SAMMY
Oct. 30, Butterfield
GUSTER, THE PUSH STARS, JUMP LITTLE CHILDREN
Oct. 30, Orpheum Theatre
COUNTING CROWS, GIGOLO AUNTS
Oct. 31, Orpheum Theatre
DROPKICK MURPHY'S, ANTI-FLAG, BLOOD FOR BLOOD, BOMBSHELL ROCKS
Oct. 31, Lupo's Heartbreak Hotel
"WEIRD AL" YANKOVIC
Oct. 31, Maine State Theater
IGGY POP
Nov. 1, Avalon
BEN HARPER & THE INNOCENT CRIMINALS, RAHZEL
Nov. 2, Avalon
MXPX
Nov. 2, The Webster
MEATLOAF
Nov. 2, Orpheum Theatre
MXPX, TOO BAD EUGENE
Nov. 3, Avalon
MIGHTY PURPLE
Nov. 6, Iron Horse
RAT DOG
Nov. 10, Worcester Palladium
PRIMUS
Nov. 10, Avalon
MARK ERELLI
Nov. 11, Iron Horse
LOSER KIDS TOUR W/ BLINK 182, SILVERCHAIR, FENIX TX
Nov. 12, Worcester Palladium
FOUNTAINS OF WAYNE
Nov. 12, Amherst College Frontroom
LETTERS TO CLEO
Nov. 12, Paradise Rock Club
MICHAEL GLABICKi (of Rusted Root)
Nov. 13, Pearl Street
THEY MIGHT BE GIANTS
Nov. 13, Amherst College Frontroom
CHRIS CORNELL
Nov. 13, Orpheum Theatre
INSANE CLOWN POSSE
Nov. 13, The Webster
311
Nov. 13, Worcester Palladium
BOB DYLAN & PHIL LESH
Nov. 14, Worcester Centrum
GET UP KIDS, AT THE DRIVE-IN, ULTIMATE FAKEBOOK
Nov. 14, Amherst College Frontroom
LIVE
Nov. 18, Orpheum Theatre
VOICES ON THE VERGE: ROSE POLENZANI, ERIN MCKEOWN, JESS KLEIN AND BETH AMSEL
Nov. 18, Iron Horse
BOB DYLAN, PHIL LESH 7 FRIENDS
Nov. 18, Mullins Center
FILTER, STAIND
Nov. 20, Avalon
MEDESKI, MARTIN & WOOD
Nov. 22, Calvin Theater
BUCKCHERRY
Nov. 24, The Webster
STING
Nov. 27, Orpheum Theatre
MOXY FRUVOUS

Turn to SOURCE, page 8

■ fashion

continued from page 5

Animate objects will also be celebrated by the aesthetic world and will slowly find themselves incorporated into the same market that now embraces the power suit and traditional men's attire. Officers will be brightened by the over-the-shoulder draping of a domestic calico cat, parakeet earrings, and snake belts. A true appreciation of life will evolve; animals will no longer be subjected to harsh medical tests, and instead will be bred to highlight and layer casual sweaters, gloves, and winter hats.

It often seems like there is no clear association between one fashion craze to the next. But careful examination of the cultural statistics and contemporary philosophy of aesthetics might supply some accurate predictions, like these, of what's to come and contest the idea that trends are completely arbitrary.

nike.com

Have you turned your prison-like dorm room into a shrine to sports? Has anyone ever eaten it attempting a skateboard trick named after you? Is your school mascot or your favorite player's number one of your 18 tattoos? Whatever it is, if it combines your personality and style with sports, we want to know about it. And you'll want to tell us about it if you're into free stuff. All you have to do to get in the game is e-mail us a photograph that shows off your individual sports style. Every day four people have a shot at winning a Nike bike messenger bag. If you've got one of the top five images of the week you'll win a Nike Triax 300 watch. And if you really kick ass, you could win a custom sports trip for two, to any event, any place. For more details and official contest rules, log on to nike.com/fame15.

Beasties, Pumpkins and Pokemon

Perhaps taking a hint from the album that has just [illegible] cars after Black Sabbath, the L.A. hip-hop group Black Eyed Peas will have several appearances of their forthcoming album, which is the critically praised [illegible] will feature appearances by Wu-Tang Clan affiliate Dave Grohl of the Foo Fighters, Marcy Gras and Gang Starr DJ Premier.

Lenny Kravitz, addiction and Pitbull member Perry Farrell [illegible] deal with [illegible] the plan to release [illegible] next spring. Beastie Boys are planning the release of their two-CD, forty track album just in time for Christmas. The Sounds of Science, due November 23rd, will contain rare, unreleased material, explicit cuts, and one all new track, "Alive."

After a year of managing themselves, the Smashing Pumpkins have asked Ozzy Osbourne's wife, Sarah Osbourne to be their manager. That's not to say it was a hast decision on not to say it was a hast decision on Billy Corgan's part. Reportedly, the alt-rocket talked to Michael Ovitz, John Silva (Beck and Beastie Boys), Jim Guerinot (Chris Cornell, The Offspring, No Doubt), Arthur Spivak (Tori Amos), as well as to Jeff Kwatinetz and Peter Katsis (Korn, Limp Bizkit and Orgy). Hopefully Ozzy and Billy will play nice.

Want to win $1 million dollars? Just become a hip-hop fan. I'm serious, quick. Def Jam Records is currently holding a trivia contest to determine "hip-hop's biggest fan." The winner will receive $1 million. Details are available at www.defjam.com.

Pivdon.com, a new website promising full-screen TV, video and audio, has just received a boost for their launch. The Who have scheduled their first in a series of reunion shows for [illegible] '99, a concert supporting the aforementioned oasis. The following two days, the band will play acoustic sets at Neil Young's Bridge School benefit concert in Mountain View, California and two weeks later, they will hit the stage at Chicago's House of Blues for two more charity shows.

On November 23rd Phish will release a six-CD box set, which will consist of the uncut recordings of last November's back-to-back shows at the Hampton Coliseum, in Hampton, Va. The set is probably already widely available to download via MP3 on the Net. Anyway, it will feature Phishy versions of Chumbawamba's "Tubthumping," the Beastie Boys' "Sabotage," the Beatles' "Cry Baby Cry," as well as other classic Phish favorites.

In a completely shocking move, the soundtrack for Pokemon: The First Movie (hopefully, the last) will

Turn to NOTES, page 9

Drama takes on Drivers' Ed

[illegible]steps Theatre Department will present How I Learned To Drive by Paula Vogel from October 21-23, and October 27-30 at Theatre 14

The top ten reasons to love late night TV

So you can't sleep, huh? Oh, do I have the remedy for you. Now, since over the past few years, my remedy for such things as a desire for violence, world hunger and the common cold have all been the same thing, you know what I'm going to say. That's right, turn on the TV! I think everyone has at some time in the past had the desire to watch King Letterman or Queen Leno at some point. But late night goes beyond that. Trust me, after some of the stuff I saw this week, I know it goes way beyond that!

Now it simply wouldn't be fitting for me to just mention things to watch after dark. It wouldn't be fitting for me to simply review them either. So, without further a due, here's the "Top Ten Reasons to Stay Up Late Tonight!"

10. David Letterman could at any time interview Dan Quayle again. - Oh what a sight it was! Dan Quayle, the man who has spent the last decade a the butt of every comedian s jokes, decided to sit down with the calm and collected David Letterman, and try to avoid saying things like, "in the past we have been successful," and "future we have been very successful," again. Letterman was seemingly sucking up to Quayle, probably for fear that he brought body guards with him. However, the interview did end with Quayle touching on the whole Potato tor is it Potatoe) incident. He thinks it was blown into something much more important that it should have been.

9. The Daily Show With Jon Stewart - Whoever thought that this show would be dead around now couldn't have been more wrong. "The Daily Show" gets better every time I watch it, and though Stewart is the funniest part of the show, it would still be impossible to work it the Correspondents were not so terrific.

8. Extra, National Enquirer TV, Cops, Caught on Tape, and Jerry Springer - All of these things might as well be considered one show. I'm never sure which one I'm actually watching, except for Springer because it's a talk show. However, most of them run on the same principle, "make something up, act like we all need to know, and pretend that it's important." As sick as it is, I can't get enough.

7. Sports Machine - When I was in high school, they didn't call me the sports machine, though I wish they would have. I would like to be called anything that ended with "machine." Probably the worst name ever it makes sports fun again, with lousy interviews and plays of the week. "Sports Machine" runs on Sunday nights way past your bedtime.

6. Kickin' It with Byron Russell - I'm not quite sure who Byron Russell is, or what he's kicking, but he gets some cool interviews with some cool people. This past weekend, at 5:00 a.m., I watched him interview Harrison Ford, Molly Shannon, Melissa Joan Hart, Mark Wahlberg, John Cusak, John Malcovich and D.L. Hughley all in the same one-hour show. Now as you can imagine, if he interviews all of these people in one hour with commercials, the interviews won't be replayed by Barbara Walters. However, with the stars saying things such as "Can I sit down?" and "I promise Byron, I'll put you on my show someday how can you go wrong?

5. The guy with the question mark jacket - If you've seen this guy, you know what I'm talking about. If you haven't, rink a lot of coffee, and stay up late tonight, because you need to watch him. His commercials run non-stop during the early morning hours, and every time I see him, I laugh hysterically. He's trying to get people to buy his book, that explains how to steal up to three million dollars from the government, to start your own business. The way he does this, is by injecting free based crack into his body, then he jumps all over the place, sticking a microphone in other people's faces, all while wearing a jacket covered in different color question marks. I really can't explain Mr. Question Mark Man in words, all I have to say, is watch him. Who knows, he may make you rich someday. It's more likely that he'll land you in jail if you affiliate yourself with him in any way though.

4. One word: infomercials! – Now if you don't like infomercials, I'll give you a one night viewing absolutely free! That's right, turn on your TV, watch George Foreman intelligently push his "lean, mean, fat grilling machine," and just try to tell me that you hate infomercials. You can learn to slice things, paint things, steal things and one guy even claims that you can be the Messiah in only three weeks. However the bottom line is that if you don't watch TV at 2:00am on a Saturday morning, you won't get to see a man pretend that an eleven inch Bonsai kitten is a mustache. Just do it! You won't be disappointed.

3. Bla-Blazo – Univision is absolutely perfect for late night viewing. Although the network spends hours during the day running soap operas in Spanish, the Emmy award winning stuff for Univision is definitely their game shows. First of all, you must take note that you do not need to be able to speak a word of Spanish to get the ultimate gamming experience. Most of the game shows have crazy contestants worshipping the laundry detergent or bag of Doritos prizes that the large breasted women in bikini's are modeling. "Bla-Blazo" is different though, because it has this puppet as a host. Yes that's right, I said puppet, one of those things that only talks when you shove your hand up its ass. The puppet has a wacky look, as he appears to have eyebrows, but has no eyes. He also always wears a headset, which I simply don't understand. One time I saw the thing put its head in one of the model's cleavage, and then disappeared under his desk, only to make some sort of moaning noises. Now, if that's not brilliant television, I don't know what is!

Turn to TUBE page 9

2. Conan O' Brien's short skit – Conan has by far the best talk show on television, but the funniest part of the night, is always that short skit. The skit comes on around 12:45am, and if you're sitting around doing nothing, turn it on!

1. Battle Dome – The reason I was inspired to write this article, is "Battle Dome." All I'm saying is that you need to watch "Battle Dome" to truly call yourself a TV fan. Someone came up with the brilliant idea to put pro-wrestling and "American Gladiators" in a blender, and pour the result into late night TV. The show is much more extreme that "Gladiators" ever was, but is also more real that pro-wrestling. It still has the fake fights that make wrestling what it is, but I think the characters are ingenious. One guy's name is The Commando, and he comes out to the dome in a hummer. The fake president of the Battle Dome League, is some woman telearly a former porn star) who tries to get it on with all the men on the show. "Battle Dome" is on a few different stations during the weekend, and you need to watch it. Even if it is the middle of the night, you have to give The Commando some respect!

Kyan Benharris is a Collegian Columnist

■ notes

continued from page 8

include music from Britney Spears, N'Sync, Christina Aguilera, and 98 Degrees. They're obviously trying to find music as putrid as the program itself. Also, included will be Emma Buton, a.k.a "Baby Spice," a.k.a. the one you weren't totally repulsed by...wait, yes you were.

In the shuffle of electronic metal bands, System of a Down has been added as the openers on Filter's upcoming tour. Originally, Staind was supposed to open for Filter, but had to drop in order fill a spot on the Family Value's Tour when Limp Bizkit had a disagreement with the aforementioned. S.O.A.D.

Also, Korn will debut their new single "Falling Away from Me" on a special Halloween episode of "South Park." No word yet on what the band's role will be in the show, I guess it doesn't matter as nobody's watching anyway.

The final slot on TLC's upcoming tour with Destiny's Child has been filled. K-Ci & JoJo, the duo that also comprises half of R&B outfit Jodeci, will open the string of shows. The tour kicks off in Toronto on Oct. 22

Mick Jagger has reportedly moved back in with his "former" wife Jerry Hall, only three months after he agreed to pay her 10 million pounds to end their twenty-one-year marriage. As part of the settlement, Hall was awarded the couple's mansion in Richmond Surrey, and while she has allowed her former hubby to move back in, she told reporters that they are not living as man and wife. They often share meals, but when bedtime nears, each of them supposedly returns to their own suite of rooms. I'll believe that one someday.

Dr. Dre, whose new album is coming in a few short weeks (Nov. 2), has changed that album's title yet again. First it was Chronic 2000, then Chronic 3001, then Dr. Dre, and now he's going with Dr Dre 2001. I won't make the obvious joke here.

Ice Cube and Dr. Dre may go straight back to Compton. Cube told MTV that the surviving members of N.W.A. - Cube, Dre, MC Ren and DJ Yella - may reunite next year for a new album.

The release of R&B songster D'Angelo's second album, Voodoo, has been unexpectedly pushed back until Jan. 11, 2000. A spokesperson for D'Angelo said the delay is due to the fact that his collaboration with Lauryn Hill on a cover of "Feel Like Making Love" has yet to be completed. Meanwhile, Voodoo's first single, "Left and Right," featuring Redman and Method Man, will be released in the next couple weeks.

Former Celine Dion drummer Peter Barbeau has filed a $5 million wrongful dismissal and copyright infringement lawsuit against Dion. Barbeau's suit claims that he wrote the song "Dreaming of You" and that Dion's lip-synchs during live shows, putting undue pressure on his playing. Dion insists that Barbeau has been properly compensated for his songwriting efforts and that she actually does sing during her shows, depending on one's definition of singing.

Former Poison guitarist C.C. Deville is a busy man lately. He's been recording with a new band, the Stepmothers, who are currently in the studio for their debut album for release in February 2000. Also, Deville has started a hair band with Jack Blades (Damn Yankees), Bobby Blotzer (Ratt) and Jack Russel (Great White).

Adam Martigaetti is a Collegian Staff Member

■ tube

continued from page 8

■ The Source

continued from page 7

Dec. 3, Amherst College Frontroom
GODSMACK, REVEILLE, JIM ROSE CIRCUS
Dec. 4, The Webster
B.B. KING
Dec. 5, Worcester Palladium
EDDIE FROM OHIO
Dec. 5, Iron Horse
BARENAKED LADIES
Dec. 12, Orpheum Theatre
BARENAKED LADIES
Dec. 29, Worcester Centrum

Venues

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY 36 North Pleasant Street, Amherst (253-4400)
AVALON 15 Landsdowne Street, Boston (617-262-2424)
BAY STATE 41 Strong Avenue, Northampton (584-8513)
BILL'S BAR 5 5 Landsdowne Street, Boston (617-421-9678)
BUTTERFIELD RESIDENCE HALL Central Residence Area, UMass. Amherst
CALVIN THEATER 17 King Street, Northampton (584-0610)
CHAPIN AUDITORIUM Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley
CLUB 21 62 Turkey Hill Road, Belchertown (323-4117)
CLUB KAOS 1592 Main Street, Springfield (739-7900)
CLUB METRO 492 Pleasant Street, Northampton (582-9898)
FIRE & WATER CAFE 5 Old South Street, Northampton (586-8336)
FLEETCENTER 1 Fleet Center, Boston (617-624-1000)
HOT CLUB 10-12 Stearns Square, Springfield (781-4509)
HOTEL WARREN 13 Elm Street, Deerfield (665-2301)
IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL 20 Center Street, Northampton (584-0610)

How Romance killed porn

By Deborah Hornblow
The Hartford Courant

As the screen faded to black at the end of French director Catherine Breillat's new film, Romance, it was impossible not to be overcome by mourning. It has nothing to do with the film's ending, which is indeed tragic, but not for the reasons Breillat may have intended. The response has to do with one undeniable, regrettable development. The sexy movie is dead.

Breillat's film, which has the distinction of having raised eyebrows in France, has been hailed for its frank treatment of adult themes and explicit depiction of sexual acts. True to its advertising, Romance delivers the full monty and then some, including a multitude of scenes that might heretofore have been confined to the porn theater.

But the remarkable thing about Romance is how desperately, depressingly unsexy it is. At the film's end (where Breillat angrily cuts from the protagonist's face in childbirth to the head of a newborn emerging from a woman's fully stretched vaginal opening), the 20-something guy seated in front of me let out an, "Oh man," as though he'd just been punched.

I had the same feeling of shocked repulsion, but in retrospect, it is the director's willful desire to subject the audience to brutal truths that delivered the blow. Breillat positions the audience up close for such intimate acts as failed efforts at fellatio, proof of a woman's arousal on a man's wet finger, and childbirth. She wants us to see the naked, full-screen truth of the matter, and in her eyes, it is anything but romantic.

Romance demonstrates the same fact that made Stanley Kubrick's Eyes Wide Shut the equivalent of a celluloid cold shower. In a narrative film, as opposed to pornography, sex is bound by context. If the characters are tortured, sex provides no escape (for them or for the audience). The camera can focus on the exposed erogenous zones of beautiful actors, but the action is sustained by what is happening to the characters. In Romance and Eyes Wide Shut, sexual adventuring is the manifestation of extreme psychological distress, and viewing is painful.

Audiences lured to the cinema by sexy trailers and steamy advance stories encounter the commercial equivalent of bait and switch. In Eyes Wide Shut, Kubrick's calculated decision to cast a real-life married couple, Tom Cruise and Nicole Kidman, and shroud his filmmaking in secrecy broadcast a message that his film would go where no other film could dare. Implicit in the publicity and preview campaign was the suggestion that the moviegoing public was being invited into the bedroom of this couple. In the end, the marketing wizardry behind Eyes Wide may be the film's most memorable attribute. The scenes between Cruise and Kidman are notably sexless (and rather chilly), and the film's implicit intention to capitalize on the couple's off-screen relationship stands out as a cagey and perverse subtext.

Romance is a great deal more explicit, and the results are even grimmer. The film follows Caroline Ducey's glum Marie as she attempts to solve the problem of her agonizing romance. The poor thing lives with a male model who is hotlooking but never hot for her. (Breillat films the scenes between the couple in appropriately sterile shades of white on white.) Marie loves this ex-prpail Narcissus in spite of his constant, cruel rejection. Breillat fails to show us why, or how Marie could love him because these two never have what passes for a good time.

Ah, Ha!

Performance artist, butoh dancer and choreographer, Dawn Akemi Saito searches to reclaim her voice through family history in HA, starting tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater.

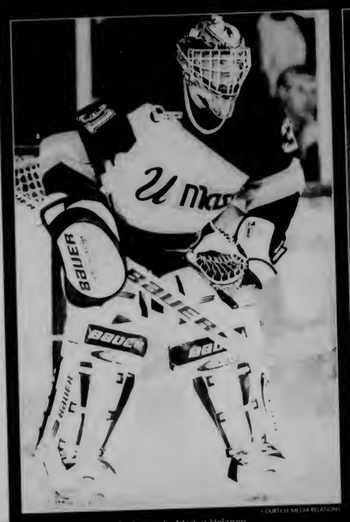
The University of Massachusetts'
Something Every Friday
presents
Eric Nieves
"Eric Nieves", a Bronx native, made his comedy debut in 1994. Since then he has become one of the most sought after Latino comics in New York.
Eric is a comedian, writer and performer. His credits include a guest-starring role on "NYPD Blue" as well as "Showtime at the Apollo" and BET'S "Comic Review".
Friday October 22, 1999
Bluewall Cafe, 8pm... FREE
The FREE movie : "Sixth Sense" will be shown following the performance. the movie will be shown again on Sunday Oct. 24 in the Student Union Ballroom at 8pm.
Visit us on the Web: http:??www.umass.edu/events/calender.htm
This program is made possible by a grant from the Auxiliary Services Department and the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs.

THE MONKEY BAR & GRILLE
NEW YORK STYLE SCENE IN DOWNTOWN AMHERST.
NEW AND EXCITING PLACE TO EAT, OFFERING CAJUN CUISINE AND OUTDOOR PATIO AND UPSCALE MICROBREWS.
AFTER 10 IT'S TIME TO DANCE
WEDNESDAY - PROMO NIGHT WITH DJ FOOZ. FREE PRIZES!!
THURSDAY - HOUSE MUSIC WITH DJ FOOZ
FRIDAY - HOUSE, HIP-HOP & TOP 40 WITH DJ FOOZ
SATURDAY - HOUSE, HIP-HOP & TOP 40 WITH DJ CREME
SUNDAY - LATIN NIGHT WITH DJ CREME FEATURNG FREE DANCE LESSONS FROM THE THERESA CASTANO CENTER FOR LATIN DANCE
63 N. PLEASANT ST. 259-1600

Spirit Haus
SPECIALTY BEVERAGE CENTER
Grad Students-10%off regular fine wine prices with ID
OCTOBER SPECIALS!
CIDER JACK 6PK BTLS $4.99
CUERVO GOLD 750ML $12.75
OLD SPECKLED HEN, RUDDLES, BELHAVEN 4PK 15 OZ CANS $4.99
BASS 4 PK BTLS $10.99
GENESSEE 30PK ALL TYPES $6.99* *AFTER REBATE
GUINNESS 8PK PUB CANS $9.49
BACARDI LIMON 750ML $9.59
GOLDSCHLAGER 375ML $8.99
STOLI COFFEE FLAVORED VODK $15.99
COME IN TO SEE MORE!
338 COLLEGE ST, RTE. 9
1 MILE EAST OF AMHERST CENTER
OPEN 9AM - 11PM
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER • (413) 253-5384

安城中國餐店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 or 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256 0733
145 main st. northampton 586 6155



visit www.spencergifts.com
Best assortment of masks, costumes, and all that is great and gory.
SPENCER gifts

CRAZY AL'S HAUNTED HAYRIDE
The Area's Newest Halloween Attraction at the
LONG HOLLOW BISON FARM
ROUTE 9 • HADLEY
For Info Call (413) 584-4550
Experience If You Dare:
A 30-minute narrated & horrifying ride through the dark forest and Corn Field of Death, plus screams around every corner! Look for the 24-Foot Ghost!
AGES 8 YEARS AND OLDER REQUIRED
—Not suitable for Young Children—
FRIDAY • SATURDAY • SUNDAY
October 1st through 31st
Continuous Rides Begin at 7 pm
"A Frighfully Good Time!"
Admission Just $10 p.p.

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring "Genuine Draft and Light" $11.49 30/PK
Ciderjack (All Flavors) $4.99 6/PK
'Brewery Hill' Pale Ale, Blk & Tan Pilsner, Lager, Amber, Raspberry $3.99 6/PK
MILWAUKEE'S BEST $9.99 30 PK
PETE'S WINTER BREW "JUST ARRIVED" $8.99 12/PK
Vodka 80° EVERYDAY PRICE! $8.99 1.75 lt
Bud 18oz. Cans $4.99 6/PK
"Guinness" Pub Cans $4.99 4/PK
Absolut Vodka 80 proof $16.99 Full liter
Glenlivet "Single Malt" $23.99 750 ml.
Ceder Creek "Australian Wines" Cabernet, Chardonnay, Shiraz Cab $7.99 1.5 liter
Knob Creek "Small Batch Bourbon" $21.99 750 ml.
Check Out Russell's Indoor Wine Specials!
• Delivery Available • OPEN 9:00AM to 11:00PM • Visa/Mastercard • All Beers Plus Deposit •

UM athletes have a foreign flavor

Junior goalie Markus Helanen hails from Vantaa, Finland.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

UM back Kerry Ann Jaggassar honed her killer defensive instincts in her native Trinidad and Tobago

Defenseman Toni Soderholm calls Helsinki, Finland home

As America continues to diversify, so does the University of Massachusetts Athletic Department. The recruiters have racked up the frequent flyer miles in order to bring the Minutemen and Minutewomen the best possible athletes from around the globe.

The hockey team has 13 members that call Amherst their temporary home including stars Markus Helanen, Toni Söderholm, Jeff Blanchard, and Nathan Sell.

The turf brand of hockey also spans the globe, with Anke Bruemmer coming from Koeln, Germany and Zowie Tucker from Neath, South Wales. Nicole Bardell hails from Stouffville, Ontario, while Kerry Ann Jaggassar calls Trinidad and Tobago home.

— Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

Collegian Sports

Council Travel
4 Days Only Sale Extravaganza
LONDON $85
MILAN $145
SHANNON $105
Ask about South American Sale Fares!
Fare was based on $1 purchase, taxes apply. travel dates for Nov 1 to March (some restrictions apply), see refundable, subject to availability, student travel only. fee (IFIC) required, age restriction may apply.
(Extended hours retail shops and 24 Hour Rez center)
44 Main Street
Amherst MA
413-256-1261
Reservations & Payments must be made between Oct 19th - Oct 22nd
1-800-2COUNCIL
www.councilitravel.com

Northampton's Favorite Sports Bar and Dance Club
City Cafe
1 Pearl St. Northampton•584-4100
• 3 BARS - 2 Dance Floors • Gameroom - Pool table • 19 Tap Line
• Satelite Dish, NFL Ticket • KENO • U-MASS Alumnae Owned

BUB'S BAR-B-Q
"Pig Out In Style"
VOTED BEST BAR-B-Q AND BEST RIBS 15 CONSECUTIVE YEARS BY THE ADVOCATE
•(413) 548-9630•

Check out the UMASS Hockey Team Preview in tomorrow's paper!

Steve Madden
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

GIFTS from GLASS to GOLD
starting under $20.00
The Finest
silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY
One King St., Northampton 584-3324
264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3324
www.silverscapedesigns.com • 800-729-8971

SINCE 1984
La Cazuela
RESTAURANT
The Cuisines of MEXICO and the AMERICAN SOUTHWEST
Hand Crafted Food
Seasonal Specials
Extraordinary Tequila List
Superb Margaritas
Warm Hospitality
Please join us!
Dinner Every Night
Downtown Northampton
Across From The Parking Garage
413-584-6100
On the Web at www.lacaz.com

NFL Week Seven	Las Vegas Point Spread Note: Selections to be used strictly for entertainment and not for betting purposes	 Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief	 Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor	 Kathleen Ralls Women's Affairs Editor	 Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor	 Adam White Sports Associate
Last Week (Overall)		7-7 (39-45)	8-6 (43-41)	6-8 (38-46)	7-7 (37-47)	6-8 (37-47)
Denver @ New England	N.E. by 3 1/2	Denver	New England	New England	New England	New England
Kansas City @ Baltimore	Kansas City by 1	Kansas City	Kansas City	Kansas City	Kansas City	Kansas City
Detroit @ Carolina	Carolina by 4 1/2	Carolina	Detroit	Detroit	Carolina	Carolina
Washington @ Dallas	Dallas by 2 1/2	Washington	Washington	Washington	Washington	Dallas
Green Bay @ San Diego	Green Bay by 3	Green Bay	San Diego	San Diego	San Diego	Green Bay
Philadelphia @ Miami	Miami by 9 1/2	Philadelphia	Philadelphia	Miami	Philadelphia	Philadelphia
San Francisco @ Minnesota	Minnesota by 7	San Francisco	Minnesota	San Francisco	Minnesota	Minnesota
New Orleans @ N.Y. Giants	N.Y.G. by 3	N.Y.G.	New Orleans	New Orleans	N.Y.G.	N.Y.G.
N.Y. Jets @ Oakland	Oakland by 6 1/2	Oakland	Oakland	Oakland	Oakland	N.Y.J.
Cleveland @ St. Louis	St. Louis by 19	Cleveland	St. Louis	St. Louis	St. Louis	Cleveland
Buffalo @ Seattle	Seattle by 2 1/2	Seattle	Seattle	Buffalo	Seattle	Buffalo
Chicago @ Tampa Bay	Tampa Bay by 8	Chicago	Tampa Bay	Tampa Bay	Tampa Bay	Chicago
Atlanta @ Pittsburgh	Pittsburgh by 5 1/2	Pittsburgh	Pittsburgh	Pittsburgh	Pittsburgh	Atlanta
Cincinnati @ Indianapolis	Indianapolis by 10 1/2	Cincinnati	Indianapolis	Indianapolis	Indianapolis	Indianapolis

Hargrove

continued from page 14

matic, which would be a big improvement over Miller, and he has handled Belle and won a ton of games with a big-budget club – not easy feats, as the Orioles' past two seasons suggest.

There's been a lot of debate in Cleveland about whether he was canned unfairly by a GM, John Hart, who never gave him enough pitching to win a Series. Hargrove, a gentleman, has said he could accept Hart's basis, rationale – that a fresh approach was needed after nine years with the same manager; Hart probably didn't take enough of the blame himself, but he also probably was right that a change was a good idea.

Red Sox' skipper is tops in AL

By Paul Doyle
The Sporting News

Play the schedule. Focus on the task at hand. Don't think beyond the moment. Outsiders snicker at Jimy Williams' approach, but there is no arguing with his results: the Red Sox have made the playoffs in consecutive seasons for the first time since 1915 and '16.

The performance earned Williams The Sporting News American League Manager of the Year Award, as voted on by his peers.

Art Howe finished second in the balloting and Mike Hargrove and Johnny Oates tied for third.

"I go back to these players," Williams says. "I just enjoy watching them every day. It's an honor ... but it's a team honor. I really like this team."

Williams earned praise for handling a veteran pitching staff that included starters especially Bret Saberhagen and Ramon Martinez, who had a history of injuries. By constantly giving his starters extra rest, they remained fresh through the playoffs.

NY hopes Tuna stays in net

By Richard Oliver
Newsday

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. – Every time the phone rings up, New York Jets Coach Bill Parcells is ready to defend his claim that any decision about his future will be based on what his heart tells him off the field, not what the scoreboard tells him on it.

Yet as the Jets fight to salvage a season, the issue of that heart has become a major concern to friend and foe.

"I'm hoping that he wouldn't go out on a stretcher like this," nose tackle Jason Ferguson said this week. "But if you're just getting no love for the game and you get fed up with it, you've got to move on. How long can his heart take it? He's been through the surgery and everything ... he's got to look out for his health now."

I know it can't be good (for Parcells' heart)," he said of this season. "It's not good for mine, and I tell you, I'm pretty healthy. Losing is never good for the heart."

Ferguson's concerns echo that of several of the Jets, who worry that the club's unexpected slide is the result of a tangled web of bad luck that smacks more of Stephen King than safety blitzes, will drive Parcells into retirement is a matter of months.

As to where he might go, whether he would want to come back, linebacker Chad Cascadden said, "I was saying that if I were a coach, I wouldn't want to leave the game on a bad note."

$1 Sushi
Rock & Roll
10:30-1:00
Fri-Sat
Nights

KARAOKE
Rock & Roll
10:30-1:00
Fri-Sat
Nights

ICHIBAN いちばん
AUTHENIC JAPANESE AND KOREAN RESTAURANT
1 Roundhouse Plaza, Northampton, MA
(413) 585-1185
(Behind City Hall, off Main St.)
10% off Dinner w/ Stuent I.D. Exp. 12/31/99
Birthday Party
Chef's Free Meal
4 person table

2X More Digital Music for 1/3 the Price
www.omniplayer.com
Sales representatives needed

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Starts Friday ONLY IN NORTHAMPTON! COME ON OVER!
Beatlemania Returns
"The restored Yellow Submarine is sublime"
ULTRA STEREO/DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND
The Beatles
Yellow Submarine
At 7:15
At 9:00
BENEATH THE HILARITY, THE MOVIE IS A DISTURBING SOCIAL PARABLE.
As Cartman says, "This movie has warped my fragile little mind."
SOUTH PARK IS INSPIRED BY COMIC RUDENESS
SOUTH PARK
BIGGER, LONGER AND UNCUT
ACADEMY of MUSIC
Cinema House
584-8435
NORTHAMPTON, MASS

Entertainment, Food, & Giveaways
AMHERSTONLINE.COM
Bookmark It!™

Clip & Curl
HAIR, SKIN & NAILS
MASSAGE THERAPY
All hours by appointment
SPECIALIZING IN: • Swedish • Deep Tissue • Hydrotherapy • Therapeutic
30 min. Reg. $25 ONLY $20
60min. Reg. $45, ONLY $40
Fall SPECIALS
Full Service Salon featuring Hair Styling • Aveda Facials Nail Services • Massage Therapy 100% Organic Hair Removal
We Have Aveda Paul Mitchell Sunglitz products
Tips & Toes NO DRILLS! $25
STRESS RELIEF
Includes an Aveda mini-facial, hair, shampoo and dry, plus 30 minute massage, all personalized just for you!
Regularly $61, NOW $51
Expires 11/30/99
WE'RE EXPANDING!!! Look for our 2nd room coming soon!!
RTE. 116, SUNDERLAND • 665-2629 • TUES - FRI: 9-8, SAT 9-4

WORLD HEALING CELEBRATION
Saturday, October 23
7 - 11 pm
Unitarian Church
220 main Street
Northampton, MA
EZEKIEL
WORLD HEALING MEDITATION
accompanied by Mark Kelso
followed by the soul-filled melodies of Vikki True
reservations accepted for this FREE event
donations gratefully accepted
(413) 637-6196 (413) 623-5208
MAKE A DIFFERENCE

OUR PRICES ARE SO LOW, THEY'RE SCARY!!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
Everyday Pricing!
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LIGHT, BUD ICE, MICHELOB, LT, AMBER BOCK, LITE, ICEHOUSE, RED DOG, COORS LT, COORS, ROLLING ROCK $39.99 +DEP.
1/2 KEGS ICE, NATURAL, NATURAL ICE, MILWAUKEE'S BEST $34.99 +DEP.
1/2 KEGS BERKSHIRE BREWING STEEL RAIL, PORTER, TRADITIONAL, I.P.A. $82.99 +DEP.
KEYSTONE LIGHT CASE OF 30/12 OZ. CANS $10.99 +DEP. 30 PACK
BUD & BUD LIGHT CASE 2/12 PK. BOTTLES $14.99 +DEP.
SAM ADAMS LAGER, SUMMER, OKTOBERFEST CASE 2/12 PK. BOTTLE $17.99 +DEP.
BECK'S BEER LIGHT & DARK 12 PK. BOTTLE $9.99 +DEP.
OTTER CREEK 12 PK. BOTTLES $9.49 +DEP.
MIKE'S HARD LEMONADE CASE OF 6 PK. BOTTLES $18.99 +DEP.
WINE OF THE MONTH
FETZER VINEYARDS CHARDONNAY, CABERNET SAUVIGNON, MERLOT, WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML $7.49
CARLO ROSSI 4 LT. $6.99
INGLENOOK ESTATE CELLARS CHARDONNAY, ROYAL, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5 LT. $6.49
CITRA WINES 1.5 LT. $5.99
LINDEMAN'S BIN 65 CHARDONNAY 750 ML $6.49
CORBETT CANYON WHITE ZINFANDEL 1.5 LT. $4.99
RUBINOFF VODKA 1.75L $8.99
TANQUERAY GIN 750 ML $14.49
CLAN MACGREGOR SCOTCH 1.75L $13.99
BACARDI LIMON 1.75L $19.99
BLACK VELVET CANADIAN WHISKEY 1.75L $12.99
CAROLAN'S IRISH CREAM 750 ML $7.99
Discounts Available on Cases of Wine & Liquor. Ask For Details.
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 10/21/99 THRU WEDS. 10/27/99
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UMSFS Presents: Rocky Horror Picture Show CCA 10pm Oct. 28

Free CD of Cool Indie Music when you register at MyBytes.com, the ultimate wesite for your college needs

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Very Nice 1 Bdrm in Colonial Village. Quite, brand new carpet, right on bus line. $465+ AVAILABLE 11/1 253-2515 or 256-1109

2 Bedroom Atp. in Sunderland on bus route, Ht/HtW, electricity included. Well kept good location 665-4120

Apt. Available 2-Bedroom. A/C, Dishwasher, Washer/Dryer, Pool, Volley and Basketball Courts. Ht/HtWtr included on bus router 397-9870

AUTO FOR SALE

87 Honda Accord Sedan white 125,468 miles $1,200 or BO 546-4513

1992 Jetta GL CD, A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500 546-1773

1992 Mercury Sable Wagon 120K miles. Good condition. Plus 4 snow tires. Call 256-0067

AUTO FOR SALE

92 Saab 900S Good Condition lots of extras $3500.00 413-545-0136 or 413-967-7145

87 VW JETTA-GLI $1,000 5Spd. Runs strong, good tires, recent clutch,

COMPUTERS

exhaust. 256-6235

Computer Problems? We've got solutions. New systems to technical service. Call 413-

EMPLOYMENT

584-8857

Part-Time Clerical Position Requires answering phones customer service/office duties morning + afternoon hours. Apply to: National Heating 235 Triangle St. Amherst, MA

Earn $500 Weekly distributing phone cards. No experience necessary. Full or Part time. Call 1-800-572-3361

Immediate Opening for a General Assignment Reporter for the Westfield Evening News, a daily paper in Westfield, MA. Ability to write clean concise copy in a strict deadline environment a must. Above average wages and benefits. Send resume to: Maria Brazee, General Manager, Westfield News 64 School St.

EMPLOYMENT

Westfield, MA 01085

TUTORS/TRANSLATERS Bilingual/ for part-time, paid assistance during the school day to students speaking Amharic, Bengali, Japanese, Khmer, Korean, Mongolian, Portuguese, Tibetan. Call ESL Office at 413-549-9857. Amherst Public Schools An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

Personal Care Attendent for male quad. Mornings $9.50/hr. Call 546-0666

SUMMER MANAGEMENT INTERNSHIP On Campus Information Interviews Thursday October 21st Position pay from $5000-$15,000 For details visit www.univpaint.com To schedule interview Call Diane 1-800-390-4848 Ext. 100

Coaching Positions Girls JV Basketball and Diving. Contact Rick Frances Williston-Northampton School-Easthampton (413) 529-3253

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phsically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements.

EMPLOYMENT

Please call Christy 532-2733

Bakers Wanted Part-Time or Full-Time. Early morning hours. Apply at Rao's Coffee in person.

Part-time phone reps needed for wicked cool candy company located in Amherst. We have two-hour shifts available between 10AM and 5PM. Monday-Friday. You must work a minimum of three shifts per week. Base pay, plus commission on all new sales. Average pay $10-$12/hour with commission included. Must be outgoing with some sales/customer service experience, however, personality is most important. Please contact Beth McCabe for more information: 888-556-5599

Spring 2000 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary—training provided. Contact the Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center

DP Dough is hiring drivers and kitchen help. Must be able to work nights. Approxiametly $20/hour. Apply at DP Dough.

EMPLOYMENT

Baker/Cook/Customer Service Prepare foods,batters, doughs, recipes. In Village Market. FT/PT PM/Weekends 1 mile from campus. Cushman Village 413-549-1953

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$

FOR RENT

Global Productions 617-328-6621

FOR SALE

www.agcproductions.com

Fridge Rentals - Free delivery 253-9742

Queen Size Bed with beautiful headset and pillows $200.00 Got to move. Call Antonio at 549-0661

Skiing and Snowboarding season passes only $300! Stratton and Okemo Call Michael 549-6494

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

GREEK AFFAIRS

The Sisters of Chi Omega would like to welcome our newest members: Colleen B, Kristin, Melissa, Terri, Leila, Alisha, Chrissy, Jenell, Colleen,

LOST & FOUND

Cristin, Lauren, Kathleen, Vanessa, Laurie, Jill, Tricia, and Jeanne. Congratulations!

Lost Green Backpack outside of Room 1314 GRC between 1-2PM on 11-19 Reward!! Contact Joe 467-3420

PERSONALS

LOST CAT: Near Leach, Orange Tabby Please Call 665-9950

WANTED

Leave Message Boo, I'm so fortunate to have you. Love you with all my heart. -AD Roommate Wanted to share 1bdrm in 2bdrm apt in Sunderland 15min from campus $365/mo + utilities. Call Paula 413-397-9768

SERVICES

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TICKETS

TRAVEL

2 Sold Out Tickets to Phish concert down in Florida on December 30-31. 546-0470

EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 CANCUN JAMAICA For 10 years Class Travel International (CTI) has distinguished itself as the most reliable student event and marketing organization in North America Motivated Reps can go on Spring Break FREE & earn OVER $$$$$$10,000!$$$$$ Contact Us today for details! 800/328-1509 www.classtravelintl.com

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.co

TRAVEL

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

Browse icpt.com for ALL Springbreak "2000" hotspots. Need Student Orgs & Sales Reps. Fabulous parties, hotels, prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals

The Collegian Classifieds!! Is the place to Advertise!! 545-3500

TRAVEL

m or 800/293-1443

Five College Community Calendar

For Your Information

FRIDAY, OCT. 22

Panel – Environmental Justice panelists will explore questions concerning environmental inequities, how much risk is acceptable and who should make that decision, and how we can distribute the burdens of environmental hazards more evenly across economic groups and nations at 7:50 p.m. in Gamble Auditorium at Mount Holyoke College.

SATIRDAY, OCT. 23

Book Signing – Shirlee Hatzlip will discuss and autograph her memoir entitled In the Garden of Our Dreams at 11:30 a.m. at the Kitley Amherst Bookshop.

Comedy – MISSION IMPROVable will perform their improvisational comedy show at 8 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center. Everyone is welcome.

Forum – There will be an open forum lecture by Walter Porter from 2-4 p.m. in rooms 165-169 of the Campus Center. The lecture is sponsored by the Native American Community at UMass.

Volunteer – Volunteers wanting to help clean up the campus pond as part of Make a Difference Day should meet outside the Bluewall at 9:30 a.m. The event, which will end around 2 p.m., is being coordinated by the Massachusetts Community Water Watch.

NOTICES

Art – The Wheeler Gallery will present "Gellblock Visions: Cell Division – Prison Art in America," on display until Nov. 7. The Gallery is located in Central Residential Area.

Art – The Student Union Visual and Performing Art Space will be showing an exhibit of undergraduate artwork, focusing on the self-portrait, until Oct. 29. Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday, 9:30 a.m.-5 p.m.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is now open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops call 545-2096, or stop by the Craft Center.

Support – The Counseling Services Program at the Everywoman's Center is offering a free support group for women living with bipolar disorder on Wednesdays from 3:15-6:45 p.m. There will be four consecutive sessions at the Everywoman's Center in Wilder Hall. Call 545-0865 for more information, or to register.

Support – A grief support group for undergraduate and graduate students is available starting Tuesday, Oct. 27 from 6-7:30 p.m. Telephone prescreening is required. Call 577-5516 or 545-0011 if interested.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BEST OF SEMESTER SALES

With Special End-of-Semester Sales Throughout the Store, Now is the BEST Time to Buy UMASS Clothing, Gifts, and More!

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

University Store "Not like a mall... Better." Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN & Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board	18 The Learning Channel
3 CBS/3 Hartford	19 UVC-TV19
4 CBS/4 Boston	20 ABC/40 Springfield
5 ABC/5 Boston	21 Gavel to Gavel
6 PBS/57 Springfield	22 NBC/22 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Ch.	23 Sundance
8 UPN/20 Hartford	24 Bloomberg Financial
9 Weather Channel	28 CTN
10 NBC/30 New Britain	27 TBS
11 Fox/61 Hartford	28 BET
12 PBS/24 Hartford	29 TV Land
13 WOCH & HSCN	30 Univision
14 International	31 Comedy Central
15 UMass Academic TV	32 Cartoon
16 WB/New Haven	33 Much Music
17 HSCN Programming

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 21, 1999

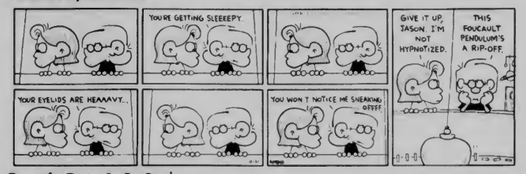
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12 Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Scenic Rail Journeys		Mystery: Unsolvable Job		Being Served	Keeping Up	Wall for God	This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	3	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Entertainment Tonight		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4 News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Diagnosis Murder "The Flame"		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5 News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Wasteland "Double Date"		20/20 Downtown		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Popular (In Stereo)		Charmed "The Devil's Music"		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Jesse	Frasier	Stark Raving	ER "Sins of the Fathers"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Real TV (R)	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)		News	Caroline	Change-Heart		Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Friends	Jesse	Frasier	Stark Raving	ER "Sins of the Fathers"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8 11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Major League Baseball Playoffs: ALCS Game 7 – Red Sox or Indians vs. Rangers or Yankees						News	Friends
WWLP	9 22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Jesse	Frasier	Stark Raving	ER "Sins of the Fathers"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		This Old Hse.	Doctors	Mystery: Unsolvable Job		Antiques Roadshow (In Stereo)		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Wasteland "Double Date"		20/20 Downtown		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)				Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Blind Date	Ricki Lake
WTBS	72	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	WCW Thunder				Champ	WCW Thunder		WCW Thunder
A&E	61	Simon & Simon		Law & Order "American Dream"		Biography: Liz Montgomery		Investigative Reports (R)		Inside Story (R)		Law & Order	Mad Dog
CNN	29	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline
COM	23 26	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★½ "Mo' Money" (1992, Comedy) Damon Wayans				Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	63	Tour New House (R)		Wild Discovery	Secrets	On the Inside "747 Jumbo Jet"		Last Neanderthal? (R)		Into the Unknown (R)		On the Inside	747 Jumbo Jet
ESPN	51	Sportscenter				NFL 2Night		NFL Football: Kansas City Chiefs at Baltimore Ravens (Live)					Sportscenter
LIFE	62	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait "Star Jones"		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		★½ "Going Time on Maple Drive" (1992) James B. Sikking				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	69	Global Groove	MTV Jams	Beat Suite	Making-Video	TRL (R) (In Stereo)		Say What Kirk	Celebrity	Tom Green		Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	64	All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Eddie	Brady Bunch	I Love Lucy	Jeffersons	Sanford & Son	All in Family	Maude
SCIFI	65	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		★½ "The Haunted" (1991, Horror)		Sally Kirkland, (In Stereo)		★★★ "Death Becomes Her" (1992, Comedy) Meryl Streep,					"Death Becomes Her" (1992)
TLC	79	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours (R)		Eye of the Storm (R)		Tobacco Wars: Lighting Up		Tobacco Wars: Smoke Screen		Eye of the Storm (R)
TNT	54	Due South (In Stereo)		ER "ER Confidential" (In Stereo)		★★★★ "Rain Man" (1988, Drama)		Dustin Hoffman, Tom Cruise.				Hwood Salutes Jodie Foster
USA	60	Baywatch "Hit and Run"		JAG "Father's Day" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger		★★★ "Working Girl" (1988, Comedy-Drama) Melanie Griffith. (In Stereo)					Baywatch
HBO	71	(5:45) ★★½ "The X-Files" (1998)		David Duchovny. "PG-13"		Real Sports (R)		★★★ "Odyssey" (1995, Suspense) Sigourney Weaver. "R"				Inside the NFL (In Stereo)
MAX	70	(4:45)		★★ "Doctor Dolittle" (1998)	Eddie Murphy.	★ "Wrongfully Accused" (1998)		Leslie Nielsen.	★★ "U.S. Marshals" (1998, Suspense)	Tommy Lee Jones. "PG-13"		"Susan's Plan"
SHOW	67	★★½ "King David" (1985, Drama)		Richard Gere. "PG-13"		★★ "Twilight" (1998, Mystery)		Paul Newman. "R"	★★★ "Tomorrow Never Dies" (1997)		Pierce Brosnan. "PG-13"		Linc's (R)

Adam and Eric By Ross Borach

Sven By Stephen Higgins

Spunk By Mike LaRiccita



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Joe Banani By JD Schneider

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Take time out of your busy schedule today to say or do something special for the one person who means the most to you.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You deserve a big pat on the back today, but for a while you may be the only person available to give it to yourself.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You mustn't let life's little inconveniences get you down today. Rise above the very things that others get caught up in and you're a step ahead.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Your fear of being boring or noncommittal today is unfounded, so let loose a little and experiment with your own public image.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – An exciting excursion may turn into more of an adventure today as you take advantage of one unusual opportunity after another.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – Are you certain that the conclusions you've come to over the past few days are really accurate, or even objective? You may want to think twice.

Aries (March 21-April 19) – Prospects are improving, and it's time for you to consider making a change which, in the near future, could bring you greater financial rewards.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – Someone may be keeping you in the dark quite intentionally today, but never fear- something wonderful is going to be revealed very soon.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – Take a rest toward mid-day and think back over recent decisions and actions. You can make a difference for someone else before nightfall.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – You will need to shrug things off today. Remember that trying to change the things you cannot control will only result in increased frustration.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – Your intuition may be the only thing you have to go on today, particularly in matters of the heart. Do you really have enough to go on?

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – A financial issue demands a clear head, and a slow and deliberate approach today. Now is no time to make rash or hasty decisions.

Quote of the Day

"Maybe I do, and maybe I DO!!!"

–Will Ferrell

Close to Home By John McPherson

"After you're done with Linda's ultrasound, would you mind doing one on Raven so we can see how many puppies we can expect?"

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Soup du Jour
Quarter Pound Burger
Macaroni & Cheese
Golden Burger
DINNER
Soup du Jour
Hot Wrap Bar
Chicken Cacciatore
Vegtable Hot Wrap Bar

Worcester
LUNCH
Soup du Jour
Quarter Pound Burger
Macaroni & Cheese
Golden Burger
DINNER
Soup du Jour
Hot Wrap Bar
Chicken Cacciatore
Vegtable Hot Wrap Bar

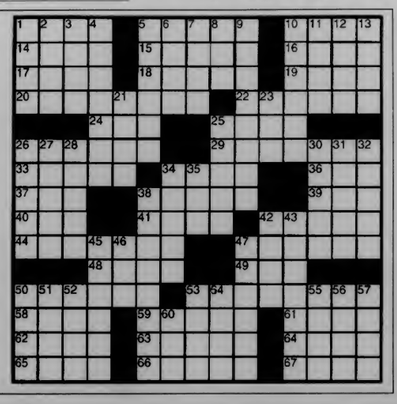
Hampshire
LUNCH
Soup du Jour
Quarter Pound Burger
Macaroni & Cheese
Golden Burger
DINNER
Soup du Jour
Hot Wrap Bar
Chicken Cacciatore
Vegtable Hot Wrap Bar

Berkshire
LUNCH
Soup du Jour
Quarter Pound Burger
Macaroni & Cheese
Golden Burger
DINNER
Soup du Jour
Hot Wrap Bar
Chicken Cacciatore
Vegtable Hot Wrap Bar

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Adam White
Photo Technition	Pam FitzPatrick
Copy Editor	Morgan Tobor
Production Supervisor	Lisa Metcalf
Production Staff	Dan McGuinness-Rossi, Brian McDermott

ACROSS
1 Chunk
5 Pudgy
10 Campus area
14 60 minutes
15 One who likes solitude
16 — Major
17 Designer Gucci
18 Spry
19 Simple
20 Lower part of a wall
22 Safe places
24 Last letter
25 Gambler's need
26 Astute
29 Self-assured one
33 Con-toss word
34 Old word for "you"
36 Roe
37 Shade tree
38 Increases
39 Shahn or Hogan
40 Priest's wear
41 Knocks
42 Mistaken
44 Perched
47 Flashy
48 Artist Paul —
49 Have supper
50 Facet
53 Suspension
58 Cat's cry
59 Dot in the ocean
61 Follow
62 Sommer of films
63 Part of U.S.N.A.



PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

FLAP SCRAM AGAR
OONA LLAMA RILLE
LOTTS EAGER AREA
KNEADED NIBBLED
DIP CUT
RESET ODA OATER
ALAN POORLY ORO
YOUAREMYDESTINY
OPT APPLES ELLIA
NEEDS HEN EASEL UPS FOR GAINSAY KINDRED
AMOK CURIE ROVE
DATE KRILL OPEN
SHAD STOOD PENS

10-21-99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

64 Movie pooch
65 Husky vehicle
66 Forest clearing
67 After that

DOWN
1 "The Young Lions" author
2 "Whatever — wants ..."
3 Autobahn car
4 Preserved baby shoes
5 Pull
6 Company symbol
7 Textbook division
8 Harris of "thirtysomething"
9 Earlier
10 Lines
11 Russia's — Mountains
12 Subordinate, for short
13 Calendar boxes
21 Uses a Singer
23 Part of a play
25 Red Sea vessels
26 Remove fleece
27 "Howdy!"
28 Stallone role
30 Tramps
31 Pizzeria sights
32 Piquant
34 Swap
35 Jump on one foot
38 27 Down, for one
42 "King Kong" actress Fay
43 Drumming sound
45 Distorted
46 R.N.'s specialty
47 Ladybug
50 Actor Ed —
51 Auction off
52 Jab
53 Edison's middle name
54 Necklace part
55 Poet Ogden
56 Quote
57 Dash
60 Actor Mineo

Field hockey set for biggest weekend of '99 season

Atlantic 10's big three will clash at Garber for conference bragging rights

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

After a whirlwind week of conference clashes and peek individual performances, it took Mother Nature herself to finally cool off the red hot Massachusetts field hockey team.

The Minutewomen (7-8, 3-0 Atlantic 10) missed a shot at returning to the .500 mark when their scheduled contest with New Hampshire was rained out yesterday. The game will not be rescheduled, leaving UMass to focus on its two huge upcoming A-10 battles.

Conference foes St. Joseph's and Temple are set to invade Richard F. Garber Field on Friday and Sunday, respectively. Both teams boast undefeated conference records like UM's, which means that the race for the regular-season A-10 title could hinge on this weekend's wars.

UM coach Patty Shea feels confident that her troops are more than up for the challenge.

"Conference games are very, very critical. They know that the opponents are all going to come out after them, so they have to be ready to step up for every opponent," Shea said. "They know exactly what they have to do within their conference, to strive for and reach their goals."

Those goals undoubtedly center around an A-10 Championship and NCAA Tournament berth, which last year's squad captured with a thunderous postseason run. The '98 Minutewomen smacked St. Joe's 3-1 and Rhode Island 4-1 to capture the A-10 Tournament crown, then blanked Holy Cross 2-0 in their NCAA Tourney play-in game. But the team is anything but complacent in '99, as this year's path to glory is blocked by just as formidable a field.

"We have a difficult road through our conference, compared to the other conference schools," Shea said. "But if we just bring the emotion and the desire onto the field, we'll be OK."

The Hawks of St. Joseph's (10-3, 2-0 A-10) boast the two top scorers in the conference in Siobhan Leavy and freshman Brett Dymarczyk, and the team now sits atop the A-10 in goals scored (38) and points (111). First-year superstar Dymarczyk, who was named Hawk Player of the Week by her school and A-10 Rookie of the Week by the conference, has shattered all expectations with an unbelievable season thus far. She not only smashed the Hawk rookie scoring record with her 11th goal in a 4-2 win over La Salle last Wednesday, she also notched her team-leading fifth game-winning goal and her Hawk-high 24th point.

Goalkeeper Lauren Bradley has also been a vital cog in the Hawk field hockey machine, racking up 113 saves and a pair of shutouts in a dozen games for St. Joe's.

UM will look to shoot down the Hawks with a focused and determined mix of veteran mainstays and talented young upstarts. While upperclassmen Patty Robinson, Lucy Koch and Michelle Crooks have used their wisdom and skill to shore up the Maroon and White's defense, sophomores Jill Fantasia, Anke Bruemmer and Kerry Ann Iaggassar have emerged as three of UM's biggest stoppers. This depth gives the Minutewomen more than just brashness and enthusiasm; it allows Shea the freedom to substitute without having to worry about a loss of momentum.

"The more bodies we have to bring in, the fresher and better we are as a team," Shea said.

The phenomenal underclassmen aren't limited to the Minutewomen's defense, either. Veteran scoring specialists Nicole Bardell, Julie Celantano, Tamra Geryk, Crissy Millbauer and Kristen Schmidt may provide the backbone of Coach Shea's attack up front, but they are supported by a corps of younger players with thrilling speed and attack instincts that belie its lack of experience.

Among the team's youthful forward standouts are sophomores Lindsay Abbott, Kaitlyn Byron and Jayna Napolitano and freshmen Sarah Bohonowicz, Krysta Johnson, Erika Whiston and Stacy Blue. Bohonowicz has gotten starting nods all season in spite of her youth, while Whiston and Johnson have turned playing opportunities into head-turning breakouts against national powers Maryland and North Carolina.

Blue netted the first goal of her collegiate career on Sunday against West Chester, prompting Bruemmer to recognize not only her skills but also the impact of all the younger players on the Maroon and White's effort.

"Our freshman class is great. Stacy Blue has so much speed; it's about time she scored. She was there at the right point," said Bruemmer, who this week earned WHMP's Athlete of the Week as well as A-10 Player of the Week honors. "It's not only important for us, it's extremely important for them to notice how important they are for the team."

The Minutewomen will have to fire on all cylinders if they hope to topple Temple on Sunday. The Owls (4-11, 2-0 A-10) have arrived at this point in much the same manner as UMass, having weathered an early season schedule laden with top-notch programs such as Penn State, Duke and Old Dominion. But unlike the Maroon and White, the Owls haven't been able to harness their experience against powerhouse opponents and use it to punish their conference foes. Temple ranks dead last in the A-10 in shots (108) and goals allowed (47), and its anemic offense has netted a conference-low 16 goals in 13 games.

Senior forward Torie Russell has emerged as Temple's biggest scoring threat, notching 11 points on four goals and three assists. Keeper Serene McGrath has tallied a whopping 134 saves in 1025 minutes between the pipes for the Owls, pitching three shutouts in the process.

Friday's showdown with St. Joseph's will unfold under the lights, with game time slated for 7 pm. Sunday's war with Temple is set for a high noon start.

KARA STOKES/COLLEGIAN

Greenfield native Kaitlyn Byron has peppered opposing goals all season to help the Minutewomen remain undefeated in A-10 action.

KARA STOKES/COLLEGIAN

Back Patty Robinson has turned heads all year as one-third of UMass' phenomenal penalty corner trio.

Garceau steps it up for UMass

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

One key element of any successful team is that each player on the roster knows the role that they fill. That couldn't be any more true for the Massachusetts women's soccer team.

For the past three seasons, Cindy Garceau has made impact on the field for the Minutewomen. During her sophomore and junior campaigns, the Upton, Mass. native was one of the team's top defenders, starting in 34 of 40 games during that two-year span.

This season, things have changed a bit for the versatile senior, but Garceau has managed to make the most of it. Despite the fact that she only scored one goal in her first three years, the quiet Garceau has already found the back of the net four times this season. Those eight points currently place her in a tie for fourth place on the scoring charts with sophomore Sarah Cook.

"I've been given an opportunity to play more offensively, plus I have to give a lot of credit to Katelyn [Jones]," Garceau said. "She's served me a lot of good balls to score on. I'm a senior, so I felt that I needed to step up."

Always one of the team's primary jumpers, Garceau has come into her own as a legitimate goal-scoring threat off free and corner kicks this year. In fact, two of her goals were headers off boots from Jones.

"Cindy is having a good year, which I'm glad to see, especially because it's her senior year. She deserves the success because she is having because she's worked hard to get here," UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "It's great to see her beaming [with a smile] after she has scored a goal because she knows that she's done well."

"She has established herself as a primary jumper on her own, and just done a nice job in there," added Rudy.

For a player who started practically all of the games the past two years, Garceau started the season in an unfamiliar spot - the bench. But instead of letting the temporary shift in roles get her down, she worked her way back into a starting role. Since that insertion back as one of the first 11, Garceau hasn't disappointed, playing steady defense while also managing to help out on offense.

"I'm not a flashy player, so maybe that's why I can get overlooked. It seems like now I've been given more of an opportunity than in the beginning of the season," Garceau said. "Last year I focused more on defense, but this year I have a little more freedom [offensively] at center-mid [field]."

"I can get forward now, but I like to pick and choose when. It seems to be working out because I'm scoring goals," added the senior.

Although Garceau has been steady for the past three years, Rudy noted that her development over this past off-season has been a reason for her on-field success this year.

"She made major improvements last winter during our indoor season. Cindy was a short-range position player, but now she has expanded her game," he said. "She's making well-timed runs into the box from behind."

However, while in some respects Garceau has improved, her solid work ethic in the weight room hasn't faltered one bit. The former Nipmuc Regional standout remains the strongest player on the team.

"She leads the way in the weight room, which is key, especially because we don't have a big team," added Rudy. "Her strength and ability to challenge [other players] is important out there for us."

For now, however, the senior will look to finish off her collegiate career on an upswing. The Minutewomen currently sit in a tie for first place in the Atlantic 10, and are facing an important couplet with La Salle and Fordham this weekend.

"I think that we're playing well as a team. I love playing with everyone because we're all really good players," Garceau said. "It's great just to be a part of this team."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Cindy Garceau was emerged as a two-way threat for the women's soccer team this season.

UM stays dominant, crushes URI 7-0

By Farrah Alexander
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's tennis team is steamrolling over their opponents this season. Their latest victim of the steamroller was the University of Rhode Island, whom they trampled 7-0.

The Minutemen swept over URI winning all of their singles matches and dropping just one out of their three doubles matches, securing the doubles point in their sweep.

Due to the loss of several of their key players this season, namely their No. 1 doubles players Todd Cheney and Rob Manchester, in addition to a questionable spring where they posted a 7-10 record, head coach Judy Dixon commented back in September that she was uncertain whether her team would have a successful season.

"I feel like truthfully we could come out anywhere in the fall," Dixon had said. "I'm going into this year with a little more unknown."

But it's now October and the Minutemen are riding a five-match winning streak with evidence compelling enough to quell any doubts Dixon may have had regarding the potential of her team at the start of the season.

UM faced the Rams yesterday without the aid of three of their regular starters who had been benched due to the violation of team rules during the UConn Invitational this past weekend.

This in mind makes their victory even more thrilling and is also a statement about the depth of their team.

Dixon couldn't have asked for more from her team than their 7-0 victory in what was a significant match for them.

"Every time we play a conference team it's important, because the ramifications of playing an Atlantic 10 conference match, is that it affects our seeding in the spring. And URI is one of those teams," Dixon said.

"I don't think I was very concerned that we wouldn't win. I was concerned with how we would win and by what margin, because that makes a difference in the seeding. Coming out of it 7-0 is a terrific statement for UMass."

In No. 1 singles, UMass sophomore Steve Prisco used his powerful serve-and-volley style of playing as well as blistering serves to defeat Phil Johnson in two straight sets, 6-4, 6-3. Prisco has now acquired an impressive 4-0 record in his dual matches this fall.

After having had some difficulty in the first set and dropping it 3-6, due to a sprained ankle, No. 3 singles player Bill Greener made a comeback, defeating Karlis Anton in the next two sets, 6-4, 7-6.

Greener suffered the injury towards the end of his doubles play, but refused to forfeit the game despite the pain he was suffering and the seriousness of his injury. Dixon considered the gesture, and Greener's level of determination, typical of the junior who has a 4.0 g.p.a.

Instead of quitting, Greener who would be considered a baseliner, counter-punched. What he used as his weapon was his ability to return the ball that one extra time, wearing out his opponent, and earning the point.

Greener has now established himself as the team leader with a 5-0 record in dual matches, while posting an overall record of 9-3.

In No. 4 singles, senior Josh Bainton, a UMass player from the state of Rhode Island, defeated Ali Hayat. Bainton succumbed in the first set of play, losing it 3-7, and then was resurrected in the following two sets, dominating them for the win, 6-2, 6-3.

Wisconsin native, sophomore Todd Champeau put away the Ram's David Gutwein 6-1, 6-0. Champeau defeated him convincingly in straight sets despite being on the recovering end of an ankle injury he had suffered earlier this October during a match against UConn.

And in the final men's singles match up, senior Marco Casesa thwarted Ryan Corbett in straight sets 6-2, 6-3, thus guaranteeing the Minutemen a sweep over the Ram's.

The Maroon and White will next be in action November 4-8, at Princeton, where they will compete in the Rolex Championships. This will be the Minutemen's final competition this fall, until they resume their matches on February 4th at the Cornell Invitational.

Hargrove unlikely for O's

By John Eisenberg
The Baltimore Sun

Mike Hargrove as a replacement for Ray Miller? Don't count on it.

It's an interesting idea, but with their credibility within the industry at a low ebb in the wake of another round of front office firings, the Orioles probably will have to settle for an untested managerial candidate such as third base coach Sam Perlozzo, who had a second interview Tuesday.

That wouldn't be a bad fallback position, actually; Perlozzo is a deserving, competent baseball man from Cumberland who is popular with the big names in the Orioles' clubhouse, and he could blossom if given a chance. His hiring certainly would foster continuity on the coaching staff. The idea was endorsed here as a viable option several months ago.

But the reality is that Perlozzo's biggest asset as a candidate may be that he wants the job, unlike so many of the other, better-known candidates whose names are circulating.

Former top candidate Phil Garner took a job in Detroit without even interviewing with Orioles Owner Peter G. Angelos, and at this point, at least, Buddy Bell and Don Baylor seem to be on tracks headed elsewhere.

No one seems to be headed this way, that's for sure. With Angelos making all the big decisions and the Orioles lacking a general manager and any evident blueprint after firing Frank Wren two weeks ago, their managerial vacancy isn't regarded as the plum it once was.

There's no way of knowing if Perlozzo will end up getting the job, but if he doesn't, the guy who does probably will be an untested major-league manager, too.

Any candidate with serious credentials probably would rather find work elsewhere than deal with a factionalized clubhouse, an impatient owner and a general manager who didn't hire him – unenviable circumstances, to say the least.

Hargrove, fired by the Indians last week after winning five straight American League Central titles, told The Sun's Joe Strauss the other day that he was "interested" in coming to Baltimore. But you have to wonder how serious he is.

His choice is to sit at home for a year, get paid by the Indians for not working and consider some less stressful options, or come here and deal with Angelos, Albert Belle and a bullpen even worse than the one that cost him his job in Cleveland.

The Orioles would be lucky to get him, of course; even if he doesn't have a reputation for tactical brilliance, he has taken two teams to the World Series, become a playoff fixture and thrived in a high-pressure, full-ballpark environment similar to Camden Yards. Who cares if he isn't the second coming of John McGraw? He's competent and diplo-

Turn to HARGROVE, page 11

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 33 — Friday, October 22, 1999

Faculty Senate discusses four-course plan

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Yesterday, the Faculty Senate addressed a proposal that could potentially lead to students taking only four courses each semester.

The new proposal entails that students would take a total of four courses per semester with each course carrying the weight of four credits, according to a representative from the Academic Matters Council. The policy was distributed to faculty department heads for appraisal and will be discussed further when each department head returns their comments on the issue.

Also covered at the meeting was the advancement of Campaign UMass, a campaign that is focused on raising money and strengthening the image of the University. According to Royster Hedgepeth, vice chancellor for University Advancement, the organization has already raised $91 million in their $125 million goal for the year 2000.

Hedgepeth explained that typically alumni, parents and corporations donate money for the school and allocate the destination of most of the donated funds. Traditionally, money raised by the organization is donated to areas such as academics, financial aid or scholarships.

Hedgepeth said the organization hoped to "involve volunteer leaders and prospective donors in aspects of the campaign" in the future.

In addition, a motion was passed during the meeting to establish an Ad Hoc Committee for a University Service, Public Service and Outreach Committee.

This committee will consist of two faculty members appointed by the Rules Committee, two members appointed by the Massachusetts Society of Professors, a member appointed by the Chancellor and a member appointed by the Provost.

The purpose of the Ad Hoc Committee is to review the work done by other Outreach Councils, examine the relationship between outreach and service and make a recommendation on whether or not to form a standing committee.

The Faculty Senate also covered the issue of a proposal to form an intercampus marine graduate school for students. The proposal was developed with representatives from each of the University of Massachusetts campuses, and was widely endorsed.

According to Joseph Larson, interim secretary for the Faculty Senate, the role of the administration in the potential formation of the school is to weigh both the positives and negatives of the proposal.

He said although there are many positives to the proposal, that faculty senate must also try to regulate "an increased desire to micro-manage the program."

Anti-handgun reps, NRA, debate gun control

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

Ninety-four individuals are killed every day by guns in the United States. Fourteen of those 94 are children.

This statistic was one of the points made at last night's debate on gun control co-sponsored by the UMass Republican Club and University Democrats. John Rosenthal, founder of the Stop Handgun Violence Foundation defended the left side and argued against Glen Caroline from the National Rifle Association (NRA) and the Grassroots Director.

In addition to statements made by both sides, a panel and audience questioned each speaker. The panel consisted of Emily Callahan, of the Feminist Majority Leadership Alliance, Ken Campbell, president of Students for the Second Amendment, Kathleen Sherwin, vice president of University Democrats and Mark Boniface of the UMass Minuteman.

Both Rosenthal and Caroline agreed that safety is important, but do not agree on how to preventing the deaths that occur daily in America. Rosenthal wants more gun control legislation; Caroline stands by the idea of education and enforcing the laws already passed.

"We can prevent gun violence by passing more gun control laws, we have proven it in the state of Massachusetts," Rosenthal said. He argued that the NRA was preventing laws from going through Congress, and that spending funding on lobbying against controlling guns was not saving lives.

He said guns should be regulated, just as any other manufactured item is, including cars and toys. More gun control laws would enforce this regulation and therefore make guns less accessible, especially to criminals and children.

Caroline refuted Rosenthal's argument by first explaining the three strongest principles of the NRA. The group firmly believes in gun safety and spends $20 million a year on training Americans on safe usage of guns. Stressing the importance of education, it provides a free program to teach gun safety to children at school.

The NRA also believes in maintaining responsibility when using and owing guns, but most significantly it supports freedom. The NRA stands behind the Second Amendment, which states citizens have the right to own a gun.

He believed that the thousands of laws already passed should be enforced. When questioned on the recent acts of violence, especially regarding children, Caroline said the real issue was why children in today's generation have felt that they had to turn to violence.

"In many of the cases of violence, including Columbine, already existing gun laws were broken," Caroline said. "We need to stop and examine why these children feel like they must kill, not make more laws."

Rosenthal, on the other hand, said it is not the children that have changed, but that society has allowed them to be armed. The shooting in Columbine was cited as an example of how easy it is for children to get their hands on guns.

"We need national laws. We're losing our democratic hold because of the NRA control over leadership," Rosenthal said. "Shame on the us, shame on the NRA."

KARA STOKES/COLLEGIAN

John Rosenthal (right), the founder of the Stop Handgun Violence Group, debated last night in Herter Hall with Glen Caroline (left), an NRA representative, about new gun laws and whether they should be passed.

Telescope gets millions in government funding

By Andrea M. Peers
Collegian Staff

The U.S. Senate and House of Representatives approved a new $65 million dollar telescope project this month. The Large Millimeter Telescope, also known as LMT, is a joint project between The University of Massachusetts and the Mexican Government.

The idea for the project surfaced when the Five College Radio Astronomy Observatory saw the need for a better, more up to date, version of the existing telescope, which is still the largest millimeter wavelength telescope in the United States, according to Peter Schloerb, director for the Five College Radio Astronomy Observatory.

The new model can measure highly sensitive wavelengths that are used in space. The giant radio telescope will stand almost 18 stories high when completed, and measure 50 meters across, making it the largest telescope ever built of its kind. The large structure allows for a bigger surface area in which scientist can collect data and detect explosive material in the galaxy. It will also be useful to the U.S. government to locate missiles, satellites and debris in space.

The telescope gives off wave energy beams that travel greater distances than models of the past. The telescope's technology will enable astronomers and scientists to look at newly formed galaxies, the birthplace of stars and other chemical paths that create molecules in space. The millimeter wavelengths are used to measure the cooler sections in space, unlike the Hubble Telescope, which measures hot patterns in the galaxy.

"We will be able to look back in time and see galaxies that are in the process of forming or evolving. This is a breakthrough for the team and the project," Schloerb said.

Schloerb heads the team along with Project Manager Allen Langord. The University Observatory started the project proposal with a sister institute of radio astronomy in Mexico, called the Instituto Nacional de Astrofisica, Optica, y Electronics, or INAOE. Scientists, astronomers and builders from both institutes have worked together to tackle the giant telescope project. It is expected to be complete in approximately two years.

The scientific goals of both teams run on task with modern technology in space imaging. The team plans to receive data that will help to understand the formation of galaxies – information that is are out of reach with any current model. The University Team also hopes the project will bring recognition to UMass, as well as to the University's science and technology programs.

"It has been a difficult struggle to get to this point, but we think that this project will help to establish the University of Massachusetts as one of the top schools in astronomy research," Schloerb said.

Pioneer Valley Transit Authority proposes extended bus schedule on weekends

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

AMHERST – A town committee recommended that the Pioneer Valley Transit Authority (PVTA) change the bus schedule by extending operating times during the weekends: summers and other slow times to aid students, faculty and staff commuting in the Five-College area.

The proposal would include an extended bus service on the North Amherst/Belchertown Road and South Amherst/Sunderland routes.

The issue was brought before the Amherst Selectmen Committee Monday night. While selectmen expressed support, several questions remained unanswered, such as how much the service would cost the town and when it may begin.

Noah Sax from UMass Transit, a part of PVTA, said it is difficult to determine which drivers will be committed to driving during upcoming semesters. The public transportation system remains greatly reduced during the summers because there aren't enough drivers to keep up with the regular school schedules. However, these reduced hours are causing students, faculty and staff during the summer session to find other means of transportation.

"We never know which people are graduating or aren't going to drive in a given semester," Sax said. "We don't know how many drivers we'll have until the beginning of the semester."

During weekends when schools are in session, buses don't run on a regular schedule. Public Transportation and Bicycle Committee Chairman Rob Kusner said in a MassLive article that the inconsistent service forces people to purchase cars that can add to increased congestion and downtown parking problems.

"The neediest and most dependent people in the community do rely on this service," Kusner said in the article. "Our committee needs some indication that the town supports it."

According to a study conducted by the University of Massachusetts, the support in favor of increased hours will not be a problem. Questionnaires were sent to 2,400 households and students who may be affected by increased bus service. Of the 559 residents who responded, 76% indicated that they would use this service.

Most bars in downtown Amherst do not close until 1 a.m. on weekends. One of the last frequently running buses travels through downtown Amherst at approximately 1:05 a.m. and most students are just beginning to leave the bars at this time, according to Sax.

"It would be good if public transportation everywhere would make it a priority to give the bar crowds rides home," Sax said. "[Public transportation officials should] find out when the bars close and have buses do each loop at that time and make sure there's at least one bus for each loop."

Sax said another priority would be to have some kind of town or private service that would run after the bars close. According to Sax, the North Amherst/Belchertown Road and South Amherst/Sunderland buses are the two most popular routes and only one of each runs every hour during the weekends.

Occasionally, these buses will make "outreach trips," ones that cause the buses to make stops at locations they otherwise wouldn't make on a normal weekend schedule. Sax said people using the outreach stops sometimes wait up to two hours for a bus.

"I think it would be tougher for us to fill a weekend shift, but I think it's definitely needed," Sax said. "I think it would be great if we could provide more service."

Next month, the Amherst Town Board will vote on whether to support the idea of extended bus service to begin sometime next summer. But the town will not be asked to appropriate any money until officials can come to a settled agreement.

In the meantime, Sax said the PVTA service is currently at its maximum capacity. He commented that the PVTA has added more campus shuttle routes this semester and increased service is not possible at this time.

"I'd always like us to provide more service for everyone," Sax said, "but I think that at this point we're providing more service than we're physically capable of – we're at our limit."

Campus pond cleanup planned

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Students across the nation will come together this weekend in pursuit of a common goal: making a difference. Tomorrow marks the ninth annual celebration of National Make a Difference Day.

Two hundred University of Massachusetts students and faculty are scheduled to participate in a slew of different ways. One million people participate nationwide.

MASSPIRG, a student environmental group on campus, will be working tomorrow on a statewide petition to get the Children's Protection Act on the ballot in 2000.

"The whole MASSPIRG chapter has been working to get this question on the ballot and we have until November 14 to get the 75,000 signatures that we need," Meg Gray, the MASSPIRG campus organizer, said.

The Children's Protection Act would reduce the amount of pesticides used in schools. According to Gray, pesticides are used in classrooms, cafeterias and on athletic fields, presenting a problem for children.

"Mainly because the makeup of the human body isn't that much different from that of an insect," Gray said, "concentrated exposure to pesticides is harmful."

The act would ban the use of the most toxic pesticides classified by the Environmental Protection Agency as carcinogenic, as well as promoting safer alternatives to pesticide use.

"It would also give parents and teachers the right to know when and where pesticides are being used," Gray said. "There would have to be 48 hours of notification prior to the use of pesticides and another 72 hours of posting after spraying."

Gray is hoping that UMass students can get 3,000 signatures over the weekend. UMass students have committed to get 13,000 signatures toward the final goal.

"So far throughout the state we have 44,000 signatures, and we're expecting to get another 10,000 across the state this weekend," Gray said. "Students are going to go out and petition in communities. So far we've gone to places like Fallon, Chicopee, Northampton and Easthampton."

Twenty-five MASSPIRG chapters and 30 citizen groups are working on the petition drive. The groups are shooting to get 114,000 total signatures, 39,000 more than they need. Gray said reaching that number would "make a statement about the level of concern."

Petitioning isn't the only thing students will be doing this

Turn to VOLUNTEERS, page 3

Senate bans "partial-birth" abortions again

By Helen Dewar
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – The Senate yesterday again approved legislation to ban what critics call "partial birth" abortions but fell narrowly short of the two-thirds majority that would be required to override a promised veto by President Clinton.

In what officials said was probably the Senate's first vote ever on 1973 Supreme Court decisions legalizing abortions, the Senate also voted 51 to 47 to go on record endorsing the Roe vs. Wade decision as "an important constitutional right" that should not be overturned.

Forty-five of the Senate's 54 Republicans voted against the proposal sponsored by Sen. Tom Harkin (D-Iowa) and supported by all but two Democrats. Democrats used this non-binding vote to claim that Republicans were using the partial-birth abortion issue as a smokescreen to mask an assault on abortion rights of all kinds.

Turn to BAN, page 2

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 78 LOW: 62	HIGH: 82 LOW: 65	HIGH: 74 LOW: 58

COLLEGIAN.COM

Water World — Read more about the clean ups happening around the state this weekend. NEWS, PAGE 3

Brand-spanking New Music — We've got the newest from Primus and Incubus, as well as a look at two newly re-released rock & roll films from the Beatles and the Talking Heads. ARTS, PAGE 10

Champion Shmampion — Joey Culgin and the UMass hockey team will look to pick up its first win of the season, taking on Northeastern away and defending national champion Boston College at the Mullins Center this week end. Check the back page for more. SPORTS, PAGE 16

Arts & Living 10
Comics 13
Crossword 13
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 14
Hockey Preview 5
GCBT Issues 9

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Andrea M. Peer Photos by Kara Stokes

How do you feel about pedestrian safety in crosswalks on campus?

"Hopefully the new signs will help. People are always rushing to get to class."

Kevin Chen
Senior
Economics

"It has always been an issue. They need better lighting and the signs they put up aren't really helping. They should put a stop light in."

Steve Clines
Senior
Communication

"I think people drive really fast. It's hard to see people. You can't see everyone all the time."

Marisa Perry
Junior
Art

"Pedestrian safety is essential. I haven't really paid attention to it. As far as I'm concerned, it's safe and going well."

Michael Abreu
Freshman
Computer Science

"I haven't really seen much. It might be better if they put those neon signs in the middle of the street."

Alli Diament
Freshman
Undeclared

"People drive really fast. I almost got hit yesterday when I guy slammed on his brakes and slid on the road."

Jessie Ip
Junior
Chemical Engineering

■ ban

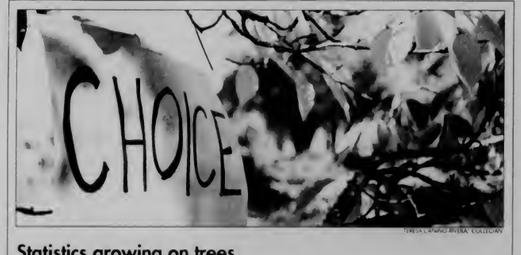
continued from page 1

and predicted it would be a big issue in next year's elections.



Republicans denied the charge and described Harkin's proposal as a "distraction" aimed at diverting attention from "partial birth" abortions. But it was clear that, just as Republicans have used the vote on the bill against Democrats and will do so again, Democrats now intend to use the Roe vs. Wade vote against Republicans.

The vote on the "partial birth" abortion bill was 63 to 34, with 49 Republicans and 14 Democrats supporting it and 31 Democrats and three Republicans opposing it. Counting absentees, the bill's backers registered a net gain of one vote since it came up for a vote last year but were still at least one and probably two votes short of the 67 needed to assure a veto override. Among those who did not vote Thursday as Sen. John H. Chafee, (R-R.I), who has previously voted against the measure.

Sen. John W. Warner, (R-Va), was the only Washington area senator to vote for the bill, although he did support the resolution backing Roe vs. Wade.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Rick Santorum, (R-Pa), would ban a procedure, known medically as intact dilation and extraction, under which a physician pulls the fetus out of the birth canal feet first then then punctures the head, removes the brain and collapses the skull. The fetus is then removed vaginally.

It would make it a felony punishable by a fine and up to two years in prison for a physician to employ the procedure unless it is "necessary to save the life of a mother whose life is endangered by physical disorder, illness or injury." The woman would not be subject to prosecution.

TERESA CANONG-RIVERA/ COLLEGIAN

Statistics growing on trees

Mysterious fliers appeared on campus yesterday displaying statistics on rape and violence against women.

Megawati Named VP of Indonesia

By Keith B. Richburg
Washington Post

JAKARTA, Indonesia – Megawati Sukarnoputri, the popular political icon who suffered a humiliating defeat in her bid for the presidency Wednesday. Thursday was named Indonesia's new vice-president, a consolation prize that leaders here hoped would calm her angry supporters and give the country a broad-based national unity government.

The People's Consultative Assembly, the country's highest law-making body, elected Megawati over Muslim leader Hamzah Haz by 396 votes to 284. The vote came after two other strong contenders, the military commander and the head of the former ruling party, Golkar, were convinced to quit the race to avoid a divisive four-way contest.

The same assembly on Wednesday elected Abdurrahman Wahid, known as "Gus Dur," a nearly blind and frail Muslim cleric, as president, prompting supporters of Megawati – who had been considered the presidential front-runner – to rampage through Jakarta's streets, setting fires and throwing gasoline bombs at police. Two people died in that unrest.

Various political leaders and analysts here said they hoped Megawati's election would help the country return to a period of normalcy after more than 18 months of upheaval. Her Indonesian Democratic Party of Struggle, or PDI-P, won last June's parliamentary election with 34 percent of the vote, but for a while looked likely to be locked out of all the significant power positions after Megawati lost the presidency.

The vice presidency here has traditionally been a mostly ceremonial post with no formal power. But the job is likely to take on added significance, both because of Wahid's health and because Megawati's party controls a about a third of the seats in the 500-member parliament, giving her a stronger base of support in the legislature than Wahid, whose own party came in fourth.

There has been widespread speculation that Wahid, 59, may not be able to complete a full five-year term, in which case Megawati is now in line to succeed him.

Wahid and Megawati, erstwhile friends and allies, are both pillars of the pro-democracy movement that opposed ex-president Suharto last year. The entire nation was transfixed by the largely unscripted and often improvised assembly sessions that elected them, and the spectacle turned out to be the most open and democratic process in Indonesia's 54-year history.

Many here said the week's events marked the true end to the authoritarian era of Suharto and his New Order regime, exactly 17 months after Suharto was forced from office.

Turn to INDONESIA, page 3

The University of Massachusetts
Something Every Friday
presents

Free!
Tethered Hot-Air Balloon Rides!

Friday October 22, 1999
Metawampee Lawn,
4:30-7pm

Brought to you by Something Every Friday in conjunction with Alpha Lambda Delta

Visit us on the Web: http://www.umass.edu/events/calendar.htm
This progrm is made possible by a grant from the Auxiliary Dervices Department and the vice-chancellor for Student Affairs.

The University of Massachusetts'
Something Every Friday
presents

Eric Nieves

"Eric Nieves", a Bronx native, made his comedy debut in 1994. Since then he has become one of the most sought after Latino comics in New York. Eric is a comedian, writer and performer. His credits include a guest-starring role on "NYPD Blue" as well as "Showtime at the Apollo" and BET'S "Comic Review".

Friday October 22, 1999
Bluewall Cafe, 8pm... FREE

The FREE movie :"Sixth Sense" will be shown following the performance. the movie will be shown again on Sunday Oct. 24 in the Student Union Ballroom at 8pm.

Visit us on the Web: http:??www.umass.edu/events/calender.htm

This program is made possible by a grant from the Auxiliary Services Department and the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs.

GINA CASTILLA/ COLLEGIAN

Getting your feet wet

Senior Geology major Wendy Hochreiter and Junior Geology and Education major Joseph Mullett test the water of the campus pond. This coming Saturday morning, as part of Make A Difference Day, a pond cleanup is scheduled.

■ volunteers

continued from page 1

weekend. Christina Maginnis, Massachusetts Community Water Watch Americorps Organizer will be overseeing a cleanup of the campus pond.

"The bottom line is that this is a national day of service, and we've had students that have been volunteering throughout the semester that have been working in Northampton," Maginnis said. "But those same students want to work on campus so they can see the difference that they make, so students are coming out Saturday to work on the campus pond."

Maginnis and the volunteers will be helped by Landscape Services who will both provide equipment for the cleanup in the form of rakes, gloves and shovels, but will also take away the trash that is collected.

Students are meeting at 9:30 a.m. outside of Bluewall in the Campus Center. Maginnis said that the campus eatery has been a good place to meet so students can get a bagel or coffee before working. She added that students who want to help but who do not want to come to the Bluewall should just come down to the pond. Maginnis expects to find an interesting collection of trash in the pond, including street signs.

"We've heard that they are in there," Maginnis said, "and if they are, we're going to take them out."She said there are some students who don't seem to respect the pond, but that the students working the cleanup understand that the pond is dirty, and they want to clean it up.

"We're going to try to recycle recyclable trash," Maginnis said.

Maleah Thorpe, the Community Service Coordinator with the UMass Office of Community Service Learning at the Commonwealth College, said that other students will be involved in various projects as well.

"We are coordinating student involvement throughout Hampshire County," Thorpe said. "We work with the United Way and we're going to a number of sites all around the county."

Students will be going to personal residences around the community and preparing them for the winter, as well as helping to repair a daycare center in Northampton that was damaged during recent flooding.

According to Amy Porter, Marketing Director of the Hamphire Community United Way, five different crews of students will be helping out around the county. She added that the cleanup continues the University's commitment to volunteerism.

"They've always been very supportive of this event," Porter said. "Students have been volunteering every year for six years, and they've always been so wonderful."

BETH MEDICI-P/ COLLEGIAN

Aching for those Z's

Senior Apparel Marketing/Nursing major Mike Murphy tries to catch some shut eye by Chadbourne residence hall yesterday afternoon

■ indonesia

continued from page 2

Disney takes steps to curb smoking

By E. Scott Reckard
Los Angeles Times

Walt Disney Co. has banned all tobacco sales at Disneyland and its four Florida theme parks in a likely precursor to outlawing smoking entirely at the parks except in a few designated areas.

The Burbank, Calif.-based entertainment giant, which operated a tobacco shop at Disneyland until 1990, has gradually tightened restrictions in recent years as public tolerance of smoking has declined. Currently, customers can light up while wandering the park or sitting on a bench, but not indoors or in outside areas such as lines where they are close to non-smokers.

Following a policy first implemented at Walt Disney World in Florida, Disneyland halted all tobacco sales last month, workers said. Smokers previously were directed to the Market House shop on Main Street or Pieces of Eight in New Orleans Square, where cigarettes were hidden under the counters. Tobacco still is sold at nearby Disney properties, the Disneyland Hotel and Disneyland Pacific Hotel.

Employees said they next expect the parks to create a few limited smoking areas, with tobacco use banned everywhere else.

"We've heard that it's in the pipeline, coming this way from Florida," one Disneyland worker said. "[Attractions boss] Paul Yeargin has been talking about it."

Bill Warren, a spokesman for Walt Disney World in Florida, said cigarette sales ended at the complex's Magic Kingdom, Epcot, Disney-MGM Studios and Animal Kingdom parks earlier this year, although tobacco is sold at the company's hotels, restaurants, clubs and other facilities.

As for reports that further restrictions on in-park smoking could take effect early next year, Warren said, "We're not prepared to make an announcement right now."

The moves could influence attitudes toward tobacco throughout the amusement park industry. While most parks ban smoking indoors and in lines for attractions, tobacco is still sold inside many parks.

Except for some European visitors, most smokers at Disneyland have accepted restrictions willingly, an employee said. But recent postings on a pro-smoker Web group complained that park employees force smokers to extinguish cigarettes any time non-smokers are near, and one woman said she had vacationed in Las Vegas instead of Disneyland because of the restrictions.

When Disneyland opened in July 1955, customers walking through its Main Street area on their way to the various "lands" passed a tobacconist with a wooden Indian outside. As late as 1976, a company guide to Main Street touted the shop's "vast selection of smoking materials and many unusual blends of tobacco."

Need a job???
The Collegian is still hiring for a few more positions
Editor

ATTENTION X-FILES FANS!!!
Have you ever wondered who creates the ideas for the X-Files ?

Bookworks
PRESENTS
Professor Anne Simon PH.D., author of
"The Real Science Behind 'THE X FILES'"

Professor Simon will be discussing the scientific aspects behind the popular television series.

TUESDAY OCTOBER 26th 1999
4pm to 6pm
CAMPUS CENTER
Lower Level ROOM 162-75

amc
There is a Difference!
Silence is Golden
No child under 6 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6PM.
Mt. Farms 4-Mt. Farms Mall
584-9153

SIXTH SENSE: PG13
Today at (5:00@ $3.25) 7:50 10:40
Sat 12:10 (5:00@ $3.25) 7:50 10:40
Sun at 2:10 (5:00 @ $3.25) 8:10
Mon - Thurs at (5:40 @ $3.25) 8:30

THREE TO TANGO: PG13
Today at (5:10@ $3.25) 8:00 10:40
Sat at 2:20 (5:10@ 3:25) 8:00 10:40
Sun at 2:20 (5:10 @ $3.25) 8:20
Mon - Thurs at (5:50 @ $3.25) 8:30

RANDOM HEARTS: R
Today at (4:40@ $3.25) 7:30 10:20
Sat at 1:50 (4:40@ $3.25) 7:30 10:20
Sun at 1:50 (4:40 @ $3.25) 7:50
Mon - Thurs (5:20@3.25) 8:10

THREE KINGS: R
Today at (4:50@ $3.25) 7:40 10:30
Sat at 2:00 (4:40@ $3.25)7:40 10:30
Sun at 2:00 (4:50 @ $3.25) 8:00
Mon - Thurs (5:30@ $3.25) 8:20

$3.25 'Twi-lite' Show Daily!
* Special Engagement
No Passes or Coupons

Collegian Photo Meeting Monday 7PM

WE HAVE THE SCHOOL/WORK SOLUTION

You have a school life. You have a social life. And you still need to work. C&S, the nation's fastest growing wholesale food distributor has the solution, with excellent part-time jobs at flexible hours. We have immediate openings for responsible, high energy people to work as Warehouse Selectors. No experience necessary - just enthusiasm!

BRING YOUR FRIENDS!
• Flexible Schedules • Great Pay
• FREE Transportation on weekends from Mullins Center on Campus

JOIN US NOW AND RECEIVE A $500 SIGN ON BONUS *LIMITED TIME OFFER

You'll receive complete training, $12.50/hour, and the opportunity to extend your hours during school breaks. You'll also enjoy a fun working atmosphere of team spirit and camaraderie. To find out more, come to our Job Fair, call 1-800-621-5951, or apply in person Monday-Friday, 8am-4pm (Tuesday & Wednesday till 7pm), or Saturday 8am-1pm, at 4 Industrial Center, C&S Wholesale Grocers, Inc., 142 Elm Street, just off Route 91, Exit 21, Hatfield, MA.

VISIT US ON-CAMPUS
Tuesday, October 26th
From 9:30am - 1pm
in the Student Campus Center

C&S WHOLESALE GROCERS, INC.
C&S is an Equal Opportunity Employer and does not discriminate on basis of age, gender or any other protected category in accordance with applicable law.

8 9 MICHAEL'S BILLARDS AND SPORTS BAR
10A Belchertown Road, Amherst, MA 01002 256-8284

Everyday from 3 -7pm and all day Sun -Wed $4.00/hour pool

•43" Big Screen TV
•Great Selection of Beer on Tap

Live music every Thursday, Friday and Saturday

JAI
Friday at 10 pm
Empty Bottle Saviors
Saturday at 10pm

Located across the street from Colonial Village on Cumberland Farms on Rte. 9

Best! 1998 UMASS Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Best Place to Play Pool
Michael's Billiards

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Image is everything

What sense do you take for granted? Could a million dollars be enough to compensate for a life without sight, sound, smell, taste or touch? If you were to lose all but one of your senses today, which one would you keep? The answers to the questions above all depend on whom you ask. Many people I know would keep sight. Other people I know could not live without the ability to hear. Of course there have been studies linking the importance of smell with memory. It probably would be a lot easier to lose weight if we had no taste. Finally, all sex would be is procreation without the sense of touch. Of all these senses, the one that universally seems to generate the most understanding, and presents the greatest manipulation in our society is sight. While there are some who are more inclined to be partial to other senses, sight is the dominant receptor of communication. It would be interesting to understand the perception of the world of a blind person, but I digress.

When you look at the Ed/Op page what is the first thing you look for? The first thing I look for is recognizable names. However, the thing that usually brings me to those recognizable names is the photo bendee. Photo bendees are the headshots of the respective columnists. In this, you can associate the words of wisdom or lack thereof with an actual person. As you can see, my photo bendee is of a young, striking young man. So if you happen to see me, you then can come up to me and say, "Wow! So you are the famous Boo! Your columns are wonderful," "Boo, you are so hot," or "Boo, you are a hideous, worthless writer who should drop off the face of the planet."

The power of the image is such that a name is often dependent on an image in order to receive recognition. For example, I wrote columns all last semester without a photo, and "Shawn Downs" was just a faceless columnist. I got an accidental head shot in the campus perspectives, and everybody and their mother came up to me, immediately recognizing my good looks. In the attachment of a body of work to someone, a picture shows that the writer is a flesh and blood person compared to being some type of anonymous computer. With my bendee, I'm not just "Shawn Downs", but I'm a public persona known to our little world as "Boo".

Boo Downs

Now it's time for our little quiz section of the column. As you look at my photo bendee, ask yourself, "What type of person is Boo? What music tastes, hobbies, or lifestyle does he live by?" Give a second to think about it... your second is up. Here are your choices from which to figure out the enigmatic character known as "Boo".

(A) Boo listens to Heavy Metal, but he has never been drunk.

(B) Boo listens to 80's music, but he is a film student.

(C) Boo listens to current pop music, but he has always been out of fashion.

(D) Boo listens to classical music, but he is often loud, and his mind tends to be in the gutter.

Choose, but choose wisely. We'll get to the answer later.

It is written in the Book of Boo that, "The camera is mightier than the pen and sword." The phrase, "A picture tells a thousand words" these days has become, "A picture tells a million words." If you are a communication major (which I happen to be), huge papers can be devoted to analyzing a single image. Did you see the large stencil ad on the pavement outside of the Student Union for the ESPN/HBO boxing event? As a communication major, I could write oodles and oodles of information concerning method of communication, semiotics, image construction, audience participation, ethics of image location and so forth. However, unless you are a professor of communication or a studious comm. student, you'd be bored stiff. Thus I'll leave that analysis to a term paper.

On the topic of images, we physically and socially associate ourselves with the images around us. Given the fact that we are exposed to thousands of images every day, it's hard to avoid one that we associate with. After all, how can we as a society emulate our heroes if we cannot see them, follow their fashion, or try to copy their mannerisms? If your favorite genre of music was just faceless music without the videos, concerts or other paraphernalia, would you be wearing the clothes you are wearing, speaking the way you speak, or acting the way you act? We seem to empathize very well with certain standard movie character types. Are you a rugged Bruce Willis type, a hip Will Smith type or a lovely Julia Roberts type? We add to our image with the clothing we wear and the doodads we add to our ensemble each and every day. Since when has clothing ever actually been practical, verses an expression of an over elaborated fad?

Many people defend their status as consumers of culture. They feel that they are creating their own identity by buying certain clothes, listening to some kind of music, living a certain lifestyle or just basically living up to some image. Although I do not like to admit it, I also have an image to live up to.

You may feel special. You, of course, deserve the right to feel special and to be your own person. We all do. However, do you feel original, unique and individualistic? No matter how individualistic we feel, we are not alone. In fact, it is likely that the image we are living up to is being lived by countless other people. From there our individuality is lost as we are herded into social groups. In these groups, people of this image are generally characterized by appearance. Assumptions are then made about appearance and mannerisms, and lo and behold! Stereotypes are born. By defining ourselves by image, we are alienating ourselves from others.

Oh by the way, back to my picture. The answer is (E) all the above. I listen to a variety of music, most notably Heavy Metal and 80's music. I consider myself a film student, and I am a performer at heart. I've been sober every day of my life, and I will continue to be so until I actually need alcohol in order to be the loud, goofy, obnoxious person that I am today. If you guessed the right answer, congratulations on your social perception. If you did not, understand, I probably would have guessed wrong anyway.

Boo Downs is a Collegian Columnist.

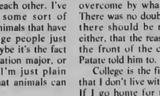
Write for Ed/Op



A note to all our readers:
We have received some excellent letters to the editor recently, and we would like to print them. However, we do not print submissions that are hand-written. Additionally, we cannot print unsigned letters; letters must include the name, phone number and address of the writer(s). The Collegian editorial staff reserves the right not to run submitted letters according to editorial discretion. Furthermore, the number of letters we can print is limited by space constraints. We enjoy reading your letters, so please continue to submit them.
Thank you.

The Editorial/Opinion editors

Talkin' to the animals

Don't ever tell me that animals can't talk to each other. I've always had some sort of belief that there are animals that have some sort of language people just don't understand. Maybe it's the fact that I'm a communication major, or perhaps you think I'm just plain crazy, but I know that animals can talk.

Even though I've always been sure of this, I have never been so convinced as I was this past Tuesday afternoon. I am currently enrolled in German 363, Witches: Myths and Historical Reality. The instructor of the class, Professor Susan Cocalis, brings her dog, Patate (German for "potato") to lecture every class. The dog is by far the most loyal animal I have every seen in my life. If Professor Cocalis snaps her fingers, her loving pet is by her side within seconds. On this particular Tuesday, someone else brought a dog to class as well. A nine-month-old pug puppy named Squirt was running around like mad for the entire hour and fifteen minutes. At one point, being the dog lover that she is, Professor Cocalis kept saying into her microphone, "come here squirt," and trying to gain the puppy's attention. Squirt, being the vibrant psycho that every puppy is, refused to respond. Then something that I found remarkable happened.

Ryan Benharris

When Squirt ran past Patate, he stopped his craziness. Patate recognized the fact that her mother was asking the puppy to come forward to her, and walked side by side, leading the dog to Professor Cocalis. Don't ever tell me that animals do not communicate with each other!

As I sat there awestruck, I was overcome by what I had just seen. There was no doubt in my mind, and there should be no doubt in your either, that the reason Squirt came to the front of the class was beeause Patate told him to.

College is the first time in my life that I don't live with some sort of pet. If I go home for the weekend, I'm greeted by a brother, a sister, two parents, four dogs and a cat. Most of the time I feel like I live in the zoo.

The truth is that I have become so accustomed to living with animals, that I have learned how they live their lives. I think I have enough stories to make anyone who doesn't think that animals communicate with each other easily change their minds.

Like I said before, I have four dogs at my home right now. There is a definite hierarchal system that they all seem to follow. The oldest dog was the certain "alpha dog" in the bunch until we saved the third dog, which we named Sparky, from a wastewater treatment plant in Rhode Island. When Sparky arrived, she took over! She runs my house like a military base, and being a husky, she likes to yell like a drill sergeant. Her high pitch yell that makes all of the other dogs jump up in attention, is only one of her ways to boss the rest of the pack around. Whenever the dogs are doing something wrong, she makes lots of noise to tell them to stop. Trust me, the other dogs listen.

Like I also said before, I have a cat. We found the cat roaming through the streets a few months before we found the husky. It turned out that the cat ended up being blind, and we still to this day have no idea how she could find her way around before she arrived at our house. The point I have to make about the feline, however, is that she is fully reliant upon the dogs to help her make it through the house. If she gets stuck somewhere and doesn't know what to do, she starts crying. If she starts crying, one of the dogs (usually Sparky) will run to find out what's wrong, and the cat always stops crying after the dog gets there. This is no coincidence. Somehow, some way, the dog tells the cat what's the matter and the cat listens.

There are so many different instances in the past where claims have been made that animals have guided each other. Disney doesn't claim that An Incredible Journey, a story about two dogs and a cat that find their way home through the deep woods, is "based on a true story" for nothing.

The one thing that we can all agree about is that animals are not stupid. They have fully functioning brains and thinking abilities, just like people. I think a lot of people take that fact for granted. I don't want to sound too preachy, but I always take personal offense to people who have any malicious intent towards an animal. This is why I was so outraged, when I heard about the student who was arrested for allegedly torturing a horse during a Red Sox celebration. I commend the UMPD for spotting this, and stopping it immediately. The act was not only cruel to the horse, but also put a lot of people in danger.

We may someday learn a lot more about how animals communicate, but the truth is that we may never know anything at all about the things that go through animals' minds. The only thing I have left to say is to Patate. You're a good dog, and tell Squirt I said the same!

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian columnist.

I'm too young to have a 401K!

Lately, I have been feeling really old. And I am not old by any measure. I am only 19, only a sophomore, (hopefully) still at the beginning of my life. However, more and more I look around and just feel old. In fact, I find strands of gray hair on my head on a regular basis.

I told my mom how old I feel, and she laughed at me, telling me how in a few years I will look back at myself, saying I feel old at 19, and I will think how very young I was. I know I will. When I am married, with children and a mortgage looming over my head, I will definitely feel old.

However, I really do feel old now. I went back to my high school's homecoming over Columbus Day Weekend. As my friends and I were looking at the kids at the football game, we asked ourselves, did we look that young when we were in high school? At 16, I didn't look much different than I look now. People are always surprised to learn that I am only 19 now, so at 16, I must not have looked that young. However, those kids all looked small and pre-pubescent. The little high schoolers looked like middle schoolers. The middle school children reminded me of elementary students, and the kids in elementary school; well, they looked like they still belonged in diapers!

Laura Siciliano

Even here at UMass, sometimes I see some kids in my dorm or at a party or on campus, and I just think... freshmen! They look so young! There is a kid in my political science class who cannot be a day over 11. I swear! There is no way that he has hit puberty yet, let alone gotten his driver's license. I guess he could be one of those child prodigies who graduated from high school at 7, college at 9, and is finishing up his Ph.D. now, but even if that is true, he still makes me feel old.

And it isn't just how kids look – sometimes I see the way people act and I just feel so elderly. I feel like some crabby old woman, standing in line at the grocery store saying, "Why can't those kids just behave?" During the halftime show of the homecoming game, one of the cheerleaders slipped in her formation. She held herself together enough to finish the routine, but when it was over, she started crying. A bunch of really young looking girls ran down to comfort and hug her, all in great dramatic fashion. I remembered when situations like that used to be so incredibly earthshaking and horrible. That is not the case anymore. Nowadays, I have to worry about bills, car insurance, whether I chose right major, if I need to get an internship... and I know that my present concerns will pale when compared to my worries 10 years from now.

Maybe I just feel old because some of my friends are turning 21. Being 21 used to seem so far away, like some unattainable goal. Even though it is a year and a half before I turn 21, the fact that at least 3 of my close friends are getting closer to the biggest day of their lives just makes the fact that I am a grown up seem so much more real. I am a grown up. I go grocery shopping by myself. I decide what is for dinner; granted the decision is only between the D.C. or Ramen Noodles, but it is still my own decision. I own my own car. In less than three years I will be out in the real world, totally supporting myself. That far off day of being an adult is here and less than two years ago it seemed so far away. Back then, whether or not I was going to the right prom dress seemed like a big issue.

Last weekend, I worked at the open house for prospective students. The students filled out interest cards, which listed their year of birth. As I was collecting the cards, I noticed that some of these students were born in 1983, 1983! I used to baby-sit for children who were born in 1983! It took me a long time to comprehend that it was physically possible for kids born in 1983 to be applying to college. It is, however, a scary fact that further exacerbates my aged feelings.

I also feel old when I think about the fact that N'SYNC and the Backstreet Boys are to today's kids what New Kids on the Block was to our younger years. This means that there is a generation gap. That makes me feel really old. Half of the members of NKOTB are in their thirties! The New Kids are so far out of the realm of today's culture that I bet there is a Behind the Music about them on VH-1.

The year 2000 used to seem so far away. Now that it is fast approaching, I am starting to see how quickly time passes. It seemed like yesterday that it was the beginning of the 1990's. A new decade had seemed so exciting. Well, now we are in the last few months of that "new decade", and I realize that ten years flew by right before my eyes. The brevity with which my life has passed makes me feel as if before I know it, it will be time for me to retire and move to Florida. I guess then, at least I really will be old, and not just feeling like it!

Laura Siciliano is a UMass student.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lillien Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

UMass HOCKEY PREVIEW

UMass trio set to lead on and off the frozen pond

Sell, Blanchard and Turner tabbed as captains of 1999-2000 hockey team

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

One thing that Massachusetts hockey team lacked last season was a powerful offensive punch. The Minutemen averaged only 2.3 goals per contest, yet still managed to remain in practically every game as a result of stiff defense and goaltending.

However, one aspect that the Maroon and White did not have trouble finding was leadership. Despite the fact that UMass was the youngest team in the nation, the handful of seniors and juniors on the squad helped to lead by example, as evidenced by the 12 wins on the year.

So, as the 1999-2000 season draws upon the Pioneer Valley, the Minutemen will now look to combine the best of both worlds by hopefully translating veteran leadership into a steady offense. The three UMass players who have been selected to take on the task of leading the team appear to fit the bill to perfection.

Senior forward Nathan Sell was chosen as the captain of this year's squad, while senior forward Jeff Blanchard and junior forward Jeff Turner will serve as the alternates. Ironically, this trio of players was the top set of forwards for the Minutemen last season. Nevertheless, they will now be looked upon to increase their contributions in every aspect of the game, but especially on the offensive end.

"Being the older guys on the team, we have to put a little pressure on ourselves, but not the kind that's going to weigh us down," said Sell, who finished second on the team in goals [10] and fourth on the club in points [14] last season.

Added UMass hockey coach Joe Mallen: "All three of these guys need to step up, and each of them could step up into a new realm this year. Plus we need the supporting cast to play well, too, guys like Kris Wallis, Martin Miljko and Nick Stephens."

A jack-of-all-trades

Always known as a solid defensive player, Sell emerged last year as a capable goal-scoring threat. For his physical abilities on the ice and motivational skills on and off the frozen pond, the Pembroke, Ontario native was chosen by the team as the captain.

"I think on any team you want to be one of the leaders, so of course it's an honor to be the captain. But sharing the responsibilities with Jeff Blanchard and Jeff Turner is an honor too," Sell said.

Sell is expected to see ice time in every situation this year. At full strength he will likely be paired up against one of the opposition's best forwards. When UMass is shorthanded, the senior center will be responsible for killing off penalties. Finally, when the Minutemen have the man advantage, Sell will be looking to help the UMass offensive attack. In addition, the former Pembroke Junior King will also take a majority of the faceoffs.

"Nathan Sell is a guy who is going to lead by example. First of all, he's a good penalty killer and faceoff man who has got a great shot," Mallen said. "We're hoping that he is going to be able to chip in a decent amount of goals too."

"It was a decision that was made by the team, a close vote between Sellzy, Jeff Blanchard and Jeff Turner," added Mallen. "He's an even-keeled guy who has a way of patting guys on the back and keeping a steady tangent."

Overall, Sell seems optimistic with the outlook for the Minutemen this year.

"Individually we have to improve day by day... Going into the playoffs last year we were on a high... we have to build on that for this year," he said. "We've got Northeastern on Friday and Boston College on Saturday. That's a good stepping stone for us right there."

The leader of the pack

The top scorer on the team last season, Blanchard is back again with the hopes of duplicating that feat in 1999-2000. Also an alternate captain to Dean Stork last year, the Stouffville, Ontario product could break into the upper echelon of Hockey East forwards over the next five months.

In his third year in Amherst in 1998-99, Blanchard led the team in goals [11], assists [16] and points [27]. Like his classmate Sell, the senior right wing will also see action on the power play and penalty killing units.

"Jeff has come a long way in his four years here. He's developed a lot more patience and poise out on the ice," Mallen said. "He has great speed and skill. The other teams in the league have to look at him as a legitimate threat this year."

Blanchard should once again rack up the points, especially due to his durability. The senior has played in 96 consecutive games, a UMass career record. In addition, No. 25 has increased his point productivity every season, which could be another pleasant sign of things to come, in this, his final year donning the Maroon and White.

Despite the fact that individual success may be right around the corner for the right-winger, Blanchard sees team success as the primary goal for the Minutemen this year.

"We have to build on last year, on both our strengths and weaknesses," he said. "As a club we have to take it one day at a time. I think we have to learn from our mistakes, as well as from the positive aspects of our game."

Emerging from the bunch

The beginning of UMass' ascent back up the Hockey East ladder began when Mallen recruited the Class of 2001. In addition to Turner, offensive talents Wallis, Stephens, R.J. Gates and Ray Geever have helped out the scoring cause for the Minutemen since their arrival on campus.

Ironically, Turner missed most of his freshman year with a broken ankle, but came back last year at full strength. He finished second on the squad in scoring behind Blanchard with 22 points. For his efforts, the Saginaw, Mich. native was elected as one of the alternates on this year's team.

"We've played hockey all of our lives, and getting a letter on your jersey is something you shoot for," Turner said. "You know that your teammates listen to you and look for you to lead the team. It's a great honor."

Also like his two fellow captains, Turner will see action in all three situations on the ice. He will also share the faceoff duties with Sell.

"Jeff is a good all-around guy, especially on face-offs and the power play," Mallen said. "He's got a great attitude and is probably the leader in that junior class."

Turner will also be on the same roster with his younger brother Tim, a freshman forward for the Minutemen. It will mark the first time that the Turner brothers will be playing together.

From the team standpoint, one additional aspect that Turner hopes will lead to success on the ice will be the fact that the team is basically the same as last year, as well as the coaching staff.

It helps when you put everyone on the same page earlier then we were in the past. You know what to expect from the coaches and from your teammates," he said. "Team goals are our main objective. Of course we want to win the national championship, but you've got to get home ice in the Hockey East playoffs first. That's an achievable goal for us. If we can do that, then I think that we've got a good shot to go to the Fleet Center [for the Hockey East semifinals."

An all-around effort

Mallen and the Minutemen realize that their ticket to victories this season still lies in the defense and goaltending. However, the hope is that these three players can help the rest of the offense elevate its game to a consistent level, taking some of the strain off the rest of the squad.

"We've still got to play a defensive style," Mallen said. "But we're going to try to do a couple of things differently [on offense]. If we can combine our skill development with our physical maturity, then it should add up to more goals."

Added Blanchard: "Everybody has an opportunity to step up now. This is our window to be successful."

And if all goes according to plan, then the Minutemen will have no problems putting together another solid season on the ice.

FILE PHOTO

Captain Nathan Sell [left] and alternates Jeff Blanchard [center] and Jeff Turner [right] will be looked upon to lead the offense for the Massachusetts hockey team this season.

Minutemen have a rock solid pair in goaltenders Helanen & Johnson

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Wayne Gretzky and Mark Messier. Bobby Orr and Phil Esposito. Mario Lemieux and Jaromir Jagr.

In a sport that has been known for some of the more famous pairs in competitive athletics, the Massachusetts hockey team is doing its best to mirror their pro counterparts.

Ironically, the Minutemen won't look towards a specific offensive couplet to inflict some damage on Hockey East opponents. Instead, UMass will look to junior Markus Helanen and sophomore Mike Johnson to help lead the Maroon and White to their first ever trip to the Fleet Center, that is the Hockey East semifinals.

"Every year our goal is to get to the Fleet Center, but in our league, it's about as difficult to get to the Fleet Center as it is to get to the national playoffs," UMass hockey coach Joe Mallen said.

Turn to MINUTEMEN, page 2

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

After a 1998-99 season in which he earned All-Hockey East honorable mention laurels, junior goaltending Markus Helanen will see the bulk of the action between the pipes for UMass this season.

UMass bolstered by a solid group of freshmen

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

Massachusetts hockey coach Joe Mallen had some big shoes to fill when last year's captain, Dean Stork, signed to play with the Washington Capitals at the end of last season. Stork, who now plays with the Portland Pirates of the American Hockey League, was both the glue that held the Hockey East's most improved defense and the vocal leader of the Minutemen squad that posted its best record at the Division I level.

To replace their leader, UMass needed to recruit some quality defensemen, and that they did landing two very different, but equally skilled back line players. Also in their recruiting process they acquired six forwards that should add depth to the veteran front line.

The Last Line of Defense

The Minutemen lost two blueliners from last year's squad in the off-season, Stork and Kevin Tucker.

Entering the lineup in their place will be freshmen defensemen Samuli Jalkanen and Kelly Sickavish. The two top recruits in the Class of 2003 will have the spotlight of the Mullins Center shined on them early and often.

"At this point both freshman defensemen look like they can play at this level right away. We're looking for them to make an impact," Mallen said.

Jalkanen is a relatively small blue line man at just 5-feet, 10 inches, but his skills with the puck should more than make up for his lack of size.

The native of Helsinki, Finland [also the home of UMass defenseman Toni Soderholm] played for Jokerit of the Finnish Junior A League where he was the five-time team Most Valuable Player as well as captain of last year's team. Jalkanen was also a member of the silver medal winning under-18 European Championship team in 1998.

The skillful Finn should bring some more offense to his defensive position for the Minutemen.

"I hope I can bring something like playing till the end," Jalkanen said of his role for the Minutemen this season. "I can be a good defenseman. I'll try to help as much as I can when I'm playing. I don't know the league, but I know there's a few good players."

At 6-feet-3 inches and 215 pounds, Sickavish brings Stork-esque size to the table. His physical attributes should allow UMass to hang with the best that Hockey East has to offer.

Before coming to Amherst, Sickavish played for the Vernon Vipers of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League where he was last year's unsung hero.

As a member of the Vipers he was the two-time assistant captain. The team was the 1998-99

Turn to FRESHMEN, page 4

Minutemen coaching staff has high hopes for 1999-2000 season

By James Murphy
Collegian Staff

After winning five of the final seven regular season games last season, the Massachusetts hockey team comes into the 1999-2000 season with a confidence that was clearly vacant at the beginning of last season.

Last season the Minutemen came into the year full of questions, boasting a young squad consisting of 19 sophomores and freshman. They were also entering the season on the heels of a 6-24-3 overall record and a 3-19-2 Hockey East record. The Minutemen also failed to make the Hockey East playoffs the previous year.

With the exception of newcomer Mike McLaughlin, a new assistant coach, the Minutemen bring back the same staff in head coach Joe Mallen and assistants Bill Gilligan and Dale Dunbar. The entire staff feels that this year's squad possesses a chemistry that was lacking in the early stages of last season, but also is extremely well conditioned, which is vital to having a successful season.

"We're definitely a better conditioned team than last season, which is real important coming out of the gate and starting off on the right foot," Mallen said. "Everyone has been working hard to prepare themselves physically for the upcoming season and I feel it will show in our first few games."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

UMass hockey coach Joe Mallen is back for his seventh year behind the bench of the Maroon and White for the 1999-2000 season.

The Commander-in-Chief

Mallen is entering his seventh season as the head coach of the Minutemen. He came here in the spring of 1993 with the challenge of building a nationally competitive Division I hockey team in the best conference in the nation, Hockey East.

Last season was a monumental season for Mallen and the Minutemen. He led his team to their best ever Hockey East finish, as UMass was 8-14-2 in Hockey East play and 12-21-2 overall.

Mallen has posted at least one win against each team in the Hockey East since entering the league in the 1994-95 season. The former Michigan State goalie has posted a 66-124-13 record here at UMass, while overall he brings a 146-170-15 record to the table.

When Coach Mallen came to Amherst in 1993, it was not the first time he was starting a collegiate program from scratch.

In 1979, when he arrived at UMass-Boston he transformed the Beacons from a club team into a very successful Division II team.

So if anyone was fit for the tall task of taking UMass into the Hockey East and becoming a team to reckon with, it was Mallen.

According to Coach Mallen, a key element in building a college hockey program from scratch is to get everyone on the same page.

"A lot of coaches like to have continuity going from one year to the next and I think we have that. That's not to say we won't try new things this season and be predictable but there is definitely a system we try to follow here and I think everyone is starting believe in it," he said.

When asked what he felt his team had to different this year to be more last successful than last, Mallen replied with the following.

"I think we have to continue to play strong defense as we did in the latter half of last season. We have to stay out of the box. There is a lot of good power-play personnel around the league and we have to be careful not to fall behind by being short-handed," he said. "Basically, we just have to stick to our system and keep it simple. If we do that, we will be successful."

Bill Gilligan

Last season, during the final stretch run, not only did the team start to truly believe in Mallen's system, so did the UMass student body.

This was no more evident than in the final game of the regular season at Merrimack, when, with their beloved Minutemen needing a win to clinch a HE playoff berth, a large number of UMass students made the trip to the Volpe Complex in North Andover and cheered the team on to victory.

Following the game, Mallen walked over to the UMass fans and thanked them, clenching his fist in the air as he was engulfed by a circle of supporters.

So, not only has Mallen earned the faith of his players but he has also built a respectable fanfare as this seven-year old program continues to make large strides in the world of NCAA Division I hockey.

Dale Dunbar

From Black and Gold to Maroon and White

A former NHL player with the Boston Bruins, Dunbar is entering his second season as an assistant with the Minutemen. He brings a wave of experience to the staff and the young squad who would be in need of direction in the talented Hockey East.

Dunbar was brought in here to first and foremost, improve the defense as well as other areas of the Minutemen's system.

Well, Dunbar did what he was asked to last year, as UMass became one of the stronger defensive teams in the Hockey East during the second half of the season.

Dunbar who hails from Winthrop, MA also has Hockey East experience as a player. Between 1981-85, Dunbar played for Boston University. After BU, Dunbar played professionally in the NHL and the AHL.

Dunbar's coaching career started at Catholic Memorial High School in Boston serving as an assistant. After his tint at CM it was onto Detroit, Michigan, where he coached the junior team, the Detroit Compuware Midgets. Dunbar found great success in Detroit, where he led his team to 97-7-3 record. In 1996-97, he coached the Erie Otters of the OHL.

When asked what the team would try to do build off and improve from last season, Dunbar's reply was very similar to Mallen's.

"I thought the way we ended up last year was definitely something to build off. We have to be a hard working team and have good defense. It's definitely a luxury to have good goaltending," he said. "We have a lot of guys returning. We have to do our job taking care of own game and if we can do that we should be fine."

Mike McLaughlin

"We're much more conditioned coming into this season and because of that, I think the confidence is higher this season. With the more confidence we have on this team and the more everybody is on the same page we should do well," added Dunbar. "The more everyone knows each player can contribute every night the better we will be."

Bringing some foreign flavor back to the states

Gilligan is also entering his second season on the coaching staff. Before coming to Amherst last season, he spent 19 years as a GM and coach in Europe. Gilligan coached the Klagenfurt (Austria) hockey club and led the team to four Austrian championships. He also served as an assistant with the Austrian National team.

Following his stint in Austria, Gilligan moved to Switzerland and coached the Bern Hockey club to three national championships.

Following his coaching stint with Bern, he served as the team's GM.

Before his successful coaching and management career Gilligan posted an equally successful playing career. From his college days at Brown, where he became the school's all-time leading scorer, to Cincinnati of the World Hockey Association, and a stint in Austria and Switzerland, Gilligan excelled.

Last season, he helped improve the Minutemen in all aspects of the game, but mainly concentrated on offense. With a talented group of forwards returning this season, Gilligan looks to help the Minutemen put more points on the board.

"I really feel that we're much more prepared than we were at this time last year," Gilligan said. "If we continue to do the little things we have to do, we should be good. Hopefully we can have a good start and not have to depend on a late season stretch for the playoffs. The players are much more focused and ready. It's been an on-going process but everybody seems to be finding their roles here."

The New Kid on the Block

McLaughlin is entering his first season on the Minutemen staff and will help the team with in-game scouting. McLaughlin brings an impressive resume to the table both as a player and a coach.

He had a solid collegiate career at the University of Vermont where he captained the 1991-92 team. He also played professionally in the AHL and ECHL. After his playing days, McLaughlin then moved on to be an assistant coach with Amherst College before coming to UMass.

■ minutemen

continued from page 1

Helanen, a native of Vantaa, Finland, will once again be the team's starting netminder for the second straight season. As a sophomore in 1998-99, he earned All-Hockey East honorable mention honors after posting a 3.32 goals against average for the Minutemen.

Johnson will challenge for time as the backup to Helanen. Last season the Excelsior, Minn. product performed well when called upon, posting two shutouts and a 2.65 GAA.

Regardless of whom Mallen chooses to put between the pipes on any given night, the Minutemen will have a chance to beat any opponent. Apparently in this case, two goalies are better than one.

Stranger in a strange land

When it comes to his birthplace, Helanen may be considered a foreigner. But when it comes time to take the ice, the Finn is no stranger to his surroundings in the cage. Helanen had some big shoes to fill after the graduation of Brian Regan following the 1997-98 season, but he stepped into the starting spot in net and emerged as one of the top goaltenders in Hockey East.

"It was the first year that I had played in a lot of games, so it was good experience for me," said Helanen in regards to his breakthrough campaign last year. "I learned that as a goalie I needed to work on my mental game and stay focused on the ice."

Added Mallen: "Markus works hard and stays focused out there. He has great size and speed. Plus he can handle the puck well. Markus has a lot of assets in goal."

With the graduation of goaltenders Alfie Michaud [Maine], Michel Larocque [Boston University] and Sean Matile [New Hampshire] in the conference, it appears that Helanen will again be among the upper echelon of netminders in Hockey East.

However, for the junior, it appears that individual success means little in the wide scheme of things. Rather, Helanen is hoping to contribute towards a UMass victory every time he is on the ice.

"It was nice to get recognized [last year], but I just want to get better every day," Helanen said. "Last year is history – now this year we want to make a new history."

"I just want to try and two every single game and improve my skills," added Helanen. "I'll go day by day working on my skills so that hopefully I can go play professionally someday. But I still have some work to do."

Better late than never

Mallen and UMass almost lost Johnson in the recruiting war – but not to another hockey program. The former high school baseball standout had actually orally committed to patrol the diamond at Valparaiso University in Indiana, but later decided to trade in a chest protector and shin guards for a facemask and goalie pads.

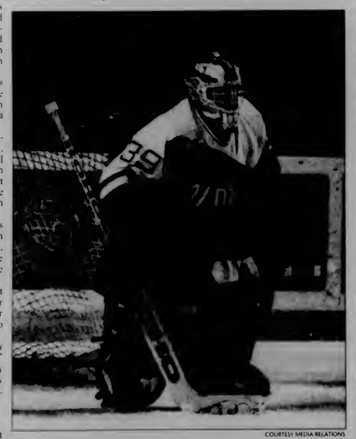
"Having to call the [Valpo] coach and telling him that I changed my mind was pretty tough, but I don't regret my choice," said a reflecting Johnson. "UMass is a great place to be a student/athlete."

Last season Johnson made an impact in a starting role for the Minutemen. He led UMass to shut out victories over Western Michigan and Army, while also playing well down the stretch in a handful of Hockey East contests.

"Mike is a hard worker who has great reflexes and is tough to beat," Mallen said. "He's greatly improved his puck handling, too. We know Mike is a very good goalie, and he's playing with one of the top three goalies in the league in Markus."

Despite the fact that Johnson is not as likely to see as much action as Helanen, the native of the Land of 1,000 Lakes is not disgruntled with his role on the squad.

"I knew coming in here that Markus still had three more years. I looked at the program as a whole and saw that it was on the way up," Johnson said. "Obviously Markus is the number one goalie, and he deserves it. He is just unbelievable. Any time that I can take away from him or just make him better will help the team."



Added Helanen regarding his fellow netminder: "[Having two solid goalies] is huge for the team. From what I've seen some teams won't have as much trust in two goalies [as they would in just the starter], but this team has trust in both of us. That's a good thing to have."

The road to the Fleet Center

One final strategy that Mallen employed late last season was a rotation between both goalies. It paid dividends at the time, but Mallen is still unsure if he will try it again this year.

"We had success with both guys on alternate nights towards the end of last year. It's not something that I'm planning on using [all the time], but when we do we're hoping that it will work out fine again," Mallen said.

That may just be the ticket to Boston the Minutemen are seeking.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Sophomore goaltender Mike Johnson should once again provide quality minutes for the Minutemen when called upon this year.

UMass 1999 Ice Hockey Schedule

October 8	Acadia	7:00 pm
October 16	at Colgate	7:00 pm
October 22	at Northeastern	7:00 pm
October 23	Boston College	7:00 pm
October 29	at Army	7:00 pm
November 5	Mass Lowell	7:00 pm
November 6	at New Hampshire	7:00 pm
November 13	at Merrimack	7:00 pm
November 19	Connecticut	7:00 pm
November 23	Vermont	7:00 pm
November 26	at Union	7:00 pm
December 3	Boston University	7:00 pm
December 4	at BU	7:00 pm
December 10	at Notre Dame	7:05 pm
December 11	at Notre Dame	7:05 pm
December 29	Northern Mich.	4:00 pm
December 30	Harvard/Minn.	4:00/7:00 pm
January 2	Saint Lawrence	5:00 pm
January7	Providence	7:00 pm
January 8	at Providence	7:00 pm
January 11	Maine	7:00 pm
January 14	at Northeastern	7:00 pm
January 15	Northeastern	7:00 pm
January 21	Merrimack	7:00 pm
January 22	at Merrimack	7:00 pm
January 26	Providence	7:00 pm
January 30	at Mass Lowell	2:00 pm
February 4	Boston University	7:00 pm
February 6	UMass Lowell	2:00 pm
February 11	at Maine	7:00 pm
February 12	at Maine	7:00 pm
February 25	Boston College	7:00 pm
February 26	at Boston College	7:00 pm
March 3	New Hampshire	7:00 pm
March 4	at New Hampshire	7:00 pm

Defensive unit appears to be rock solid for Minutemen

By James Murphy
Collegian Staff

Coming into last season, one of the main question marks surrounding the Massachusetts hockey team was the strength of the defense. This year however, the defense, next to the goaltending, appears to be the strongest assets for the Minutemen.

Despite the loss of former captain Dean Stork who is now playing in the AHL with the Washington Capitals affiliate, the Portland Pirates, the defense will still be returning six defensemen to go along with two newcomers.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Sophomore defenseman Toni Soderholm is the team's top returning offensive threat on the blue line.

As of now, the defense has no clear-cut leader but according to junior Joey Culgin, the eldest of the Minutemen blue-liners, this could be a blessing in disguise.

"Losing Deano definitely hurts because he was such a physical presense but on the other hand his absence has taught us to not just depend on one guy," he said. "We all depend on each other. No one guy is better than the other. We are all equal. I think this will help us in the long run."

Culgin, a junior this season, came to the Minutemen half way through the 97-98 season and made an immediate impact, notching an assist in his first game for the Minutemen.

Last season, Culgin finished second amongst defensemen in scoring. He was also named to the Athletic Director's honor roll for the fall semester, posting a GPA above 3.0.

Culgin is a very versatile defenseman, bringing a solid defensive and offensive game every night. He also plays his man tough and brings a strong physical presence to the defensive corps.

Randy Drohan, who is entering his second season with the Minutemen also plays a tight, physical game. Drohan showed some great scoring potential last season but his biggest strength is definitely his size.

Drohan who stands at 6-feet-3 inches and 215 pounds can easily intimidate on size alone. If he uses this to his advantage, the flashy forwards of the Hockey East will find it hard to move about in the UMass zone.

Another large piece of the wall that is the UMass defense is sophomore Justin Shaw. Shaw, the brother of UMass forward Jay Shaw, was hurt most of last season. If he can stay healthy this season, Shaw should be a big contributor to the Minutemen blue line.

One of the many bright spots last season was the emergence of Toni Soderholm as one of the top defensemen in the Hockey East. Soderholm, who stands at 6-feet-2 inches and 185 pounds, showed a great knack for playing the point and displayed a wonderful transition game last season.

If he continues to do so this season, he will help UMass not only behind the blue line but also in the offensive zone where the Minutemen need a spark most.

"We definitely have more depth [as a team] this year. There's no question about that. This year, everyone has been working hard," Soderholm said. "We're going to fight for every game down to the last second, especially on defense. We don't have Dean back there, so all of us have to step up."

Another defenseman who can play both sides of the puck well is sophomore Chris Brannen. Brannen was another member of the Athletic director's honor roll as well.

Sophomore defenseman Luke Duplessis, who sat out last season, will add more strength to the blueliners and bring a strong shot from the point.

The UMass defense welcomes two freshmen to the wall this season in Samuli Jalkanen, another defenseman of Finnish decent, is expected to bring an offensive punch and some much needed speed. Kelly Sickavish will also bring more size and toughness to a blueline stacked with hard-nosed players.

With Markus Helanen behind them, the UMass defense should develop into one of the best in the Hockey East as long as they stick to their game plan and stay out of the "sin-bin." The Minutemen will most likely come out of the gate using the infamous "trap" but don't be surprised to see some new formations also.

JUSTIN MEDIA RELATIONS

Despite the fact that he is only a junior, Joey Culgin will be the veteran of the UMass defensive unit this season.

"We don't want to be too predictable, so we might throw out a few surprises," UMass hockey coach Joe Mallen said.

After a year of assistant coach Dale Dunbar's tutelage, this young defensive corps looks to be one the most steady and feared in the Hockey East.

Experienced UMass hockey squad wants to get over the hump in 1999-2000

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Can the Massachusetts hockey team prove their fellow Hockey East coaches wrong again?

Last season the Minutemen were predicted to finish in the cellar of Hockey East when the pre-season polls were released. When all was said and done in March, however, the Minutemen finished tied for sixth place and posted the best mark since the program was reinstated for the 1993-94 season.

On Oct. 6 at the annual Hockey East Media Day, the league's coaches placed UMass in a tie for seventh place with UMass-Lowell in this year's pre-season poll. But if the Minutemen have anything to say about it, they are looking to once again prove that they are a better squad then the poll predicted.

"Polls are polls. Some teams look at them, and it will either put them up or down, but we see it as motivation," UMass senior captain Nathan Sell said. "You have to have some pressure on yourself, but you can't let it weigh you down. After all, even the No. 1 team in the country has to pressure themselves to remain No. 1."

Ironically, the No. 1 team in the conference, as well as in the nation, is Hockey East rival Boston College. It is a familiar spot for the Eagles, who lost in the national championship game two years ago and made the Frozen Four last year before falling to eventual national champion Maine. BC also started last season in the same position as they are in this year.

The Minutemen are set to host the No. 1 ranked Eagles tomorrow night at the William D. Mullins Center. BC already sports a 2-0 record on the young season, including a win over HE rival Merrimack.

"I think that we're going to be a very good team this year, but we are playing in a very tough conference," UMass hockey coach Joe Mallen said. "There's no telling what will happen. BC could be the No. 1 team in the nation, but UNH and Maine can't be that far behind them. BU is also going to be a good team, so there's a big logjam right now."

The Minutemen, who finished at 12-21-2/ 8-14-2 in Hockey East, lost five players from last year's team including captain Dean Stork. However, UMass returns nine of its top 10 scorers, five of its top six defensemen and both goaltenders. Add in a new freshman class, and the Maroon and White seem primed to better last year's mark.

"We're excited [about this year]. There comes a time to turn the page and start over again, and we're ready to go," Mallen said. "We're in a position where we have a great goalie [All-Hockey East honorable mention selection Markus Helanen] and a great defense. Now it we can put some pucks in the net then we're going to have a great year."

Added Sell, "We're really optimistic. I see a lot of confidence out on the ice. We came back in good shape and did some extra work in the off-season, and it's showing already."

Top threats for the Minutemen this year include senior alternate captain Jeff Blanchard and junior alternate captain Jeff Turner, who were the team's top two leading scorers last season.

UMass also boasts a talented junior class of forwards such as Kris Wallis, Nick Stephens, R.J. Gates and Ray Geever. Sophomore forwards Martin Miljkovic, Jedd Crumb and Darcy King, along with senior Kevin Poulin will also see regular shifts up front for the Minutemen.

In the back, a strong group of sophomore defensemen paves the way for UMass. Although junior blueliner Joey Culgin is the elder statesman of the group second-year players Toni Soderholm, Chris Brannen, Randy Drohan and Justin Shaw will also see time along with freshmen Samuli Jalkanen and Kelly Sickavish.

In goal, Helanen will be backed up by sophomore Mike Johnson, who played well when called upon for the Minutemen last season.

"We showed a lot of people last year that we weren't a ninth place team. We want to be in the top four and get home ice this year," Johnson said. "I think we're better then a seventh place team."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Junior forwards Nick Stephens [left] and Ray Geever [right] will be looked upon to contribute offensively for the UMass hockey team.

■ freshmen

continued from page 1

Canadian National Junior A Sickavish Champions.

"I think my game is a solid defensive game. Dean Stork has some pretty big boots to fill," Sickavish said. "Hopefully I can contribute a little where he left off. I'm going to take the body and be solid in the defensive zone."

"I think the experience of the older guys will help me along. They are familiar with the players in the league and that will help me," added Sickavish.

Samuli Jalkanen

Looking to light the lamp

The top offensive threat should be Tim Turner, brother of UMass assistant captain Jeff Turner. The speedy forward scored the second most points [22-32-54] for the Rochester Mustangs of the United States Hockey League. For his performances he was named a USHL All-Star.

Anthony Scaparotti was a Boston Globe All-Scholastic selection in 1996 and 1997. He was also a Boston Herald All-Scholastic pick in 1997 while at Malden Catholic High School. The skilled player has a natural knack for putting up points.

The Minutemen have a power forward in the making in J.R. Zavisza. At 6-feet-3 inches he can hang down low and in the corner, which should get him some quality ice time this season.

Experience is what UMass got when Chris Thornton signed on to play in Amherst. A veteran junior hockey player brings a positive attitude into the locker room and the will to win on the ice.

Kelly Sickavish

Another experienced junior hockey player comes in the name of Jimmy Callahan. The native of Lexington, MA played for the Tyngsboro Huskies of the Eastern Junior Hockey League and the Omaha Lancers of the United States Hockey League. He was the 1997 EJHL Most Valuable Player and the league's scoring champ. His natural ability to light the lamp should bolster the UMass offense.

Brad Nizwantowski, a three-sport athlete at Cushing Academy, posted 138 career points (73 goals and 65 assists). The Minuteman coaching staff hopes that his game will benefit from concentrating on just hockey. He played in the 1999 New England Prep All-Star game.

Tim Turner

Hope for the future

In recent years, Mallen has brought in some prize recruits, such as Blanchard and Sell. Others, such as juniors Turner, Kris Wallis and Nick Stephens, have already begun to pay dividends at the collegiate level.

The Class of 2003 brings a new sense of promise to the Pioneer Valley. Not only will their arrival help to provide immediate depth for the UMass squad.

1999-2000 Hockey East Capsule Previews

Boston College Eagles

Location: Chestnut Hill, Mass.
Head Coach: Jerry York
Home Arena: Conte Forum (7,884)
1997-98 Record: 27-12-4 (15-7-2 Hockey East, tournament champs)

Top returning players: F Brian Gionta (27-33-60), F Jeff Farkas (32-25-57), F Blake Bellefuille (24-25-49), D Mike Mottau (3-39-42), G Scott Clemmensen (26-12-4, 2.87 GAA).

Team synopsis: Will the third time be the charm for the boys from Chestnut Hill? After losing in the national championship to Michigan in 1998 and in the national semifinals to Maine last season, York and his crew are hoping to bring not only the Hockey East crown, but also the national trophy to The Heights. The top line of All-American Gionta, Farkas and Bellefuille could be the best in the nation. After those three, however, BC must find consistency up front. Defense and goaltending are also solid.

Boston University Terriers

Location: Boston
Head Coach: Jack Parker
Home Arena: Walter Brown Arena (3,684)
1997-98 record: 14-20-3 (8-13-3 Hockey East)

Top returning players: F Chris Heron (18-17-35), F Carl Corazzini (12-20-32), F Tommi Degerman (12-9-21)

Team synopsis: Last season the Terriers stumbled into the middle of the pack in Hockey East, where they are predicted to finish once again this year. Offensively the Bostonians should manage just fine, but what will hurt BU the most is the loss of standout goalie Michel Larocque. If replacement Jason Tapp does a poor job trying to fill his shoes, it's going to be another long season for Parker's boys.

Maine Black Bears

Location: Orono, Me.
Head Coach: Shawn Walsh
Home Arena: Alfond Arena (5,200)
1997-98 record: 31-6-4 (17-5-2 Hockey East, National Champions)

Top returning players: F Cory Larose (21-31-52), F Dan Kerluke (23-19-42), F Barrett Heisten (12-16-28), F Ben Guite (12-16-28)

Team synopsis: The reigning national champs will have some key holes to fill with the loss of All-American Steve Kariya and All-Hockey East goalie Alfie Michaud. Maine did suffer some important losses, but returns an experienced core of players and sports a talented group of freshmen. How well backup Mike Morrison adjusts into a starting role may tell how far the Black Bears can go this year.

Massachusetts Minutemen

Location: Amherst, Mass.
Head Coach: Joe Mallen
Home Arena: William D. Mullins Center (8,389)
1997-98 record: 12-21-2 (8-14-2 Hockey East)

Top returning players: G Markus Helanen (10-18-2, 3.32 GAA), F Jeff Blanchard (11-16-27), F Jeff Turner (9-13-22), F Nathan Sell (10-4-14)

Team synopsis: UMass took another step towards moving into the upper half of the conference last year when it posted its best ever mark in Hockey East. Now this year the Minutemen will look to get over the hump, and have just the roster to do it. The Maroon and White suffered only one major loss from last year's squad and return 11 of the top 12 scorers plus Helanen and backup Mike Johnson. It should be an exciting season in Amherst.

Massachusetts-Lowell River Hawks

Location: Lowell, Mass.
Head Coach: Tim Whitehead
Home Arena: Paul E. Tsongas Arena (6,496)
1997-98 record: 17-19-0 (9-15 in Hockey East)

Top returning players: F John Campbell (11-25-36), F Chris Bell (15-18-33), F Jeff Boulanger (14-8-22)

Team synopsis: Lowell managed to finish in a tie for sixth place with their mates from Amherst last year, but seem to be hard pressed to turn the trick again this season. Not only are steady two-way defenseman Anthony Cappelletti and goalie Scott Fankhouser gone, but the River Hawks lack proven depth in many positions. UML could end up in the basement if things don't fall into place.

Merrimack Warriors

Location: North Andover, Mass.
Head Coach: Chris Serino
Home Arena: Volpe Complex (3,617)
1997-98 record: 11-24-1 (7-16-1)

Top returning players: F Greg Classen (14-11-25), F John Pyliotis (4-18-22), F Sandy Cohen (6-14-20), F Chris Halecki (6-13-19)

Team synopsis: The Warriors lost two of the top scorers in the history of the program in Rejean Stringer and Kris Porter, so players like Classen and Pyliotis must step it up on that half of the ice. Goalies Tom Welby and Cris Classen will need to have big years if Merrimack wants to go to the Fleet Center.

New Hampshire Wildcats

Location: Durham, NH
Head Coach: Dick Umile
Home Arena: Whittemore Center (6,000)
1997-98 record: 31-7-3 (18-3-3 Hockey East, regular season champs)

Top returning players: F Mike Souza (23-42-65), F Darren Haydar (31-30-61), F Jason Shipulski (15-14-29), G Ty Conklin (18-3-1, 1.84 GAA)

Team synopsis: All-American Jason Krog is gone, but his former linemates, Souza and Haydar, are back. That should cause some big problems for Hockey East coaches. Conklin had an amazing season last year and was a big reason why the Wildcats went all the way to the national championship game. UNH should be strong again this year, a contender for both the HE crown and national title.

Northeastern Huskies

Location: Boston
Head Coach: Bruce Crowder
Home Arena: Matthews Arena (6,000)
1997-98 record: 11-20-3 (6-16-2 Hockey East)

Top returning players: F Todd Barclay (19-12-31), F Roger Holeczy (4-25-29) F Chris Lynch (10-14-24), F Billy Newson (3-10-13)

Team synopsis: It seems highly unlikely that once again the Huskies will be the odd-man out in the HE playoffs. Northeastern lost only three lettermen from last year's team, so they should improve on that last place mark. Could finish as high as fourth if things click right.

Providence Friars

Location: Providence, RI
Head Coach: Paul Pooley
Home Arena: Schneider Arena (3,030)
1997-98 record: 20-17-1 (12-11-1 Hockey East)

Top returning players: F Jerry Keefe (16-36-52), F Fernando Pisani (14-37-51), D Josh MacNevin (6-29-35), G Boyd Ballard (14-12-1, 3.64 GAA)

Team synopsis: After a solid fourth place finish last year, the Friars are looking to break through the trio of Maine, BC and UNH and earn a spot in the top-third of the league. Keefe and Pisani are potent offensive threats. Ballard must stay consistent if PC wants to have a possible shot at an NCAA bid.

Goo Goo Dolls play the Mullins Center

Goo Goo Dolls
Mullins Center
Oct. 20

Thanks to an absolutely incompetent, completely disorganized, and utterly inconsiderate Mullins Center staff, I missed the first ten minutes of Tonic's anemically short set at last night's show. After being hurried through a backstage meeting with the Goo Goo Dolls, and then being told and retold to sit in five different spots, I finally settled in to enjoy Tonic's brief, but spirited set.

The band waded through their past hits beginning with "You Wanted More" off the American Pie and moving later on to "Casual Affair" off 1996's Lemon Parade. Of course, they closed with the radio smash, "If You Could Only See." After the forty-minute break between sets, the Mullins Center crowd was ready to explode last night, as the Goo Goo Dolls finally made their way to the stage. Fortunately, lead singer John Rzeznik whipped up a frenzy of excitement and fervor in no time at all.

Storming the stage, Rzeznik and long time friend/bassist Robby Takac ripped off "Dizzy", the first song and title track of their latest album Dizzy Up the Girl, followed quickly by "Long Way Down" (1995's A Boy Named Goo) and the more harsh sounding "Bullet Proof" also off a Dizzy.

Rzeznik brought a dominating stage presence to the performance infusing it with energy and vigor. Between songs, he effortlessly shifted from an electric guitar and back again, frequently tossing the old instrument recklessly about the stage like a piece of garbage. I've seen a fair share of live performances and nobody was as charismatic as Rzeznik was in that first twenty minutes or so.

The crowd then erupted as the Goo Goo Dolls played "Slide," the catchy second single off Dizzy. As the song began, the spotlight was on Rzeznik alone, promising an intimate acoustic version, but soon thereafter, the entire band joined in- somewhat of a let down.

With three of their singles, including "Slide", already played in the first five songs, the crowd was left wondering what the Goo Goo Dolls to keep the momentum going. They launched into "Amigone" (actually three words jumbled into one) followed by "Full Forever" and here the band lost something that the strong opening had provided. Bassist Robby Takac provides the vocals for both of these tracks and is more suited to heavier alternative stuff, like the Goo Goo Doll's earlier material, rather than the yearning vocals, which current fans have come to expect from Rzeznik. Plus, Takac just seems cumbersome as a lead, after seeing Rzeznik's theatrics while bouncing around the stage.

The group slowed it down a bit, but brought the crowd back to life with current radio single, "Black Balloon." Rzeznik again stood alone before a silver curtain dropped and purple light illuminated it, giving the impression of stars glimmering on a summer night. A few actual black balloons bounced around the crowd during the song, a trite gesture considering the song is about cocaine use.

After concluding the first half of the show with "Hate this Place," Rzeznik introduced the band and gave the audience a choice of 3 stories to hear. The first was his dream about the Backstreet Boys, the second was how this song came about, and the last was about women in college. Rzeznik started the Backstreet one, interrupted himself with a Ricky Martin joke, then launches into a description of a typical frat scene. Concluding his story of smoking weed and getting slushed before having a random hook-up, Rzeznik warned the women "all college guys are horny scumbags."

When the next song began, it seemed as if he hold told the story of how the song came about after all. It was the 1995 smash "Name," probably the emotional high point of the night.

To conclude the set, Rzeznik finally performed the long-awaited solo with the short but beautiful "Acoustic #3" off Dizzy. The audience immediately responded by lighting the obligatory Bic lighters.

And, finally everyone joined in for an extended version of "Iris" as the Goo Goo Dolls walked off the stage. Overall, the show was fairly enjoyable, with the Goo Goo Dolls catering mostly to fans of Dizzy Up the Girl. And it seems as if they have to do so; otherwise, they run the risk of alienating the sweet pop fans that have finally made them an "it" band, for now, at least.

Adam Martignetti is Collegian Staff

The Goo Goo Dolls dispense their radio-friendly rock to the Mullins Center crowd.

Re-release of rock films from Beatles, Heads

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Staff

When a popular rock band creates a piece for the silver screen, the result is usually that of a cult classic. Two of this past summer's re-releases is no exceptions. The re-issue of The Beatles' Yellow Submarine and the Talking Heads' Stop Making Sense delighted legions of current fans and brought new audiences to these rock-film masterpieces.

Originally released in 1968, audiences didn't exactly warm to Yellow Submarine straight off. First of all, the fact that the film was animated carried one strike against it as far as Beatles fans were concerned. That wouldn't have been such a big deal if John, Paul, George or Ringo had lent their voices to their animated counterparts. Aside from the music, one would not even know that the actual Beatles were connected with this film had they not appeared in a brief live-action sequence toward the end of the film.

Secondly, the ultimate strangeness of the film may have put off fans of A Hard Day's Night (1964) or Help! (1965). The story concerns a mystical underwater place called "Pepperland" under siege by the "Blue Meanies." One of the hostages, Fred, escapes occupied Pepperland in a yellow submarine. When Fred touches up in Liverpool he finds the fab-four (Fred was the conductor for Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band, you see...) and takes them along with him to Pepperland to ward off the Meanies. The absurdist journey back was a vast medley of sound and color (i.e. eye candy for the chemically enhanced) that probably confused people who were thinking that the film was concerned with the silly plot.

Quite a few classic Beatles' tunes pop up along the way such as "Yellow Submarine" (of course), "Eleanor Rigby," "Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds," and four songs recorded especially for the film. "Hey Bulldog," one of the original compositions, was not included in the original release.

Over the summer, Talking Heads' fans were treated to a remastered print of Stop Making Sense, at the San Francisco Film Festival. All for members of the band attended the premier followed by a press conference during which former band-mates, David Byrne, Tina Weymouth, Chris Frantz and Jerry Harrison seemed to get along reasonably well (seeing that Byrne sued the rest of the band for touring as "The Heads" after the group's breakup). The film's director, Jonathan Demme (The Silence of the Lambs, Beloved) was also in attendance.

The film shot in 1984 during a Talking Heads concert richly captures the bizarre band in all their glory. The film opens with Byrne's highly animated movements during "Psycho Killer." The rest of the band joins him for over eighty solid minutes- the Talking Heads at the height of their career. Other songs performed include "Heaven," "Burning Down the House," and "Once in a Lifetime."

Northampton has the only area screening of either film this weekend at the Academy of Music (which is also showing South Park, for a strong animation billing) advantage of seeing these films on the big screen, with a restored soundtrack.

Yellow Submarine will be playing at the Academy of Music in Northampton starting today through Thursday at 7:15 p.m. Stop Making Sense will be playing at the Calvin Theater in Northampton tonight and tomorrow night only at 8 p.m.

The Beatles take to the silver screen, and VCRs everywhere, with this re-release of their classic film.

Primus's latest is full of surprises

By: Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

PRIMUS
AntiPop
Interscope

One thing is for sure: Les Claypool loves a party. The well known Primus uberbassist/vocalist is always associating with other musicians whether it is with his side project Les Claypool and the Holy Mackerels or the variety of other collaborations he has participated in. The new Primus release, AntiPop, is definitely Claypool's biggest party to date, as he has an amazing amount of big name musicians working along side him on this. Primus' first full-length album since 1997's The Brown Album. AntiPop features an appearance from Limp Bizkit's Fred Durst, on whose latest release Claypool had a small role. Tom Waits also returns to work with Primus, which he did formerly on the band's excellent album Sailing the Seas of Cheese. Also appearing are Metallica's James Hetfield, Rage Against the Machine's Tom Morello and Matt Stone, one of the creators of South Park.

Primus has been around since the late 80s, releasing such favorites as Frizzle Fry and Pork Soda, as well as the two awesome cover albums Miscellaneous Debris and 1998's Rhinoplasty. The current line-up consists of Claypool, guitarist Larry LaLonde, and drummer Brian "Brain" Mantia. The band had a main stage spot on this year's Ozzfest tour, and could be seen recently headlining the WAAF Locobazooka outdoor music festival. Primus will fill a slot on the second half of this year's Family Values tour before embarking on a headlining tour of its own with Incubus and Buckethead, who has recently been hanging out at Primus' live shows and participating in amazing jam sessions with Les and the gang. Seeing Les and Buckethead trying to outdo each other during "Dueling Banjos" has to be seen to be believed.

All three of the tracks Tom Morello produced with Primus are great, including the opener "Electric Uncle Sam." Morello also plays guitar on all of these tracks, but his work not surprisingly takes a back seat to Claypool's incredible bass skills. The opener gets the album off to heavy and groovy start, and plunks you right in the middle of Claypool's twisted mind which is well represented in the lyrics. I'm sure there are meanings somewhere in his lyrics but I haven't found it yet. However they are frequently hilarious, as is evident on "Mania Didn't Raise No Fool," another of the Morello produced tracks. One of the strongest songs on the album, you can't help

Turn to PRIMUS page 10

Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves is an epic rental

David Troupes
Collegian Staff

How do you justify telling a story everyone's already heard? How do you keep the material fresh, and your audience interested? 1991's Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves answers these questions with its beautiful and engrossing version of the timeless English legend.

The first thing you notice about Prince of Thieves is the lavish cinematography. The movie revels the breathtaking English countryside; panoramic scenes of rolling hills, dark hemlock forests, and beautiful stands of towering, sunlight-touched oak trees grab capture your imagination and create a world on the border between reality and mythology. In the words of Azeem, "In my dreams alone have I imagined such a place." The sets are intricate and historically convincing, and they lend the movie a uniquely gritty style. There are no feathered caps or cartoonish costumes; this is a

Turn to PRINCE page 10

Woo Hah..? Got your Arts in check

It's a jungle out there.

Giraffe by 9 & Co.

ZAHA
downtown Amherst

SUNDAY BRUNCH
5 Brunch Platter Meals
$4.99
Saturday - Sunday
10 a.m. - 3 p.m.
Applebee's
Neighborhood Grill & Bar
Applebee's
100 Westgate Center Drive • Rte 9 & Rte. 116, Hadley • (413) 253-5799

When you can't stand on your own anymore
contact REAP @ 545-0137
(Residential Education Alcohol Program)
REAP is a Student Assistance Program
Providing confidential substance abuse counseling.
Located in Moore Residence Hall Lobby South West
This message is brought to you through donations from the UMass Police Department

NICOLAS CAGE
A MARTIN SCORSESE PICTURE

BRINGING OUT THE DEAD
PARAMOUNT PICTURES TOUCHSTONE PICTURES A SCOTT RUDIN CAPPA DE FINA PRODUCTION
A MARTIN SCORSESE FILM NICOLAS CAGE "BRINGING OUT THE DEAD" PATRICIA ARQUETTE
JOHN GOODMAN VING RHAMES TOM SIZEMORE JOSEPH REDDY ERIC STEEL
ADAM SCHROEDER BRUCE PUSTIN ELIZABETH BERRIDGE RITA RYACK
THELMA SCHOONMAKER CYNTHIA DANTE FERRETTI ROBERT RICHARDSON
JOE CONNELLY PAUL SCHRADER SCOTT RUDIN BARBARA DE FINA
MARTIN SCORSESE
R
www.bringingoutthedead.com
STARTS FRIDAY, OCTOBER 22
NEW SHOWCASE CINEMAS EASTFIELD MALL STADIUM STYLE SEATING 543-6000-ALL DIGITAL SHOWCASE CINEMAS WEST SPRINGFIELD I-10 733-5131-ALL DIGITAL

The new Incubus album a treat

By: Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

INCUBUS Make Yourself Epic

The rap/metal connection has brought us some good bands. Limp Bizkit, however currently overexposed, still has two good albums, and we also have the work of Hed(pe) and Shootyz Groove. Sure, we have to put up with Kid Rock, but overall the mix of both styles has been pretty cool. While the rap/metal mix gets all of the media attention, metal has been experimenting with a lot of other styles lately.

Sepultura has brought an international feel to their music for years, and newer acts like DDT and Incubus are into mixing everything under the sun, i.e. jazz, funk, pop, etc., into their "unique" sound. And while this hodgepodge does inevitably take them further and further away from being called a "metal" band, it makes for some great and fun music. Although I assume still being called a metal band, the new Incubus release Make Yourself finds the band pushing the absolute outer limits for being considered metal, which of course is a good thing. Creativity and experimentation is exactly what metal needs right now.

Incubus is made up of singer Brandon Boyd a.k.a. (for this album) "invisible floating torso man, DJ Kilmore, Jose Pasillas II on drums, guitarist Michael Einziger a.k.a. Jawa, and bass player Alex "Dirk Lance" Katunich. The California five-piece was formed in 1991 and released it's debut EP Enjoy Incubus in 1997, followed by 1998's S.C.I.E.N.C.E. Incubus was one of the openers for last year's Korn show at the Mullins Center, and was on the Family Values Tour last year on selected dates. They also opened for Black Sabbath's reunion tour with the mighty Pantera.

Make Yourself opens with what is easily the album's best track, and certainly one of the best songs the band has ever produced. "Privilege" combines everything that is good about Incubus into one track. Boyd's smooth vocals are set to a good headbanging riff and some solid drum work from Pasillas. DJ Kilmore scratches on a great piano sample in the middle of the song, and the lyrics are the usual ode to freedom and believing in yourself. But beware fans of the mosh-pit; the album doesn't get this heavy again until the last song, "Out From Under," which is another good track with empowering lyrics and a chorus that is sure to make it a favorite in a live setting.

It's not that the previous album didn't have enjoyable slow songs, just see "Summer Romance (Anti-Gravity Love Song)." But much more of this album is in that vein, the laid-back, trippy jazz/funk thing that Incubus does so well. And this is both a blessing and a curse. "The Warmth" and "Drive" are both great songs with a slow and easy feel and some heartfelt and moving lyrics. By the way, the lyrics on Make Yourself are in traditional Incubus style, namely plenty of question marks and an overall lightheartedness that sometimes is too silly for its own good. Unfortunately, songs like "When It Comes" and "Nowhere Fast" can't decide whether they want to be heavy or soft, leaving them sounding jumbled and unpolished.

The first single "Pardon Me" seems an unlikely choice on an album filled with better songs, but it is a somewhat enjoyable tune with some funny lyrics and some cool scratches from Kilmore. And make sure to listen to the instrumental "Battlestar Scalatchtica," and listen in awe as Kilmore hooks up with two other DJs to scratch the hell out of some cool samples in a track that easily outclasses S.C.I.E.N.C.E.'s "Magic Medicine."

Make Yourself is a good album, and although I wouldn't put it above last year's S.C.I.E.N.C.E., the two complement themselves nicely; if you feel like some heavy music, throw in S.C.I.E.N.C.E., or if you are in a mellow mood, try Make Yourself. The album plays better as a whole, rather than choosing individual tracks. The cool samples and spaced out feel Incubus add to all their music make it some great music to chill out with or some great cruising music at night. Enjoy Incubus.

Grade: B+

COURTESY CHRISTOPHER MCLAWN

"Hey man, want to buy an Incubus album?"

COURTESY THE MEDIA ED SHAKESPEARE COMPANY

Those Crazy Kooks...

The Reduced Shakespeare Company brings its off-the-wall interpretations of the pillars of Western drama to the UMass Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 8 P.M. tomorrow.

■ primus

continued from page 9

but laugh at lines like "on a diet of black coffee/and prozac buttered toast," and allow yourself to get caught up in the awesome riff and bass work of the song. The most subdued of the three tracks is "Power Mad," which is an uneventful, but solid song.

The tracks Primus produced themselves are good, but not great, the standout being the title track. "AntiPop" has a very funny grandeur to it, as it starts out with ominous rain and thundering church bells that segue into the story of "the antipop," with lyrics like "the earth it did crack open/on the day that I was born." And the chorus is strong, making for a much more enjoyable listen than the almost workmanlike "Greet the Sacred Cow" and "The Ballad Of Bodacious." The music is characteristically strong, but there is nothing new or terribly exciting.

The best track in my opinion is "Laquer Head," produced by Primus and Fred Durst. It has enough energy in itself to make up for some of the other weaker tracks, and I can see it becoming a favorite sing-a-long in concert. "Laquer Head," like so many Primus songs, is easy to bounce to, and therefore I give Primus the award of bounciest band ever. But there are those who don't like to bounce, and for them, AntiPop isn't going to change their mind about Primus. It's a good album, but not that different; it's not a giant step forward from a band that doesn't need to take a giant step forward. It's a solid effort, and if Primus can crank out music of this quality until they call it quits I will be a happy man.

Grade: B+

■ prince

continued from page 9

world torn apart by a civil strife that, in the absence of their king, witnesses ambitious, paranoid lords pillage their own impoverished citizens for petty political power mongering. Merry men are scarce indeed.

The acting in Prince of Thieves is outstanding, making you wonder how Costner's career turned so sour. His portrayal is perhaps less charismatic than previous Robin Hoods (most notably Erroll Flynn's), mixing in less humor and more hardened maturity but Costner's performance is nonetheless effective, and completely suited to the movie's style.

Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio positively shines as Marian. Her portrayal is emotionally charged, and yet tempered by the painful wisdom that comes when one lives amid so much poverty and tragedy. Alan Rickman, however, steals the show as the Sheriff of Nottingham. He is the quintessential villain you love to hate, rotten to the core yet undeniably sympathetic. His performance is filled with self-effacing humor which some might argue detracts from the grandiose good vs. evil element of the story; the hilarity of these throwaway lines, however, works well with the otherwise deplorable nature of his character.

Morgan Freeman's Azeem is excellently acted but mostly useless, perhaps written into the story in an effort to de-Anglicize the cast. Pish's what makes this movie so appealing. This film doesn't feel like a fairytale; it carries itself with such maturity that everything becomes real and immediate, and for this we primarily have to thank a magnificent cast who breath new life into such a timeless collection of characters.

Entertainment, Food, & Giveaways
AMHERSTONLINE.COM
Bookmark It!™

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
☆☆☆☆Beatlemania Returns
"The restored Yellow Submarine is sublime"
At 7:15
ULTRA STEREO/JBL SURROUND SOUND
The Beatles
Yellow Submarine
"SOUTH PARK' IS INSPIRED COMIC RUDENESS."
SOUTH PARK
BIGGER, LONGER AND UNCUT!
As Cartman says, "This movie has warped my fragile little mind."
ACADEMY of MUSIC Cinema Treasures 584 8435

MASS SKATE
'kick A skate park'
Route 202 • Westfield
(413) 534-1000
Monday & Sat-
• BMX Sessions
Friday-
• Live Punk Shows
COMPLETE SKATEBOARD, SNOWBOARD, & BMX SHOP.
ELEMENT • SPITFIRE • INDY • SANT CRUZ • FORUM • FOUR SQUARE • DC • OSIRIS • EMERICA • BLACK LABEL • ZERO • 151 • ANTI HERO • VOLCOM • SPLIT • PRIMO • FBM • LOOSE • GLOBE • S-M • GIRL •
WEEKDAYS $5 OFF with COLLEGE ID
LARGEST INDOOR PARK IN MASS.
OPEN 7 DAYS • NOON-NINE

Clip & Curl
HAIR, SKIN & NAILS
MASSAGE THERAPY
Fall SPECIALS
Full Service Salon featuring:
Hair Styling • Aveda Facials
Nail Services • Massage Therapy
100% Organic Hair Removal
We Have: Tints & Toes
Sonadia • Paul • Mitchell • Sunsilk products NO DRILLS! $25
All hours by appointment
SPECIALIZING IN: • Swedish • Deep Tissue
• Hydrotherapy • Therapeutic
30 min. Reg. $25 ONLY $20
60min. Reg. $45, ONLY $40
STRESS RELIEF
Includes an Aveda mini-facial, hair, shampoo and dry, plus 30 minute massage, all personalized just for you!
Regularly $61, NOW $51
Expires 11/20/99
WE'RE EXPANDING!!! Look for our 2nd room coming soon!!
RTE. 116, SUNDERLAND • 665-2629 • TUES - FRI: 9-8, SAT 9-4

WORLD HEALING CELEBRATION
Friday, July 30
7 - 11 pm
EZEKIEL
WORLD HEALING MEDITATION
VIKKI TRUL
MAKE A DIFFERENCE

McMurphy's Uptown Tavern
Live Music
McMurphy's Welcomes
Umass' Own
Steve Asadorian
Sunday Night
37 North
Pleasant St.

MEN'S RESOURCE CENTER
Speak-outs on the Masculine Culture of Violence
Presentations by men and women sharing their experiences with the masculine culture of violence
Wednesdays
October 27 - Domestic Violence
November 3 - Male Survivors of Childhood Abuse
November 10 - Youth Violence
November 17 - Hate Crimes
Moderated by Steven Botkin, Executive Director of MRC
Each Speak-out will be held 7:30 - 9pm at the MRC (413) 253-9887
Information and reservations
236 NORTH PLEASANT STREET, AMHERST

print it.
ZANA
downtown Amherst

GLBT Issues

Students Come Out

By Jake Lilien
Collegian Staff

Many students passing by the steps of the University of Massachusetts Student Union last Tuesday were shocked to hear "I want everyone who can hear me to know I'm gay!" and "Two, four, six, eight, don't assume your teachers are straight!" being broadcast over a public address system. Yet these words are shouted every year by attendees of the National Coming Out Day rally, in which gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered [GLBT] students take the opportunity to publicly "come out of the closet."

This year's rally was held the day after National Coming Out Day, which inconveniently fell on Columbus Day this year. But the belatedness of the celebration did little to dampen the spirits of those in attendance.

"This is the one day where GLBT people are encouraged to be who they are, so do it!" yelled Donnie Roberts, the Assistant Director of the University's Stonewall Center. "I feel like, when we are honest about who are, it makes a difference. I think it's time for everyone to come out to someone new today."

Numerous students told tales of declaring their sexual orientations to their families and friends. Some were accepted by their loved ones, others were not, yet all of the speakers were happy with their decision to come out, and urged others to do likewise.

"I like girls, and boys, too," said Amity Dunn, a junior Comparative Literature major. "I was a little bit scared to tell my parents, because they're pretty religious, but they were really good about it. And if I can come out to my born-again parents, then you can, too."

Joey Stevenson, an employee of MASSPIRG, summed up the inclusive mood of the event by saying, "Even if you're just a regular old average heterosexual guy walking by, get up and say you're a big fag!"

"We're here to support anyone who is gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered or otherwise queer," junior Dylan Larke, the leader of the rally, told the crowd. "We need your support. We need your noise. We need your presence."

Speak OUT!
The Collegian needs the input of GLBT writers!

Closeted Reality

By Jake Lilien
Collegian Staff

Last year, I thumbed through a copy of The Minuteman, the unofficial newspaper of UMass conservatives, fully expecting to come across an editorial bashing gays and lesbians. Having read anti-gay rants in mainstream publications from right-wing columnists like George F. Will, Mona Charen and Don Feder, I was fully aware of the venom many conservatives spew towards "sexual deviants" such as myself. Considering that the cover of The Minuteman featured a photo of Bill Clinton with a swastika superimposed onto his forehead, I saw no reason to assume that the Minuteman's writers would feel any differently.

I was shocked, then, when I finally came across an editorial addressing GLBT issues, and saw that the views of the writer were views that I once held myself.

The basic message of the column, written by Brendan Beane, was that, since sexuality is a private matter, it makes no sense for homosexuals to "come out of the closet" and leave themselves prone to discrimination and harassment. While this view may not be seen as gay-friendly, it's a good summation of many Americans' views towards homosexuality – one so common, I once felt the exact same way.

At the age of 16, when it became clear to me that all of my relationships with women had failed for a reason (that reason being I was more attracted to their brothers than to them), I saw no reason to share this discovery with others. My logic was the same as the author of the Minuteman piece – that sexuality is a "private matter". Straight people don't shout out their sexual orientation from every rooftop, so why would I? I decided to keep quiet about the issue of my homosexuality.

Soon I realized, though, that staying in the closet wasn't just about keeping my personal matters to myself. It required me to lie on a regular basis. When someone asked me if there were any women I found attractive, I had to lie. When I was asked if I was in a relationship, I had to lie, or play the "pronoun game" and say something to the effect of "Yes, and they're great." (This way, people didn't think I was gay, they thought I was dating a group of people). When I discussed virtually any sexual matter, I had to lie. When someone offered to fix me up on a blind date, I had to lie. And that one time when someone asked me flat out, "Are you gay?" I had to lie.

After a while, I got sick of lying. I got sick of being unable to contribute anything to any of the conversations I had with my friends if they were talking about romance. I got sick of keeping quiet whenever a classmate made a "fag" joke, out of fear that people might suspect the truth. I got sick of not being able to bitch about my relationships. Sick of pretending I thought Winona Ryder was hot, and sick of hiding my copy of The Advocate under a newspaper when I brought it to the newsstand cash register. I wasn't being a private person, I was being a repressed, paranoid liar.

One day, I finally acknowledged the truth. I got a mix of reactions from my friends.

One said, "You idiot. You thought I didn't know? I guess next you'll announce that you're white."

Another said, "You can't be serious. You? Gay? You're kidding, right? You're not gay. No, you aren't. No, you aren't. No, you aren't. Oh, my God, you are. Well, I have to go now." I never saw her again.

I realized, though, that whether people reacted positively or negatively to my coming-out, it was always the right thing to do. Some of my friends may have decided they wanted nothing more to do with me, but I know that in a way I helped them. Their assumptions that all gay men are psychotic child-molesters are (hopefully) shattered.

This is why gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered people should come out. Not just for themselves, but for others. Admittedly, there are times when it's probably best to wait – for example, if your homophobic parents are paying your college tuition, or your grandmother is recovering from a coronary. But on the whole, the freedom of telling the truth is far more enjoyable than the company of closed-minded friends.

But to heterosexuals who insist that we stay in the closet, I can only ask that you follow your own advice. Never hold hands with your heterosexual lover in public – in fact, never even mention that you have a boyfriend or girlfriend – because this would be flaunting your "lifestyle", and no one wants to see that.

Heart Smile
By Meg Hebert

The day I learned that a heart could smile
I bounced right through mile after mile.

Motions of joy so careless and free — for all those years why wasn't I me?

A swing of the arms,
hand meets hand,
clap snap hop skip quick as I can.onna be me now, that's my plan.

GLSEN conference students hear a straight confession

By Rachel Edelman
Collegian Correspondent

Monday of last week was National Coming Out Day. It is a day declared safe for all GLBTQ (Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender, and Questioning) people everywhere to be themselves and feel free to let the world know who they are. I would like to tell you my "coming out" story, but it is not exactly the same coming out as I just described.

During the first weekend of October, I went to a teacher and youth conference held by GLSEN (Gay, Lesbian, and Straight Education Network). I found out about the national conference in Atlanta, Georgia from my best friend's mom, who is a sex educator in private schools. She knows of my interest in adolescent development (with me being a psychology major and all) and I've discussed the problem of harassment in schools with her many times. Since the organization is about creating a "respect of all" environment in schools, I figured it would be really interesting.

When I arrived at the Atlanta Youth Hostel Thursday night, I realized that out of the 100 or so youth that was also there on scholarship, I was the only one there that was straight. Therefore, because of the topic of the conference, everyone would just assume that I was GLBTQ just like everyone else. Not. I couldn't lie to everyone, but at the same time, I couldn't just blurt out to everyone I see, "Hello, I'm straight!" So, I had to think about it and wait until the time was right. That opportunity came when about 35 – 40 of us were playing a "getting to know you" kind of question game, going around the circle, in the wee hours of Friday morning.

Knowing that I had to come out to everyone was scary! My palms were sweating and I was very nervous right before it was my turn to talk – then it suddenly came to me that if anyone knew about accepting people who are in the minority, it was the people in the room. So, I just went out and said it, "I need you all to know that I'm straight." There...I said it... Reactions? I looked around the room. I saw some confused faces, some proud faces – but all were accepting faces. Getting that off my chest, I was able to be myself and jabber about school, friends, and my boyfriend with them, just like I always do.

I was lucky that the majority sexual orientation accepted me and respected me for telling everyone the truth. For GLBTQ students in the real world, it is not as easy. The struggle of the GLBTQ right now reminds me of the Civil Right movement of the 1950s and '60s. Oppression is oppression, whether or not it is because of what you look like or because of what you feel in your heart.

MotherSON Comes to UMass

By Jake Lilien
Collegian Staff

Stand-up comedian Bob Smith once remarked that when parents find out their children are gay, they go through three steps – "First, they never talk about it. Then, they talk about it. Then, they talk about it on Oprah." Coming out to a mother or father is one of the biggest struggles faced by gays and lesbians. Some parents react kindly, others harshly. In the end, though, most parents are able to accept their children for who they are.

Actor/writer Jeffrey Solomon struggled for years to muster the courage to tell his mother the truth about his homosexuality. After finally coming out to her, and seeing her reaction, he wrote MotherSON, a one-man show exploring a gay man's relationship with his Jewish mother and her gradual acceptance of his sexual orientation.

He will be performing MotherSON on Friday, October 29 at 8:00 in the Bowker Auditorium. The performance is being sponsored by following: the Stonewall Center, the Office of Jewish Affairs, The GLBT Graduate Student Organization, Greater Springfield P-FLAG and the UMass Arts Council.

"MotherSON is about how mothers and sons try to survive the coming out process," says Solomon. "It's also about the mother's coming out as the parent of a gay child to her friends. That's not a perspective that you see often. When we come out of the closet, they generally go into it."

While MotherSON is partly fictional, the play is essentially autobiographical in nature. Solomon plays characters based on both him and his mother in the play.

"Mothers and sons are connected, and are mirror images of each other," he says, explaining why he chose to play both roles. "Our parents drive us crazy, and yet we are our parents."

Solomon feels that his show is accessible to all audiences.

"I think I've achieved a really universal story," he says. "It's about adult children trying to form a new relationship with their parents. Everyone has to re-meet their parents as an adult, and their relationship changes. You have to say, 'Guess who's in charge of my life now?' In that sense, most audiences get it. Everyone has to communicate with their parents."

"Gays and lesbians get something special out of it, though," he adds. "Their parents get something special, too.

"A lot of people who saw it told me, 'It got me to call my mom.' I would get three, four, five or six phone calls after a performance from people who said that the show affected them."

"When I saw this play it was so touching," said Donnie Roberts, Assistant Director of the Stonewall Center, after seeing the show in Boston. "While Jeffrey's story is not my story, the universal message of parent child relationships touched many personal chords in my own life story."

Tickets can be obtained by calling the Fine Arts Center Box Office at (413) 545-2511, or 1-800-999-UMAS. Ticket prices are $10.00 for community members and $5.00 for students.

Sunday Morning
By Geordana Weber

This is to the guy
in Brooklyn who wondered why I fell into a day dream every time Ellen came on t.v.
This is to the guy
who kept lime twisted gin in his fridge
that aided my body's flexibility
This is to the girl who in tenth grade told me my breasts were magnificent
This is to that basketball player who wondered why I never climaxed when he was present
And this is to my roommate who wonders why I always want to "go hang out" at Smith.
It's time you knew that it is no longer Saturday night
but rather Sunday morning
Starting today, I do not anxiously await the phone calls of those four to five guys that admittedly lust after me.
I do not shy away from that pretty girl with rainbow stripes on her bag and emphatically short hair.
I am not waiting for someone in front of me on the Breakfast line to tell me that I am charming, wonderful, and don't forget – beautiful.
This is to that amazing girl who decorates my thoughts:
"I.M.L.S.B.N."

Interested in writing for the GLBT issues page? Call 545-1762 and ask for Jake!

The Confession
By Erika R. Crabe

My hands shake as I pick up the phone for the fifth time.
I practice in my head everything that I want to say.
As I dial the numbers and I hear the ringing my heart pounds.
"Hello?"
"Hey...it's me, can you come over? I need to talk to you"
"Yeah sure, are you OK? You seem upset."
"Just come over, please?"
"I'll be there in ten minutes."
"Thanks."
"That's what friends are for right? See you in a few, bye."
"Bye."
The click of the receiver jolts me back into reality.
She'll be here soon...this is it.
I go through all the scenarios in my mind.
The doorbell rings...
I take a deep breath and sigh
This is it.
"Hey, thanks for coming over on such short notice."
"You're my best friend and you sounded upset...you look it too. What's going on?"
"I have something I need to tell you. You'd better sit down."
She sits, I pace the floor slowly...
"I...I don't quite know how to say this to you."
"Oh just spit it out, it can't be that bad."
"Oh, it's pretty bad..."
"Tell me, if it's bad, then it's bad...but you obviously need to talk."
"Well...I just don't want to frighten you."
"Sweetie, tell me for crying out loud!"
"I'm...I'm...a lesbian."
I can't believe I said it.
"Oh, well I knew that already, so what's your problem?"
"Why wouldn't I be?"
"I don't know."
"Well, I still love you for who you are inside. That's all that matters."
"You are so right."

Actor writer Jeffery Solomon

College Party Massacre

By Scotland Segal
Collegian Correspondent

I went looking for credit in the straight world.

You might have seen me at one of the frat parties last weekend covered in fake blood, taking up all the mirror space. I know that a few of you were less than pleased than the sight of me covered in blood, sopping it up with ostrich feathers (don't ask), but I have a perfectly good explanation. The doctor was right: alcohol and pain-killers are not the best combination. I discovered this after my third beer and my fourth shot of whisky. Excess was the word that night, baby, and I was its poster child.

I had a lot to celebrate. After all, Serena Williams just won the U.S. Open. Of course, that happened over a month ago, but it's never too late to show your support. I mean, if you can't celebrate the first African American tennis champ in decades, you might as well become an R.A. and hang up your pants clothes forever. So I was pining away in my dorm room, dying my hair psychedelic brown, and I realized that I never fully celebrated Serena. So I went to Blockbuster Video and rented everything that had anything to do with Serena Williams, which amounted to absolutely zip. So I rented "Hoosiers" instead (under a fake name, of course. I've been looking for that movie for years). Even though this Gene Hackman flick has nothing to do with Serena and/or tennis, its still one of the greatest sports movies of all time.

So I'm back in my dorm room wondering which of my friends has which STD.

Suddenly I decide to ditch the Serena Williams idea (turn off "Hoosiers" right before the climax, throw on some fake blood (which I swear has nothing to do with that unsolved disappearance) get into my New York Rangers jersey, and party like it was 1958. Why 1958? Just trust me, it works.

And whaddaya know? The fake blood was a smash! It got me free drink tickets all night, promises of being on the guest list for some very exclusive frat parties next week, and even a couple of phone numbers. By the way, whoever gave me the phone number, thanks a lot. How did you know I love calzones? I think that Serena Williams, wherever she is, would be proud of my night's accomplishments. I know that we will be linked forever in spirit. That night I captured what it takes to have glamour where there is none. Next week I will try to capture those spectacular shoulders. Congratulations Serena.

House of Cards
By Erika R. Crabe

House of cards
Stacked one on one,
Little bricks of paper
Held together by gravity alone.
So fragile and so strong
The slightest breeze will topple
But press down and they stand.
A wondrous sight to behold today
When you feel that your life
Is a fragile house of cards.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Isn't This Pretty?

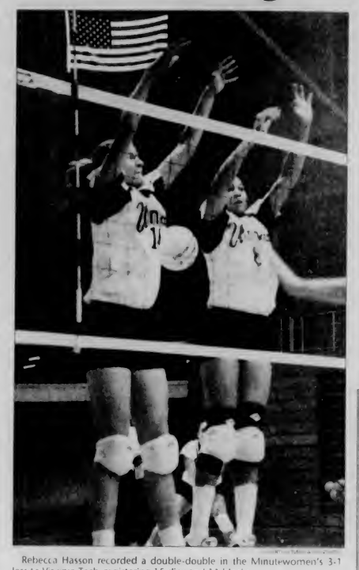
The Collegian would like to take the opportunity to leave you with this tranquil scene, and wish you a safe and happy weekend.

UMass volleyball on the road again

Minutewomen go to Ohio for key conference matches; games test UM's prowess

By James Piehl
Collegian Staff

This weekend the Massachusetts volleyball team takes to the road to face old conference foes in a new atmosphere. This time the Minutewomen will look to sweep Xavier and Dayton, having split the previous meetings at home.



The Minutewomen fell 3-1 to the Musketeers earlier in the season, but still have the lead in the overall series, 6-3. The tough Xavier squad is 15-5 overall and 6-3 in the conference. The Musketeers are currently tied for second place in the Atlantic 10 Conference. UMass (11-8 overall, 5-4 A-10 Conference) knows from their first meeting with the Musketeers that they must contain Xavier's leader sophomore Sara Bachus. The heavy hitting Bachus scorched the Minutewomen squad in the loss with 18 kills and 21 digs. Bachus is the Musketeers kill leader, averaging 3.68 per game.

UMass was able to down Dayton 3-1 one at home and is looking to edge the flyers out of the three way for fifth in the A-10. The Dayton squad is currently 9-9 on the season with a 5-4 conference standing. The Minutewomen will be wears of junior outside hitter Sierra Ashley who leads her squad in both kills and digs, averaging 3.94 and 2.92 per game, respectively. Freshman Flyer Megan Pease smashed 22 kills and tallied nine digs in the earlier Dayton loss.

"Both Dayton and Xavier have very good balanced attacks. We can't give them an open net to hit on, so we are going to have to block better this weekend. Xavier's Jenny Jansen and Sara Bachus are two people we are going to have to key in on," head coach Bonnie Kenny said in a press release. "We can't allow them to have a field day at the net with their attacks. Dayton has four players who can hit .250 or better, so we are also going to have to have four players who can hit .250 or better."

As we all know by now the Minutewomen are no slouches when it comes to big hitters themselves. Senior Jill Meyers leads the way for UM with a mesmerizing 4.43 kill average per game and ranks second on the squad with a 3.18 digs per game average. The dig leader on the UMass team is the other senior co-captain Kari Hogancamp with a nation leading 5.19-dig average for the fourth straight week. Hogancamp still finds time to rank second in kills on the squad with a 3.35 per game average. Third on the team in kills and a key to victories this weekend is junior middle blocker Rebecca Hasson. The middle dominatrix averages 3.03 kills per game and leads the team with a 1.07 blocks per game average.

Two decisive victories this weekend for the Minutewomen could really shake up the A-10 standings and prove that UMass deserves its shot at the Atlantic 10 Championship tournament in Philadelphia this Thanksgiving break.

Rebecca Hasson recorded a double-double in the Minutewomen's 3-1 loss to Virginia Tech, registering 15 digs and 11 blocks.

■ Polo

continued from page 14

one can produce goals when called upon.

Seniors Pat Kain, Timmy Troupis, and Rich Slingluff have had major impacts on the offensive success of this team.

Kain himself has been a weapon feared by many opponents, unloading bomb after bomb to lead the scoring almost every weekend. Kain was deemed the WHMP/UMass athlete of the week for his 14-goal explosion during the North/South in Princeton just two weeks ago.

On the defensive front Yarworth once again expects top-notch team defense and an All-American performance from co-captain shot-stopper Richard Huntley. Huntley's resume includes a spot on the Puerto Rican national team and a long list of Eastern conference opponents who would rather see someone else in goal.

■ Soccer

continued from page 14

the next closest threat with eight points (four goals).

On the UMass side of things, senior Emma Kotowski (12 goals, one assist — 25 points) and junior Kara Grech (six goals, six assists — 18 points) remain the top scoring threats for the Minutewomen. Complementing that duo up front will be sophomore Katelyn Jones, senior Cindy Garceau (eight points) and junior Sarah Cook (eight points).

Senior Angie Napoli and sophomore Cori Stevens will likely platoon again in goal this weekend, as they have all season. Napoli sports a 3-1 mark on the year, while Stevens is 5-2-1.

"We're in pretty good shape right now, but for this team, winning is unacceptable," Rudy said. "They would be very displeased. But we can't [talk] about four games right now, we have to think about them one at a time."

■ Football

continued from page 14

weaknesses on Delaware's defense. Lehigh made some great passes against them. But Delaware is Delaware. They have the best athletes in our league and they have had our number."

On the other side of the ball, Massachusetts will have to contend with a tough pair of tailbacks.

"We started preparing (for them) Sunday night," Whipple said. "They ran the ball against us very well last year. They are running it well right now. Butter Pressey can break a long run at any time. Craig Cummings does not have the numbers he had last year, but he shreaded us. We just have to get a good look from our scout team. Delaware runs the football and plays tough, hard-nosed defense, and they are doing it at a high level right now."

Linebacker Brian McKenna leads the team out of the locker room, topping the team with 39 tackles, while junior defensive end Mike Cecere has registered five sacks.

Their task will be containing junior Minuteman Marcel Shipp. The Walter Payton Award candidate is fresh off of a 258-yard, two touchdown performance against Maine. Shipp has racked up 18 consecutive 100-yard showings going back into last year, and has totaled 920 rushing yards and 10 scores over six games this season.

Providing air support for Shipp will be senior quarterback Todd Bankhead who, although he torched Delaware for 323 yards and four scores last year, has been streaky this season. His top target is 5-foot-7, 151 pound Adrian Zullo, who has 33 receptions for 510 yards and seven touchdowns on the year. The sophomore is already second all-time in school history in scoring catches, needing one to tie Jimmy Moore at 16.

When Cummings and Pressey are on the field, they will be pursued by linebackers Kole Ayi and Corey Potter. Ayi, whose brother Tenn. plays on the Delaware defense, is a top candidate for the Buck Buchanan Award, given to the top linebacker in the nation. Potter, who stepped in for an injured Dan Healey, picked off two passes against Northeastern and registered 14 tackles last week against the Black Bears. The freshman was named A-10 Defensive Player of the Week for his performance against the Huskies.

The Massachusetts defensive backfield will be led by Jerard White, who tops the nation with five interceptions.

GO UMass HOCKEY!

BEAT

BOSTON COLLEGE

UMass Hockey Alumni
vs.
Celebrity All Stars
Featuring Boston Bruins Legends
Ken Linsman, Brad Park, Bob Miller, Gary Doak, Rick Middleton & Terry O'Reilly
* Members of the celebrity game will sign autographs between periods *

Saturday Oct. 23, 1999
2:00 PM
William D Mullins Center

Adults $5.00
Students/Children 18 & under/Seniors $2.00
Tickets can be purchased at the door

All proceeds directly benefit UMass Hockey
For more information call the hockey office at (413) 545-5175

UMass HOCKEY VS #1 Ranked BC

Saturday Oct. 23, 1999
7:00 PM
William D Mullins Center

Tickets to the Umass Alumni/Celebrity game will not get you into the UMass vs. Boston College game

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Yoga and Meditation Workshop Breathe out Stress/Depression Breathe in joy "Grace through Breath' Workshop reputed in over 100 countries free introductory session on Oct 22 Friday Evening 6:45 Boyden #237 Contact Durgesh 549-5551 dmangesh@ecs.umass.edu

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UMSFS Presents: Rocky Horror Picture Show CCA 10pm Oct. 28

Free CD of Cool Indie Music when you register at MyBytes.com, the ultimate wesite for your college needs

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Alpine Commons 4 Bedroom, 2 Baths, Fully applianced kitchen, Private Balconies, All utilities included, perfect roommate living. Just 3 miles to UMass. Move-in special. 256-0741

Very Nice 1 Bdrm in Colonial Village. Quiet, brand new carpet, right on bus line. $465+ AVAILABLE 11/1 256-1109 or 253-2515

2 Bedroom Atp. in Sunderland on bus route, Ht/HtW, electricity included. Well kept good location 665-4120

Apt. Available 2-Bedroom. A/C, Dishwasher, Washer/Dryer, Pool, Volley and Basketball Courts. Ht/HtWtr included on bus router 397-9870

AUTO FOR SALE

87 Honda Accord Sedan white 125,468 miles $1,200 or BO 546-4513

1992 Jetta GL CD, A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500 546-1773

1992 Mercury Sable Wagon 120K miles. Good condition. Plus 4 snow tires. Call 256-0067

87 VW JETTA-GLI $1,000 5Spd. Runs strong, good tires, recent clutch, exhaust. 256-6235

COMPUTERS

Computer Problems? We've got solutions. New systems to technical service. Call 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Part-Time Clerical Position Requires answering phones customer service/office duties morning + afternoon hours. Apply to: National Heating 235 Triangle St. Amherst, MA

Earn $500 Weekly distributing phone cards. No experience necessary. Full or Part time Call 1-800-572-3361

Immediate Opening for a General Assignment Reporter for the Westfield Evening News, a daily paper in Westfield, MA. Ability to write clean concise copy in a strict deadline environment a must. Above average wages and benefits. Send resume to: Maria Brazee, General Manager, Westfield News 64 School St. Westfield, MA 01085

EMPLOYMENT

TUTORS/TRANSLATERS !Bilingual/ for part-time, paid assistance during the school day to students speaking Amharic, Bengali, Japanese, Khmer, Korean, Mongolian, Portuguese, Tibetan. Call ESL Office at 413-549-9857. Amherst Public Schools An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

Personal Care Attendent for male quad. Mornings $9.50/hr. Call 546-0666

Part-time phone reps needed for wicked cool candy company located in Amherst. We have two-hour shifts available between 10AM and 5PM. Monday-Friday. You must work a minimum of three shifts per week. Base pay, plus commission on all new sales. Average pay $10-$12/hour with commission included. Must be outgoing with some sales/customer service experience, however, personality is most important. Please contact Beth McCabe for more information: 888-556-5599

Spring 2000 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field--work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary--training provided. Contact the Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center

EMPLOYMENT

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phsically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

Baker/Cook/Customer Service Prepare foods,batters, doughs, recipes. In Village Market. FT/PT PM/Weekends 1 mile from campus. Cushman Village 413-549-1953

DP Dough is hiring drivers and kitchen help. Must be able to work nights. Approxiametly $20/hour. Apply at DP Dough.

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

ENTERTAINMENT

Fridge Rentals - Free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Queen Size Futon For Sale - 1y.o. beautiful fruitwood frame & mattress. Bought for $450. Asking $300 OBO Computer & Printer also for sale $150 each. Call for details Kristin 253-9138

Queen Size Bed with beautiful headset and pillows $200.00 Got to move. Call Antonio at 549-0661

FOR SALE

Skiing and Snowboarding season passes only $300! Stratton and Okemo Call Michael 549-6494

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition triniton. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

LOST & FOUND

Lost Two Garnet Rings One Watch silver + Gold. Near Theater Dept. sentimental value. Please Call 546-3166

LOST CAT: Near Leach, Orange Tabby Please Call 665-9950 Leave Message

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate Wanted to share 1bdrm in 2bdrm apt in Sunderland 15min from campus $365/mo + utilities. Call Paula 413-397-9768

SERVICES

Feeling Ripped Off? Your new car is a lemon; the warranty on your stereo just expired and it needs major repairs; you loaned a friend money and can't get it back; or the dry cleaner ruined your favorite suit! Are dept collectors knocking at your door? Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TICKETS

2 Sold Out Tickets to Phish concert down in Florida on December 30-31. 546-0470

TRAVEL

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

TIME

Before you know it there will be NONE left!!

The semester will be over before you know it....

Look for that apartment NOW!!

Or place an AD and get what you are looking for!!

What are you waiting for??

Call NOW!

545-3500

And place those ads!!

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, OCT. 22

Open Mic – The UMass poetry society is having an open mic at the Crafts Center in the Student Union. Sign-up is from 7:30-8 p.m. and the event will start at 8 p.m.

SATURDAY, OCT. 23

Book Signing– Shirlee Hairlip will discuss and autograph her memoir entitled In the Garden of Our Dreams at 11:30 a.m. at the Jeffery Amherst Bookshop.

Comedy – MISSION IMPROVable will perform their improvisational comedy show at 8 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center. Everyone is welcome.

Forum – There will be an open forum lecture by Walter Porter from 2-4 p.m. in rooms 163-169 of the Campus Center. The lecture is sponsored by the Native American Community at UMass.

Volunteer – Volunteers wanting to help clean up the campus pond as part of Make a Difference Day should meet outside the Bluewall at 9:30 a.m. and will end around 2 p.m. The event is being coordinated by the Massachusetts Community Water Watch.

Lecture –As part of the ninth annual Notices

Art – The Wheeler Gallery will present "Cellblock Visions: Cell Division – Prison Art in America," on display until Nov. 7. The Gallery is located in Central Residential Area.

Art – The Student Union Visual and Performing Art Space will be showing an exhibit of undergraduate artwork, focusing on the self-portrait, until Oct. 29. Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday, 9:30 a.m.-5 p.m.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is now open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops call 545-2096, or stop by the Craft Center.

Support – The Counseling Services Program at the Everywoman's Center is offering a free support group for women living with bipolar disorder on Wednesdays from 5:15-6:45 p.m. There will be four consecutive sessions at the Everywoman's Center in Wilder Hall. Call 545-0663 for more information, or to register.

Support – A grief support group for undergraduate and graduate students is available starting Tuesday, Oct. 27 from 6-7:30 p.m. Telephone prescreening is required. Call 577-5316 or 545-0041 if interested.

MONDAY, OCT.25

Retail Lecture Series, Celia Clancy, Vice-president and Divisional Merchandise Manager for Female Apparel at Wal-Mart stores, Inc., will be speaking at 4 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 22, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12 Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ※		Travel & Leisure Auction						Auction Continues
WFSB	3	3 News ※	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Kids-Darndest	Love & Money	Now and Again (In Stereo) ※		Nash Bridges "High Society" ※		News ※	Late Show ※
WBZ	4	4 News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Kids-Darndest	Love & Money	Now and Again (In Stereo) ※		Nash Bridges "High Society" ※		News ※	Late Show ※
WCVB	5	5 News ※	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ※	Boy-World	Odd Man Out	Sabrina-Witch	Hughleys ※	20/20 ※		News ※	Nightline ※
WLVI	6	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends ※	Nanny ※	Mission Hill ※	Jamie Foxx ※	Steve Harvey	For Your Love	News ※		Friends ※	Nanny ※
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ※	Providence (In Stereo) ※		Dateline (In Stereo) ※		Cold Feet (In Stereo) ※		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV ※	Real TV (R) ※	※※ "Safe House" (1998, Suspense)		Patrick Stewart. ※		News	Caroline	Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra ※	Ent. Tonight	Providence (In Stereo) ※		Dateline (In Stereo) ※		Cold Feet (In Stereo) ※		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons ※	Fraser. ※	Seinfeld ※	Friends ※	Ryan Caulfield: Year One ※		Harsh Realm "Inga Fossa" ※		News ※		Friends ※	Fraser ※
WWLP	22	News ※	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ※	Providence (In Stereo) ※		Dateline (In Stereo) ※		Cold Feet (In Stereo) ※		News ※	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	6 World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ※		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	State We're In	Time Goes By	Chef!	Red Dwarf	Charlie Rose (In Stereo) ※
WGGB	40	29 News ※	ABC News	Seinfeld ※	Frasier ※	Boy-World	Odd Men Out	Sabrina-Witch	Hughleys ※	20/20 ※		News ※	Nightline ※
WSBK	38	Judge Judy ※	Judge Judy ※	Seinfeld ※	Frasier ※	※※ "Safe House" (1998, Suspense)		Patrick Stewart. ※		Star Trek: Voyager "Gravity" ※		Behind Data	Rickl Lake ※
WTBS	72	Roseanne ※	Roseanne ※	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	※※½ "Monstruck" (1987, Comedy) Cher, Nicolas Cage						※※½ "The Secret of My Success" (1987)
A&E	51	Simon & Simon		Law & Order "Doubles" ※		Biography: Leonard Nimoy		Investigative Reports ※		Sherlock Holmes Mysteries (R)		Law & Order "Survivor" ※
CNN	29	23 Worldview ※	Moneyline Newshour ※		Crossfire ※	World Today ※		Larry King Live ※		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline ※
COM	35	30 Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	※※½ "Ghostbusters II" (1989, Comedy) Bill Murray, Dan Aykroyd.					Saturday Night Live ※		Sat. Night Live
DISC	52	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery "Snakelita" (R)		On the Inside "St. Louis Arch"		News		Discover Mag.	Storm Warning! (R)	On the Inside "St. Louis Arch"
ESPN	31	Sportscenter		Up Close	World Series	NHL Hockey: Philadelphia Flyers at New York Rangers. (Live) ※						Sportscenter ※
LIFE	62	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Chicago Hope (In Stereo) ※		※※ "With Murder in Mind" (1992, Drama) Elizabeth Montgomery.				Once and Again (In Stereo) ※
MTV	53	Global Groove	MTV Jams	True Life (R)	News	TRL (R) (In Stereo)			Say What Kyra	Say What Kyra	Say What Kyra	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	55	All That	Catdog	Doug ※	Angry Beavers	Rugrats ※	All That	Bredy Bunch	I Love Lucy	Jeffersons ※	Sanford & Son	All In Family	Maude ※
SCIFI	63	Hercules: Legendary Journ.		Poltergeist: The Legacy ※		Farscape "Throne for a Loss" ※		Sliders "New Gods for Old" ※		First Wave "Hypnotic" (R) ※		Poltergeist: The Legacy (R) ※
TLC	97	26 Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours (R)		Incredible Ocean Rescues		Tobacco Wars: Smoked Out		Johnson Tapes (R)		Incredible Ocean Rescues (R)
TNT	45	Dua South (In Stereo) ※		ER "Blizzard" (In Stereo) ※		NBA Preseason Basketball: Warriors vs. Heat or Suns						NBA Preseason Basketball
USA	42	Baywatch "Sweet Dreams" ※		JAG "Yesterday's Heroes" ※		Walker, Texas Ranger ※		"EVOLUTION'S CHILD" (1999, Drama) Keri Olin, Jacob Smith ※				"Necessary Roughness" (1991)
HBO	46	5:15) "Practical Magic" (1998)		Inside the NFL (In Stereo) ※		Boxing: Hamed vs. Soto and Morales vs. McCullough				D.L. Hughley: Going Home ※		Chris Rock
MAX	48	※※½ "Benny's Wedding" (1990, Comedy) Alan Alda. ※				"I Married a Stranger Person!"		Rats-Roaches		※※ "Lethal Weapon 4" (1998, Action) Mel Gibson, ※			Peewee's Playhouse
SHOW	49	(5:00) "Whitta" ※※½ "Barney's Great Adventure" (1998) ※				"In a Class of His Own" (1999, Drama) ※			Mike Tyson	Stargate SG-1	Outer Limits "Essence of Life"	Total Recall

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Govel to Govel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN1/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

Joe Banana! By JD Schneider

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

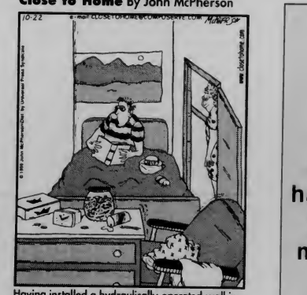
Dilbert By Scott Adams

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Wheel By Clay Weatherford

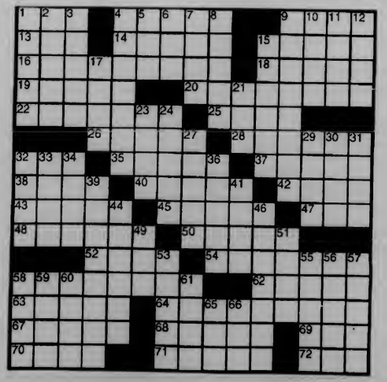
Wheel By Clay Weatherford

Horoscopes



Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – A positive outlook is essential today. Your attitude can make the difference in how a situation is resolved at this time.
Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Business affairs are likely to produce surprising gains today, but you won't know the true effects on your lifestyle for some time to come.
Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Different strokes for different folks, and today you'll have an opportunity that is only for you. You mustn't expect others to understand.
Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Don't deny the irresistible urge to relax today. You absolutely deserve some time to yourself to fuel up for what lies ahead.
Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You don't want to be late for anything, especially today! There are many who depend upon you for your influence and your impeccable timing.
Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – You must be quick on your feet today or you might miss your chance. You'll be a winner as long as you take advantage of current opportunities.
Aries (March 21-April 19) – Don't be so blunt when giving advice today that you turn a friend out of you for some time. It's not what you say, but how you say it.
Taurus (April 20-May 20) – Take each moment as it comes today. Don't try to prepare too much for analyzing and plotting it all out may backfire on you later on.
Gemini (May 21-June 20) – This is a good day for hitting the road, provided you've got a firm destination in mind. Bring yourself up-to-date on another's affairs.
Cancer (June 21-July 22) – This is a good day for you to bring all your talents to bear, especially when someone in authority looks to you to take on a new responsibility.
Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – You are in need of a little more information today before you put the pieces of a complex puzzle into place. Some secret investigation is necessary.
Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You may have to make a choice today that will affect your financial stability in the near future. Be sure that you are not being rash.

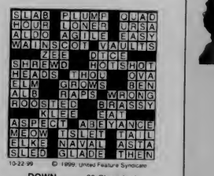
Quote of the Day



"You cannot take me down, you can show me your home. Not the place that you live, but the place that you belong."

–"Something to Say" Toad the Wet Sprocket

Close to Home By John McPherson



Having installed a hydraulically operated wall in their 25-year-old's bedroom, the Fullers hoped to coax him into moving out on his own.

ACROSS
1 Opening
4 Break
9 Be a model
13 Genetic material
14 Dud
15 Give it to a waiter
16 Miss Manners' field
18 Baseball's Guerrero
19 Worker's reward
20 Ovals
22 Give a name to
25 Type of moth
26 Rings
28 Furry pet
32 Woodworking tool
35 Passager
37 Paris river
38 Electronic reminder
40 Cygnus star
42 Statistics
43 British nobles
45 Like a judge
47 Relative
48 Group of actors
50 Emulated
Queen Elizabeth
52 Polite address
54 Gaits
58 Summer attire
62 "Aida" composer
63 Sheik's household
64 Listlessness
67 Mine entrances
68 Diva's melodies
69 Soviet fighter
70 Show disapproval
71 Direction
72 Witness

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

DOWN
1 Diving bird
2 Writer Chekhov
3 Use a brush
4 Bunch
5 Female sandpiper
6 Oily
7 Sheepfold
8 Toll
9 Got ready
10 Track figures
11 Dried-up
12 God of love
15 Hazards a guess
17 Smart remark
21 Tote
23 Deposited
24 Church official
27 Mexican mister
29 Favoritism
30 Division word
31 Tilt
32 Help a hood
33 Cherished
34 Zilch
36 Picture puzzle
39 Falls suddenly
41 Wear it on your waist
44 Tics
46 Whirling —
49 Water, for Pierre
51 Eat to rose
53 La Scala city
55 Some instruments
56 Fisher or Albert
57 Attack on a castle
58 Deposed Iranian
59 Dry riverbed
60 Spring flower
61 Edible root
65 Gabbiadi's address
66 Took a load off

As you may have deduced, there is no menu today...)

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Ken McDonald
Photo Technitian — Becky "Berserker" Reddick
Copy Editor — I'd Sam Dudley
Production Staff — "Coulk" Basque, Lovee "Cinder Block" Gorg, "Screwy" Janine Tangney, "Hack-Saw" Jim Gilbert

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Friday, October 22, 1999

UMass hockey set to play a pair

Minutemen to host No. 1 BC tomorrow night

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

What better way for the Massachusetts hockey team to open up the home portion of its 1999-2000 schedule than by welcoming the No. 1 team in the country to the William D. Mullins Center tomorrow night at 7 p.m.

The Minutemen will square off against Boston College in a Hockey East matchup in their second game of the weekend tomorrow night (WMUA, 91.1 FM). First on the slate, though, is a trip to Boston tonight for a 7 p.m. showdown with Northeastern University.

HOCKEY
UMASS VS. BC
SATURDAY, 7:00 PM
91.1 FM-WMUA
MIKE KOBYLANSKI-PLAY
JAMES MURPHY- COLOR
SCHEDULE
PREVIEW

UMass (10-1) is coming off a tough 3-2 loss to Colgate in its season opener last Saturday night. Despite 34 saves from junior goaltender Markus Helanen, the Maroon and White came up a goal short.

"We were outplayed by them, but we never gave up. If you get outplayed, though, and manage to hang on and only lose 3-2, then that's a good sign," UMass sophomore defenseman Toni Soderholm said. "Playing a non-conference game to start the season is a very good idea, because you aren't going to be playing at your total ability level in the first few games."

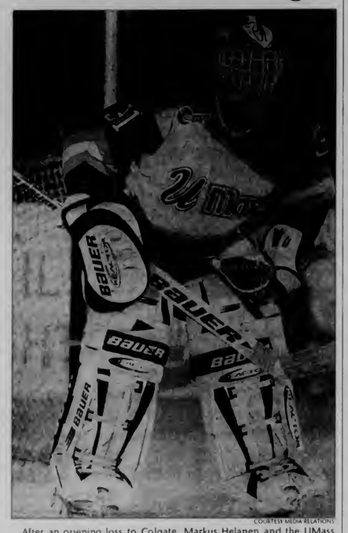
The Maroon and White will face the real deal this weekend in a pair of Hockey East rivals. Northeastern is expected to drastically improve upon their last-place finish from a year ago, while BC is a contender for both the HE and national titles.

"We've got Northeastern on Friday and BC on Saturday. That's going to be a good stepping stone for us," UMass senior captain Nathan Sell said.

Northeastern opened their season last Saturday night at Matthews Arena in Boston with a 4-1 victory over Bowling Green. Freshman forward Mike Ryan had two goals to pace the offense for the Huskies in the winning effort.

Overall, the Huskies will be led by seniors Billy Newson and Roger Holeczy, along with Todd Barclay.

Tomorrow night UMass will host BC in what should be another emotional game between the two squads. Last time the Eagles and the Minutemen locked horns at Conte Forum in Chestnut Hill, BC rallied from a 4-2 deficit with five minutes to go and pulled out a 5-4 overtime win.



One of the big reasons why BC won that game was because of their fans, who helped pick the team up late in regulation. This time around the Minutemen are hoping for a big turnout so that they can return the favor to the Eagles.

"BC could be the No. 1 team in the nation, but UNH and Maine can't be that far behind," said UMass hockey coach Joe Mallen at Hockey East Media Day. "It's a logjam [at the top of the conference]."

Leading the way for the Eagles will be forwards Brian Gionta [two-time All-American], Jeff Farkas and Blake Bellefuille. Goaltender Scott Clemmensen is also solid between the pipes for Boston College.

"Our strength is from the blue line back...but we have three dominant forwards in Gionta, Farkas and Bellefuille," said BC coach Jerry York at HE Media Day. "Basically we have the same club as last year, but with more maturity. We have a chance to be one of the top five or six teams in the country."

On the UMass side of things, Helanen will lead the way in goal. Forwards Sell, Jeff Blanchard and Jeff Turner will be the key offensive threats for the Minutemen.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

After an opening loss to Colgate, Markus Helanen and the UMass hockey team open up their Hockey East season, hosting Northeastern and Boston College this weekend at the Mullins Center.

Seniors play out careers in front of Totman crowd

by Matt Crocker
Collegian Staff

There is a saying that applies to college life and the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team: it goes "you can't go home again," and it is relevant to this upcoming Friday and Sunday which will mark the Minutemen's final two contests at Totman Field this season.

However, there is another saying that goes, "Home sweet home," and that is certainly true since the Maroon and White have only dropped one game at home this whole season as they go into the weekend 10-5, and 5-2 in the Atlantic 10. This marks only the 10th time in the history of soccer at UMass has won 10 or more games in a single season and the seventh time that they have accomplished this feat with their current head coach Sam Koch.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Adam Black

UMass is one of six teams that are in contention for one of fours slots in the post season A-10 tournament. Yet amongst that field of competition UMass beat one, was beaten, and has not played the reaming three other teams.

One of those teams, La Salle University, the Minutemen will meet on today. La Salle will reach UMass with a 7-6 on the season with 4-3 Atlantic 10 record. Currently on a two game losing streak, the Explorers lost to both Temple and St. Joseph's University last weekend, both of which the Minutemen have defeated this season. The last time La Salle faced off against UM, the Maroon and White left the field the victor and currently lead the all-time series 4-1 against the Explorers, claiming the last four games between the two schools.

Also looking across the center circle at UMass this weekend will be Fordham University. Fordham has been unable to post any incredible numbers this season. The Rams have not so much butted heads with the competition this season as have had the ball rammed down their own throats as they continue to search for their first win this weekend. Holding a record of 0-16 with seven losses in the Atlantic 10, Fordham stands last in the conference.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Fred Kinateder

Although not tallying many points this season, the Rams, however, have amassed a fine collection of yellow cards. It would not seem to be the case judging by its performance this season, but Fordham has a 3-1 advantage on the Minutemen in series history. The Minutemen's only win came last year, also the Rams first visit to Totman Field.

Although with what appears to be meager competition and a win likely, it will not be the only major occurrence at Totman Field on Sunday. Sunday is also Senior Day as it will be the last time its six senior Minutemen take the field in front of its home crowd. Leading point man and goal scorer, Adam Black, team captain and goalkeeper Todd Fowler, Todd Baron, Jonathan Bibb, James Redmond, and Jon Bur will be honored for their years at UMass with a ceremony before the Fordham match on Sunday. It will be a special close to their UMass soccer careers reminiscent of the old adage "Home is where the heart is."

ECAC supremacy on line as UM water polo heads to Providence

By Matty Bencal
Collegian Staff

The No. 16 Massachusetts men's water polo team will leave Amherst this weekend in hopes of returning with another Eastern Conference Athletic Conference (ECAC) Championship. Providence, RI, sets the stage to determine who is the best in the East, and the Minutemen, who look to capture their sixth conference title in the past seven years, are once again a team with a mark on its back.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Pat Kain

Bucknell, looking to upset the Minutemen in the first round of the 1999 ECAC championship, will bring everything they have hidden up their sleeve. UM handily defeated Bucknell in earlier in the month, 9-5, at the Princeton Invitational in New Jersey. The biggest threat to Minutemen's hopes this weekend is the No. 13 St. Francis Terriers, who won the regular season series, 3-1.

Last year at the tournament, UM battled relentlessly in the first round against Princeton. With the score tied at sixes and no time remaining, the Minutemen defeated the Tigers in a heated overtime nail-biter. Two men who played integral roles in the game, Gabriel Marrero and Brian Stahl, accounted for four goals in the game, but have since departed due to graduation.

The Minutemen went on to manhandle Navy in the next round, 8-3. UM, with four scores in the second quarter, took a 5-1 lead into the half and never looked back.

The St. Francis Terriers took the pool for the final game, standing in the way of the Minuteman's 1998 ECAC championship hopes. With UM down, 5-2, at the end of the half, St. Francis had the ball in their court. Carlos Ramos fired four to the back of the net, and with two more by Timmy Troupis, the offense was able to generate enough firepower to capture the win. Seven Maroon and White goals in the second half against just four from the Terriers proved to be the difference, and with this remarkable second half comeback, the 1998 squad followed the suit of its predecessors.

This season's UMass squad is similar in many respects. Many critics said that the '99 squad, with the loss of Stahl and Marrero, would not be able to produce the kind of offense necessary to rise to the prominence that has always accompanied coach Russ Yarworth's squads. But the offense proved critics wrong, showing that any

Turn to polo, page 11

UMass women's soccer team hits road; will play A-10 duo in La Salle, Fordham

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Heading into the final two weekends of the 1999 season, it is ironic that every one of the schools in the Atlantic 10 conference has a chance to make the league tournament.

Of course, one of the teams who appears to have the upper hand on one of the four spots is the Massachusetts women's soccer team, who will host the tournament at Totman Field on Nov. 5-7. UMass [8-3-1 overall] enters this weekend with a 6-1 mark in the A-10, good enough to tie them for first place with Dayton.

The Minutewomen will look to take another step closer towards ensuring a bid over the next three days when they hit the road to face La Salle and Fordham. Both of those teams sit in the middle of the pack in the conference, and will be looking to make their move towards a spot of their own in important games against UMass.

"This is going to be a tough weekend. We have some questions as to who we are after our lousy game against Dayton on Sunday," UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "Dayton had a pressing, physical defense, and from what I understand, we may see more of that this weekend from La Salle and Fordham."

"Right now every team has a shot at the tournament. This is the first time that I can ever recall this happening," added Rudy. "Some teams need to win all four games, and others just a few, but everyone is still in it."

The first game on the slate will be against La Salle on Friday afternoon at 3 p.m. It will be the second trip to Philadelphia for UMass this season, who are hoping to duplicate the results of their first trek.

Back on Oct. 1 and 3 in the City of Brotherly Love, the Minutewomen came away with a pair of wins. They swept Temple [4-2] and St. Joseph's [5-1], and want to start this weekend off on the right foot against the Explorers.

La Salle enters the weekend with a 6-7 record, 3-4 in the Atlantic 10. Needless to say, today's game will be of huge importance to the Philadelphia school if they want to earn a spot in the A-10 tourney.

"From the scouting report we've got, La Salle is physical as hell," Rudy said.

After the La Salle contest, UMass will board the bus and head to the Bronx to battle the Rams. In past years the Minutewomen have walked all over the New York school, but things could be different this time around.

"Fordham has a back line that is very strong, and hard to break," Rudy said. "They've been in every game so far this year, win or loss."

The Rams have struggled to score goals as a result of an anemic offensive attack. Corinne Jankowski leads the squad with 14 points (four goals, six assists), while Meghan Rogers is

Turn to soccer, page xx

Revenge on mind of surging UM football

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

This Saturday's matchup with the Delaware Blue Hens will go a long way into determining the fate of this year's Massachusetts football team.

Last season, the Minutemen began the Mark Whipple era in Delaware by coming a dropped touchdown short of an astronomical upset, 33-30. The exciting finish of that game was indicative of things to come. The coach then led his team, which won only two of 11 games the previous year, to several last minute victories en route to the school's first national title on the gridiron.

The loss to the Blue Hens made a statement around the nation: UMass can play ball with the best of them. And they have continued to do so.

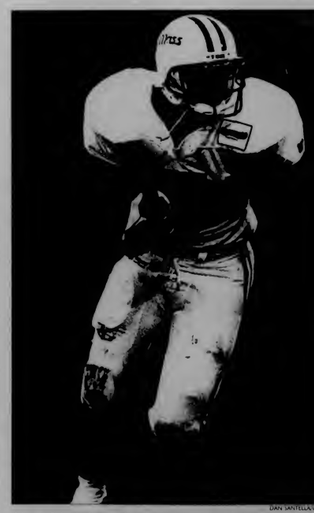
This time around, there is no 2-9 record to lull the powerful Delaware team to sleep, but rather an NCAA Division I-AA Championship for the Hens to envy.

Like last year, though, a lot rides on this game.

The Minutemen, who are only .500 overall this year, need a victory to remain strongly in the running for a playoff spot. Not only would a loss on Saturday drop UMass to a dangerous 3-4 on the season, but it would make the task of riding an Atlantic 10 title into the tournament significantly more difficult, leaving Massachusetts an unspectacular 3-2 in the conference. The winner of the A-10, as in every league, gets an automatic bid to the postseason field.

A Minuteman win, however, would put the squad in great shape for the final stretch, A 4-1 conference mark would leave UMass, if not in the top spot in the A-10, then tantalizingly close, depending on how 5-0 James Madison fares hosting Connecticut this weekend.

It would also give Massachusetts its first win over a ranked opponent in its third try. The Minutemen dropped decisions against Villanova and Hofstra.



Perhaps most importantly, however, UMass would then be riding a three-game winning streak into the final portion of their schedule, which includes games with perennially tough Richmond and UConn. A week ago, the Maroon and White topped the conference's top defense in Maine, 38-17, and seven days earlier they trounced the A-10's No. 1 offense by beating Northeastern, 77-0.

A loss would knock the Hens down to 2-2 in the league, and would leave them behind the conference leader by as many as six games with only four contests to go.

If the past is any indication, however, Saturday's battle will be uphill for the Minutemen.

"We have won one time in the history of UMass football at Delaware," Whipple said. "We certainly did not get it done when we played there last year. They are still the number one defense in our conference. They are the number one rushing defense. I do not see any

Turn to football, page 11

DAN SANTELLI/COLLEGIAN

Marcel Shipp's 256-yard, two-touchdown in the Minutemen's 38-17 at Maine earned him The Sports Network National Offensive Player of the Week honors.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 11 — Monday, October 25, 1999

Ex-basketball players file $15 million suit against UM

By Andrea M. Peers
Collegian Staff

Three former University of Massachusetts women's basketball players have filed a $15 million lawsuit against their coach, Joanie O'Brien, and the University, charging the defendants with physical abuse, emotional abuse, harassment, and sexual discrimination.

The lawsuit was filed on Oct. 14 by the three players who are involved in the case, along with the support of their parents.

Kara Trent, Nicole Vallieres, and Tory Grant are asking for $5 million each. They claim that coach O'Brien's behavior and coaching style violates the Code of National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) regulations, rules under the Coaches' Code of Conduct terms, and Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972.

In addition to O'Brien and the University, other defendants in the lawsuit include Daniel McBride, the team physician, Kathy Boyd, the team's athletic trainer, Robert Marcum, the athletic director at UMass, University President William Bulger, and University Chancellor David K. Scott.

The NCAA constitution requires responsibility for control, health and safety, positive student/athlete/coach relationships, fairness and honesty, cultural diversity and gender equity, and an overall educational experience, none of which were followed or regulated, according to the former players' lawyer, Brian J. Woolf.

"My clients believe that Coach O'Brien's style is way beyond any reasonable coaching style," Woolf said. "The physical and emotional abuse of my clients is a disgrace."

All three women went through similar recruiting processes with the University, and were selected by Coach O'Brien and her staff to play on the 1997-1998 season. According to Trent, she received a letter including statements such as, "I hope you realize how serious we are about you becoming part of the UMass Family." Grant and Vallieres received the same letters.

Trent, now an undergraduate at UMass, began her relationship with the University in November 1995, when she played basketball for her high school in her hometown of Sandwich. Trent has a record of awards and accomplishments, including being named Atlantic Coast League All-Star from 1994-1997, Cape All-Star from 1994-1997, All Scholastic from 1994-1997, Team MVP from 1996-1997, and Boston Globe All-Scholastic. During high school, Trent was in the National Honor Society, and held a 4.0 GPA.

After being selected by O'Brien for the women's team, Trent received a $25,000 full athletic scholarship.

Vallieres came into contact with O'Brien while attending a basketball camp at UMass during eighth grade. Vallieres also played for her high school team, where she received the All-Western Massachusetts Team Award. She led her team in assists and rebounds. In 1996, Vallieres was offered to play on the UMass team and, according to her statements, Coach O'Brien congratulated her and said she was now "part of their family." Vallieres also received a $23,000 athletic scholarship.

Grant, a native of Somerville, N.J., was the top-ranked player on her high school team in 1996. Grant first attended Seton Hall University before she was recruited for the UMass basketball team as a transfer student in 1997. According to NCAA rules, Grant, as a transfer, would not be able to participate during the first season. At that time, Grant was told by Assistant Coach Jill Rooney that "UMass had wanted her badly then, and still wants her badly now."

Grant accepted the offer, and also received a scholarship.

All three women had similar experiences with Coach O'Brien once on the team – experiences that, according to their lawyer, did not fit with the picture they had of the "UMass family."

"Coach O'Brien has misrepresented herself and the University about what her goals were to recruit each one of my clients," Woolf said.

According to statements given by all three women, the problems with O'Brien began shortly after they joined the team. In particular, all three girls report O'Brien cursing, swearing insults or obscenities, pushing, shoving, violently striking and hitting players, along with harassing, intimidating and degrading other teammates.

Trent and Grant both had severe medical conditions, which they claim were ignored or disregarded as unimportant by both O'Brien and the trainers. In addition to treatment for medical problems, all three players said they were currently seeking counseling due to their problems with O'Brien.

During the 1997-1998 season, Trent was playing with a

Turn to BASKETBALL page 3

BARBARA BRADBURY/ COLLEGIAN

The Sting
The Asian American Students Association (AASA) hosted a Casino Night in the Campus Center Auditorium Friday night.

Lounge debate continues unresolved

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

Debate on renovating the Field Residence Hall lounge in the Orchard Hill Residential Area into a classroom continues as discouraged students sign petitions against such plans, and administrators address the controversy with conflicting statements.

In response to fliers and comments posted by Michael Whitehouse, Orchard Hill at-large senator, last week, over 150 students signed petitions against converting the area. The senator said he has spoken to many students in the area and that they do not want the one place where they can socially gather to be taken from them.

"My key problem is that Student Honors has repeatedly pulled the wool over the eyes of the Orchard Hill residents. I'm fed up with Honors doing things to the students and not for the students," Whitehouse said.

The situation was addressed at a meeting of the Student Government Association (SGA) last week. Jeff Howe, SGA president, told the Senate that Housing has no intentions of eliminating the lounge. Whitehouse responded to this statement by explaining that he had been in contact with Facilities Planning, and that they confirmed in him that such construction was under consideration.

Last year, when the Commonwealth College developed learning communities in the area of Orchard Hill, they identified what additional programming needs they had. This list consisted of more space for meetings and classes, which brought to light changing the Field lounge space into a classroom. To comply with the demands of the Commonwealth College and building code, staff from Facilities Planning started considering a variety of ideas, which included looking at the current classrooms located in Grayson and Field Residence Halls.

A building inspector, upon investigation of the area, discovered that recent fire, safety code problems could force the classrooms to be relocated. Facilities Planning sent staff members to the first floor of Field Residence Hall, but has made no decision on whether the area will be changed.

"The staff from Campus Facilities Planning is surveying space in Orchard Hill, including Field Hall, to assess what facilities work can be done to address a variety of program and space needs," Michael Gilbert, director of housing services said. "At this point, it's just a rumor. It is still in the data stage. We are a long way away from a decision on whether the Field lounge will be converted into a classroom."

In addition, Gilbert said that students would be talked to before any decision is confirmed. Linda Solan, Interim Dean of Commonwealth College, also said student feedback would be sought before any final decisions are made, reaffirming that nothing has currently been decided.

"At this time there has been no final decision made on the relocation of these classrooms, or which space would satisfy building codes and programmatic needs," Solan said.

Whitehouse is concerned that the administration will act before consulting with students.

"Just based on Commonwealth College's past, I don't have much faith on how much [impact] student input is going to have," Whitehouse said.

Students living in Grayson/Field are concerned about having their lounge altered. Some said that turning the lounge into a classroom will prevent Sweets 'N More and Orchard Hill Area Government (OHAG) from successfully continuing business. They don't want the atmosphere to change, and feel that creating this classroom will isolate Sweets and the OHAG office.

"I'm definitely 100% against it because it will endanger Sweets 'N More and OHAG. It will take away social space from Field and Grayson," said sophomore resident Pat Walsh. "The change will hurt the Orchard Hill residents more than it will benefit the rest of campus."

Some students are questioning the need for a new classroom, considering there are classrooms in both Webber and Dickinson Residence Halls. Darlene unclear on the reasons Facilities Planning has behind creating a new classroom, and want to voice their opinions on changes being made to where they live.

"It's still a struggle to find out who's telling the truth," Brett Constantin, freshmen Commonwealth College student said. "We're hearing differing stories at different times. I think it's good that as this continues forward, students are getting involved and being heard. Communication on this campus is poor."

Quick fix for parking lot problem

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

In order to curb the parking problem in the purple lot near the Orchard Hill Residential Area, University of Massachusetts students, Parking Services and the Orchard Hill Area Government (OHAG) have decided to enforce 24-hour, weekday parking regulations for all purple lots in that area.

The decision came after nitved feelings were expressed at a meeting held in the residential area two weeks ago.

As an immediate solution, it was agreed upon by Parking Services to enforce parking 24 hours a day on weekdays to help curb yellow sticker-holders from parking there during the evening or non-restricted hours.

However, sophomore political science major John Sheehan, lieutenant governor of Orchard Hill, said this decision will be an immediate solution, but more needs to be done to make it a permanent solution.

"I think it'll do a lot of good to mitigate a lot of the parking problems in Orchard Hill and Central," Sheehan said. "But I'm not sure if it's enough, and further measures must be taken."

He said when he distributed flyers about the original meeting, he spoke with students in the area about the issue. According to Sheehan, there wasn't a single person who was against the lot. This reaction surprised him because he said most of the people at the meeting were opposed to a new lot.

"I think what people need to know is that both sides of the issue need to show up to the meetings for us to reach an enlightened decision," Sheehan said.

The grass next to Grayson Residence Hall has been used as a parking lot since the beginning of the semester. Parking Services has considered paving the lot, but no consensus has been reached on the issue.

Sheehan fears that if a decision isn't made soon, the ground will freeze up, preventing them from paving the lot this semester.

However, students like junior political science major Mark Griffin, wouldn't mind seeing the ground freeze over because he said he is against the idea of making a new parking lot.

"At the end of the year, unless [Parking Services] can come up with another provision, they're going to sell more stickers, and we're going to have sixty more people with stickers trying to find spots," Griffin said.

He said with these extra spaces, the main concentration of students who would be given parking stickers for these new spaces would most likely be from Orchard Hill. He feels that the long-term solution to the problem is to control the number of stickers given out to each purple sticker lot, a method he calls lot-specific parking.

"You have two solutions to the problem that negate the need for something [as] permanent as a parking lot that would only solve the problem till the end of the year," Griffin said.

A meeting between students, OHAG and Parking Services is set for later this week to discuss a solution to the parking problem.

Students make difference in area cleanup

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

On a weekend when individuals across the nation gathered in an attempt to make a difference, students at UMass got together to do their part.

Saturday was the ninth annual National Make a Difference Day, and UMass students did everything from petitioning to decrease the use of pesticides in public schools to cleaning up the UMass campus pond.

Meg Gray, MassPIRG's campus organizer, was responsible for overseeing a group of students who were getting signatures in support of the Children's Protection Act. The act would limit the use of pesticides in classrooms and on public school grounds.

Any pesticide classified as carcinogenic by the Environmental Protection Agency would be banned by the act. Teachers and parents would also be granted the right to be notified when and where pesticides were going to be used.

Gray's group got 1,800 signatures over the weekend in support of the Children's Protection Act.

"At UMass, we've now gotten 8,500 signatures altogether," Gray said. "We sent out 18 volunteers to five different towns around the area, and we were able to get our weekend goal."

Maleah Thorpe, the Community Service Coordinator with the UMass Office of Community Service Leaning at the Commonwealth College, said the weekend went very well for her group of volunteers as well.

"One group actually wanted to stay a lot longer than they were supposed to," Thorpe said. "When the van arrived, they wanted to keep working."

Thorpe herself visited worksites in Easthampton, and in Northampton's Florence section. Workers at both places were working to repair the locations. In

Turn to CLEANUP page 2

BARBARA BRADBURY/ COLLEGIAN

Sandra Elia, a UMass student, helps with the MASS Community Water Watch pond clean-up. This activity was part of Make a Difference Day on Saturday, October 23rd.

Experts worry about Y2K dangers

By Elizabeth Shogren and Bob Drogin
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – America's computer systems may survive this New Year's Eve just fine, but some U.S. intelligence officials and security consultants are worried about a threat that may linger long after the Year 2000 bug has come and gone.

Experts are expressing increasing confidence that critical computer systems in government agencies and private corporations will withstand the primary Y2K challenge – the transition from Dec. 31, 1999 to Jan. 1, 2000.

But key officials at the White House, Pentagon, and national intelligence agencies, along with private consultants who are paid to make systems more secure, warn that the billions of dollars spent to fix the millennium glitch may have left U.S. computers vulnerable to a more insidious threat. Some of the people hired to make computer programs Y2K-compliant, including foreign contractors, may have deliberately infected them with hostile programming codes.

"The use of untested foreign sources for Y2K remediation has created a unique opportunity for foreign countries or companies to access and disrupt sensitive national security and proprietary information systems," wrote Terril D. Maynard, a CIA analyst at the National Infrastructure Protection Center, in a recently published unclas-

Turn to Y2K page 2

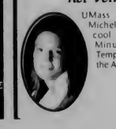
Extended Forecast

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 56 LOW: 32	HIGH: 60 LOW: 36	HIGH: 56 LOW: 38



XXX's in NYC
A Ku Klux Klan rally in NYC, an African funeral saga, and a calendar of upcoming fun events. All brought to you by Black Affairs on page 5.

PAGE 5

Days of Luna
The CD comes out tomorrow, but we've got the review today. Check out our look at Luna's latest Days of Our Nights, as well as a review of one of this weekend's new movies, Three to Tango. All in today's Arts.

ARTS PAGE 6

Ice water in her veins
UMass senior goalkeeper Michelle Crooks remained cool under fire as the Minutewomen crushed Temple yesterday to claim the A-10 season crown.

SPORTS PAGE 10

Arts & Living 6
Comics 9
Diversity 5
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Hall receptionists face problems

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

One of the most routine parts of coming home to a residence hall – holding the door open for the next person – can become a legal hassle. Security Supervisor Michael Rucks said student safety on campus is one of his top priorities. But according to Rucks, many students aren't aware of the legal issues behind signing or letting strangers into the building.

"These kids are just trying to beat the system," Rucks said. "It is a problem because the police use these logs to solve crimes, and it's important for students to sign in for their safety and everyone's safety."

Rucks said he often observes students signing in people they don't know. The student who signed the guest in is responsible for what the person does.

"For them to prop open doors and let people they don't know into the building is putting the entire building in danger," Rucks said.

Rucks drives around campus when he's on duty, attending to door alarms or problems with guests signing in. He said he is mainly called to a scene because a guest isn't carrying any kind of identification.

"Some of them come to the campus who don't have I.D.s, and their friends don't tell them to bring it," Rucks said.

The guest policy states that only four guests can be signed in by a student each night. However, students manage to get the extra guests into the building by propping side doors open.

Rucks compared the dorm issue to the way students would treat guests in their own homes.

"Students should treat dorms like their homes," Rucks said. "Students don't leave their home unlocked or let people they don't know into their house, so why should they let strangers into their dorm?"

According to Rucks, a job as a security receptionist is not easy. He said receptionists take a lot of abuse from students, and the issue should be recognized. His office has begun giving out awards to receptionists who have been in their positions for four years.

Rucks runs background checks on all students who apply to be security receptionists. He said there are 300 total receptionists this semester, and each night about 45 will be assigned to residence halls.

"They do a heck of a good job," Rucks said.

As the Head Student Security Supervisor, senior Ryan Connolly, a history and sociology major, attested to the difficulty of his job. In any given night, Connolly will deal with hazards such as objects thrown from residence hall windows.

"Our biggest physical hazard is falling objects from dorm room windows," Connolly said. "[Objects like] coke bottles, eggs, even fire extinguishers. Once I saw a bathroom stall door flying out, but luckily it didn't hit anybody."

Besides these hazards, he said he continually witnesses students attempting to get into buildings without proper identification. In addition, most color-coded stickers on student I.D.s have been falling off the cards.

Every security receptionist has access to a list of residents in the building. If a student doesn't have a proper I.D., he or she can be cross-referenced with the list. However, Connolly said these lists have been continually changing, and many students who may have just moved into a building may not be on the list, nor will they have a sticker. Security can take action if a student does not have proper identification.

"We have the basic right to refuse entry to any student without their I.D.," Connolly said. "People are usually okay with it."

At approximately 12:30 a.m. on Saturday morning, a group of students attempted to enter John Quincy Adams Residence Hall without showing proper identification.

Around 12:35 a.m., sophomore marketing major Alexandra Lasky attempted to re-enter John Quincy Adams without signing in again with the receptionist.

"If you've signed in once for the night that should be enough," Lasky said. "They shouldn't make you sign in again."

Rucks said he appreciates the number of problems that a receptionist deals with on any night and believes they deserve recognition for the hard work they do.

"I appreciate the job they do and the hours they work and the sacrifices they make on a weekend to make sure that people are safe," Rucks said.

Dorm security breaches common

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

News Analysis

An assault occurred on Oct. 18 in a residence hall on the Michigan State University campus following a breach in security. The main entrance of the residence hall was left propped open. A female resident left her dorm room door unlocked and a man entered her room at about 5 a.m. while she slept, MSU police officer Detective Tony Willis said in a StateNews article.

The man attacked her and threatened to kill her before beating her and leaving the room. The man has not been identified.

The security issue impacting the MSU campus may be hitting close to home for some University of Massachusetts students.

All too often, students can admit to having propped open doors for strangers that they didn't think lived in the building. However, if students will not observe the security policies themselves, it becomes a problem for receptionists like freshman pre-psychology major Christina Caton.

"They look at us more as authority members than their own peers," Caton said. "They'll do anything possible to avoid security, either by walking past us or waiting until we're gone."

Sophomore psychology major Allicyn Baker expressed strong feelings about student security.

"There's two types of security people: they either do nothing and don't care and then there's others like Captain America," Baker said. "They chase you around flashing their badges and asking you 'where's your I.D.?'"

A communications major, who wishes to remain anonymous, said he works for security and has been able to get past security before.

"I've gotten into John Adams three or four times without showing my I.D. and I've also signed guests into John Adams," he said. "I don't even live there."

Doing this "just for fun," he said he has also gotten into Patterson Residence Hall twice and Brett Residence Hall once.

On Saturday night, a Collegian reporter went through parts of campus attempting to get into residence halls without showing any form of identification.

At approximately 8:41 p.m., the reporter attempted to get into Coolidge Residence Hall without showing any I.D. The security receptionist denied access. The reporter then attempted to go in through a back entrance, but the other entrance was also heavily guarded by security.

There was no security in John Quincy Adams or Washington Residence Halls as of around 9 p.m.

An attempt to get into Pierpont Residence Hall around 9:15 was successful, and the Resident Assistant (RA) on duty said the receptionist had just gotten there and was busy setting up.

Around 9:20 p.m., the reporter attempted to enter Moore Residence Hall but was stopped by security. Another student, who wishes to remain anonymous, was signing her boyfriend in. She was asked to sign the reporter in as a guest but she refused stating, "I would have been taking full responsibility [for] you if I had."

Continuing on to the Northeast Residential Area, the Collegian reporter was able to get into every residence hall in the area between 11:30 p.m. and 12:30 a.m. There were no security receptionists in any of the buildings between these times.

A junior student from Leach, who wishes to remain anonymous, said she has a restraining order against someone, and that there hasn't been any security in her building.

"When I told security, they told me that we're not a high priority building," she said.

However, she said the restraining order was issued when she was living in Brett Residence Hall, and she has since moved to Leach Residence Hall where it is no longer official. She said she doesn't feel safe, regardless of the legal issue behind the restraining order.

In the Sylvan Residential Area, the reporter was also able to get into all three buildings in the area; there was no security in either of the buildings between 12:30 a.m. and 1 a.m.

In the Central Residential Area, the reporter was able to get past security receptionists in Greenough, Chadbourne, Butterfield and VanMeter Residence Halls. Entry was refused in Gorman, Baker and Brett Residence Halls. There was no security in Brooks Residence Hall and the reporter was able to slip past a security supervisor in Wheeler Residence Hall between 1:15 a.m. and 2:17 a.m.

In the Orchard Hill Residential Area, the Collegian reporter was able to slip past security at 2:30 a.m. because the receptionists were closing down for the evening.

■ cleanup

continued from page 1

Easthampton, a house was being winterized, while in Northampton, a daycare was being repaired after it was damaged during recent floods.

"I really thought it was pretty good," Thorpe said. "I haven't had a chance to talk to very many students, but from the feedback that I'm getting, it was a very good event."

Thorpe said that rain dampened participation in the event, as only 17 students showed up Saturday morning to work, about two thirds of what MassPIRG had planned for.

It was Thorpe's first year directly organizing UMass involvement in Make a Difference Day.

"A lot of local groups did projects on their own," Thorpe said. "Like MassPIRG. They did their own work. A lot of groups had previously come through our offices, and this year a lot of people were able to organize their own projects, which probably increased the numbers of students involved."

Thorpe said that the numbers she worked with were comparable to years' past, but that this year, many groups took their own initiative.

Students also worked over the weekend to clean the campus pond. The pond cleanup effort was organized by Christina Maginnis, the Massachusetts Community Water Watch Americorps organizer. She said on Friday that many students who had been working around the area to clean up wanted to come to campus and see their work on a daily basis.

"Those students are going to come out and cleanup the campus pond," Maginnis said. She was unavailable for comment yesterday.

■ Y2K

continued from page 1

sified report.

Maynard cited India and Israel in particular as "more likely sources of malicious remediation among leading U.S. offshore remediation service providers." He said that both countries are among those known to be developing "cyber-warfare" capabilities, and that both have large numbers of skilled programmers who work for U.S. companies.

Industry officials said that U.S. software contractors have farmed out significant amounts of their Y2K remediation work to subsidiaries or subcontractors in other countries, where labor costs are lower. The painstaking work involves revising codes in older computer programs that denote years with two digits. Programs could malfunction and entire systems could crash if a computer "thinks" that Jan. 1 is New Year's Day, 1900, instead of 2000.

Government officials and industry experts said that they are not sure what percentage of remediation work has been done offshore, but America's Y2K glitches clearly have been a boon to foreign software programmers.

Even so, most U.S. corporations and a few contrarian consultants think the threat of foreign infiltration has been overblown.

CIO Magazine polled 202 chief information officers and business executives in August to determine their level of confidence that programmers were not sabotaging their security infrastructure. It found that 70 percent were extremely confident or very confident, 22 percent were confident, and only 1 percent were not confident.

Wayne Bennett, an attorney who represents a wide range of businesses in their dealings with computer contractors, acknowledged that security is an issue any time companies contract with outsiders for work on their computer systems.

"But I don't see among my clients a heightened fear related to Y2K," said Bennett, who represents Boston-based Bingham Dana LLP.

Some security analysts agree that it is unfair to point the finger at overseas programmers. U.S. contractors are just as capable of playing dirty tricks – or making unintentional mistakes – as foreigners, they said.

"You can't attack a problem as far-reaching as this without having some risk of having someone somewhere taking advantage of the situation," said Perry Harris, director of management strategy practice at Boston-based Yankee Group, a market research and consulting firm that focuses on information technology and telecommunications industries.

In theory, hostile Y2K contractors could infiltrate U.S. systems in several ways. They could install "trap-door" programming that would provide them with access to the systems in the future. Or they could insert malicious coding that could corrupt data, disrupt networks, or introduce viruses.

WE HAVE THE SCHOOL/WORK SOLUTION

You have a school life. You have a social life. And you still need to work. C&S, the nation's fastest growing wholesale food distributor has the solution, with excellent part-time jobs at flexible hours. We have immediate openings for responsible, high-energy people to work as Warehouse Selectors. No experience necessary – just enthusiasm!

BRING YOUR FRIENDS!
• Flexible Schedules • Great Pay
• FREE Transportation on weekends from Mullins Center on Campus

JOIN US NOW AND RECEIVE A $500 SIGN ON BONUS* *LIMITED TIME OFFER

You'll receive complete training, $12.50/hour, and the opportunity to extend your hours during school breaks. You'll also enjoy a fun working atmosphere of team spirit and camaraderie. To find out more, come to our Job Fair, call 1-888-621-5933, or apply in person Monday-Friday, 8am-1pm (Tuesday & Wednesday till 7pm), or Saturday 9am-1pm, at: Employment Center, C&S Wholesale Grocers, Inc., 142 Flat Street, just off Route 91, Exit 21, Hatfield, MA

VISIT US ON-CAMPUS
Tuesday, October 26th
From 9:30am - 4pm
in the Student Campus Center

C&S WHOLESALE GROCERS, INC.
C&S is an Equal Opportunity Employer and does not discriminate on basis of age, gender or any other protected category in accordance with applicable law.

Warehouse Selectors NEEDED!

YEAH!

THE TEMPERATURE IS DROPPING
AND SO IS THE PRICE OF MEMBERSHIP AT
THE BODY SHOPS ON CAMPUS

COME TO EITHER THE BOYDEN 17 (5-3912) or TOTMAN 8 (5-6075) LOCATIONS or CALL FOR A RESERVATION and GET A FREE PERSONAL TOUR AND FREE WORKOUT

THIS IS FOR YOU
AND YOU PAY ONLY
$60 FOR THE REST OF THE FALL SEMESTER!!

COME AND GET A FULL WORKOUT
FROM 7:15 TO 9:00
on
POWERLINE® WEIGHT TRAINING MACHINES and FREE WEIGHTS
LIFEFITNESS® STATIONARY BICYCLES and STAIR CLIMBERS CONCEPT II® ROWING and NORDIC TRACK® SKI MACHINES
LANDICE® TREADMILLS and
A PRECOR® EFX ELLIPTICAL TRAINER (in Totman only)

FULL REFUND AVAILABLE FOR 14 DAYS AFTER DATE OF PURCHASE
WITH ORIGINAL RECEIPT AND YOUR UNIVERSITY IDENTIFICATION CARD

BARBARA BRADBURY - COLLEGIAN

Isobel

Calling herself Isobel, this Amherst local takes to the trees at Hamilton Orchards in New Salem, Ma.

■ basketball

continued from page 1

severe amount of pain due to a problem with her right knee. Trent claimed that both the team doctor and physician ignored her concerns, and told her to treat the injury with ice and Tylenol, diagnosing the pain as tendonitis. Trent recalled O'Brien saying, "Stop being a [expletive] baby and suck it up." Trent returned to her home where she visited her family doctor to examine the knee.

According to an MRI exam, Trent had been playing with a torn patella tendon, for which she later had surgery in the summer of 1998. Trent and her parents had a meeting later that year on Nov. 6, 1998, with Marcum, informing them of Trent's decision to leave the team due to O'Brien's behavior and conduct.

"Players were injured and Coach O'Brien still made them play in a great deal of pain," Woolf said. "She has physically and emotionally abused these girls to the point where their self-confidence has been completely destroyed."

Grant expressed her concern about a cyst that was developing on her posterior in May 1998, to the team trainer, Boyd. Grant said the lump was painful, and that it was difficult for her to walk, sit, or run, since it had now developed into the size of a golf ball. According to Grant, Boyd told her to go to Health Services to have it examined. Boyd was reluctant to tell O'Brien of her injury. Grant was still forced to play, and in her statement, she recalled O'Brien saying, "Get the [obscenity] up and stop being a baby about it." After the practice was over, Grant's cyst had formed a blood clot, and had to be drained and removed in a surgical process on Oct. 27, 1998, at Health Services.

According to Vallieres, she once saw O'Brien punch another teammate in the chest with her open fist. This incident pushed her to leave the team, because she said she feared for her safety. Vallieres has since transferred to American International College.

The case will be tried in a Massachusetts district court. No trial date has been officially set for the lawsuit.

"The University investigated the matter, found the charges to be without merit, and will answer to that effect in court," said John Hoey, director of communications for President Bulger.

Robert Connolly, vice-president for communications with the Board of Trustees, also commented in defense of the accusations against Coach O'Brien and the Athletic Department. "The University believes that Coach O'Brien was coaching the team in a reasonable way. We believe that she has done a fine job. It will be clear after the lawsuit is over that the University and its Athletic Department conducted themselves in an admirable way throughout this problem."

Chancellor Scott was called numerous times for comment, but was unable to return any phone calls.

General Counsel Terence P. O'Malley will defend the University in the lawsuit.

BARBARA BRADBURY - COLLEGIAN

Hamilton Orchards

This is just a small portion of the apple harvest at Hamilton Orchards.

Rev. apologizes for anti-gay remarks

By Caryle Murphy
Washington Post

LYNCHBURG, Va. – Conservative evangelist Jerry Falwell apologized Saturday to an audience of 200 gays and lesbians "for not always loving homosexuals," but made clear in later remarks that his initiative to build a bridge of friendship to the gay community is still in line with his fundamentalist Christian beliefs.

"My ultimate goal, I'll make no bones about it, is to bring them out of the lifestyle, and to the Lord," Falwell told reporters following his afternoon meeting with a group led by his former ghostwriter-turned-gay activist, the Rev. Mel White.

The founder of the Moral Majority welcomed White's delegation, which included some relatives of gays and 200 of Falwell's own followers, to a school gym for a heart-to-heart dialogue on their differences – and the need to end violence against gays and Christians.

Ignoring the shouts of about 40 anti-gay Baptists who demonstrated outside, some holding such signs as "Jerry And A Fairy Equal Sin," members of Falwell's Thomas Road Baptist Church and White's gay rights organization, Soulforce, mingled at tables set up on the basketball court of Lynchburg Christian Academy.

Given his past anti-gay statements, visiting Falwell's church might normally be akin to walking into the lion's den for many gays and their supporters. But Saturday it became an oasis of Christian fellowship.

"We appreciate the Rev. Falwell's hospitality, and his seeming change of heart," said Bob Henrikson, of Harrisonburg, Va., who with his wife, Shirley, was a Soulforce delegate to the "Anti-Violence Forum." The couple's son is gay, he said, and they "want to contribute to the end of hate and violence. We're not here to argue, we're here to reach some kind of understanding."

"I hope the world will see that the folks at Thomas Road Baptist Church are open-minded, even though they don't agree with the stand the other side takes," said Kim Graham, athletic director at Falwell's Liberty University.

Beige curtains gave the gym the appearance of a banquet room. Tables were covered in yellow linen and decorated with fake autumn leaves. Soulforce put small, white, porcelain angels at each place setting. Pictures of those killed for their beliefs or lifestyle graced the low platform from which White and Falwell spoke.

Both men were given a standing ovation after Falwell described the uniqueness of the get-together.

"Four hundred people who disagree met for 90 minutes without any shouting," the 66-year-old preacher said, according to an account by his spokesman Marc DeMoss. "The building didn't collapse. They discovered it was okay and even legal to meet and meet again...and that two men named Falwell and White were dumb enough to do it first."

At the news conference, both men, who remained friends after White declared his homosexuality six years ago, said they hope to build on Saturday's session.

Falwell acknowledged he is taking a risk, given that his fundraising literature has railed against "radical homosexuals" who want to "take over America. I'm getting a lot of heat, lots of letters, lots of email...from my friends, my supporters who are saying, 'Hold on man. What are you doing?'"

The meeting was aimed at demonstrating the Christian love and tolerance that both men say America badly needs. But contrary to earlier plans, no snacks or lemonade were served.

Falwell, reprimanded by some evangelicals who believe the Bible prohibits Christians from sharing a meal with "sexually immoral" people, decided not to serve food, only small bottles of water.

During the meeting, according to DeMoss, White apologized for hateful speech directed at Falwell and other Christians who say homosexuality is a choice, and therefore sinful.

"You have changed not your view of homosexuality, but of homosexuals," DeMoss quoted White as saying. "When the gay community tries to demonize Jerry Falwell, I'm not going to let them get away with it." He gave the preacher a framed cartoon showing Falwell seated next to a "Mr. T. Winky," a joking reference to the alert Falwell's ministry put out this year saying Tinky-Winky, a character on TV's "Teletubbies," is gay.

All About Eve

At Saturday's Equestrian Team competition, Rachel Stoloff, on her horse Eve, talk with the head of the UMass Equestrian Team, Jerry Schurink.

ATTENTION X-FILES FANS!!!
Have you ever wondered who creates the ideas for the X-Files ?

Bookworks
PRESENTS
Professor Anne Simon PH.D., author of "The Real Science Behind 'THE X FILES'"

Professor Simon will be discussing the scientific aspects behind the popular television series.

TUESDAY OCTOBER 26th 1999
4pm to 6pm
CAMPUS CENTER
Lower Level ROOM 162-75

University of Massachusetts Boston

Winter Session
In Cuernavaca, Mexico!
December 27, 1999 - January 23, 2000

Spanish Language and Culture
or
Mexico Today: Politics and Society

These travel-to-learn programs award up to six academic credits and provide a unique opportunity to experience first-hand the cultural and social fabric of Mexican life.

Application deadline: November 17, 1999

For more information,
call 617.287.7913
e-mail
continuing.education@umb.edu visit www.conted.umb.edu

UMASS BOSTON
University of Massachusetts Boston
Division of Continuing Education
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston, MA 02125-3393

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?

YANKEE

-DISCOUNT OIL-

NORTHAMPTON/HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888

• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

Black Affairs

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian Monday, September 25, 1999

A girl who stopped traffic

The other day I went ahead and became a model citizen at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. I did what most other residents in this area can only dream of being able to do – a feat so amazing that just a few Western Masscrs have accomplished it in recent memory.

I stopped for a pedestrian in a crosswalk.

Hold your applause for a few minutes, now. I will be more than happy to sign autographs and partake in length make-out sessions with you, my adoring fans, soon enough. For the time being, let me fall into an overly-dramatized, long-winded description of how exactly I pulled off this incredible stunt. Prepare to be wowed, bamboozled, and enthralled.

Seth Koenig

Picture this: I was on my way to school one morning, thinking about all sorts of important issues that every model citizen must consider on a minutely basis (such as whether or not I have time to pick up a cup of coffee before class, or why any guy would ever wear boxers after having tried boxer briefs), and I saw her. She was tall, long-legged, and beautiful. Her shiny brown hair flowed gracefully and unnaturally, like in a Pantene commercial. Her muscle tone was exquisite. Her lips were full and pouting. Her third cousin, Frank, worked at a law firm in Hartford before marrying a former classmate and moving to San Antonio to open a fajita bar.

Actually, I couldn't really see her lips from where I was sitting, so I'm not sure if that part was true.

The important thing was really not what she looked like – she could have resembled the great midwestern buffalo – the point is, she was there. Crossing the street.

Which brings up another very pertinent point very much on the subject. Why is the scientific name for the great midwestern buffalo, also known as bison to people outside the sports community, bison bison. What is that all about? Are the big, hairy creatures planning on taking cameo roles in a Little Caesar's Pizza commercial? The National Committee for Giving Animals Scientific Names (NCGASN, for short) just didn't feel like doing its homework that day, I guess. Imagine if the scientific name for cat was just cat cat. They had been doing a fine job right up to that point naming things like the domestic goat imunchus bleatus, the barn swallow (punch-line for sexual jokes on the farmyard), and lanct Reno (ambiguous), but when the panel sat down to discuss the buffalo, they just came up blank.

Anyway, back to the lady who I was not busy destroying with the grill of my car. I decided that, seeing as somebody was crossing the street, I would step on the brake and thus the vehicle would not, as they say in Silicon Valley, compress her into a zip file. The logic was revolutionary or so one would think based on the number of times people have been hit crossing the road lately. One would also think that somebody should step in and stop 12-year-old pop singers from getting breast implants, but that shows how much one knows. One is completely lost in today's society, I think.

Back to the point, which I'm quickly forgetting myself. If you are driving along one day, be like me, your worshipped idol, and don't hit anybody. It's relatively easy to do, but if you are not smart enough to figure it out, here's a helpful safety guide that you should study rigorously enough so that you neglect work in all of your classes.

1.) Do not drink alcohol and go for a spin on the sidewalk – that tends to be where pedestrians hang out.

2.) Do not drink alcohol and go for a spin anywhere else, either.

3.) If you have been scientifically classified as a moron (stupidus idiotus), don't get behind the wheel.

4.) Look at the road in front of you. If your vision is blocked by a pesky human, stop the vehicle.

5.) Things on the sides of the roads or in the passenger seat are less important than things bouncing off your front bumper.

6.) Pay attention.

Good. Now you know. There will be a very difficult quiz on this sometime when you least expect it.

So, in conclusion, don't say that you've never been warned – plead, ing ignorance will get you nowhere. Wait, what was my point again?

Oh, right. I am a model citizen for the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Now go try to be exactly like me.

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Privatization and corporate America

To the editor:

Regarding Wednesday's article, "Privatization and Your RSU," we first would like to thank corporate sponsor Sam Wilkinson for the free advertising. Secondly, what is he talking about? Sam's argument is totally absurd and misguided. He reduces privatization to McDonald's serving fetuses. What? We all know that is not the issue of privatization. The issue of privatization is the loss of well-paying union jobs, the loss of money to corporations outside the university walls, and the increased loss of community control of our neighborhood space. Just because Sam may wear Nikes doesn't mean that he is Nike. Just because a university may buy supplies from corporations doesn't mean it has to be run by corporations. The RSU pamphlet Sam referred to, printed with "ink from a corporation" was actually printed at Campus Design and Copy, a student managed business. CD&C may use a Cannon or Xerox photocopy machine, but CD&C is not run by these corporations. Student businesses are just one example of how the University is different from corporate America. And so are the Ustore, Bluewall, and Textbook Annex. How many citizen and student-funded bookstores or coffee shops have you been to offcampus? We would hope that the University's profits go back into education and not to a corporate board of directors.

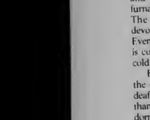
David Minasian
Amherst

Dan Thomases
Amherst

To the editor:

If I follow the logic of Sam Wilkinson's editorial ("Privatization and Your RSU") correctly, I was born into a society dominated by corporations, and all the material splendor that I presently enjoy stems from corporate origins. Therefore, if I wish to retain any part of my material wealth, I should prepare to follow corporate will wherever it goes. Furthermore, I am a hypocrite if I oppose privatization, unless I abandon all material things. So, because I was born into corporate domination, I am essentially corporate property. Considering how wonderful our country and planet have become under the hand of corporate power, I should allow them to continue running the show. Who am I to complain? So maybe corporations are involved in well-documented cases of human rights abuses in other parts of the world? So what if McDonald's likes to clear-cut a bit of rainforest here and there for the purpose of grazing beef cattle for a few years before the land becomes effectively useless? Hey, it's not my responsibility to worry about their exploitative practices. It costs me 39 cents to buy a nifty, gray burger, and if all it takes is a little exploitation in developing nations to beat out the local competition, then that's the way I want it! The same goes for Starbucks' coffee plantations and whatever goes on there. Cheap is good, and there's no need for further discussion. An endless feedback loop of more money and power to the overprivileged and less money and power to the underprivileged is the American way. Anything else is subversive to my way of life.

I wonder if Mr. Wilkinson did any research on the plausibility of "contractually requiring" corporations to hire a certain amount of students. The answer may not be quite as simple as he suggests. To wit, what incentives does the Board of Trustees have to require such provisions? Isn't the underlying goal of privatization to maximize efficiency? Where does hiring college students, many who lack prior business skills, play into that equation?



And while better acquainting college students with reality is surely an honorable notion, I submit that the "real world" to which the author alludes falls short of accuracy. He, like many who have never considered any favorable alternatives, believes that the corporate status quo is intrinsic – there is no questioning it, never mind changing it. Perhaps even Mr. Wilkinson will concede that losing control of your consumption options to a monopoly is an issue entirely unrelated to "taking a position in upper management." Of course, his contention that there is no difference between corporate America and college campuses is dishearteningly correct to some degree. However, the mere existence of corporate domination does not necessarily make it just. In the traditional perception, college is a place where such intuitions are questioned, not swallowed whole. It would be nice to think that our utopian oasis of enlightenment has something more to offer than the tired old instructions of "take a number and get in line."

Perhaps most disturbing is Mr. Wilkinson's statement that "we love it [the world according to corporations]." I wonder who "we" are. Are "we" the UMass community? Do "we" include the exploited labor source in those other, less important parts of the world? Perhaps "we" are merely the stereotypical white, male members of the privileged class. However, one defines Mr. Wilkinson's "we," I would be ashamed to categorized under such dogma.

Chris Friar
Sunderland

Weddings

I'm blind. It is so bright, it's burning my retinas. No matter how tightly I squint, I can't stop the constant flash of light into my eyes. It's so hot too. I'm melting into a puddle of sheer agony. My white dress shirt has conformed to my torso, and the arch of my back is a sweat-soaked, transparent form. On the apex of my cranium, a bead of perspiration forms. Then another, and another, until finally they reach the proper mass and they slide down my face.

Jason Cormich

These sweat travelers do not discriminate. They hit all of the landmarks of my face – my cheeks, my chin, my eyes – where they go for a brief swim, and ironically cool them off for the short moment that they are there. My nose is the biggest object on my face, and in no way does it escape this downpour of sweat. The beads trail down the ridge and onto the tip, where they stay and gather until the force of gravity sends them plummeting to the ground. Or I aim a puff of breath upward at my nose, and send the beads flying off into the air.

After forty-five minutes to an hour of this, music plays. My companions and I march down the aisle in pairs by the greenhouse, which reflects all the midday sun into our eyes, blinding us, and baking us to a crisp. It was one of the most physically uncomfortable positions I've ever been in. Still it was worth it all to stand in his friends' wedding party.

That was last year. This year, I stood in my very own sister's wedding. It was indoors, and at nine o'clock in the morning, but it was still very hot. Not as hot as the outside wedding I mentioned earlier, but still hot. This time I also got to sit down for most of the ceremony. Unlike the previous wedding, people down the isle before the ceremony was a delight because it consisted of family, friends, and acquaintances I haven't seen in a long time.

It was a beautiful ceremony at the beautiful St. Mary's church. The holy man presiding over the service was a gentle soul of good humor. His service was perfect. My parents, grandmothers, and even my big brother were crying.

The reception was at The Log Cabin in Holyoke, and it was the best wedding reception I've ever been to. Dancing, prime rib, family, and friends made it all so much fun. However, it all made me wonder what my wedding would be like if I got married. Will it be a very small intimate affair, or a big, fancy celebration? Will it be in the summer, spring, winter, or fall? Will it be in my hometown or hers? Will the wedding party be huge or small? Should I even get married? Is it wise nowadays? Will it get in the way of my goals or will it help me reach them?

I think the question of marriage is something that people in my age group should examine. I notice so many of my old friends and other people I went to high school with, marrying left and right. It's as if they rush into it. They don't wait to finish college, they just run off to the altar. Have they truly found their one true love, or do they marry quickly to be more secure? Are they pressured into it? When I look at my friends and acquaintances, I notice a lot of their parents have been through divorces, and it's very rough on all parties. If I get married and find out later that it was a mistake, do I want to put my other family members through the agony of a divorce? I could save all that time and trouble in the first place by not getting married.

We are constantly pressured in this society to conform. If we don't see all the biggest new movies, we're out of the loop. If we don't own all the latest music, we're unhip. If we don't have a significant other, we're labeled as losers. It seems that most people I know seem more stable when they are in a relationship. Is getting married a necessary, easy way to find stability and security? What happened to love?

Some people I know don't want to get married or have a relationship. Imagine that! They are what we call work-oriented. They have goals, and they won't let anything get in the way of those goals. They will not marry because it's a "The American Dream," they simply have no desire to marry or complicate their life with a relationship. They derive satisfaction out of their work and careers. People will find work-oriented people to be people without a life. The truth is their work is their life, and there is nothing wrong with that. Work-oriented people are very secure. There should be no shame in being different.

Will you ever get married? Who knows? Will I ever get married? Who knows? Should we ever marry just because it's more secure and convenient? I hope not. If you ever get married, choose to do so out of love, not to conform. Also if you do decide to get married, make sure it takes place somewhere cool and shady, where the sun cannot roast or blind you.

Jason Cormich is currently a single Collegian Columnist.

200 cigarettes

It is cold outside on this dark October evening. In fact, the entire week has been cold. Students are wearing sweaters and warm clothes for the first time this year. Stars litter a smoky fall sky. A frisky wind rustles the garbage and leaves that litter the ground. A small number of students scuttle about, their bodies cringing from the cold. Fan belts whir and batteries whine as old engines attempt to start despite the elements. Aside from this, and the occasional whirring of cheap furnaces, silence dominates the evening. The campus is a virtual wasteland, devoid of hustle, and free of merriment. Even the most outgoing of adventurers is content to stay inside, away from the cold and the lifelessness of the darkness.

But suddenly, a beep, followed by the creaking of a door, permeates the deafening silence. A lanky man, no older than 25, steps onto the portico of an old dormitory. Alone, he sings quietly to the nightingales. His shrill voice rings of stress and worry. The man reaches into his jeans' pocket, and pulls out a cigarette and a stylish lighter. A butane flame laminates the student and his visage. His face is weary, haggard, as if the witness of stress for some time now. His hands are white, devoid of heat on this frigid night. He is wrapped in a winter jacket, and crowned by a woolen cap. Gloves cover his hands, and a fleece scarf obscures his neck.

The man sits on the portico steps while he smokes the cigarette. His hands are shaking and his knees are bouncing. His body is wrapped in his arms as he leans on his haunches. There is no one to talk to. There is no one to observe. Yet the man stays on the porch, smoking cigarette after cigarette, sparing no nicotine to the concrete. Hitters, smoked down to the foam, litter the steps and the surrounding areas. The man adds to their number. Thirty minutes later, his cigarettes are but a memory. The man rises, his head down, and returns inside.

This is too often the typical situation for smokers at this university. The seasons have changed; the glory of summer splendor has past. It is no longer the time for shorts-t-shirts are now merely a prerequisite to a wardrobe. It is cold now, near freezing. The rooms seem more and more appealing, with their promises of heat and promises from the elements. Yet despite all this, students are still forced to smoke outside the dormitories, or not smoke at all. The isolation and discomfort of all this censorship is stifling.

Cigarettes are a good thing, perhaps one of the best things. Don't be shocked, I know that cigarettes are taboo. In this politically correct culture, I am a pariah, a filthy swine merely because I enjoy one of life's finer pleasures. Last semester, I smoked in my room, blatantly disregarding the policies of the housing department. But this is a new year, and I have a new roommate. Needless to say, living on the fourth floor, I've been doing a lot of exercise this semester. I want to be lazy. If the school wants me to exercise, then make me take a physical education course. But for now, I'd rather smoke in peace. Besides, my lungs need all the rest they can get.

William F. Larkin

Why all this fuss? I'll tell you why. Cigarettes are comforting; they are the ultimate relaxant. They bring people together. Tell me, who is not accustomed to seeing a group of people standing together, talking and laughing, while smoking cigarettes? These comrades appear at ease, comfortable with the social politics of their smoking group. In my experience, smoking also relieves stress and alleviates tension. If I have an important paper that needs to be written, I often take solace in smoking a cigarette while I struggle along. Whenever studying gets to be too much, I reach for a cigarette, and all is well. The difficulties are forgotten, and I am able to approach my matters with a clear head.

Despite all this, there are those zealots who would cast smokers down with the sodomites. These cretins lecture all day long about the ills of smoking. Not a day passes when I do not hear about carcinogens, secondary smoke, addiction, or the death of the Marlboro Man. I am not ignorant, nor am I unschooled. I realize the health risks posed by nicotine. I'm not being obstinate – I don't think that cigarettes are beneficial to the general health of mankind. They don't have all the daily vitamins and minerals of a well- balanced diet. The Surgeon General has not gone on record stating that repeated cigarette use will aid in bone growth or prevent Alzheimer's disease. Please don't put words in m mouth. Just let me be. Let me decide my own fate.

The University's policy concerning smoking is completely ridiculous. The housing department has banned smoking from all of the dormitories. Cigarettes banned, period? Is this Russia? If religion is the opiate of the people, then what does this say about the church? Where is the freedom of choice? Where is the liberty? Even if your roommate allows you to smoke in the room, you are prohibited to do so by housing. If you do not comply with this silly mandate, you are subject to the hierarchy of discipline offered by the housing department. And we all know what a class bunch of people the housing department is. Are you still living in a lounge?

This school is one of the rare universities where smoking is illegal: Salem State, Regis Curry, Northeastern, Boston University, and Harvard all allow students to smoke in their rooms, should the two residents agree on it. And this makes perfect sense. For if the door is closed, and there is a fan in the room, there is no danger of secondary smoke contamination. The only concern is the smell, and there are faculty members who reek worse than my room does.

Why must we have our fates decided by rigidity? I am an American; I value my freedom. But where has this liberty gone? Has the campus taken it away? Is Amherst, dare I say it, un-American? It must be, for I can't even do that which is basic to my daily routine. This authoritarianism is wrong. Should my roommate and I come to terms, I should be able to do as I wish. We are neither communist nor a dictatorship. There is no hammer here; the sickle resides elsewhere. Part of my guaranteed freedom should involve the choice to smoke, shouldn't it? Or am I being obtuse?

Maybe we should start losing other freedoms too. Why stop at smoking and pleasure related freedoms? Why not invade religion and morality too? Obviously, we students are far too ignorant to make up our minds for ourselves. But enough about that, I have to get ready soon. I need to get ready for Sunday service. What do you mean, "What Sunday service?" The university-mandated Sunday Catholic mass, haven't you heard? Wait a minute, you're not Catholic? Oh, it doesn't matter, since the University has deemed practicing any other religion immoral. Everybody else seems to think this, so it must be right. I am sorry, but you're better off, really you are. We're doing this for you; you'll thank us in the end. By the way, make sure to wear your Sunday best, like a good boy. I'll see you there; I'll be the man bumming cigarettes from the collection agents at the back of the church. Please be there early, as usual.

William F. Larkin is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Nancy Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor

Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor

Jolyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Max Menschel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Jolyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor

Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1907, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Daily Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1984. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Funerals use rituals of joy to ease sorrow

By Stephen Buckley
Washington Foreign Post

TESHI, Ghana – The white wooden Mercedes-Benz is listing. Eight pallbearers wobbling under the custom-made coffin – with the hulking body of Sowah "Holala" Nortey filling nearly every square inch – struggle down a rocky slope that descends into this city's public cemetery.

The pallbearers steady the Mercedes coffin, to the relief of the sea of mourners behind them. The mourners return to quiet conversation as the procession snakes past the Victory Spot Bar, and the Congo Cafe, and the Step By Step Restaurant.

Bystanders crowd the roadside. Many grow still. Others cross their arms or put surprised fingers to their mouths. And others smile. Teshi, just outside Ghana's capital, Accra, has seen such spectacles before. Indeed, throughout sub-Saharan Africa, funerals are profoundly important rituals – creative, colorful affairs that affirm the continent's most powerful traditions and beliefs.

At funerals, children of the deceased are bestowed new parents, and mourners hold long, passionate conversations with the dead. The poorest and most divided of families usually scratch together enough funds to provide a decent ceremony even if it buries them in debt.

It is not unusual for an African to attend more than one funeral over a weekend. Yet despite the pervasiveness of death – or perhaps because of it – funerals are anything but ordinary on this continent. Far from being morbid, funerals are seen as a celebration in many cultures.

Celebrating a Life

On this sunny, sultry Saturday in early November, Holala Nortey's funeral brought together about 400 people: co-workers, neighbors, aunts, uncles, cousins, children, grandchildren. They took three days to celebrate the man whose passion for work was exceeded only by his love of food and the lottery.

Holala, with bulging shoulders and tree-trunk girth, weighed well over 200 pounds. He wore a stern visage but won dozens of friends during his 63 years. His relatives say he worked hard to gain friends because he was an only child, a rarity in Africa.

He had four children and 10 grandchildren. He married and divorced three times. Holala loved to wager on the national lottery every week, and helped create an informal group that would pool money to play. Once he even won the equivalent of $35. He also loved to eat. He was especially fond of fresh fish, fried in lots of fat, and he could not stay away from a dish known as fufu – cassava and plantain pounded into a smooth white ball and served in palm oil soup.

He suffered a stroke three years ago, and doctors warned him to eat healthier dishes. He ignored them. A few hours before an apparent heart attack killed him in September, he had a bowl of fufu.

Holala was a taxi driver at a hotel in Accra for 30 years. He had used an old Mercedes-Benz sedan most of his career, and when he died his relatives decided to honor him by burying him in a replica of one. A Mercedes-Benz coffin would symbolize his love for his work as well as the numerous friendships he nurtured over three decades. "Every taxi driver in Accra knew who Holala was," said Kingsford Nortey, who with Dorzy Nortey, was one of the cousins charged with organizing the funeral. "He was very popular. He had been around a long time."

The Norteys sought the services of Joseph Tetteh, who has become a world famous crafting designer of coffins. It is not uncommon for foreign tourists to stop by his workshop and buy them. Two years ago former president Jimmy Carter visited his shop and bought three: an eagle, a fish, and a bell pepper.

Tetteh, one of several makers of custom coffins in the Accra area, has made attention to detail his trademark. As he prepared Holala's four-door wooden Mercedes, he included windshield wipers, rearview and side-view mirrors (with real glass), an antenna (apparently taken from a radio), a Mercedes-Benz emblem on the hood, exhaust pipe, reflectors, and tags (GG7155). He leaned over the Mercedes, shirtless and sweating. His fingers were flecked with white and black and red paint as he used a small, thin brush for the finishing touches.

Tetteh, a stout man with an easy smile, sells his coffins for about $400 a piece. Sometimes one well-off son or daughter will take responsibility for the coffin on other occasions, a number of relatives will pool money to pay for it. The deceased may have been poor in life, Tetteh said, but "when they die, no more poor."

A Ritual Bath

Now, the morning after Tetteh finished the coffin and the family brought it home, about 30 relatives tumbled into two minivans to retrieve Holala's body from the local mortuary. The number of people who retrieve a body is significant. Kingsford Nortey said on the way there. "Holala was very popular, so a lot of people are coming," he said. "But sometimes, a person dies and it's just a driver by himself who comes for the body."

A blue and gray hearse – preceded by a videographer who will record the funeral – carried the corpse to the former home of Holala's mother, where a group of older women prepared his body for burial. The seven women were arguably the most important participants in this occasion. Their job was to make Holala suitable for the spirits by cleaning and bathing him. Their faces were strong and creased, their eyes sad as twilight.

One of Holala's aunts brought to the porch enamel bowls overflowing with cotton, numerous bars of soap, sponges, razors, talcum powder, camphor balls, a plastic drinking cup, a spoon, a white cotton T-shirt, and two large pieces of fabric. "We are giving him everything, so that he needs nothing" in the spirit world, said Dorzy Nortey, the cousin helping to organize the funeral. "If he wants a cup of tea, he has a cup. If he wants cocoa, he has a spoon. If he wants to look good, he can comb his hair."

Shouting erupted on the porch. The aunt stood in the midst of the women, eyes ablaze, palms out, trembling with anger. "Please, you must accept!" she shouted. "You have to take what we've given. What do you mean it's not enough? You have to take it. Please."

Dorzy, at the bottom of the porch, explained that there were only two pieces of fabric. Apparently one of Holala's former wives had sent none; hence the shouting.

"It's not enough!" one of the women yelled at the aunt.

"They are afraid that the spirits will say, 'Where is the other one?'" Dorzy Nortey explained. "The women who are doing the bathing will be blamed. . . They don't want trouble with the spirits." The older women won the argument, but the tension did not ebb. Veronica Nortey, one of Holala's daughters, joined the older women on the porch with her three sisters. The women wanted to know if the daughters knew them: If Veronica and her sisters had been sufficiently faithful in attending funerals of other relatives, they would know the older women's names, their histories.

The daughters knew their faces, but not much else. So the women told the daughters they could not watch the bathing ceremony unless they paid a fine. Veronica and her sisters huddled against a nearby wall and decided they wanted to pay a $5 fine. The women wanted to pay a $5 fine. The women wanted to pay a $5 fine. The women

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Monday, October 25, 1999

Luna's The Days of Our Nights a diverse pleasure

Brooke Werley
Collegian Correspondent

LUNA
The Days of Our Nights
Jericho Records

His eyes sought the broken, the worn, the faded, and the fragmented. I couldn't think of a line that could explain how Luna's new release, The Days of Our Nights, makes music of fragmented memories. Anais Nin seemed to phrase it perfectly. Dean Wareham, lead singer and guitarist for Luna, had two bottles of Canadian bacon for breakfast the morning I spoke with him, and though for any other group this would be completely irrelevant, it somehow just enhances everything that is Luna.

When I asked Dean what his favorite lyrical line he ever wrote was, he was at somewhat of a loss to come up with just one line out of every song included in Luna's five albums. What did come to mind was how much he liked the title of a track off of Days of Our Nights called "U.S. Out of My Pants." He saw this statement on a sign once and brought it into the band's work. The song that results from this one observation is a trippy use of guitar and Wareham's wavering voice that actually includes the line, "U.S.A. get out of my pants."

The preceeding track on the album, entitled simply, "The Slow Song," is just that — in German. It's the only song that Dean has ever written in German, and though it has been described as a "drunken ramble in an ugly language," I immediately took a liking to it. It is a beautiful mix of guitar and constant background percussion. Dean begins the song employing the less-frequently-used lower end of his vocal range, which gives it a more genuine sound.

"Dear Diary" is both the opening track and the first single off Days of Our Nights. To describe it perfectly to the Luna fan, I would have to say that it is very un-Lunaesque. It has a loud rhythm track and a lot more force than most other Luna work. Even Dean himself admits that it's not at all typical of the band: "I think it just deceives people." To be fair, it does show some hints of what's to come in the rest of the album. It gives "a taste of things that come later."

This album marks an interesting turn for Luna; they aren't the same band people think of when they request "California All the Way."

Dean just bought a French disco album last week, and lately he's been listening to it in addition to music from the late 60s rock group Gandar, so you can probably reason why Luna's repertoire of music is so diverse. Maybe you can even make sense of boiled eggs and billboard quotes, but with Days of Our Nights coming out tomorrow, I suggest you leave that to Luna.

Luna will be performing at Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton on December 9. Tickets can be purchased in advance at For the Record in Amherst or by calling (415) 386-8686 or 1-800-THE-TICK.

Check out our interview with Luna the day before they release their new CD, Days of Our Nights.

Despite stars, Three to Tango comes off with two left feet

Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

Three to Tango
Directed by Damon Santostefano with Neve Campbell, Matthew Perry, Dylan McDermott
Playing at Mountain Farms Theaters

Despite an obvious plot drawn from just about every TV sitcom on the air, Three to Tango held tremendous promise. Consider this: Matthew Perry is the funniest cast member on "Friends," which is arguably the funniest show on TV; Neve Campbell hails from the popular teen drama "Party of Five," and Dylan McDermott plays the lead on "The Practice," the Emmy-award-winning best drama two years running. Still, when gaudy swing music starts playing at the beginning of the movie, it's the first hint that something's amiss.

For reasons beyond my understanding, director Damon Santostefano shoots the film at this same upbeat, absolutely inane, tempo thereby removing any premise of sincerity right from the get-go. Three to Tango is a farce, more like an episode of "Three Stooges" than anything else, filled with slapstick humor and ridiculous situations. This wouldn't be so bad except for the fact that absolutely none of it is funny, even remotely. Three to Tango is one of the most obvious, poorly conceived, shoddy movies that I have ever seen.

Oscar Novak (Perry) and his partner (Oliver Platt) are architects about to land the biggest project of their career. One day, Charles Newman, their client, asks Oscar to follow his mistress, Amy, around so she doesn't have too much fun without him. When Oscar and Amy (Neve Campbell) become close, Charles reveals that Oscar is gay. Of course he isn't, but his partner Peter is. Hilarity is supposed to ensue; it doesn't.

Perhaps the most frustrating part of Three to Tango is the fact that these three actors resigned themselves to doing such an unbelievably poor film. Dylan McDermott does all he can with his power-hungry, wealthy, "tycoon-of-the-moment" character, but there's only so much depth to someone whose only distinguishing characteristic is his love of Echinacea drops. Neve Campbell is certainly cute and kind of mysterious. However, the wild, unpredictable enchantress type doesn't work when you give her lines like, "I've tried every other unavailable guy out there. Why not add a gay one to make the list complete?" Oh, god. And Matthew Perry should hire a new agent because he has the worst choice of movies (See also: Fools Rush In). He seems very uncomfortable on the big screen, as trying to force the humor.

If the writing is poor, which it undoubtedly is, then the direction is absolutely inept. Acting as if he doesn't know anything better to do, Santostefano throws everything into the audience's face. His style consists of putting Neve Campbell in hot rooms wearing tight clothes, and showing that bewildering look on Perry's face when he discovers that everyone thinks he's gay. He should be bewildered that he made this movie. Anyway. Three to Tango is about as subtle and as clever as a sledgehammer over the head.

COURTESY BOB FRANK

Matthew Perry and Neve Campbell star in Three to Tango.

Since the movie is about gay men, there are the obligatory five or six unfunny gay jokes that must go in. The friends won't go near Oscar for fear that he'll start hitting on them. The unbelievably famous star, whom everyone adores, surprisingly reveals his affection for the gay guy. The father faints when he hears the news, because this is always good for a few chuckles. The female, for whom the gay guy so desperately pines, starts being "more open" with him, resulting in absolutely awkward sexual situations. The mother is shocked at first, but soon comes to accept him for who he is. Watch In and Out, which was equally unfunny, and you'll see the same lackluster crap.

The two lovers eventually come together over nausea-ting tuna melt dinners, which is appropriate since the dish is about as unappealing as the movie. Neve Campbell is a glass-blower though, so at least that is original.

Most of the movie hits like a brick and absolutely nothing can save it from sinking quickly. It's ok if a movie isn't as sincere as you would like, or if it has trite, lame dialogue, or if it's not really that funny, or if the characters are blatant stereotypes. But to do all of these at once makes for a tiresome and annoying two hours. Much like the swing music that introduces the film, Three to Tango probably looked good for a while, before people realized that it was all the same stuff over and over again. Unfortunately, the stuff in this case was absolute crap.

Grade: F

The top-grossing films at the box office for the weekend ending October 25th were....

1) The Best Man. The relatively unknown film grossed $9.1 million on 156 screens for an impressive $6,761 per-screen average.

2) Double Jeopardy fell only 25 percent to gross $7.7 million and $91.1 million overall. May regain number 1 next week.

3) Fight Club fell a horrific 43 percent for a $6.3 million weekend. This makes two fall disappointments in a row for Brad Pitt (the other being Meet Joe Black).

4) Bringing Out the Dead. This Scorsese/Cage flick averaged a horrid $3202 on only 1936 screens for a $6.2 million weekend.

5) The Story of Us fell 44 percent for a $4.4 million weekend and $17.9 overall. So much for the Bruce Willis comeback.

6) American Beauty fell only 18 percent. $5.4 million this weekend and $48.9 overall. It opened at $8.2, which means an amazing 5.1 multiplier.

7) Bats. $4.7 million. Why?

8) Three to Tango, $4.6 million on 2234 screens. The $2059 average is almost as embarrassing as the movie.

9) The Sixth Sense, $4.3 million weekend. $255.7 total is twelfth of all time.

10) Three Kings. A $4.3 million weekend gives it $50.1 million total. Good enough for a slightly-better-than-average 3.17 multiplier.

-Adam Martignetti

FUNKMASTER FLEX
With Special Guest D.J.
and featuring Original Vibe Monsters (Area 51 and Alias)
Student Union Ballroom
THURSDAY OCT. 28, 1999
DOORS OPEN @ 8pm
TICKETS AVAILABLE @ C.C. Concourse ~ Tix Unlimited ~ Northampton Box Office (586-8686) ~ The Grow Room
Only $15 for Umass Students
$18 five-college
$20 general public
Brought to you by U.P.C. ~ for more info call 5-2892

Check out the New England foliage

2X More Digital Music for 1/3 the Price
www.omniplayer.com
Sales representatives needed

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Double Grilled Pitas 4.99 3.00
Black Bean Dip w/chips 5.99 3.00
Nachos 6.99 3.50
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
OCMD WELCOME HOME
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Rd. off Rt.9
2 Miles East of Town Center
256-6446

安城中國餐店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 = 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

■ football

continued from page 10

one-yard line.

Bankhead scored the game's opening touchdown on a 1-yard plunge, but otherwise struggled in the first half. He came out after intermission and guided the team downfield on a pair of scoring drives, which would end up being the deciding factors. Delaware capitalized on Bankhead's slow start, using picks by Dan Mulhern and Brian McKenna to set up its first two scores, a nine-yard run by Jamin Elliott and an 11-yard stampede by Steve Ricco.

"He found the wrong jerseys in the first quarter," Whipple said about his quarterback. "The thing that I was happy about with Todd – because I can get on him pretty good on the sidelines – after he threw the third one he said, 'Coach, I'm alright.' And our team believes in him."

Searching for the end zone, UMass was forced to settle for a 21-yard chip shot by Jason Cherry early in the fourth quarter, giving them a 20-19 lead, their first since the opening quarter. From that point, Delaware, needing to get the offense going, would drive no further than its own 32.

UMass clinged to a seven-point margin as the clock ticked down in the fourth quarter. Whipple decided to go for it on fourth-and-one at the UD 44, instead of punting it away to a humbled Delaware offense that was throwing off its back foot. Shipp took the handoff and was hit in the backfield, but surged forward with a second effort that kept the drive going and iced the game.

"I wanted to go for it," Shipp said. "My O-line was playing well and I just found the blocks."

After 24 carries in the first half, close to a full day's work, Shipp continued to plug away at the Delaware defense, which ranked first in the conference against the rush. His 176 yards marked the 18th consecutive game in which he has eclipsed the 100-yard plateau. With 16 straight in the regular season, Shipp is just four games shy of Nevada's Frank Hawkins, who ran the streak to 20 games over a two-year period.

"In the fourth quarter, certainly with Marcel, it's hard not to give him the ball," Whipple said.

It was one of many stops by the Minuteman defenses, which held the Blue Hens' aerial assault to just 20 yards, and under three yards per carry on the ground.

Corey Potter started his third game at outside linebacker and picked up Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Week honors, registering nine tackles and three sacks, all of which came in the fourth quarter. Kole Ayi had 10 tackles and an interception to anchor a defense that held one of the conference's top offenses scoreless for the game's final 39 minutes.

The Minutemen return home next week for a duel with Rhode Island, who picked up its first win of the season on Saturday against Maine.

■ field hockey

continued from page 10

The Minutewomen avoided any early letdowns after the score, cranking up their front line play, and putting relentless pressure on Bradley and the Hawk backfield. Bardell unleashed a pretty feed inside to Schmidt on UM's very next possession, setting up a second penalty corner at the 30:56 mark. Bradley managed a diving stop on Bruemmer's ensuing shot, but Robinson swooped in and wristed the rebound toward the lower right corner of the goal. Her shot missed by mere inches, clanging off the right pole and drawing a collective sigh from the home crowd.

The first 10 minutes of the game were played almost exclusively in the SIU end of the field, until the Hawks finally managed to attack the UM goal around the 24:45 mark. UM's Sarah Bohonowicz had just managed a nifty sideline steal from SIU's Alexan Dankovitch when an infraction led to a Hawk free hit just outside the UM circle. Hawk Donna Burke got off a shot from the left side of the goal, but UMass keeper Zowie Tucker kicked the ball away easily. An SIU penalty corner with 25:37 to play in the half gave the Hawks probably their best look of the game, but back Pam Bigler's arching shot landed harmlessly on top of the UM goal. Bohonowicz ended the SIU threat with a beautiful steal-and-clear sequence at the 21:27 mark, and the Minutewomen were suddenly right back on the attack.

"We were quick in our transition from attack to defense, which neutralized their speed," Shea said. "When we did lose the ball, our forwards and midfielders were quick to get back. That blocked up a lot of dangerous spaces, which forced them to go wide on the field, which they don't like to do. They like to go forward, and use the speed in their forward line."

A series of free hits and some fantastic penetration by UM's Erika Whiston led to another UM penalty corner with 16:33 to go before the half. A botched stop kept Bruemmer from doing further damage on the resulting play, but UM's Robinson redeemed herself quickly with some gorgeous open-field moves that left SIU's Natasha Pronga and Mary Kate Brislin swinging their sticks at thin air. A quick pass to the right found Schmidt in perfect position, but the Greenfield great's shot struck the right side of the goal and ricocheted out over the back line. The Hawks came back with a little pressure of their own, but three SIU penalty corners over the next three plus minutes resulted in nothing but dynamic Tucker saves, fantastic clearing and transitions by the entire Maroon and White squad made the goalie's great job even greater.

"Our forwards really pressured the ball, and everyone from our midfield through our backs played tremendously tonight," Schmidt said. "Zowie played really well, and just shut them out."

The Minutewomen took their 1-0 lead into the half, and tried to keep warm through the break in spite of the somewhat chilly temperature. Luckily for the home crowd, the Maroon and White attack stayed hot going into the second set. The first five minutes of the second half saw an intense see-saw battle for momentum, until a fabulous slashing move to goal by UM's Lindsay Abbott set up the Minutewomen's fifth penalty corner at the 29:23 mark. Bradley made another diving save to keep SIU close, but a wild clear by Hawk Katie Holder set up another penalty corner with 27:18 to play. Bruemmer simply would not be denied again, slapping a low liner past Bradley's glove to double the UM lead.

Not content to sit on its lead, UMass stepped up physically over the remainder of the contest, to the delight of the crowd. The officials slapped SIU's Carli Anne Pascen with a green card after the midfielder collided with Robinson, and then UM co-captain Lucy Koch wiped out Hawk Brett Dymarczyk as the two battled for a loose ball along the near sideline. But as the game wore on, the Minutewomen actually seemed to get stronger and faster as they dominated play on both sides of the ball.

"We had our little lulls, but when we went at speed, I thought we looked great," said Robinson.

UMass finished up with possibly its strongest play of the game, as forwards Schmidt and Krysta Johnson smoked the SIU defense to set up the last of the Maroon and White's eight penalty corners at the 2:25 mark. Bruemmer's blast skipped under the sprawling Bradley and looked ticketed for the back of the net, until SIU's Pronga hurdled the fallen keeper and saved a sure goal. As time expired, the Minutewomen were left to celebrate their biggest win of the year.

"We just kept working for 70 minutes out there," said Schmidt, who then turned her attention to the team's upcoming Sunday battle with Temple. "We need to kick it in gear like we did tonight and just score, score, score. They're a good team, and they're going to want to kill us."

■ Northeastern

continued from page 10

and that was a bad break for us."

Besides the short-handed tally that the Minutemen allowed, they were also hurt by two power-play goals by the Huskies. Those two scores in the opening period allowed NU to jump out to a lead that they would not relinquish.

"Special teams were the key tonight. That's two games in a row now where we haven't given up a power play goal, and we've scored either a short-handed or power play goal," Northeastern hockey coach Bruce Crowder said. "That's an area that we're trying to work on. It's one of our team objectives."

Penalties to UMass' Randy Drohan and Jeff Turner gave the Huskies a 5-on-5 advantage only 4:22 into the game. Northeastern defenseman Jim Fahey then made the Minutemen pay when he hit the lamp just as the first penalty to Drohan expired.

The game remained 1-0 into the second period until the Huskies struck again. Once again, it was a power play goal, as senior forward Todd Barclas slid the puck around a host of fallen players and into an empty net to make it 2-0.

A little over a minute later, though, UMass responded with a tally of its own to cut the lead in half. Freshman defenseman Samuli Jalkanen pinched in from his spot on the left point, and fed Blanchford in front. The Stouffville, Ontario product lofted a shot that beat NU goalie Mike Gillooly low to the stick side.

The Minutemen appeared to have a chance to climb back into the game when they went on the power play 14 seconds later, but Hayward's goal allowed Northeastern to regain control of the game.

"Obviously special teams were big. We couldn't produce anything on the power play," Mallen said. "We had some pretty good chances especially in the second period, but then we sort of gave up the momentum of the game."

Northeastern moved the puck well, and their higher end guys played well," added Mallen. "They are a solid club, but a lot [of their success] will depend on how well Mike Gillooly plays."

Willie Levesque would add a goal late into the second period for the Huskies to round out the scoring.

The Minutemen looked to record their first victory of the year on Saturday night against No. 1 Boston College to see how UMass fared. Check out the related story.

'Head' of UM senior class

By Matt Crocker
Collegian Staff

Massachusetts said "Move over, Marvin, and get out of the way, Dennis," as it played out its final two home games and attempted to move to the head of the class in the Atlantic 10 conference this weekend.

Giving an A-plus performance that Mr. Moore would be proud of, the UM men's soccer team closed out its Totman Field competition with two wins, and secured a seat in the A-10 tournament as it bested fellow A-10 tournament contender La Salle on Friday, and winless Fordham on Sunday.

La Salle rolled into Amherst on Friday with a 7-6 record, standing 4-3 in the A-10, and currently on a two-game losing streak. The Maroon and White soon increased that losing streak for the Explorers, as it downed La Salle 2-1.

Clamoring for one of the four post-season slots alongside the Minutemen, La Salle did not fall easily to UMass. The Explorers struck first towards the end of the second half, as they were able to finish a loose ball in front of the UM net, beating senior goalie and captain Todd Fowler. Fowler soon got some help, however, as the Minutemen offense kicked in and scored less than two minutes back from break. Junior midfielder Kyle Biedenbach tied the game after receiving the ball from a passing combination of junior midfielder Matt Christy and senior forward Adam Black. Black then returned about four minutes later to deliver his own goal, heading a ball into the back of the La Salle net. UM's second goal would prove to be the final and decisive score of the match, as the Minutemen grabbed the win and moved into a tie for second place in the Atlantic 10 with Duquesne University.

"This was a big game," said UMass coach Sam Koch on Friday. "It was a game that we had to win; it certainly puts us in good shape for the tournament."

That theory was confirmed on Sunday, when the Maroon and White handed Fordham its eighteenth loss of the season, and secured a position in the Atlantic 10 tournament in November. UMass, now 12-5 and 7-2 in the A-10, overwhelmed the flagging Rams in a 5-2 final.

Although Fordham was able to score first, UM soon countered as junior back Patrick Beatti scored on a loose ball to tie the game. Black then scored less than a minute later, off of a free kick from Jonathan Bibb. Sophomore forward Ted Kmiatecki soon followed with the game winner, off of a pass from Black. Black and Kmiatecki would both score again later, as the two UMass forwards completed another game with two goals apiece; each grabbed two assists in the effort as well. Bibb who also had two assists on the day, and with nine on the season, is now second in the Minuteman single-season assist record book.

Bibb will not only fade into UMass history as one of the Minutemen's all time assists leaders, but instead fade away as one of six seniors who played their final two games at UMass this weekend. Joining Bibb are teammates Adam Black, Todd Baron, James Redmond, Todd Fowler, and Jon Barr. These Minutemen were honored on Sunday with a pre-game ceremony as they approach the completion of their final year with the team. However, these Minutemen will have to wait to reminisce, as they prepare for Duquesne and St. Bonaventure in their final two games of the regular season next weekend. Then comes the test-of-tests: The A-10 tournament in November.

■ conference

continued from page 10

Whiston into the melee with 15:33 to play in the half, and the Athol native electrified the home crowd immediately with her breathtaking open-field moves. The half remained a back-and-forth affair until just inside the 2:18 mark. It was then that the officials signaled for a UM penalty corner, then reversed their call much to the dismay of Shea. Then, with 51 seconds to play before the half, a blocked UM penalty corner once again drew the ire of the UMass coach, as the officials hadn't properly started the game clock on the play. After an animated sideline discussion, the Minutewomen replaced the corner, and this time Bruemmer's shot ricocheted off the stick of UM's Tanita Gerik and struck pay dirt.

"You don't often get second chances, so when you do, you've got to take advantage of them," Shea said. "It made a difference it steamrolled us, and kind of put us a little bit at ease which was big."

As the halftime whistle sounded, the home team was more than weary of the late call's imminent effect on Temple's motivation.

"Going into the second half, we didn't really change anything tactically," Crooks said. "But we knew that with that call at the end [of the half], and that corner that we scored, they were going to come out firing. We knew that we had to match that emotion, to set ourselves apart and solidify that. And we did."

The teams would pound relentlessly on each other for much of the second set, with neither team able to gain the upper hand. UM senior Chrissy Millbauer finally shook free at the 9:15 mark, dribbling straight through the heart of the Owl defense and threading a remarkable pass to Abbott. The sophomore was in perfect position to beat McGrath, and did so with surgical precision.

"I'm really excited about the way we played together today," Millbauer said. "This weekend is probably the best we've played so far, at a time when it counted the most."

Abbott would strike again with 2:14 to play, taking a dynamic pass from Koch after a blocked UM penalty corner and rifling in her second score of the afternoon. Temple bristled right up to the final seconds, but it was clear that the day and the conference crown belonged to the Minutewomen.

Prior to the game, seniors Crooks, Millbauer, and Bardell were recognized for their rock-solid careers in Maroon and White.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

tapp Crumb put the rebound past goalie Scott Clemmensen and the life was back in the Mullins Center.

UMass began the third period on the power play. Things were looking up, but how quickly they change. Clemmensen became impenetrably stopping all of the Minutemen's shots that he faced in the final frame. The junior goalie turned away 32 of 33 UMass shots en route to his third win of the season.

Minuteman goalie Markus Helanen turned in another strong performance between the pipes turning away 26 shots in the loss. "He was like a third defenseman," Mallen said. "He handled the puck more than I've ever seen him."

After the second period that saw the Eagles score 5 times on 19 shots, the defense turned it up a notch which is something that UMass will be able to build off going into next Friday's game with Army in West Point, NY.

Sophomore Eric Soderholm played a solid game at the blue line playing tenacious defense while contributing five shots on goal. The freshman duo Samuli Jalkanen and Kelly Sickevitch played another game under their collective belt and their development is coming along further than expected.

Mallen said, "I see some good things ahead of us."

The loss drops the Minutemen to 0-3, 0-2 in Hockey East. "It's not a great start record-wise, but it's a long season," Mallen said.

ALL SPORTS STAFF MEETING ON TUESDAY OCT. 26 @ 6PM
COLLEGIAN NEWSROOM

BRUISED BODY?
Don't let the tow truck drag your wounded vehicle to their pet place. Demand Dana! We offer a lifetime warranty on all our body shop work.
DANA BODY SHOP
968 Bridge Road, Northampton, Mass.
586-7250

enter to win
all this week enter to win a 20" TV/VCR and some scary movies (look for the VERSITY booth) no purchase necessary free lecture notes knowledge center
online study groups coming soon! fail-me-not reminder service versity.com
WHERE TO GO, WHEN YOU NEED TO KNOW.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UMSFS Presents: Rocky Horror Picture Show CCA 10pm Oct. 28

Free CD of Cool Indie Music when you register at MyBytes.com, the ultimate wesite for your college needs

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Alpine Commons 4 Bedroom, 2 Baths, Fully applianced kitchen, Private Balconies, All utilities included, perfect roommate living. Just 3 miles to UMass Move-in special. 256-0741

Very Nice 1 Bdrm in Colonial Village. Quiet, brand new carpet, right on bus line. $465+ AVAILABLE 11/1 256-1109 or 253-2515

2 Bedroom Atp. in Sunderland on bus route, Ht/HtW, electricity included. Well kept good location 665-4120

AUTO FOR SALE

90 Chevy Blazer 4WD, AC, CD, Remote Starter 108k, runs great, Exc. Condition $5500 or BO 253-6591

Purchasing a Used Car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Serices Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

1992 Mercury Sable Wagon 120K miles. Good condition. Plus 4 snow tires. Call 256-0067

COMPUTERS

Computer Problems? We've got solutions. New systems to technical service. Call 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

FREE BABY BOOM BOX + EARN $1200! Fundraiser for student groups & organizations. Earn up to $4 per MasterCard app. Call for info or visit our website. Qualified callers receive a FREE Baby Boom Box 1-800-932-0528 ext. 119 or ext. 125 www.ocmconcepts.com

Flexible Part-Time Research Interviewers Abt Associates in nearby Hadley, MA has openings for evenings and weekend shift Telephone Interviewers. We require minimum of 20 hours/week with flexible scheduling. Applicants must have excellent reading/communication skills, some computer knowledge and a solid work ethic. We offer $6.75/hr to start, regular merit increases to $8.00, health and dental benefits, holiday pay and free shuttle service from Hampshire Mall PVTA Stop. For more information or to arrange a personal interview, please call Paul R. Bebo Recruiting Coordinator 1-800-792-4514 Equal Opportunity Employer

Part-Time Clerical Position Requires answering phones customer service/office duties morning + afternoon hours. Apply to: National Heating 235 Triangle St. Amherst, MA

EMPLOYMENT

Earn $500 Weekly distributing phone cards. No experience necessary. Full or Part time Call 1-800-572-3361

Immediate Opening for a General Assignment Reporter for the Westfield Evening News, a daily paper in Westfield, MA. Ability to write clean concise copy in a strict deadline environment a must. Above average wages and benefits. Send resume to: Maria Brazee, General Manager, Westfield News 64 School St. Westfield, MA 01085

TUTORS/ TRANSLATERS (Bilingual/ for part-time, paid assistance during the school day to students speaking Amharic, Bengali, Japanese, Khmer, Korean, Mongolian, Portuguese, Tibetan. Call ESL Office at 413-549-9857. Amherst Public Schools An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

Part-time phone reps needed for wicked cool candy company located in Amherst. We have two-hour shifts available between 10AM and 5PM, Monday-Friday. You must work a minimum of three shifts per week. Base pay, plus commission on all new sales. Average pay $10-$12/hour with commission included. Must be outgoing with some sales/customer service experience, however, personality is most important. Please contact Beth McCabe for more information: 888-556-5599

EMPLOYMENT

Spring 2000 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary—training provided. Contact the Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phsically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

Baker/Cook/Customer Service Prepare foods,batters, doughs, recipes. In Village Market. FT/PT PM/Weekends 1 mile from campus. Cushman Village 413-549-1953

DP Dough is hiring drivers and kitchen help. Must be able to work nights. Approxiametly $20/hour. Apply at DP Dough.

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

FOR RENT

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Fridge Rentals - Free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

2 COMPUTERS Specifications_ Processor: MMX 166 Mhz Ram: 16 Mb Hard Drive: 3.2 Gigs. Floppys: One 2 MB Monitor: 15" CD: 24X Zip Drive: Internal IDE Video Card: Cirrus 2 Mbs Keyboard: 101 Modem: 56K External Software: Win95 and various others $400.00 each

Queen Size Futon For Sale - 1y.o. beautiful fruitwood frame & mattress. Bought for $450. Asking $300 OBO Computer & Printer also for sale $150 each. Call for details Kristin 253-9138

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons by retired pro Dajata Bumpus in Amherst. On bus rte. Call 256-0364

LOST & FOUND

Lost Two Garnet Rings One Watch silver + Gold. Near Theater Dept. sentimental value. Please Call 546-3166

LOST CAT: Near Leach, Orange Tabby Please Call 665-9950 Leave Message

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate Wanted to share 1bdrm in 2bdrm apt in Sunderland 15min from campus $365/mo + utilities. Call Paula 413-397-9768

SERVICES

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TICKETS

2 Sold Out Tickets to Phish concert down in Florida on December 30-31. 546-0470

TRAVEL

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

TRAVEL

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

Need A Break?

Check out The Collegian Classifieds for great SPRING BREAK Ads!!!

Advertise to THOUSANDS of people!! If you advertise through The Collegian Classifieds!!! CALL 545-3500

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, OCT. 25

TUESDAY, OCT. 26

TUESDAY, OCT. 26

NOTICES

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Don't delay. Post your FYI event today.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

C - Campus — MONDAY EVENING — OCTOBER 25, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	4	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Going Places "South Africa"	Wonders of the African World (In Stereo) (Part 1 of 3)				Positivly Conn.	Mark Russell
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	King	Ladies Men	Raymond	Becker	Family Law "The Nanny"	News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	King	Ladies Men	Raymond	Becker	Family Law "The Nanny"	News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	20/20		NFL Football Atlanta Falcons at Pittsburgh Steelers. (In Stereo Live)			Friends	Nanny
WLVI	56		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	7th Heaven (In Stereo)		Safe Harbor "Can't Touch That"	News		News	Tonight Show
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (R)	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims	Dateline (In Stereo)		Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WTXX	20	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Real TV	Friends (R)	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WVIT	30	10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Friends (R)		Ally McBeal "Car Wash"	News		Friends	Frasier
WTIC	61	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Time of Your Life		Law & Order: Special Victims	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (R)	Veronica's Cl.	Wonders of the African World (In Stereo) (Part 1 of 3)			Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGBY	57	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (In Stereo)		NFL Football Atlanta Falcons at Pittsburgh Steelers. (In Stereo Live)
WGGB	40	26	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	20/20		NFL Football Atlanta Falcons at Pittsburgh Steelers. (In Stereo Live)			Blind Date	Ricki Lake
WSBK	38		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Moesha (R)	Parkers (R)	Grown Ups	Malcolm-Edde	Star Trek: Voyager "Phage"
WTBS	72		Rosanne	Rosanne	Law & Order		★★★½ "Cold Mirror's Daughter" (1980, Biography) Sissy Spacek.					★★★½ "Deliverance" (1972) Burt Reynolds.
A&E	42		Simon & Simon		Law & Order		"Vanity Fair" (1998, Drama) (Part 2 of 2) Natasha Little, Frances Grey, Eisenstein.					Law & Order "Life Choice"
CNN	29	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand	Sports	Moneyline
COM	59	24	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★½ "Star Dust" (1998, Comedy) Mena Suvari, Roseanne Barr...				Strangers Upright	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	53		Your New House		Pass		On the Inside: Beauty Pageant		Skin Deep (R)		Joined at Birth (R)	On the Inside: Beauty Pageant
ESPN	31		[5:45] Sportscenter		Monday Night Countdown				Figure Skating: Professional Championships			Cheerleading	ESPNews
LIFE	60		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Beyond Chance (R)		Legacy of Evil (1995, Horror) Stephen Lang, Shelly McCarthy.			New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	35		Global Groove	MTV Jams	Downtown (R)	Downtown (R)	TRL (R) (In Stereo)		Need Trip	Downtown	Road Rules	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	36		All That	Catalog	Hey Arnold! (R)	Rugrats (R)	Thornberrys	Rocket Power	All In Family	All In Family	All In Family	All In Family	All In Family
SCIFI	58		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Outer Limits "Out of Body" (R)		Outer Limits "The Conversion"		Outer Limits "The Sentence" (R)	Outer Limits (In Stereo) (R)		Crypt Tales	Tales-Crypt
TLC	54	24	Home Again	Home Again	Tarnished Shield		Paramedics "Double Dose" (R)		Behind the Badge (R)			Paramedics "Double Dose" (R)
TNT	46		Due South (In Stereo)		ER "The Gift" (In Stereo)		WCW Monday Nitro (In Stereo Live)		WWF Raw		WWF War Zone	"Robin Hood: Men in Tights"
USA	62		Baywatch "The Incident"		JAG "Chains of Command"		Walker, Texas Ranger					Baywatch "Island of Romance"
HBO	43		★★ "Hav' Plenty" (1997, Comedy) Tom Selleck. (In Stereo) PG				★★★½ "Zero" (1997, Drama) Leonardo DiCaprio, Kate Winslet. (In Stereo) PG-13					Larry David
MAX	44		★½ "Earth Girl Arjo" (1999, Adventure) Robert Duvall. R				★★ "Nine 1/2 Weeks" (1998, Drama) Kim Basinger. (In Stereo) R		"The Pits" (1976, Horror) Stephen Lang, Shelly McCarthy.			"Garfield Goes"
SHOW	45		[4:15]		★ "Lake of the Dead" (1998, Drama)		★★ "Sanjuro" (1998) Toshiro Mifune.		★★★ "Allegro" (1995) Julie Christie. (In Stereo) R			Hoop Life

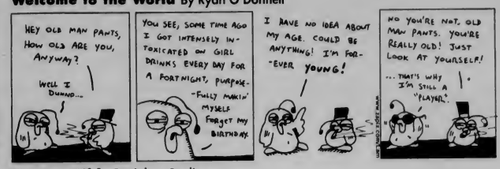
2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Govt. to Govt.
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CSN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

HSCN Hessing Services Cable Network

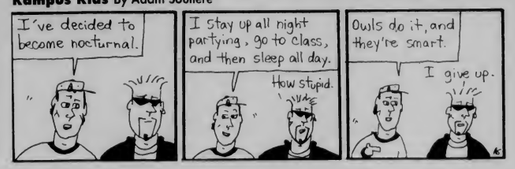
Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

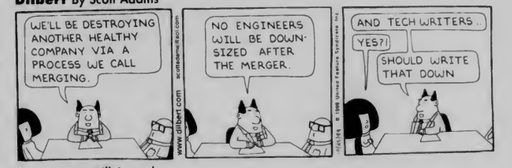


Foxtrot By Bill Amend



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell



Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Horoscopes

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – It is important for you to count your blessings today. It's easy to get wrapped up in negative aspects of your own affairs. Focus on the positive.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – It's important for you to get things back into perspective today, but do it fast. The time is running out for you to make things right with others.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – It's time for you to raise the stakes once again. The competition is fierce today, but you have what it takes to face the challenge.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Other people may be expecting just a little too much from you at this time. Today, you can make people aware of your limits.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – What you're lacking at this time is leadership, and you're not likely to get it from the expected source. It may be up to you by day's end.

Aries (March 21-April 19) – It's a good day to reanalyze your aspirations and to focus on something new, which may offer greater gains and greater satisfaction.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – Patience will be the key to your success today – not just with those around you, but with yourself as well. Don't be your own worst critic.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – Take responsibility for your actions today. The things you say and do influence everyone around you far more than you may realize.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – Today is the day for putting your prejudices aside and for accepting the differences in others. Someone is safe to hold you to a promise after dark.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – You may have trouble handling the torch to another today, particularly if he or she has not yet earned your trust in the recent past.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You'll find yourself slipping into a pensive and even melancholy mood today, and you must do all you can to keep from slipping too far.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You're going to need just a little more support than usual today, particularly when you are engaged in any unusual activities.

Quote of the Day

One tequila, two tequila, three tequila, floor...

–George Carlin

Leold www.leold.com by Roger and Salem Salloom© 1997

When my girlfriend and I go out for pizza, I pay for it. If I didn't we couldn't go out very much. I make more money than she does.

Sometimes she say's I pay for everything so that I can kiss her at night. But that's not why I do it. Same guys think that way but I don't.

When I kiss her something takes over my body. She has neat lips.

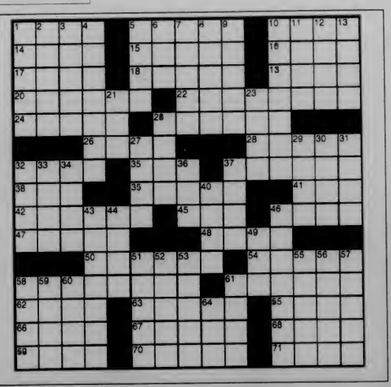
I don't know why I make more money than she does. She's as smart as me... even smarter in same ways.

It's all confusing.

All I really do know is that since last February 1st she owes me $123.48 for pizzas and drinks.

ACROSS

1 From a distance
5 Crystallizes
10 On guard
14 Garage job
15 Dark
16 Indian tribe
17 Type of exam
18 Desert plant
19 Ring it!
20 Idea
22 It's often in spaghetti sauce
24 Avance
25 Indian leader
26 Housepiant
28 Nonsensical
32 Kittens' cries
35 Sweet potato
37 Actress Bergman
38 Mont. neighbor
39 Amazing
41 Too
42 Tooth component
45 — Paulo, Brazil
46 Do as told
47 Motioniess
48 Small weight
50 Type of code
54 Kitchen gadget
58 Cattle breed
61 Main course
62 "Garfield" pooch
63 Aromatic flavoring
65 "Gone With the Wind" mansion
66 Found a buyer
67 Kind of wave
68 Sinister
69 Low card
70 Flowers-to-be
71 Judge



DOWN

1 "— Came Jones"
2 Uproar
3 Subside
4 Differences in elevation
5 San —, Puerto Rico
6 UK part
7 Pack animal
8 Invigorate
9 Lilac
10 Seat belt fabric
11 Territory
12 Small stream
13 Shout
21 Sonnet's kin
23 Dilute
25 Act like a beaver
27 No-hitter specialist Nolan
29 Hussein, for one
30 Softball team
31 Whirlpool
32 Skirt length
33 Idyllic spot
34 Fade
36 Prefix meaning "wrong"
37 Frankenstein's helper
40 Harps on
43 Disastrous event
44 Urge
46 Left out
49 Prince Valiant's son
51 Layers of paint
52 Tennessee — Ford
53 Like some remarks
55 Hunger for
56 Creepy
57 Domain
58 "— in Space"
59 Aroma
60 Long river
61 Slippery ones
64 Gloomy

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

W	O	R	K		A	D	A	M		B	O	G
B	A	H	I	A		L	O	G	A		A	Q	U	A
A	L	L	I	O	N		B	O	U	N	D	L	E	S	S
R	E	O		S	P	U	R	T		O	D	E	T	S
		C	A	L	M		T	U	C	S	O	N
B	O	T	A	N	Y		J	E	R	R	Y
E	A	R	N	S		Y	O	G	A		P	A	N	S
S	H	E	A		R	A	N	G	E	R		R	I	O	T
S	U	P	E	R		O	W	E	S		S	E	D	G	E
		A	M	A	S	I	S		I	N	S	E	A	M
D	I	N	G	E	D		O	R	E	S
U	N	I	O	N		A	I	G	A	E		A	U	F
A	N	N	O	U	N	C	E	R		Z	E	B	R	A
L	E	N	S		W	H	E	E	L		E	V	E	N	T
A	R	E		T	E	A	R		D	A	D	S

10-25-99 © 1999, United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Broccoli-Rice Casserole
Falafel Pocket Sandwiches with Falafel Sauce
DINNER
Beef Fajita
Baked Ziti
Tofu Fajita
Past Bar

Worcester
LUNCH
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Broccoli-Rice Casserole
Falafel Pocket Sandwiches with Falafel Sauce
DINNER
Beef Fajita
Baked Ziti
Tofu Fajita
Past Bar

Hampshire
LUNCH
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Broccoli-Rice Casserole
Falafel Pocket Sandwiches with Falafel Sauce
DINNER
Beef Fajita
Baked Ziti
Tofu Fajita
Past Bar

Berkshire
LUNCH
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Broccoli-Rice Casserole
Falafel Pocket Sandwiches with Falafel Sauce
DINNER
Beef Fajita
Baked Ziti
Tofu Fajita
Past Bar

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Vanessa "the Riddler"
Photo Technitian	"Bam-Bam" Barbara Bradbury
Copy Editor	"Mugsy" Poulten
Production Supervisor	Burt "Capone"
Production Staff	"Dr." Ben "Evil" "The Penguin" Rodrigues

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Monday, September 25, 1999

UM nets A-10 conference crown

Forward Abbott rocks Owls in Senior Day spectacular

Forward Lindsay Abbott found the net twice yesterday as the Minutewomen shredded A-10 rival Temple to capture the regular-season conference title.

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

The day began with three stellar seniors taking center stage. But once the smoke finally cleared from Richard F. Garber field, a foe had been vanquished and a title had been won behind the greatest team effort of the '99 season.

The Massachusetts field hockey team (9-8, 5-0 Atlantic 10) turned its Senior Day match-up with Temple into a win for the ages, cruising to a 3-0 victory to capture the regular-season A-10 title. UM forward Lindsay Abbott (Northampton, MA) netted a pair of second half goals, as the Maroon and White won its fifth game in a row and locked up the No.1 seed in the conference tournament.

"We know that we can compete on the field with anyone right now," said UMass coach Patty Shea. "We know the things that make us successful, and the last five games, we've really focused on that."

UM came into yesterday's battle on the highest of high notes, having dispatched of conference foe St. Joseph's in convincing fashion on Friday. The opening moments of yesterday's action saw the Minutewomen picking up in much the same manner, as forwards Nicole Bardell and Kristen Schmidt barged through the Owl defense and put intense pressure on TU keeper Serene McGrath that wouldn't let up for 70 minutes.

"We came out to play hard, and play our game for a change," said Bardell. "We came out from the opening whistle and tried to take it to them. We knew that they wanted this win just as badly as we did."

Temple (6-12, 3-1 A-10) righted the ship early, though, forcing three consecutive penalty corners less than seven minutes into the game. Maroon and White defensive gem Kerry Ann Jaggarsar thwarted two of the plays single-handedly, while UM keeper Michelle Crooks flashed an acrobatic save to stymie the third. UMass worked some inside magic of its own at the 24:35 mark, when the first of the Minutewomen's eight penalty corners gave Anke Bruenner a good look at the Owl net. Her blast was gloved aside by McGrath, but the Owls' inability to clear the ball nearly cost them anyway. UM co-captain Lucy Koch just missed on the put-back, though, and Temple breathed a sigh of relief.

The Owls snatched back the momentum with three more penalty corners over the next four minutes, but the net-minding of Crooks and the clearing prowess of back Patty Robinson kept Temple off the board. Shea sent freshman forward Erika

Turn to CONFERENCE, page 7

UM slams door on Delaware

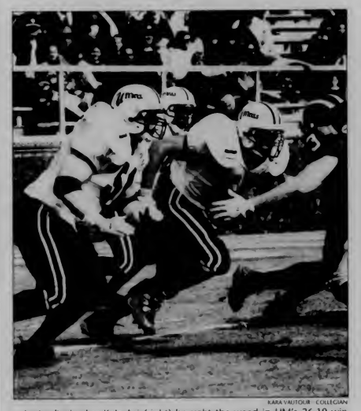
Late surge lays Blue Hens to rest

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

NEWARK, De. – When the drawbridge was down, a flock of Delaware Blue Hens stormed into the Massachusetts football team's fort, looting it for everything it had. But once night began to fall, the horns blew and the gateway to the end zone closed up, solidifying the Minutemen's 26-19 victory at Delaware Stadium this weekend.

UMass	26
Delaware	19

Butter Pressey took it in from 20 yards out to give the Blue Hens a 19-7 lead with 6:19 left in the second quarter. It would be all they would see in the scoring column, as the Minutemen scored 19 unanswered points, running its streak to three games in which they have held their opponents scoreless in the second half.



Delaware's wing-T attack sputtered while UMass (4-3 overall, 4-1 Atlantic 10) began moving downfield behind Marcel Shipp, who rushed a career-high 44 times for 176 yards. The junior tailback answered the call, scoring the first of his two touchdowns to cut the deficit to 19-14 with 2:41 to go in the second quarter. Doug White's 34-yard field goal as time ran out in the half dug further into the Blue Hen lead.

"It was a great, great football game," head coach Mark Whipple said. "[There was] a lot of emotion on both sides. Both teams played their tails off and laid it on the line and we were just fortunate enough to come out with a win at the end."

The win was the Minutemen's third in a row, countering a three-game skid in September and early October that endangered their chances of a return trip to the post-season. Delaware lost its second straight at home, falling to 4-3 on the season, 2-2 in the conference. UMass had not beaten the Blue Hens in Newark since 1990.

Both teams had numerous opportunities, but each time the defenses held their ground. Todd Bankhead threw three interceptions in the first half, including one by Tyrone Bowden in the end zone that went 66 yards the other way to set the Blue Hens up in UMass territory. On that drive, the Minuteman defense held Craig Cummings short of the goal line on fourth-and-goal at the

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 7

Junior linebacker Kole Ayi (right) brought the wood in UM's 26-19 win over Delaware on Saturday, to the tune of 10 tackles and a sack.

Robinson, Schmidt lead UM past St. Joe's

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

You were drowning. You were being sucked beneath the rising tide by an evil undertow, hauling you kicking and screaming into a deep, dark abyss from which there was no escape.

But at the last second, you managed to break free and light your way back toward the light. Just as you thought your lungs would explode, you crashed through the water's surface into the autumn air above.

You are the Massachusetts field hockey team.

After sinking amidst a sea of top-ranked national programs earlier this season, the Minutewomen finally clawed their way back to the .500 mark with an emotionally charged 2-0 win over St. Joseph's on Friday. Host UMass (8-8, 4-0 Atlantic 10) came full-force at the Hawks from the opening whistle steamrolling to a 16-7 shot advantage in what was quite possibly the most important game of the year for the Maroon and White.

"The big thing is that this team fought back, and now we're at .500," said UM coach Patty Shea, who watched her squad win its fourth game in a row to stay unbeaten in the A-10 conference. "It's a great boost for the team. They're starting now to get into a little bit of a groove and it's a good time of the year for that to happen."

St. Joseph's (11-4, 2-1 A-10) came into the 7 p.m. game having won eight of its last 10, including four straight, since a bumbling 12-1 thrashing at the hands of No.6 Old Dominion on October 3rd. Second year coach Joan Broderick had reason to smile after the Hawks' Senior Day home win over Lehigh on Wednesday, when fifth-year stars Siobhan Leavy and Pam Bilger, who both red-shirted in 1995 under then-SJU coach Michele Finegan, combined for two goals and an assist to topple the Mountain Hawks.

Broderick would not be smiling for long on Friday. UMass set the Hawks back on their heels early, as forward Kristen Schmidt took the Minutewomen's first possession, and cruised unhindered toward the SJU goal and keeper Lauren Bradley. Only a last minute SJU defensive sag, and an aggressive move by the brash Bradley, prevented UM from drawing first blood early.

"We went hard to the ball, all over the field," said UM back Patty Robinson. "We didn't wait for them to do something; we took it to them and took advantage of our chances."

The UMass attack would continue its assault from there, as forward Nicole Bardell evaded a handful of Hawk backs, and once again challenged Bradley. That set up the first of eight Maroon and White penalty corners, a scant three minutes into the contest. In what has become a delightfully familiar scenario for the Minutewomen, scoring ace Anke Bruenner rifled home the penalty corner shot for her 12th goal of the season, staking UM to a very early 1-0 lead.

"Our main focus was to put a goal in early, so we weren't pressuring ourselves," Schmidt said. "We depend a lot on our corners, which are great."

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 7

Huskies and Eagles spell lost weekend for hockey

UM loses edge in NU action

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

BOSTON — When Northeastern University forward Brian Sullivan hauled down UMass winger R.J. Gates with 11:28 to play in the second period of Friday night's game between the two Hockey East schools, it appeared that the wheels were about to fall off the wagon for the Huskies.

The visiting Minutemen had just cut the NU lead to 2-1 only 14 seconds earlier on a goal by senior alternate captain Jeff Blanchard, and had a chance to tie the game while on power play. However, the tides turned right back in the favor of the Huskies before UMass could even blink.

Junior defenseman Ives Culgin tried to glove down a Northeastern clearing attempt in the offensive zone, but the puck hopped over his hand and onto neutral ice. Huskies forward Leon Hayward pounced on the dive, and walked in all alone on UMass netminder Markus Helanen, sliding home a shot between the pads of the Finn.

Just like that, it was 3-1 in favor of the hosts, who would tack on another goal en route to a 4-1 win in front of 1,503 at Matthews Arena. The loss dropped the Minutemen to 0-2, while Northeastern improved to 2-0.

"It was just one of those funny bounces over his glove. That's a play that Joey makes cleanly 99 percent of the time," said UMass hockey coach Joe Mallen in reference to the third Huskies goal. "It took a bad hop and their guy was able to walk in and beat Markus. This is a game of inches,

Turn to NORTHEASTERN, page 7

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

This shot of despondent UMass goalie Markus Helanen pretty well sums up the ice hockey team's rough weekend at the hands of Northeastern and Boston College.

Top-ranked BC too hot for UM

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

If there is one thing you cannot do in hockey, it's spot the No. 1 team in the nation four goals. On Saturday, the Massachusetts hockey team did just that. Boston College steamrolled into the Mullins Center poised and ready to play. The end result was a 4-1 defeat of the host Minutemen in a game that was totally dominated by the Eagles.

Open ice was the eventual downfall for UMass, as it gave up three goals in 4 on 4 situations. The experience of Boston College showed when they drew numerous penalties on the Minutemen for hitting after the whistle.

"I thought we played pretty well overall," coach Joe Mallen said of his team's effort. "I think we'll get a lot out of this game."

The tone of the game was set early when Hobey Baker Award candidate Jeff Farkas dented the twine midway through the first period, giving Boston College a lead that they would not relinquish.

At the start of the second period, with the score just 1-0, the Eagles came out with a vengeance scoring three times in just under six minutes. The first came from junior Brian Giontia, while the next two came from Farkas to complete the hat trick.

"We not only got beat by a good team, we got beat by a great player [Farkas]," Mallen said.

It looked as though UMass would claw back into the game late in the second period when sophomore Jedd Crumb scored on a two-man advan-

UM comes up with one big play too many for UD

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

NEWARK, Del. The team that makes the big plays tends to win the football game, and there was no shortage of them when Massachusetts locked horns with Delaware on Saturday.

Matching one another punch for punch in Atlantic 10 fisticuffs with playoff implications, UMass and Blue Hens traded game-swinging plays until the final gun sounded with the visiting Minutemen ahead 26-19.

The first such play came near the six minute mark in the opening period, when Hen linebacker Dan Malhern intercepted Massachusetts signal caller Todd Bankhead at the UD 35 and trucked the ball to the opposing 45 yard line.

The results of that grab were immediately felt, as three plays later, after a 37-yard Matt Nagy to Brett Veach Delaware hook-up brought the ball to the UMass eight, the Hens' Jamin Elliott tied the game at seven.

Not all the contest's big plays were so directly felt, though. Hen linebacker Tyrone Bowden put a quick stop to a Minuteman drive by stepping in front of a Bankhead attempt at the goal line. Bowden returned the pick to the Delaware 34, where the ball was stripped by one of a number of UMass tacklers. The fumble conveniently ended up in the arms of teammate Mike Cecere, who rumbled 49 yards to the Massachusetts 17 before being hauled down by Minuteman tailback Marcel Shipp.

That bizarre play was answered soon after by another one worthy of the highlight reel, as Hen back Craig Cummings, in an effort to put Delaware into the lead, was shackled by UMass linebacker Matt Dawson and promptly planted by a surging Jeremy Robinson to stop the Blue Hens inside the one yard line.

Coming full circle, Bankhead threw his third interception of the half when UDel backer Brian McKenna extended high to one-hand a spiral at the Massachusetts eleven. In the next play, fullback Steve Ricco put the Hens in front, 14-7.

Delaware's third score of the day came on the heels of yet another momentum-shifter – a blocked punt by linebacker Melvin Steele. Bowden recovered the loose ball at the UMass 40 with 7:49 left in the half. Blue Hen tailback Butter Pressey went in from the 20-yard line to push his squad up by two touchdowns.

Minuteman linebacker Kole Ayi would later help his team's cause by bobbling and intercepting a Nagy pass, and returning it to the UD 7 with just under a minute left in the third quarter, where UMass kicker Jason Cherry would eventually boot a 21-yard field goal to put Massachusetts ahead 20-19.

The play that would eventually put to rest the Blue Hens' effort came with nearly 13 minutes left in the game when A-10 Rookie of the Week Corey Potter blitzed, and made a shoe-string sack of Nagy. The tackle, one of three sacks on the afternoon by the freshman defender, would force the starting field general to leave the game with a sprained ankle. His replacement, the experienced Brian Ginn, was ineffective in leading his team to the end zone to tie the game, which was at 26-19 in favor of UMass. Ginn was sacked three times while completing only one pass for 18 yards in his three drives at the helm.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVJ Issue 35 — Tuesday, October 26, 1999

Psychology professor to speak on genocide

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

Ervin Staub, a University of Massachusetts psychology professor, will be the first speaker in this year's series of Distinguished Faculty Lectures. His speech, entitled "Bystanders: Genocide, Youth Violence, and the Creation of Caring," will be held today in Memorial Hall at 4 p.m.

Staub's talk will focus on how people, especially children, are impacted by genocide and mass violence. He will also examine the effects bystanders can have on violence.

"Bystanders are witnesses to events in the world," Staub said in a statement regarding the speech. "My talk will look at the many different aspects of being a bystander.

"Parents, adults and peers can protect children from treatment that is one source of youth violence. I will talk about raising caring children, looking not only at the role of parents, but also at the role of schools," Staub said.

Staub, author of "The Roots of Evil: The Origins of Genocide and Other Group Violence," is currently working on a second book on the issue of raising caring and non-violent children.

His first book explores the roots of the Holocaust, the disappearances in Argentina and the genocide against the Armenians and in Cambodia. The 1989 book was the background for a 1998 television series shown on the Discovery Channel and the BBC. In the book, Staub also discussed the origins of torture and war and described the evolution of non-aggressive, caring individuals.

In the past, Staub has worked with police officers through a training program in California following the Rodney King incident in Los Angeles to reduce unnecessary use of force. He was also a co-organizer of "Beyond Lamentation: Options for Preventing Genocidal Violence," an international conference in 1997 in Sweden.

In addition to writing another book, he is working on a project in Rwanda on healing, forgiveness and reconciliation in response to the genocide in that country. The John Templeton Foundation is supporting the project through a grant.

Staub has been a professor since 1971 and will receive the Chancellor's Medal following his lecture. Each of the four professors involved in the Distinguished Faculty Lecture Series will be awarded the Chancellor's Medal, the highest honor given by the University to professors for exemplary and extraordinary service.

Stolen bikes alarm police

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Police Department has issued a public safety alert after four mountain bicycles were stolen last week. All bikes were locked after being left by their owners.

Three of the bikes were taken in the early afternoon on weekdays, while the fourth was taken overnight on Sunday. All but one disappeared from academic buildings.

Combined, all four bikes were worth $2500.

The UMPD recommends that the police should be contacted by anyone seeing someone cutting a bike lock or if someone is seen acting suspiciously around bicycles.

They also suggest that all bikes serial numbers be recorded, and that security locks that are affordable should be purchased.

Buchanan leaves GOP for Reform party

By Thomas B. Edsall
Washington Post

Patrick J. Buchanan, whose presidential bids in 1992 and 1996 bedeviled the Republican establishment, Monday severed his lifelong ties to the GOP and declared his candidacy for the Reform Party presidential nomination.

At a news conference packed with 350 supporters chanting "Go Pat Go" along with an impressive array of Reform Party leaders, Buchanan, who had been a top aide in the administrations of Presidents Richard M. Nixon and Ronald Reagan, denounced both major parties as controlled by big corporations and special interests.

"Our two parties have become nothing but two wings of the same bird of prey," he told the crowd. "Neither fights today with conviction and courage to rescue God's country from the cultural and moral pit into which she has fallen."

The former television commentators' entry into the Reform Party could set off a bitter battle for the party's nomination between forces loyal to party founder Ross Perot, some of whom are backing Buchanan, and those aligned with Minnesota Gov. Jesse Ventura, who has said Buchanan is not a good fit for the party.

Without mentioning Texas Gov. George W. Bush and his huge fund-raising cache, Buchanan said that this year "money men" have stacked the deck against "candidates of ideas" by frontloading the primaries to place a premium on cash: "Both parties seek out the hollow men, the malleable men, willing to read from teleprompters speeches scripted by consultants."

To a standing ovation, Buchanan echoed his call to arms from his 1996 campaign: "Let me say to the money boys and the Beltway elites who think that, at long last, they have pulled up their drawbridge and locked us out forever: You don't know this peasant army. We have not yet begun to fight."

Buchanan's entry into the Reform Party nomination fight was welcomed by Republicans and conservative loyalists to the GOP, with renewed charges of anti-Semitism and accusations that his most recent book demeans the U.S. role in fighting Hitler.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a critic before Buchanan announced his abandonment of the Republican Party, claimed vindication: "Pat Buchanan left the Republican Party the day he questioned America's involvement in defeating Nazi Germany. ...I do not mourn his departure." McCain then took a swipe at Bush, who had declined to criticize Buchanan: "Too many of my party's leaders made the mistake of trying to appease Buchanan... Our party must stand on principle, and on principle, Pat Buchanan is clearly wrong."

Yesterday, Bush broke his silence on Buchanan: "Pat sees an America unable and unwilling to compete in the free market; Republicans welcome competition because we know America's best is the best in the world. Pat sees an America that should have stayed home while Hitler overran Europe and perpetrated the Holocaust. Republicans are proud of America's role in defeating Nazi Germany."

Buchanan gets about nine percent support in most polls – six percent comes from the GOP and three from the Democratic side, for a net Republican loss of three percent, primarily from the ranks of social conservatives. While just a fraction of the electorate, three percentage points can prove critical in a close contest.

In a recent New Hampshire poll, for example, in a contest pitting Bush against Democrat Bill Bradley, Bush led by one percent, 45 percent to 44 percent. But with Buchanan in the race, Bradley pulled ahead, 45 percent to 41 percent, with Buchanan getting 5 percent.

Buchanan, long identified with very conservative views on social issues, yesterday tailored his comments to Reform Party activists, many of whom support abortion rights. He did not, for example, say the word abortion – once his trademark issue, making only peripheral mention of "that abomination they call Roe v. Wade," the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion. Instead, Buchanan stressed his protectionist policies – stands believed to resonate strongly with normally Democratic union

Turn to BUCHANAN page 3

Pumpkins!

Thirteen-month-old Nicholas Debuque enjoys the pumpkins at Atkins Farm.

U.N. official steps in to guide Kosovo village

By Roy Gutman
Newsday

DUBOVC, Yugoslavia – Driving through this devastated village in rural north central Kosovo, the United Nations' new municipal administrator spotted a fine and very human problem – an ethnic Albanian family living in a tent surrounded by the rubble of their destroyed farm and barn – and a possible solution nearby.

Denny Lane, 60, a retired U.S. Army colonel, stepped from the driver's seat of his Toyota Land Cruiser and walked up to Sahri Ahmeti, an ethnic Albanian farmer who was using a pickaxe to chop up the debris. "Good morning. I'm the new mayor of Vustri," Lane said, using the Albanian name for Vucitrn, the municipality of which Dubovc is one of several villages.

He pointed to a half-finished house 500 yards away. "If we finish the house, will the owner let you live there this winter?" Ahmeti said the house belonged to his cousin, who had taken refuge with his family in Pristina, and he might be willing to accommodate a second family.

"Fine," said Lane. "We are proposing a plan under which the United Nations, in exchange for completing an unfinished house, will take title to a building for 18 months and provide you shelter. That will carry you through two winters."

Lane is one of the U.N.'s corps of administrators now on the scene, point man for a mandate to fill the vacuum left when the Serbian government withdrew all services, employees and movable assets, even garbage trucks, in mid-June. He will administer a U.N.-

Turn to KOSOVO page 3

"Ragtime" thespian's arrest highlights racial profiling debate

By Josh Getlin
Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK – Alton White still remembers what apologetic New York police officers said when they set him free: He was simply in the wrong place at the wrong time.

On a hot July afternoon, the black star of "Ragtime" on Broadway was arrested in the lobby of his Harlem apartment building, along with five other men. Police were looking for two Latinos suspected of dealing drugs, but they handcuffed everyone in the vestibule and took them to the local precinct for questioning.

White was held for five hours, even though police quickly determined he had no criminal record, no gun and no drugs on him. He was strip-searched, and told to be quiet when he objected. By the time White was released, he had missed that night's performance – and was so traumatized that he could not return to the show for three more days.

"This kind of stuff happens to black men in America all the time," said White, who is readying a lawsuit against the New York Police Department, alleging that his constitutional rights were violated. "Do you think this would have happened if I was Caucasian? They saw that I was black, they were looking for someone, and that's all these police officers had to know."

Although White and his attorneys from the New York Civil Liberties Union are discussing a settlement with the city, he says his $750,000 lawsuit is not just about money. The soft-spoken actor wants police to implement changes that would prevent such race-based detentions and make individual officers more accountable.

In the weeks since his arrest, the 35-year-old White has become more of a media celebrity than he had ever dreamed. His ordeal alarmed many New Yorkers, and sang "Make Them Hear You" – a rousing song about racial justice from "Ragtime" – at a Broadway fund-raiser for presumed New York Senate candidate Hillary Rodham Clinton yesterday.

White's detention may seem minor in a city that has been rocked by allegations of police cruelty and violence. Three officers were convicted earlier this year in the sodomizing of Abner Louima at a Brooklyn precinct, and four others will go on trial next year for the shooting death of Amadou Diallo – an unarmed West African peddler who was mistaken for a rapist and caught in a hail of 41 bullets as he stood in the vestibule of his Bronx apartment building.

But the actor's experience is far more typical of the police treatment that minorities say occurs daily in New York and other cities. Indeed, complaints about "racial profiling" by police are heard across America. Such profiling, which is illegal, takes place when officers use race as the chief criterion to stop or arrest minority suspects, instead of specific information about a particular crime.

"Racial profiling poses a great ideological problem in police work – the old question of liberty vs. security," said Paul Chevigny, a New York University law professor and author of several books on police behavior. "We all insist on our constitutional rights, and racial profiling is wrong. But we also want the crime rate to keep going down, and nobody says that police have an easy job of patrolling the streets."

Amid protests over the practice in New Jersey, Maryland, Illinois and other states, President Clinton has directed federal law enforcement agencies to collect data on the race, ethnicity and gender of people they stop and search.

Nowhere has the issue triggered more angry debate than in New York, where Mayor Rudolf Giuliani has emphatically denied that police engage in racial profiling. If officers stop and frisk a disproportionate number of minorities, he says, it is because victims have alerted them to the ethnicity of suspects. The mayor has defended 1998 statistics showing that more than 83 percent of the 27,000 "stop and frisk" incidents recorded by a special police unit involved minorities.

But White recalls that police told him they were looking for two Latino men, ages 17 to 21, when they burst into his building. The Broadway actor is dark-skinned and clearly in his mid-30s. Even after neighbors implored police to let White go, saying that he was a peaceful resident, officers insisted on arresting him.

Although White's neighborhood has its share of crime, it is not one of the city's most violent. Last month, officers made 41 arrests in the 33rd Precinct compared to 125 arrests in East New York's 75th Precinct, easily the city's most dangerous community, according to police statistics. While New York's murder rate is up this year, the 33rd Precinct had a decline in other crimes, with rape down 33.3 percent compared to last year, felony assault down 15.8 percent and drug arrests down 6.7 percent.

Giuliani has heralded the city's 54 percent drop in crime over the past six years, but White's story rekindles an old debate: How much of the decrease comes at the expense of civil liberties?

"They say we should be happy because crime is going down in New York, but I don't feel safer in my home after what happened," said White. The actor considers his experience a racial wake-up call.

"They didn't care," he said. "And the funny thing is, they were very

Boy Scouts get their day in court

By Lyle Denniston
Baltimore Sun

WASHINGTON – The Boy Scouts of America, claiming a constitutional right to decide who can join its troops, asked the Supreme Court yesterday to allow it to maintain its ban on homosexuals as Scouts or leaders.

"This case," its lawyers argued, "involves constitutional rights at the heart of our free society" – including the right of a private group to follow "its own moral code."

The 6 million-member organization urged the court to free it from state anti-discrimination laws and, in particular, from a New Jersey "public accommodations" law that led a state court to rule that the Scouts acted illegally in dismissing a homosexual as a deputy scoutmaster.

Conceding that "many people of good will believe that Boy Scouting's position is misguided," the Scouts contended that issues of morality should not be "made the subject of government compulsion."

Under a policy the Scouts have followed since at least 1978, no boy or man can be admitted to Scouting, or remain a Scout or leader, if he is an "avowed homosexual." The policy treats homosexuality as morally wrong and thus in violation of two Scouting [illegible]. The New Jersey case grew out of the [illegible] Dale of Matawan. Dale rose to the rank of Eagle Scout [illegible] became an assistant scoutmaster. He [illegible] publicly declared himself to be gay while [illegible] University.

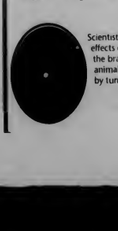
The New Jersey Supreme Court [illegible] in favor in August, found the Scouts' policy [illegible] because its overall membership policy [illegible] it has ruled that forcing the Scouts [illegible] fate any right of the Scouts to choose the [illegible] associate.

The Scouts' now appeal argued that [illegible] Court intervene to provide guidance, and [illegible] cases in which "various people with religious and moral [illegible] to those of Boy Scouting" have sued, seeking [illegible] Scout membership and leadership positions.

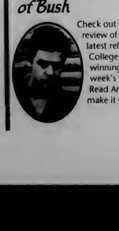


It also noted that the New Jersey Supreme Court [illegible] with earlier rulings by four other state supreme courts and by [illegible] appeals court, all of which protected the Scouts' membership [illegible]

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 63	HIGH: 56	HIGH: 55
LOW: 35	LOW: 31	LOW: 32

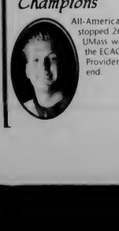
SOURCE: CNN.COM



Pigs In Space

Scientists are studying the effects of space flight on the brain processes of animals, and you can too by turning to page 3.

IN THIS PAGE 3



The Science of Bush

Check out the Collegian's review of the British band's latest release. Also, Smith College presents a Pulitzer winning play, and this week's Hip Hop insights. Read Arts today. We'll make it worth your while.

ARTS PAGE 6

ECAC Champions

All-American Todd Huntley stopped 26 shots to lead the UMass water polo team to the ECAC Championship in Providence, RI this week end.

SPORTS PAGE 12

Arts & Living 6
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 1
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Police Log

Arrests
Oct. 24
Joseph Murray, 19, of Springfield, was arrested after being pulled over. Police discovered an outstanding warrant for his arrest after running his name through the computer.
Oct. 24
Joseph Cahill, 24, of Stoneham, was arrested after violating a restraining order.
Oct. 24
Ryan Robinson, 18, of Springfield, and Antoine Diaz, 19, also of Springfield, were both arrested after a suspicious vehicle was reported. Robinson was charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon and for violating a trespass order. Diaz was arrested after police discovered an outstanding warrant for his arrest after running his name through the computer. He was also charged with violation of a trespass.
Oct. 24
William Tammaro, 19, of Burlington, was arrested and charged with operating a vehicle under the influence and speeding.
Oct. 24
Michael Hall, 18, of Springfield, was arrested and charged with assault and battery, assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, possession of liquor by a person under the age of 21 and violation of a trespass order.
Oct. 25
Scott Spicer, 21, of Nashua, N.H., was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct and assault and battery.
Oct. 25
Scott Kilne, 21, of Peabody, was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct and assault and battery.
Oct. 25
Mark Diperna, 18, of Wayland, was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct and assault and battery.
Oct. 25
Michael Rollins, 19, of Whitman, was arrested and charged with possession of alcohol by a minor, speeding at a more than reasonable speed, improper operation of a motor vehicle due to noise, and possession of a class D drug.
Oct. 22
Kyle Neeson, 19, of West Newton, was arrested and charged with underage possession of alcohol.
Oct. 22
Eric Marshall, 20, of Belchertown, was arrested and charged with operating a motor vehicle with a revoked license, a number plate violation and possession of a class D drug.

Accident-Property Damage
Oct. 25
In a one-car accident, a car collided with a telephone pole, Amherst Police were dispatched.

Annoying Behavior
Oct. 24
Individuals were reported to be hitting rocks with sticks near James Residence Hall on Massachusetts Avenue.
Oct. 25
Staff reported an on-going problem with an individual at the Campus Center.
Oct. 23
An individual was reported to have gained illegal access to a computer in Washington Residence Hall on Fearing Street.

Breaking and Entering/Burglary
Oct. 25
An individual identified property taken in a previous break in in Lot 22 on University Drive.

Suspicious Person/Activity
Oct. 24
An individual was taken into protective custody at the Robsham Visitors Center.

Vandalism
Oct. 24
Windows were broken on two motor vehicles near the Orchard Hill Walkway on Thatcher Way.
Oct. 23
A room was trashed in Chadbourne Dorm on Orchard Hill Dr. The incident is under investigation.
Oct. 22
Tires were reportedly punctured by a screwdriver over the weekend in Lot 11 on Stadium Drive.

Sheinbein Gets 24 Years

By Lee Hockstader and Craig Whitlock
Washington Post

An Israeli court sentenced convicted murderer Samuel Sheinbein to 24 years in prison Sunday, saying the Maryland teenager had displayed "cruelty, wickedness and malice" in killing Alfredo Enrique Tello Jr. in Montgomery County, Maryland two years ago.

"The actual murder, together with the monstrous acts that were committed to the body, show that the sanctity of life and a person's dignity in both life and death are values to which the defendant attaches no significance," said Uri Goren, president of Tel Aviv District Court, reading in Hebrew from the sentencing document.

Sheinbein, slightly pale but impassive, stood flanked by police, his hands clasped behind his back, as the sentence was delivered.

"In light of his age, and in light of the severity of his actions, the defendant therefore deserves a severe and deterring punishment," Goren said.

Sheinbein will be eligible to apply for furloughs of 24 to 96 hours beginning in 2003 and to apply for parole in 2013, when he is 33. He is also eligible for conjugal visits immediately. There was no immediate decision on where Sheinbein will be imprisoned.

If he had been tried in Maryland, as both Israel and the United States wanted, he would have faced a maximum punishment of life in prison.

The sentencing concludes a two-year legal odyssey that began when Sheinbein, then 17, killed Tello, dismembered his body with a power saw, burned his torso and stashed it in an Aspen Hill garage near Sheinbein's home.

Days later, already a suspect in the killing, Sheinbein fled to Israel with the help of his father, Sol, who holds both U.S. and Israeli citizenship. The incident provoked a diplomatic furor, and in the lengthy court battle that followed, the United States and the Israeli government tried to have Sheinbein extradited to stand trial in Montgomery County, but they were blocked by the Israeli Supreme Court.

Aaron Needle, who was indicted with Sheinbein in Tello's death, committed suicide in the Montgomery County jail on the eve of his trial last year.

Maryland prosecutors said they were disappointed that the Israeli court didn't impose a stiffer sentence and expressed frustration that Sheinbein could be eligible for furloughs and parole while still a relatively young man.

Mystery mammals discovered

By Guy Gugliotta
Washington Post

The hunters carry AK-47s. Along stream beds, unexploded ordnance pokes through the encroaching jungle. Villagers use shell casings for planters and have made fish ponds in the craters left by 500-pound bombs that blew up long ago.

Back then, the paths that wound through the Annamite Mountains were known as the Ho Chi Minh Trail – the backwoods supply train for communist insurgents during the Vietnam War.

Today, the Annamites, which mark the border between Vietnam and Laos, are rapidly gaining notice for another reason. Since 1992, scientists working there have found six large mammal species that had either never been seen before except by local people or were believed to be extinct.

In a world that supposedly had few such secrets left, the Annamites are rapidly becoming a zoological El Dorado: "It's always amazing to find a big animal that nobody's ever seen," said the Wildlife Conservation Society's George Amato, who conducted DNA testing on many of the new species.

The discoveries began in 1992, when Western scientists in the central Vietnam Annamites heard about a 200-pound cow-like animal unlike any other on Earth. Others have since been reported in Laos, and several have been captured. Laotians call them saola – or spindlehorns. This "false ox" represented an entirely new mammal genus.

Since then, scientists on both sides of the border have documented the existence of three other species never before seen outside the region, a striped hare, a giant muntjac, or barking deer, that weighs about 75 pounds; and a much smaller Truong Son muntjac, from the Truong Son range of the Annamites, that weighs about 35 pounds.

In addition, researchers have rediscovered Roosevelt's muntjac, first described during a 1929 hunting trip by former president Theodore Roosevelt's sons, and a wild pig, known as a warty pig or yellow pig, reported by a missionary at the end of the 19th century.

To give a sense of the significance of these discoveries, scientists note that the number of new or lost large mammal species encountered in the Annamites in the past decade equals the number found in the rest of the world during the entire 20th century.

"And it's not just that they're new, it's that what we're finding is very different," said Josh Ginsberg, Asia program director at the Wildlife Conservation Society. "These are very unusual animals."

The World Wildlife Fund's Steve Osofsky, senior program officer for species conservation, said the recent successes are largely "an access issue," noting that Vietnam and Laos were closed to Western scientists until recently. The Laotian government did not let outside researchers into the country until 1992.

Also, continued Osofsky, Vietnam and Laos have become interested in conservation and wildlife habitat in recent years. He noted that the first photographs of Vietnam's rare Javan rhino, taken by tripwire camera in a game preserve north of Ho Chi Minh City last summer, prompted a huge outpouring of national publicity.

Still, Ginsberg said, access is not everything. "The critical question we're kicking around is whether we are finding species only because [the region is] unexplored, or is there something interesting about the Annamites?" Ginsberg said. "I think the answer is both."

DAN SANTELLA/ COLLEGIAN

Waiting for the bus.
These pedestrians stand by the side of the road in downtown Amherst.

UNIVERSITY STORE'S
Textbook Annex
UMASS AMHERST

Please buy the textbooks you need today!
We return unsold books to the publishers!
• Be sure you have the books you need.

TEXTBOOK ANNEX

9AM-4PM Mon.-Fri. 545-3570

chili's GRILL & BAR
All You-Can-Eat Fajitas Every Tuesday!
Just $8.99*
©INDCO 1999
The best fajitas anywhere...and plenty of them. Flame grilled steak or chicken with peppers and onions served with warm tortillas, guacamole, pico de gallo, cheddar cheese & sour cream. All-You-Can-Eat Shrimp Fajitas...Just $9.99
*Per person, dine in only at Hadley Chili's • 426 Russell Street (Rt. 9) • 413-253-4008

■ Buchanan

continued from page 1

voters.

Buchanan portrayed his candidacy as a mission: "Can America remain forever a light unto the nations...a republic above whose sovereignty stands the sovereignty of God alone?" Buchanan asked his cheering audience. "That is our cause. And so it is that in the name of the Founding Fathers, we go forth to rescue America."

A foe of U.S intervention in Kosovo and in U.N. peacekeeping missions, Buchanan said he is running to "rescue" the United States from the threats of world government and further entanglement in "the bloody territorial and ethnic wars of the new century."

The televised announcement was marred by microphone problems. Otherwise, the turnout and the enthusiastic reception suggest Buchanan enters the Reform contest as an early favorite.

Real estate developer Donald Trump is the only other well known figure considering a bid. Serious challenges could be mounted by Perot, who has remained silent, and by Ventura, who has said he does not intend to run.

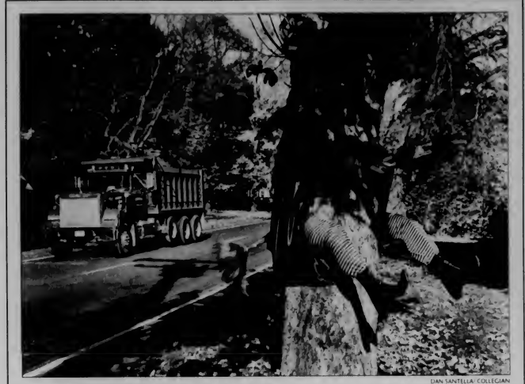
Candidates seeking the Reform Party nomination contest must first get on the ballots of the 30 states that currently do not give the party automatic recognition. Once past that hurdle, reform party members and others requesting a mail-in ballot then vote for the candidate of their choice.

Winning the Reform Party nomination would give Buchanan a national podium in the general election. He would qualify for $12.6 million in federal money, far more than the $3.9 million he raised this year as a Republican. And he would have the possibility of participating in the nationally televised debates.

■ Kosovo

continued from page 1



provided budget of as-yet-unknown dimensions, coordinate the efforts of a half-dozen aid agencies and issue decrees to the local government.

"It's a little like being a British colonial administrator," said Lane, who sounds like one, having been born to American parents but raised in Britain. He usually lives in Washington, D.C.

Three months of ethnic cleansing left Vucitrn municipality a wreck. Only one house in seven even has a roof. In the countryside, and particularly the Drenica hills, where the Kosovo Liberation Army operated during the Serb military offensive last spring, destruction was 90 per cent, and in this village it was total.

This was precisely the challenge Lane was seeking when he arrived here in late August. After sitting around for weeks in Sarajevo, where he had been a military adviser to the Bosnian army, for the U.N. to process his application, he went on his own to Mitrovica, U.N. headquarters for northern Kosovo. "What is the most difficult area you have? Where do you really need someone?" he asked the deputy administrator, Mary-Pat Silveira. She offered Vucitrn, and Lane said yes.

The biggest question mark is Lane's relations with the local authorities. "The provisional government here is pretty good," Lane said, referring to the local administration appointed by Hashem Thaci, former KLA commander and now self-described prime minister. Lane had no problem with their lack of official legitimacy in law.

DAN SANTELLA/ COLLEGIAN

Witch way did she go?
This witch went slightly off the road on route nine.

Scientists study space flight's effects on brain processes

By Jamie Talan
Newsday

Imagine Noah's Ark in space, free of elephants and giraffes but full of smaller creatures – rats, snails, crickets, fish, mice – flying weightless through the stars to help scientists solve mysteries of the human brain.

Two years after the space shuttle Columbia took off for a 16-day scientific journey – a flight that has come to be known simply as Neurolab – earthbound scientists who designed the 26 studies conducted on the mission have analyzed the data and are figuring out what it says about the risks of flight on human brains.

Even though astronauts have flown into space for decades, there have never been studies to look for subtle chemical or molecular changes that could explain the myriad sensory problems astronauts experience in weightlessness.

Now that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is planning longer missions and an international space station is under construction, it is necessary to know the neurological effects of space life. And understanding how the brain's complex sensory system adjusts to space could solve puzzling medical conditions on Earth, as well.

"There are basic and practical questions being addressed by these experiments," said Dr. Bernard Cohen, a professor of neurology at Mount Sinai School of Medicine in Manhattan. Cohen and the other scientists who participated in Neurolab are attending a Society for Neuroscience meeting in Florida this week to discuss some of the results from the mission.

Jerry Homick, deputy chief of NASA's medical sciences division at the Johnson Space Center, said NASA received 250 proposals for brain and spinal cord experiments in space and selected 26 teams. They worked together in designing studies and in some cases shared animals. There were studies on the physiology of the inner ear; spatial orientation and balance; structural, functional and cellular brain changes in microgravity [weightlessness] and upon re-entry; and experiments to trace the connections between the eyes and the brain's balance system.

"The most important finding," Homick said, "is the brain does adapt to different environments, and even when subtle changes occur in space, the brain does normalize."

The studies show that weightlessness does alter a number of brain processes –balance is disturbed, as are the circadian rhythms tied to our sleep-wake cycle – but these systems right themselves back on Earth.

Charles Fuller, a neuroscientist at the University of California, Davis, wanted to know whether the changes in sleep schedule – astronauts seemed to sleep an hour less during the mission – had anything to do with changes in the body's circadian system. This precise timing system regulates the daily rhythms that are part of all biological systems, including the human one. The human body is exquisitely timed on a 24-hour light-dark cycle that is in sync with the Earth's rotation. But in space, astronauts no longer have a 24-hour light-dark cycle; there is no rhythm to the day-night cycle.

Fuller and his colleagues designed a rat study to mimic the changes in the circadian cycle on Earth. One group lived under a 24-hour light-dark cycle, and the other experienced continuous light. The scientists found that the animals with no way to set their internal rhythm, those in constant light, had abnormal changes in their circadian systems – sleep patterns and hormone levels. Those with a 24-hour cycle had no alterations.

What's actually going on inside the cells of the brain in space? That question was addressed by Richard Nowakowski, a scientist at the Robert Wood Johnson Medical School in New Jersey. His experimental subjects were fetuses growing in 18 mice taken on board the space shuttle. On the third day of the mission, astronauts injected a dye into the developing mice to label the brain cells they wanted to study; a few hours later, the fetal mice were removed from their mothers and refrigerated for study back on Earth. Some of the animals were allowed to grow for another three days so scientists could follow the birth of new brain cells and their migration to other brain regions. On the sixth day of the flight, another series of fetal mice was worked up. These animals were the same prenatal age but had spent more time developing in weightlessness.

Nowakowski collected his samples on the day the flight returned and immediately headed back to New Jersey to hunt for changes. He found the brain size in the space fetuses was slightly smaller and each brain had fewer neurons than earth-bound samples. But the scientist may never know whether there would have been functional differences in these animals, because NASA would not let animals be born on the mission. "There was no guarantee that pups could nurse in weightlessness," Nowakowski said.

Oswald Steward, now director of the Reeve-Irvine Research Center at the University of California, Irvine, designed a study to assess whether animals developing in space were any different from earthbound contemporaries. Rat pups born at NASA were taken into space at the tender age of eight days, just before their eyes opened. Would they develop normal spatial orientation?

Steward, who conducted the study during his tenure at the University of Virginia, and his colleague Meredith Temple tested the animals soon after they returned to Earth and found very little difference in their ability to navigate a series of mazes.

Humans – in fact all creatures on Earth – navigate their surroundings on a certain plane of orientation pulled by the force of gravity. Up is up. Down is down. But in space there is no up, and orientation is multidimensional. So what happens as animals learn in space over time?

For James Pawelczyk, a payload specialist on the Neurolab mission and a professor of physiology and kinesiology at Pennsylvania State University, "the area most exciting" is the vestibular system – the sense of balance. "This is totally disrupted during space flight, and we return to Earth walking like old people. But we adapt within a few days. If we could capture that and bottle it, think about what we could do for an aging society."

ARE YOU FREE?

DOES YOUR COLLEGE MANDATE THOUGHT REFORM AT ORIENTATION?

ARE YOUR PRIVATE CONSCIENCE AND RELIGIOUS LIBERTY RESPECTED?

The Foundation for Individual Rights in Education, Inc. (FIRE) wants to protect your right, as students, to believe as your own minds and consciences direct. At private colleges and universities, it is guaranteed by principles of academic freedom and contract law, and, we believe, by various state and federal statutes.

FIRE believes that colleges and universities have no right to require you to reveal your political affiliations, sexual practices and attitudes, views on race and ethnicity, demeaning or embarrassing behaviors, intimate aspects of family relationships, or legally protected and privileged relationships (such as with lawyers, physicians, and clergy). Such invasions of privacy occur every year in mandatory freshman orientation, in campus judicial systems, in residential programs, and in "multicultural" and other "sensitivity training" sessions that seek to enforce one politically correct view of life. FIRE believes that you are free to discuss and debate all issues when and as you see fit, but that colleges and universities are morally and often legally prohibited from intruding coercively upon your privacy and conscience.

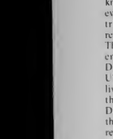
Help us to end this scandal and to secure compliance with the law. We invite you to send us accurate information about such violations and any documentation that you can share. We hope that you will include your name and contact information so that we might communicate with you, but, in all cases, we promise you the fullest possible confidentiality and respect of your privacy.

Please send your materials to:

The Rights and Privacy Project
Foundation for Individual Rights in Education, Inc.
437 Chestnut Street, Suite 200
Philadelphia, PA 19106
Email: fire@thefire.org Fax: 215-717-3440
Tel: 215-717-FIRE or 888-531-FIRE

FIRE is a nonprofit, tax-exempt educational foundation devoted to individual liberty and dignity; religious liberty; the rights of conscience; legal equality; due process; and academic freedom on our nation's campuses. Its founders and directors are Alan Charles Kors, Professor of History at the University of Pennsylvania, and Harvey A. Silverglate, attorney, legal journalist, and civil libertarian in Boston. Together they coauthored The Shadow University: The Betrayal of Liberty on America's Campuses.

Check FIRE's Website at www.thefire.org for reports on the progress of this campaign for your privacy, dignity, and freedom of speech and conscience.



FIRE
Because Your Liberty is a Precious Thing.

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Dela-Where?

Mention the words "road trip" to a guy, and the typical response is a kind of weird grin followed by the word, "cool". This isn't necessarily a bad thing, but Lord knows the next time I get an offer or even the idea of a road trip, some serious research is going into it. The idea was innocent enough, drive to Delaware to watch UMass football beat the living day lights out of the University of Delaware, or at least, that was the plan. The rest of the trip was, well let's say completely out of a horror novel. My travel companion, we shall call him Mr. F, and I left the comfort and relative security of UMass on Friday with money, directions, a hotel room already reserved in the sleepy town of Newark, Delaware and that special grin on our mugs.

Brian Lohnes

Everything was going smoothly when we arrived at Fairfield University about 2 hours south of us in Fairfield, Conn. We were planning on a short stop so we could beat the rush hour traffic in New York City. Well, let's just say that we didn't miss the rush hour, in fact we ran smack into the height of it. One would think that since we never ever surpassed five miles per hour a directional mistake would be impossible. Nothing is impossible my friends, as Mr. F and I soon found out.

Lesson 1.) Never ever under any circumstances trust the Internet. I got our directions from a seemingly reputable Internet site, much to our dismay they would have been better served as toilet paper. We followed them to the letter and do you have any idea where they got us? DOWNTOWN MANHATTAN! Yes, Mr. F and I were in my big red, 1982 Chevrolet Pick up truck battling the traffic of downtown Manhattan on a Friday night. To our left, Macy's Department store, in front of us was Fashion Avenue. I like to see New York on television. I even went there once but this was insanity at its best. There were more people out and about than I have ever seen in my life! Strangely, most of them chose to wander into the crosswalk just as the light turned green. Also note that the traffic lanes in New York city are better suited to fit Calista Flockhart laying on her side, so the big old truck was way, way out of place. Thanks to the good Lord above we found the Lincoln Tunnel and submerged our way over to New Jersey. That disaster behind us, I fired up my lap- top to try to make a new route.

That faux pas over, we figured that the worst was done and it would be clear sailing from here on out. That too proved to be both premature and stupid. After we reemerged from the tunnel, nature decided to take a swipe at us. What started as an innocent drizzle opened up into a Malaysian Typhoon style down pour which besides slowing us way down, soaked a bunch of stuff in the back of my truck. We had figured the drive to be about 4 hours because our Internet directions said it was 300.7 miles (I think they threw in the .7 just to rub it in a little). Well, we rolled into Newark Delaware at 10:30 PM! A mere nine and a half hours later.

Lesson 2.) Never ever stay at the Comfort Inn in Newark, Delaware. We pulled up to the hotel, a little worse for wear but happy to be alive. The grin had been replaced with a grimace but hey, we were there. We carried all our stuff into our room and flipped on the tube (which was accompanied by a channel guide that was fit for the same purpose of our directions). After calling my folks and letting them know of our difficulties we decided to get a bite to eat at the "First State Diner", the food was actually good; we had finally found a winner! Later on that evening we were relaxing and enjoying a Barley and Hop cocktail when we heard talking in the room next door. "Get the Fk off me!" We then decided that although we survived New York we would die in Delaware. Some more choice words and screaming followed, and I felt like a fourteen year old girl who just saw "Scream 2". I did the only thing that would work, I cried, and I cried a lot. Mr. F on the other hand soiled his pants.

Lesson 3.) When traveling figure out how much money you will need and double that figure. We figured that the University of Delaware would be charitable like UMass and allow students to attend games for free. Well, we parked for free and then laid out SIXTEEN dollars to get in. Sixteen bucks.....are you serious? Unfortunately, as the security guard informed me, they were. UMass beat Delaware, which was good; the fact that the Delaware fans looked as if they were ready to pounce on us at any minute was bad. We stuck around to see the Marching band play (Power and Class of New England? You bet your ass!).

We hopped back into the truck (more like dragged ourselves) for the ride back. We started at four o'clock arrived back here at about ten o'clock. Thankfully the ride home held no hidden treats, except for the fact that a visit to "Bob's Big Boy" which we expected to last about 10 minutes lasted an hour, and our waitress sounded a lot like Sammy Sosa

Lesson 4.) Road trips rule! Suspense, football, and fast food, it was probably the unhealthiest two days of my life but it was very memorable to say, the least. Mr. F and I had an awesome time and if you spend about twenty hours in a car with someone you get to know a lot about him. So next time you want to go on a road trip...do it! Do it with reckless abandon, an open mind and a good set of directions. There is no better way to learn about yourself, your friends and your country and have a damn good (and usually wacky) time in the process!

Brian Lohnes is a Collegian columnist.

The long way home

I'm coming home.

Well, I was coming home, at least. This was Sunday, and I had gone home for the weekend, and I was on my way back. Not having any car to call my own, I had placed my trust in public means of transportation. It's always an adventure.

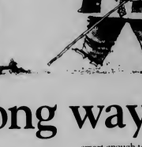
Stage One of my journey is the Commuter Rail train from good ol' Plymouth to Boston. The train pulls into the station, I board the train, and I sit down. This is Sunday afternoon – not many people are heading inbound to Boston at the moment, and the train is almost entirely empty. There are vacant seats for vast stretches of the car where I am sitting. A passenger can, in actuality, choose from dozens of seats in which to park his bloated buttocks.

An old guy sits next to me.

This is how it always works with me. I don't really know why, I don't really have any special love for the elderly, but they seem to always want to get to know me better. They also like to tell me war stories, if they have any, and since this guy has only about half of one ear I figure I'm going to hear all about it. The train ride is an hour long. I am doomed.

"So, young fella," he says to me, "what's with the duck?"

No, the old guy is not having some Ronald Reagan spell: the duck is really there. His name is Enkidu 7 (although some have referred to him as the Quackmaster General) and he is a stuffed animal belonging to my girlfriend. She gave him to me as a memento. 'It is very sweet,' I want to say to the old guy. It is a touching gesture. You all should be happy for me. All these things are things that I could say.



"I never," I say in a solemn voice, "travel without a duck."

The old man does not say another word to me. He stares into space. I stare out the window and eventually fall asleep. When I wake up in Boston the old man is gone, having told me absolutely zero war stories. Enkidu 7, you are a miracle worker.

I leave my train in South Station and go to the bus terminal. The bus terminal is a zoo. There are children running around screaming, and no one really seems to notice. There are people asleep on the floor. Everyone just steps over them. I didn't see any goats or chickens hanging around, but it wouldn't have surprised me; I got ripped off buying batteries for my Walkman. I really just want to get on the bus.

45 minutes later I am on board my bus. This bus also is crowded. I have my duck, however, and these people seem smart enough to not want to sit next to the nineteen-year-old who is by himself on a bus and clutching a stuffed animal. The seat next to me stays empty. So far, so good.

We pull out onto the highway. I pull on my headphones. 'This is a pretty sweet deal,' I think to myself. 'I'm on an express bus, I've got my music, no one's sitting next to me asking what I'm listening to, and Enkidu 7 is doing a great job of keeping me company. This is about all I could ask for.'

Rob Schulze

The bus driver announces that we will be seeing a movie. This movie is called Cutthroat Island.

"Nooooooooo," I scream to myself.

If you've never seen the cinematic masterpiece that is Cutthroat Island, allow me to give you a brief summary, bearing in mind that the whole time it was on I was listening to my headphones.

Geena Davis is a pirate. She sweats profusely. She's the good pirate because she's attractive and her crew is made of multicultural persons. There are also bad pirates. Their captain has black hair and clothes, and his crew is a bunch of white guys with bad teeth. Matthew Modine has a funky hat and does stuff, something about a map, I think. People in French Versailles costumes also have a ship, I think, or they could just be sharing with the bad pirate. Things happen, usually when I'm staring out the window at the Mass Pike. There's an island with (surprise!) treasure. Oh, yeah, I forgot to mention that Geena Davis has a pet monkey. There's a pirate fight. Geena Davis, still covered with sweat, shoots the bad pirate with a cannonball, which does not just poke a big hole in him, but instead launches him into the upper atmosphere without ever breaking the skin, much like Popeye shooting Bluto. Geena Davis waves a sword around and credits roll.

While this is going on, we hit traffic on the Pike, and my 'express' bus stops in Worcester and picks up a guy who sits next to me despite my blatant efforts to discourage him. He is the biggest one is customer service. No cashier, clerk, or person who deals with the public is allowed to say this. It would just be a bad scene. And people already hate Parking Services enough as it is. No more hate is necessary. By the way, I only work for Parking Services. I am not personally evil (Parking Services really isn't either, they just do what they need to); I just do what the computer tells me. I cannot fix tickets or upgrade anyone with the press of a button. That would be power. I don't have any of that.

The second one is, I have a heart, and I can't understand how anyone can just openly spit that out into someone else's face. It's rude. Maybe I was just raised well and with manners. Maybe I don't have a cruel bone in my body (some would object to that). I don't know. What I do know is that I naturally "do care." Whether it's a good friend of mine, or just someone on the street that looks really upset, I care. I generally try to help people.

Why do people say, "I don't care"? Maybe they say it because people accept it as a legitimate response to a statement. It may be someone's way of saying, "Please leave me alone" after they've had a long day and wish not to deal with anyone else. Whatever. My advice is to not snap back. Just try to stop caring yourself. That's what I'm trying to do.

Emily Vacanti is a Collegian columnist.

Emily Vacanti

"I don't care!"

Recently I was talking to a female someone about a multitude of different things, one being what I should write about this week. She made a comment about Parking Services and so I decided to dive deeper into the subject. She admitted that, as a freshman, she was lucks enough to score a purple parking sticker. Now I really don't have a problem with freshmen having purple stickers, mainly because I had one as a freshman. But what I can have a problem with is her attitude. I asked, not as a bitch, her opinion if she really thought that she deserved a purple sticker. Knowing that there are hundreds of students, a good number of them being upperclassmen, who were put on the waiting list for a purple sticker, should she really get one? She replied by saying "I don't care." That was what really pissed me off, not the fact that she got a purple sticker. Hell, I think that only juniors and seniors should be allowed to have cars on campus, but the fact that she had an attitude about it was what got to me. She had a "mine doesn't stink", "I'm better than you," attitude about it. That's completely crap.

What scares me about this is that her attitude is the way that everyone thinks these days. Everyone thinks that they qualify for everything. Everyone thinks that special exceptions should be made based on the fact that they think that they are better than everyone else, and more worthy, not because they truly deserved what they want. People bitch and sue about everything in this world, and it's mainly because they were brought up with parents who handed them everything. I actually know someone who thinks that just because he has the money for a certain something that has to do with parking (and the faculty parking lot nonetheless – he's an undergrad.) that he should be able to just get it. This certain someone does not qualify for it. He just thinks that since mommy and daddy can pay for it, that he's entitled to it. That's crap. So what? Who cares that he has a nice car? Why the hell does he want to bring it up to a public university where he is practically begging to have it keyed, broken into, stolen, trashed, etc.? If it is just so he can drive around the campus in it, flaunting his wealth? That's immature.

Back to the statement "I don't care." This is one of the reasons that this society sucks so much. Teenagers, and adults as well, go into department stores and stores like CVS, The Gap, Newbury Comics, Abercrombie and Fitch, etc. and feel that because they won't get off their lazy, obese asses and work for money (I can say this because I hold more than one job in addition to my classes and extracurricular activities), and because "they don't care" that they are entitled to everything for free. That statement is as much crap as a statement can be. They don't think that they're hurting anyone by just stealing something here and there. A little shoplifting isn't that bad, right? WRONG! I am a former CVS employee, and I can tell you that I was told by my manager that due to all of the shoplifting, after all of the bills are paid, employees are paid, and the lease is paid, CVS really does not make that much money. And it's because many teenagers (or adults- adults do it too) don't want to pay for anything. In my old town the teenagers got their way either way. If they didn't shoplift what they wanted, they would ask their parents for the money for it. And of course the money would get it handed right to them. This all happens because "no one cares." It irks the hell out of me.

Have you ever been cut in line (or any relatively similar situation)? Have you ever then confronted the person by saying "Um, excuse me, but I was before you in line?" Then the idiot steps even further ahead of you while giving you a nasty look and saying "I don't care." Your first instinct may be to push the person aside and being even less mature say, "Grow the fudge up!" But cease. Don't sink to their lower than dog crap level. Do what I do: hope that the person behind the counter is mature, like you, and not one of them. If they are mature, they will say: "I'm sorry, but I believe the person behind you was next. You'll have to step aside while I serve them first." If this happens, you will still be one of the mature people, and the person who cut you in line, Mr. or Ms. Immaturity, will be pissed off to hell. I used to work at Blockbuster (movies are now $4.19 for all new releases, I believe) and do this on a regular basis. The customer who is put in his/her place always whines about how they believe that they should truly go first and is saying, in not so many words "I don't care" about anyone else in the store. I got used to getting dirty looks from them on their way out, while many of the other customers, including the idiot cut in line, thank me for just something. I'm truly not bitchy. I just believe in equal rights, and hurting someone's feelings is not my first concern when they are openly doing something that they know is wrong.

Since this is the "ideal" response to any question or statement today, I'm going to give it a try right now. An undergraduate who lives on campus is in Parking Services and as a customer says, "I have a yellow sticker, and was only parked in the lot 50 (a 24-hour lot, mind you) behind my building for one day. I got towed. I've never been towed before." Now normally I would say to this "Your options are to fill out a citation appeal form. If you want reimbursement for your tow, you have to include the tow receipt. The forms are next to the window." But since the "ideal" response to anything these days is "I don't care", maybe I should try that. It seems to be okay for everyone else to say, so why not say it too?

I have a few reasons. The

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager

Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor

Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor

Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menichel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor

Samantha Poulien Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Jewish Affairs

Tuesday, October 26, 1999

Jewish students divided on Gay and Lesbian attitudes

By Nicole Chipman
Collegian Correspondent

On the topic of homosexuality, it's too hard to give one answer that would reflect how every Jewish person feels, considering there are different movements with different beliefs.

Shira Hutt, President of the Jewish Student Union, says that the Union is pluralistic, including as many groups as possible. In the Spring Semester of '98, a Gay, Lesbian, Bi-sexual and Transgender group started by gay members of the Union was called "Oy Vey, I'm Gay".

The program ended when its founders graduated and "there aren't any who are open enough to come out and run a LGBT program". Hutt says that in the Union, just as in the entire world, there are people who are not opposed to homosexuality and those who are. "There's nothing definite in Judaism down to the way the Scriptures are interpreted."

Jody Rosenbloom, Education Director for the Jewish Community of Amherst, says "there is a broad range of acceptance and discomfort with homosexuality within the Jewish faith."

Felice Yeskel, Director of the Stonewall Center, a GLBT support center, sums up the difference between the opinions as four movements within Judaism.

"Orthodox Jews would definitely condemn homosexuality. I am unsure where the Conservatives come down on the issue. Then the Reform and Reconstructionist movements openly ordain gay and lesbian rabbis."

Mordechai Housman, an Orthodox Jew who is affiliated with the Sperling Adult Jewish Learning Center, says, "There isn't much to say about homosexuality and Judaism. The Torah says it is forbidden to perform acts of homosexuality and that is what I believe.

Housman explains, "Orthodox, or as I prefer, Traditional Judaism, both oral and written was created by God and taught to the Jews. Changes are never necessary as Torah can be applied to any situation. This has been proven to be true. I live that life and know it is true."

The basis for condemnation rests in the interpretation of the Scriptures, particularly a passage from Leviticus 18:22, which commonly translates as "No man shall lie with a man as he would with a woman." Or "You must not sleep the sleep of a woman with a man. It is ritually impure."

Yeskel remarks, "It is physically impossible to lie with a man as one would with a woman, they are made differently! Duh!" She goes on to point out that further down in Leviticus, it also warns against wearing cotton with linen, which she thinks is hardly observed.

It also says not to "boil a child in its mother's milk", which makes Yeskel feel that these rules could be obvious, or out of date. For instance, she says that back when the laws were written, "it could have been customary to cook baby goats in their mother's milk and the Jews found this disgusting so they made the law."

Students may have been taught to interpret Leviticus as "homosexual abomination" in childhood. They can't help but remember that and feel that they are evil for being gay if they happen to be that way, Paul Entis, Director of the Hillel House at University of Massachusetts at Amherst, explains.

Entis offers those that he councils other Scriptural passages that tend to be put in Leviticus' background, such as, "All humans are created in the image of God." This, he interprets as, "LGBT are just as honorable and as holy as other individuals". Also, he speaks of the principle of uniqueness, which asserts that, "who we are is what God wanted us to be".

Entis also mentions that recently, scholars have found Biblical figures that are contended as having been homosexual, such as David and Jonathan or Ruth and Naomi.

Interpretation does depend on the mind of a reader and some thought should be given to the time period in which the passages were written. To support this, Felice Yeskel mentions that, "Homosexual acts are no more forbidden than heterosexual acts that are committed for reasons other than procreation, but people choose to obey the laws that suit their own purposes."

"Organized religion needs to take responsibility for the message it sends. If a religion condemns gay life as sinful, wrong and unnatural, people hear that message and that can perpetuate hate crimes, whether or not the religion advocates hate crimes," said Entis.

Entis explains, "In a community that has had no direct experience with gay people, the message that 'gay is wrong' coming from their religious leaders is easily believed. People who don't know hate and want to harm."

John Buchalter, a freshman at Umass, remarks, "I grew up in a Jewish community in New York. If anyone there had admitted to being gay, they probably would have been shot."

Entis personally had to deal with great difficulties through life as a gay Jewish man. He officially "came out" when he was an undergraduate at Emery College in Atlanta, Ga. At that time he was Co-President of Hillel and due to his decision, there was an organized effort to impeach him. He was the recipient of death threats, had his tires slashed and someone tried to break into his house yelling, "You're a fag, I'm gonna kill you!" When Entis called the police, they said that his call was not a priority.

Entis was able to come through all this because of the support he received from other Jews who had been "out" for many years. He said, "I had terrific role models and the courage to vow that I would not retreat back into the closet because of someone's scare tactics."

From 1994-95, Entis was a Resident Director in the Southwest dormitories at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. During that time, he received anonymous phone calls and had messages left on his door by angry people wishing to express their contempt toward his lifestyle.

Today, as the Director of Hillel, Entis says that he has "been able to have terrific working relationships with those who are opposed to homosexuality." Optimistically, he believes that "It can be overcome."

For the most part, Entis describes Hillel as an organization with an open philosophy that aims toward a pluralistic membership. However, there are people that oppose the budding of LGBT awareness. They feel that Hillel should sanction groups that they see as an anathema to the Jewish community.

Five years ago, when Entis was a graduate student at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and began a Jewish LGBT caucus, students in opposition of his efforts submitted an angry article to the student newspaper. They also ripped down flyers that had been hung at the Hillel House to announce meetings of the group.

Entis has been a mentor and counselor to students who have tried to reconcile their gay/Jewish identity. He has made an effort to help many, but says, "The reality is that there are still a lot of students struggling to come out and are afraid to talk to anyone. Heterosexual relationships are regarded as the norm especially for those who have been raised in a traditional, orthodox household. They receive a lot of pressure from parents and grandparents to date, marry and have lots of kids with a Jewish partner of the opposite sex. This factor keeps them in the closet. They don't want to embarrass or dishonor their parents by not fulfilling what they are taught are their obligations."

As the Director of Hillel, Entis is conscious of not wanting one aspect of his life to overshadow all the others. He wants to be recognized as a multi-faceted being, as all humans are, rather than simply a gay Jew. He is a part of the Reform movement and a Zionist Jew. He is committed to the state of Israel and supports those who had to work hard to build it.

Entis' goal is to not be pigeonholed into one simple set of categories. He is committed to social justice for all people and to Jewish pluralism. More than anything, Entis wants to make the Jewish community one that welcomes everyone, no matter what choices they decide to stand by.

Exploring Judaism's "Queer" corners

By Jaclyn Sobel
Collegian Staff

It is very hard to imagine my life as someone else. I often wonder though what would my life be like if I was, let's say, at a different school. Or, what if I was male? How about, if I was not Jewish? But mostly I wonder what it would be like to have everyone around you constantly talking about what people like you should be doing. How people should act and who people should be attracted to.

When I was in high school I attended a summer program, in which we did an exercise that I still remember so clearly. We had to lie on the floor with our eyes closed. We had to imagine that we were straight (which most people there were, to my knowledge) but everyone else around us was homosexual. We were told people thought we were strange because we liked the same sex. I remember feeling pain and anger. I remember wondering who around me really was gay and what it must be like for them.

I will never know what it feels like to be gay, since I am straight. But I do know what it feels like to be an outcast. To be the only one of "your kind" around. To feel as though you are weird for believing and feeling certain ways.

OK. So now let me get to my point. I always thought my world was this wonderful place. I knew I was lucky because I grew up sheltered from most of the "bad" things in this world. Somehow I knew that something was going on in my family that I was unaware of. I knew there was a huge problem just waiting to appear. Well, I was right.

In most Jewish American families that I know, we are conditioned from the day we are born to do certain things. They go something like this:

1. Have a Bar/Bat Mitzvah
2. Go to college
3. Get married to a Jewish person (of the opposite sex)
4. Have a Jewish family

OK. So we are told to do these things. What if one of them does not work out? What if you don't go to college? That is perfectly acceptable to a certain extent. But if you ever fell in love with someone of the same sex, forget it. Granted, homosexuality is becoming more acceptable these days.

In my family the unthinkable has happened. My brother is gay. Now, I figured it out before he told me. There was no way I was going to approach him. I wanted him to tell me himself. I helped him tell me. We were arguing one night about something and I made it so he would tell me. Before he told me, I had a chance to come to grips with it.

Now just for the record, I do not have a problem with people that are gay. I see it as a part of their nature. You can't really choose who you fall in love with, and that goes for both gay and straight people.

But for someone in my family, this was a shock. I kept thinking about my parents. I kept wondering how they would handle it. What would my grandparents think? How would my cousins react? My sister? What must it be like for my brother to go through this alone without his family?

This is how my family handles this situation: they don't. My parents don't discuss it unless one of the children brings it up. My extended family has no idea (as far as I know) and my dad keeps asking my brother when is he going to meet a woman and settle down. This breaks my heart.

We are taught to be proud of who we are. I am proud of who I am. Why can't my brother be proud of who he is and what he is? Why can't he go to the rooftops and shout out? Why can't I go to the rooftops and shout out that I am Jewish? Similar reasoning. Well, we could get a ticket for disturbing the peace, or someone who does not like our kind could threaten us.

What does that mean anyway? As I see it, it specifically states in the Torah that all people are created equal and in the image of G-d. If all people are equal, why can't we all be who we are and accept it? And since people are created in the image of G-d, maybe G-d is, or could be, gay or bisexual.

Or, maybe G-d thinks that we should all just stay in our separate corners and not mingle with people that are different. I don't believe that. I personally think that G-d is an all-powerful piece of nature. I believe in a round about way that G-d created the world and all kinds of people, animals, and plants.

Why is it so hard for people to accept others? So what if someone is gay? So what if someone wears jeans? So what if someone makes a mistake? We are all human beings trying to survive in a cruel world. If they took time to realize the wonderful qualities of the person sitting next to them, who they may or may not know.

Take a minute to look around you. Whether you are in class, on a bus, in your room, walking around campus. Look at the closest person to you. Who are they? What about them makes them special? Someone is thinking it about you.

So, back to the whole Gay-Jewish thing. It is also stated in the Torah that a man should not lie with a man. Can a woman lie with a woman? Straight men must have written the Bible. Why else would they leave out women with women? (That was a joke, laugh.) In all seriousness though, do we all take the Bible seriously? Word for word? Yes, there are certain phrases we hold sacred. There are certain traditions that are still kept today.

However, there are also many sayings we do not ever acknowledge while there are also traditions that have stayed with the traditional times. Things change. I feel religion should change with the times as well. I am not saying abandon your beliefs. I do not plan on leaving mine behind. But there are certain things that do not apply to today's world.

Why should someone tell you whom you can and can't love? Why should a government have a right to regulate a personal choice? When it comes to people loving one another, it is going to happen regardless of what the government says. If two people love each other and want to spend the rest of their lives together, why shouldn't they? If two people that love each other, have a stable home, and want to raise a child, why shouldn't they?

There are plenty of marriages out there that are based on lies, and most of them happen to belong to people making and upholding these rules. There are plenty of parents out there who have no business being parents (i.e.: teenagers). So again, who does the government think they are?

I have touched on numerous points here. I have much to say about all of this. I just don't see a problem with people loving one another, wanting to show it regardless of who it is they love, man or woman. Just be happy with your life. You only live once. If you can't appreciate now, when will you be able to?

Pat Buchanan: A lobbyist for religious discrimination

Recently, I read an article that led me to further investigate the motives of Pat Buchanan's campaigning for the 2000 General Elections on the Reform Party Ballot. Indeed, Mr. Buchanan is committed to his ideals; however, lets see what happens when he is up to bat at home plate.

In his recent book "A Republic, Not an Empire" Buchanan focuses on American Intervention and Foreign Policy, most notably during World War II. He is committed, but his dedication reflects his notably discriminatory agenda toward minorities.

In a syndicated column dated January 25, 1995 regarding affirmative action, Buchanan stated: "How, then, can the feds justify favoring sons of Hispanics over sons of white Americans who fought in World War II or Vietnam." My respect goes to all those who represented America during those Wars, but: STRIKE ONE: Mr. Buchanan you must have passed up the movie Forrest Gump. When Forrest fought in Vietnam, Bubba, a fellow soldier was an Afro-American. He has neglected to mention the other war heroes and has clearly discriminated against American citizens.

Buchanan's quest has encountered opposition that claim him as "an apologist for Adolf Hitler and Tojo Hideki, the Japanese wartime prime minister." Mr. Buchanan's supporters defend him by saying that he promotes an unyielding allegiance to America. Buchanan supporters have then failed to recognize the selective Americans he represents.

In the article from the Cleveland Plain Dealer, "Buchanan: Committed, but a bit cracked," by Charles Krauthammer, it is noted that Buchanan criticizes "a Harvard student body where non-Jewish whites-75 percent of the U.S. population-get just 25 percent of the slots. Talk about under-representation! Now we know who really gets the shaft at Harvard-white Christians." STRIKE TWO: Patrick J. Buchanan, your aggravation with the Admissions process at Harvard has proven that non-Jewish whites are in the way, and you sir, are eager to consider them as the nucleus of the 'shaft.'

FOUL BALL: Buchanan, with this written statement, has also decided that Jews and other cultural groups have 50% of the admissions spaces 'set aside' for their admittance. So Buchanan stands for American patriotism, and claims he supports the preservation of the United States. Well, how is this possible when Buchanan does not recognize that he is bigot?

In 1990, in his book "Right from the Beginning", Buchanan writes, "In the late 1940's and 1950's...race was never a preoccupation with us, we rarely thought about it...there were no politics to polarize us then, to magnify every slight. The 'Negroes' of Washington had their public schools, restaurants, bars, movie houses, playgrounds and churches; and we had ours."

YER' OUT: And it's deep shot, headed way back and out into left field where we, the aware citizens of America, both the electorate and minors, have caught the ball, sending Patrick Buchanan to the showers, for good.

Jeremy M. Goldberg is a UMass student.

Engaging the Jewish spirit

By Chanel Dubofsky
Collegian Staff

Every Rosh Hashanah, I rush down the hill, panicking at the site of the sun settling gradually deeper into the clouds on the horizon. I manage (just barely) to avoid injury on my way down the goat path, and finally arrive at the Student Union Ballroom.

The ballroom is full. Latecomers stand at the back or lean on the stage, waiting to knab the first available chair.

Now, normally a room full of Jews praying together is enough to drive me meshuggah, especially on such an important occasion as the New Year. But as I walked home, I found myself pondering the enormous number of unfamiliar faces. Where had all these people come from? And how could we get them to keep coming?

According to a Project Pulse 1996 survey of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst Jewish community, 40 percent of Jewish students indicated they almost never participated in campus programs or events with Jewish orientation or content. However, 89 per cent of Jewish students also receive the Hillel calendar a listing of religious, cultural and social events offered by Hillel. What's a Jew to do?

Cheryl Gordon, the 1999 Jewish Campus Service Corps Fellow at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst Hillel House offered some insight. As the fellow, it is her job to make contact the Jewish students on campus and to design programming according to their needs.

"There is a stigma surrounding Hillel," says Gordon. "People think it is too religious, too cliquey and that they won't know anyone. I was afraid to go to my college Hillel as a student."

The survey also indicated, interestingly enough, that almost half of the Jewish students at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst had belonged to or been active in their high school youth groups, such as B'nai Brith or United Synagogue Youth. 76 percent of students also said that their parents were affiliated with synagogues and that they attended services fairly regularly.

Gordon has two theories about lack of University involvement. "Students tend to get burnt out after high school," she says. "College offers new ways, new things to explore. People see Hillel as an extension of the high school youth group. They make a new circle of friends and decide to try something new."

With almost 3,000 Jewish students on the University of Massachusetts at Amherst campus, what is Hillel doing to engage these countless faces that are only seen on the High Holidays and the occasional Shabbat? One tactic is that has proved successful is the creation of specialized groups, such as FYSH, or First Year Students of Hillel, who turned out an attendance of 20 people at a gathering for Mini Sci Ti. The Jewish Women's Collective is another group serving the specific needs of Jewish students. The groups meets monthly for a Rosh Chodesh event, and also tackles issues such as body image, women in the media and social action.

This year, Hillel has begun to work with many new student groups, such as seniors and the Commonwealth College. In addition, there is also a mentoring program where new students are assigned a buddy with whom they can meet for coffee, get advice about life at UMASS and attend Hillel events. Hopefully, this will help make it a bit easier for interested students to set foot in the door.

Jeremy Goldberg takes on Presedential hopeful Patrick Buchanan. See story to left.

The binding of Isaac: Transcending the self

This week, the third week of the month of Cheshvan, we read the Torah portion "vaeire." In it, we find perhaps the most perplexing event within the Torah, the akeida- the binding of Isaac by Abraham, who had received a divine command to sacrifice his son. Yet, as we know, hidden within some of the deepest mysteries are the deepest truths.

A great person once told me about an experience he went through while he was still engaged to his present wife. He questioned whether his relationship with her was based firmly on truth, on G-d's will, or whether it was a love originating only from within his own limited, human heart. For love in and of itself is transitory, stems from man's heart and dies just as quickly. Truth, on the other hand, is eternal; and it is only in deference to truth that love becomes equally eternal.

Therefore, alone with G-d he said, essentially "G-d, I only want the truth, only Your will, if it is not Your will that we be married, thus not the truth, then I won't trap her here with me, I will let her go." He then felt a tangible surety that they were indeed soul mates in a true sense. Yet, it was only through letting go of his personal attachments and honestly committing himself to giving up the woman he loved, if it was not in accordance with the truth, G-d's will, that he was able to perceive that she was in fact the truth.

This is because truth/reality is only revealed to us to the extent that we allow it to. If we are unwilling to see it for fear of the consequences, we never will.

In the section of Talmud called the "ethics of the fathers," Rabbi Ben Zoma says, "Who is strong? He who conquers his inclination." In Jewish Mysticism "strength (in Hebrew gevurah)," is described as the energy through which one filters and condenses an expansive and transcendent state of being into one which is applicable to the world; like a nail which concentrates the broad force of the hammer onto a single point which can then penetrate the wall. So too in our spiritual journeys, when we are able to transcend our inclinations, attachments, ourselves, this is when we are strong, we know exactly what to do, for we have nothing to block our perception of the truth.

In this way we interpret the akeida. Abraham, according to tradition, embodied the aspect of a deep and expansive love. His every inclination stemmed from this point. Yet we know that to achieve truth, in love and anything else, we must go beyond our own inclinations. Therefore, G-d commanded Abraham to take his son to be sacrificed, the antithesis of love.

Despite questions of "how could a good G-d command something so clearly evil? Abraham was able to shed his own objections and questions in order to act truthfully, to do the will of G-d and the source of truth. He transcended everything he thought he was in order to do this. We then read on and find that G-d then commands Abraham to desist at the last moment, (for Rashi points out that G-d had originally only said "take Isaac to be sacrificed," not "sacrifice Isaac").

Abraham is then forced even to transcend his inclination to serve G-d, act truthfully, in order to actually do so. Only then, do we read "and Abraham lifted his eyes and saw," that is, only then was he able to truly see, to perceive the truth, for he had gone completely beyond his most noble inclinations and in this way really became himself to the point that G-d blessed him to be the father of the Jewish people.

The idea of "transcending self" is not about severing a connection with self and world, but rather a unification of the particular self with all selves, with all, with G-d.

This is how we are able to understand the "truth," because we are prepared to accept the reality that permeates everything which is also what lies at the depth of each one of us. This is how "transcending self" is really becoming more intimate with self; for it is uniting with the universal self which lies even in our own deepest places.

A "spark" of the souls of each of our forefathers and mothers lies in the soul of every Jew. We all then have the ability to become like Abraham our father, to make every action like the akeida to transcend our perception and act according to the universal truth, G-d. The Rabbi Tarfon, in ethics of the fathers also tells us "it is not for you to finish the work, but neither is it for you to desist."

Therefore, I urge us all to begin, to make life meaningful in this way and any other. The more we do, the deeper we go, the better off we are personally and globally.

I also request that everyone who reads this article take a moment to pray for the "refua shalaima," the complete recovery, of the holy Jew and the genuinely good man, Ivri ben Malke Rachel, to whom all the merit of this article should go towards healing.

Hayyim Rothman is a UMass Student

Arts & Living
Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley
Page 6 The Massachusetts Daily Collegian Tuesday, October 26, 1999

The science of Bush's Things

By Ryan Benharris
Collegian Staff

BUSH
The Science of Things
Trauma Records

After a very long time, the wait is over. British hard rockers, Bush, finally release their newest studio album entitled, The Science of Things. This is the third album for the band that follows a pair of enormously successful hit records in the United States.

Much like Razorblade Suitcase, Bush's 1996 release, The Science of Things has a wide mix of sounds, ranging from soft easy songs, to techno, to the "in your face" Seattle grunge music that has become a symbol for the 1990's. Though they have spent most of their short careers being compared to Nirvana, in a way that some critics describe as "Nirvana Wannabes," Bush has been able to do something that Nirvana never did. The band has avoided making their music sound like it has been created in a garage.

The Science of Things starts off strong and threatening, much like "Everything Zen," the first track off of Sixteen Stone, Bush's debut release. The name of the song is "Warm Machine," and it warns, "here comes the war machine."

Throughout the twelve-song disc, Bush is able to put together an excellent compilation on some new sounds, while at times still saying true to the music that has made them superstars. Perhaps the best example for this new attempt is on the first single off of the disc, "The Chemicals Between Us," which has already received a lot of airplay on radio stations over the past few months. Frontman Gavin Rossdale says of the new release, "I didn't want to be content just being a rock guitar band anymore. I found that a bit stifling and frustrating, and wanted to create something that came from a different angle and expressed a different side of us. I wanted to demonstrate that we've grown."

The originality of this album really gets a chance to shine. On "40 Miles from the Sun," "English Fire," and "Letting the Cables Sleep," the tempo is much slower than previous Bush releases. This may be due in part, to the fact that Bush's biggest hit so far, is still "Glycerine," a love ballad from Sixteen Stone. The songs slow down, and the Rossdale's lyrics stand out. There is even the added effect of a piano on "Letting the Cables Sleep."

Another new surprise that the band has cooked up is the guest appearance of Gwen Stefani, the lead singer of No Doubt. It is no secret that Stefani and Rossdale have been dating for a while, and though I don't know anything about the way they work together in personal life, I know now that they sound terrific together in a duet on "Space Travel."

Though a lot of the music seems new and fresh, the best part about The Science of Things is certainly the old grunge rock that made Bush famous. Some of the songs seem to be carbon copies of things off of Sixteen Stone, and that's definitely not a bad thing. For instance, the opening guitar riff in "Prize Fighter," sounds exactly like the opening riff in "Everything Zen." An even better example of the band going back to its old style is clear in what is, without a doubt, the best song on the entire CD "The Disease of the Dancing Cats," a fast and hard song that's right in your face.

The Science of Things has become much more than just a new release for Bush. The band spent a long time fighting with Trauma records, which prevented the CD from even being attempted to hit stores any time earlier. The fact that the problems have been resolved, and the disc is finally here, Bush is saying to the world that they absolutely want people to hear their music, regardless of the problems they may face.

Along with Gavin Rossdale, Bush consists of bass player Dave Parsons, drummer Robin Goodridge, and super guitarist Nigel Pulsford. However, Rossdale's leadership proves that he runs the show. Rossdale wrote everything on the CD, designed most of the artwork, and is they key player on all of the songs. He has not gone unrecognized for all of his work though. The name of the band has become synonymous with "Gavin," and his good looks have landed him on such things as People Magazine's "50 most beautiful people" list.

Even though it has been a long year for the band, it seems like the fighting and the work has paid off. The Science of Things is an excellent album, and as Rossdale says in "The Chemical's Between Us," "I'll try not to complain."

COURTESY KEVIN WESTENBERG

Gavin and the boys sit and look pensive as they anticipate the release of their album today.

Girl and guitar: Curfman at Iron Horse

By Brooke Werley
Collegian Correspondent

SHANNON CURFMAN
Loud Guitars, Big Suspicions
Arista Records

When you decide to be an artist or a writer there is a cardinal rule you're taught to follow from day one. Write what you know. I was retaught recently to write like you know, and I have taken to that idea with much more liking. It seems to work wonders for the new blues girl in town, Shannon Curfman. Her debut album Loud Guitars, Big Suspicions plays the blues about the beatings of life and love that this 14-year-old could not possibly have been victim to already. She plays her electric six-string like she knows the pain she's preaching, and when she steps up to the mike in a smoke-filled bar, there isn't an ear within range that would believe Curfman just turned the big one four this summer.

Loud Guitars, Big Suspicions is full of out of control guitar solos that make it hard to believe that Curfman only first picked up a guitar four years ago, but then again she was only ten. Shannon would impress Jimi Hendrix himself with her solo in "Playing With Fire," a history about Hendrix and Robert Johnson.

Curfman is bringing her talents to Northampton tonight where she'll play the Iron Horse. "Few and Far Between" is one of the tougher songs on Loud Guitars, Big Suspicions, and along with the first single off of the album, "True Friends," should be some of the highlights of the evening. New York Post reporter Dan Aquilante had this to say about Curfman's performance at the Mercury Lounge: "The reason the audience pushed toward the stage was because this pretty, copper-topped girl sings in masterfully bold strokes that give you goosebumps." I think that's enough to give anyone the curiosity to put a ticket to tonight's show.

Besides the hard blues songs on the album, Curfman also includes some slower pieces like the ballad "Never Enough," and a Sheryl Crow cover, "If You Change Your Mind." I think what hooked me about Curfman was the first time I listened to the album. Near the end, when I began to get a little tired of songs I didn't know, and I heard the feminine voice singing, "Pulled in from Nazareth, I was feeling about half past dead . . ." My head suddenly lifted up, and I blurted out, "I know this song!" I'm sure everyone around me thought I'd gone mad, but I doubt their reaction would have been much different if they had heard Curfman covering "The Weight."

Shannon Curfman is just a girl with a guitar straight out of Fargo, but you wouldn't guess it from Loud Guitars, Big Suspicions. I think I'll agree with Jonny Lang who said: "[Shannon]'s only fourteen . . . and she scares me."

Shannon Curfman will be performing tonight at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton. Tickets can be purchased in advance at For The Record in Amherst or by calling 1-800-THE-TICK

WRITE FOR ARTS

Truth gets to the stage

By Kristi Ceccarossi
Collegian Staff

HOW I LEARNED TO DRIVE directed by John Hellweg
Smith College, October 21

If you have any experience with Paula Vogel's How I Learned to Drive and you shouldn't be surprised that it won the 1998 Pulitzer for Drama. If you haven't, see Smith College's production of the play and have everything that makes it so brilliant illustrated for you. Telling the distorted, but painfully realistic story of a young woman we get to know only as Lil' Bit, How I Learned to Drive explores socially unacceptable (i.e., incestuous pedophilia) relationships and the psychological repercussions of these encounters. With a character construction somewhat reminiscent of Nabokov's Lolita, the play non-sequentially follows the sexual and subsequently emotional interactions between Lil' Bit and her Uncle Peck that begin when she is eleven and end during her freshman year in college. It's difficult to imagine how this subject matter could be broached with a mix of sincere humor, repulsive truth, and a variety of emotion, but Vogel has triumphantly done it.

Smith's department really impresses the professional potential for college theatre. Everything about their current work is neat, elegant, and more than suitable to portray Vogel's wonderful, though frequently disturbing piece. Every member of their artistic team, cast, and crew deserves their own round of applause for working through the endless layers of How I Learned to Drive and gracefully delivering the results. The set changes are subtle and smooth. The floating set pieces, as well as each backdrop, are gorgeous. Flawlessness reaches every designing aspect of this production: lighting, costumes, and sound are all executed with the talent and effort of a highly trained group. And their collective presence creates an ideal atmosphere for the cast to really elucidate the play's message. Special recognition of director John Hellweg is necessary. Working with material very difficult for an audience to stomach, he is careful to display each perspective of the story with artistic style and accessible ease.

Although the delicate staging, technological advancements (they actually have hydrolics!), and design lay the foundation for an outstanding production, it is the work of the actors that really brings everything to its fullest. Ensembles as tight as the Greek Chorus members—as they're called in this play, even though they really only serve as swing roles—are hard to come by. An actor that can convincingly assume a number of different roles within two hours is really proving their talent, as Chorus members Van Farrier, Johanna Weller-Fahy, and Michelle Ehlen do in this production. All three of them shine throughout the evening. Particularly Johanna Weller-Fahy in her portrayal of Lil Bit's lewd mother and Uncle Peck's confined wife—sharply contrasting characters. Each moment she is on stage she clearly owns it. Mark Van Wye, as Uncle Peck is also notably consistent in his role, maintaining that provoking balance between genuine and unstable. His work helps along the controversial level of the play that makes the audience question not only his motive but also the standards that condemn him.

I really regret to mention the one unfortunate weakness in an otherwise impeccable night of theatre. But in light of the abundant talent of the mentioned actors and the obvious experience of the director, it seems strange that Caitlin Egleson was cast as the play's heroine. Her work, especially in comparison to the rest of the cast, is amateur and often grating. She seems uncomfortable with the dialogue, appears to lack a strong understanding of Lil' Bit's story, and as a result, recites her lines with much indication and little sincerity. Because of the abounding skill in the rest of the production her shortcomings are made up for enough, but they still remain too visible.

Vogel's play doesn't tell you what to think about Lil' Bit and Uncle Peck's distorted connection. The playwright shows you all sides of it, how it affects them, how it affects people around them, and let's you make the difficult decision of who the victims really are. Smith's production is blatant, as the play needs to be, but without excess. Perhaps what's most intriguing about the script and this presentation of it is that it doesn't submit to universal opinions about these socially abnormal relationships; it will test your ideals. So, it's worth the drive to Northampton to be entertained, weed through these taboos, and force yourself to consider some very real, but too frequently unaddressed issues. Lucky for you How I Learned to Drive is playing for one more weekend and tickets are still available by calling 585-ARTS.

Ha tells a story of love

By Emily Vacanti
Collegian Correspondent

HA
by Dawn Akemi Saito
Bowker Auditorium, October 22

The first word that comes to my mind when thinking about Ha is amazing: no, actually truly amazing. Performer and designer Dawn Akemi Saito combined sound, light, body, emotion, words, objects, costume, and every kind of art you can think of to create this wonderful solo performance. It was emotional, touching, and entertaining. It was well also thought provoking, and different. The show was sold out the night that I went. It was very clear why.

Going to this performance, I had no idea of what to expect. The advertisements were vague; therefore I decided I had to go in with an open mind. What I got was unexpected, interesting, and moving. Saito performed the whole solo as if it was the story of her life. She spoke of love: familial and romantic, but also of love lost. She was so powerful that it was as though you personally experienced the story.

After the performance I had the joy and honor of speaking to Saito. I asked her how it felt to share her life story in front of an audience. To my surprise, Saito told me the evening was a collection of bits and pieces of her friends' lives and not her own.

I then asked her what inspired her to act out the story as if it belonged to her. Saito replied by stating, "I wanted to create a theatrical piece. I am a writer and an actor." She was very clear about the fact that she did this to feel even closer to her friends. When Saito performs, she likes for it to feel very personal. This way she can get more into the performance and make it even deeper.

When asked what she hoped to achieve by performing this solo, Saito replied that as a performer, she wanted to feel connected, honest, and free. As a writer she was hoping to express a story that people would get something from. I am proud to say that she achieved this.

Through the solo she wore a rubber dress that had a yellow snakeskin pattern on it. Saito said that she desired the snakeskin effect so she could look and feel more like she was one with nature. In addition to the dress, at one point in the performance she pulled on green rubber gloves, ones that you would likely wear when washing dishes. Her costume designer decided to try these out for experimentation purposes. Basically to see how the audience would respond and how it would affect her superior acting. She also wore a feather boa.

My final question for Saito had to do with her level of concentration. I wanted to know how she kept her focus while moving her whole body at the same time. She was very amused by this and said that she achieved true concentration through practice. But she also used the power of her 'hara' (meaning diaphragm in Japanese). Her diaphragm muscle kept her balancing and strong through her different positions. At times only one foot would be on the ground, and somehow she maintained her balance with seemingly no trouble at all. Saito also informed me that she used mind/body coordination. Her goal is to always feel as though she is one with herself and one with the environment.

After the show I asked for comments from a few of the audience members. Cynthia Brubaker commented that the show was "Powerful. She used her whole body as an instrument." Jerry Brubaker found that "It was thought provoking and brave." They both thought that the show was beautiful and very touching.

I can definitely say that this show is one that I am glad that I did not miss. Ha was a spectacular event. Saito's ability to connect mind, body, nature and emotions is quite incredible and worthy of a recommendation.

How to hurt with Hip-Hop

David Katzoff

THE BEATNUTS
Musical Massacre
Loud
MOBB DEEP
Murda Muzik
Loud

Over the course of this decade, rap musicians have flowed through hip-hop like waves in a high-tide ocean. Rippling through the over-stimulated waters, various groups and soloists emerge, crashing upon the shores of notoriety or musical excellence, then slowly diffuse away, sometimes briefly, other times permanently.

Despite their uniquely distinct sound, witness the quintessential similarities between Mobb Deep and the Beatnuts: Hailing from the borough of Queens, NY, each crew has unscrolled a winning formula of meticulously crafted, base-portly beats accompanied by boastful, quasi-realistic violent lyricism. While the Beatnuts have maintained a fairly linear plateau of dopeness, Mobb has grown with distinguishable maturity. Following their obscure, sub-par debut Juvenile Hell (1993), they blasted back a year later with the Infamous, a groundbreaking album which essentially redefined the lyrical "street saga." The result was an engulfing auditory wave in which Havoc and Prodigy painlessly auquestrated haunting beats to appropriate their gritty rhymes. In 1996 M.O.B.B. returned to shore with Hell On Earth, an encore effort that nearly paralleled their previous opus and subtly emphasized the growth process in between. So by the dawn of their forth full-length, the true Mobb faithful have naturally been pre-conditioned to expect brilliance. Yet amidst the tumultuous sea of modern rap, consistency has become an increasingly difficult demand.

The Beatnuts, who magnetized their core audience with the Intoxicated Demons EP (1993), set the table for that raw nuttiness which persistently transcended their style over time. While maintaining an organic, mosh-pit griminess, Stone Crazy (1997) introduced a melodic, polyrhythmic sound which has now fully blossomed in their production. This nuance has created a wonderfully ironic dissimilarity between bubbly beats and disturbing yet humorously misogynistic rhymes. And unlike Mobb Deep's Murda Muzik, Musical Massacre washes upon our ears with equitable excellence.

Like emotional shock therapy, the start-up song "Beatnuts Forever" proficiently pounds with an aggressive, sample-charged energy. "Slam Pit", the retro posse anthem featuring Triple Seis and Common, is supremely effective at arousing the chaos of metaphoric pavement brawling. Cominon, who steps away from the passive preacher persona and rips his verse with rare, sharp-edged angst, steals the show leaving us salivating for his verbal subsequence.

Although political pulgnancy has never been a resounding element in the Beatnuts arsenal, "Look Around" works efficiently as a social commentary. Dead Prez, who guest star as righteous refugees of our unjust system, give the track an added somber sentimentality. Astoundingly, even DJ Tony Touch (who is not especially known for his cadence) drops by to flex some poetic Spanglish on "Cocotazo." This deliberately stagnate number thumps with a riveting beat and incisively catchy Latino vernacular. For an extra-special slice of jovial humor, Biz Markie offers his animated antics on "You're a Clown", a carnival escapade with a cotton candy loop reminiscent of a merry-go-round.

Despite the protruding sour spots, which are strewned throughout, the overall mood of Massacre is sadistically lighthearted and rhythmically well endowed. Overall, the Beatnuts have managed to stay above that linear pattern of their own instated quality.

Conversely, Murda Musik takes Mobb Deep on a slight regression. A microcosm of its imperfection can be linked to its brightest track, "Thug Muzik." This song boasts a purely immortal beat but is devalued by the lack of lyricism layered atop. Featuring the obscure rappers Chinky and Infamous Mobb, the rhymes are fairly conventional and anti-climatic. And after listening to the underachieving "Can't F Wit" with Raekwon, it becomes evident that Mobb's latest wave did not strike the shores with the same oomph as their last two. Still, this is a very worthy hip-hop rendering. "Quiet Storm" is lyrically brilliant. "Allustrious" is a swift, hradiccio assault and "Where Ya Heart At?" is a chilling tale of the "dearly departed." Even the radio-friendly "It's Mine" which features a wittily high Nas verse, elicits some positive emotion. However the tightest collaboration comes on "The Realist", in which Kool G Rap laces some delightful tributes to the slow syncopated keynotes of a rhythmic melody.

Although the dark mood which underlines Muzik, is competently conveyed, the redundancy of its conceptual topics devalue the production and enunciate a subtle regression of Mobb Deep's once revolutionary thug-blooded mentality.

COURTESY PIOTR SIKORA

The Beatnuts have no mercy in their Musical Massacre.

FUEL
EDU.COM PRESENTS FUEL WITH SPECIAL GUESTS. OCTOBER 29TH AT AVALON. GO TO WWW.EDU.COM AND ENTER TO WIN FREE TICKETS!
 V.I.P. PARTY BEFORE THE CONCERT FOR EDU.COM TICKET WINNERS ONLY!
AVALON
WBCN 104.1 FM
edu.com students get it™

GRADUATE SCHOOL OF INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS AND PACIFIC STUDIES (IR/PS)
UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, SAN DIEGO (UCSD)
IR/PS has established itself as a leader in training people to compete in the global arena. The 1998 program graduates are employed in media/telecommunications, international trade, manufacturing/high technology, financial services, consulting, government and nonprofit organizations.
The M.P.I.A. and Ph.D. are graduate degrees that focus on business and policy issues facing the regions of the Pacific Rim specifically the countries of Latin America, China, Japan, Korea, and Southeast Asia.
For further information contact:
Graduate School of International Relations & Pacific Studies
University of California, San Diego
9500 Gilman Drive
La Jolla, CA 92093-0520
Phone: (858) 534-5914 - Fax (858) 534-1135
Email: irps-apply@ucsd.edu
World Wide Web site: http://www-irps.ucsd.edu/

GET CULTURED
University of Massachusetts Boston
Winter Light on Nantucket:
Watercolor and Casein Painting
A special residential studio art workshop
January 9 - 22, 2000
The impact of light on color as experienced in the winter landscape of the beautiful island of Nantucket is the central focus of this three-credit studio workshop. It is conducted by painter and professor of art Wilfredo Chiesa. Participants will be housed at the UMass Field Station on Nantucket.
Application deadline: November 23, 1999
University of Massachusetts Boston
Division of Continuing Education
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston, MA 02125-3393
UMASS BOSTON
call us 617.287.7913
e-mail us continuing.education@umb.edu visit us www.conted.umb.edu

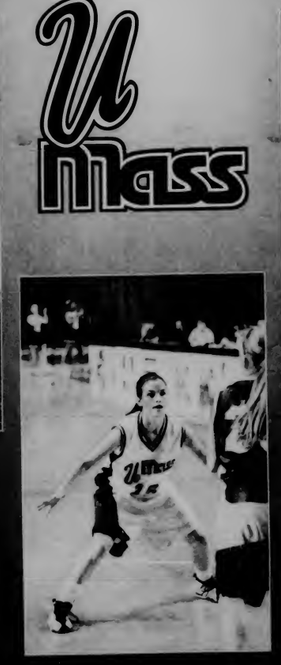
THE JEANS TRADITION mavi
TODD OLDHAM JEANS
Silver JEANS
STEVE MADDEN
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

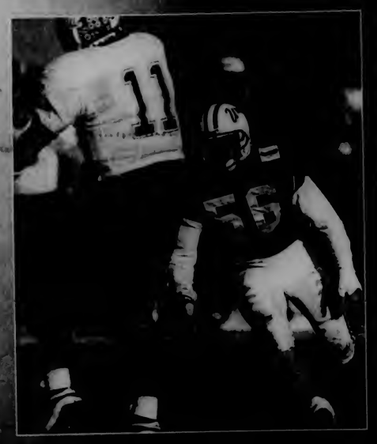
The Maroon and White's Best Defense

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Mike Babul



COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO



Zowie Tucker

Kole Ayi

Kathy Coyner

Angie Napoli

It's been said that the best offense is a good defense. If that's the case, UMass athletics enjoys the best of both worlds. The Minutemen and Minutewomen have always taken pride in their defense, and this year's teams boast some of the most tenacious defenders in the Atlantic 10.

Mike Babul enters the 1999-00 season as the the men's basketball team's frontrunner for Defensive Player of the Year.

Women's soccer star Angie Napoli forms the backbone of the Minutewomen's defense as they vie for the conference championship and an NCAA Tournament berth.

Senior linebacker and captain Matt Dawson has zeroed in on opposing quarterbacks all season.

Minutewoman Kathy Coyner has emerged as one of the top defensive point guards in college basketball.

Kole Ayi has his sights set on another All-America selection as well as a return trip to the I-AA title game.

Goalkeeper Zowie Tucker has posted three shutouts for the Atlantic 10 Champion field hockey team.

-Bryan Smith and Adam White
Collegian Staff

1/2 PRICE Appetizers
• Buffalo Chicken Wings
• Mozzarella Sticks
• Chicken or Beef Nachos
Sunday - Thursday
9 p.m. - Midnight
Applebee's
Neighborhood Grill & Bar
Applebee's
100 Westgate Center Drive • Rte 9 & Rte. 116, Hadley • (413) 253-5799

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

TRAVEL SMART with PRISM TRAVEL
For the best airfares, CALL 800-272-9676
In NYC 212-986-8420
VISIT US AT prismtours.com
Eurail passes and Student ID cards available.

UM battles in Boston
Tennis invades ECAC's

By Matt Seifert
Collegian Staff

Last weekend, the University of Massachusetts was a last minute invite to the prestigious ECAC Championships in Boston. And for the Minutewomen, being a last minute addition to the list of competition must have been the antitheses of say, walking into "Cheers", where everybody knows your name.

But regardless, the invite was the first for any Umass tennis squad and an honor in and of itself. Unfortunately the Minutewomen, who were riding high after a three game winning streak, came in and were handed three tough losses, two of them at the hands of Brown and Syracuse.

This season has been one that coach Judy Dixon has called "disconcerting", and no one could blame her. With numerous cancellations due to hurricanes and just poor weather in general, this season has had less rhythm than Richard Simmons trying to sweat to the oldies.

And the team's play has been just as inconsistent as their schedule. After dropping their opener in a heartbreaker to Columbia, they then won three in a row. Two were in convincing fashion, over St. John's and the University of Connecticut. So it was "sunny times" for a team that was 3-1, and on its way to its first ever invite to the aforementioned ECAC championships. But then the team lost three at the ECAC's and continued that dubious streak with a loss against Boston University last Thursday. That loss drops the team to a 3-5 mark for the season.

Ironically enough, it was Boston University whom the Minutewomen replaced in the ECAC tournament slot when the Terriers declined to make an appearance. So it was on Thursday that the Maroon and White found out why the Terriers were one the original 16 team selections for the prestigious tournament, as the Terriers cruised to a 5-1 victory.

The Terriers, who are most definitely a national powerhouse, proved to be too much talent for a club that is also talented, but is small and relies mainly on heart and sheer determination to dig out wins.

Winning at first singles was Ola Gerasimova. Any doubt that Gerasimova could come in this season and be the ace, a Pedro Martinez if you will, at first singles has been squelched by virtue of how well she has played this fall season. Gerasimova was dominant, winning in straight sets over BU's Selin Nassi. By virtue of the victory, Gerasimova is now 5-3 in her first singles slot this fall.

The Minutewomen were hoping that the emotion of a big win early would trickle down to the rest of the team. But today was not their day, and Gerasimova's victory was not enough of a boost to catapult the team to an upset victory. Annie Hamilton, who has been coming up big all year, lost a tough three set match at number three singles. Hamilton showed a lot of heart, winning her second set 6-3 after losing the first set by the same count. But the third set was all BU's Carrie Rose, as she won the decisive set 6-1. It is a testament to Hamilton's true talents that she even made this one a match; an examination earlier had revealed that she had a rotator cuff injury and she was advised to sit out awhile. Hamilton disregarded that advice and just went out and played, with no complaints and no excuses.

Losing at number two singles was Helena Horak, as she was downed 6-3, 6-1 by Christina Causway. The squad didn't fare much better at the four singles slot, were freshman sensation Katie Stammen lost 6-1 in the first set and 6-4 in the second set despite giving BU's Alana Marcu a run for her money. UM's Robyn Lebowitz and Beth Ebert lost at the number fifth and singles slots, respectively. There were no doubles matches played due to the fact that Boston University had already clinched the dual match victory.

The tennis team will officially put a stamp on the end of this fall season at the ITA Rolex Championships, which will occur in Boston from November 6-9.

There is a mandatory sports staff meeting today at 6:00 pm at the Collegian

Charlie Hustle still a fan favorite
But media won't let gambling issue fade for Rose

By Ross Newhan
Los Angeles Times

ATLANTA – He received a louder and longer reception than even Hank Aaron, an Atlanta institution – a louder and longer reception than Ted Williams or any other living member of baseball's all-century team. As Pete Rose doffed his cap a second time to a Turner Field crowd of 51,226 before Game 2 of the World Series on Sunday night, Commissioner Bud Selig finally joined in with mild applause – the only decibel meter that really matters.

For baseball's all-time hit leader, fresh from a memorabilia signing show at an Atlantic City casino, this was his first appearance at a sanctioned major league event since he voluntarily accepted a lifetime suspension for his gambling activity 10 years ago.

He was elected to the all-century outfield by a vote of the fans, invited on that basis to participate in Sunday's ceremony and provided with an opportunity to conduct a long and rollicking pregame news conference under the auspices of major league baseball, but whether any of that represented a thaw in the industry's uncompromising stance on Rose's suspension may be best measured by Selig's reluctant and tepid reaction amid the roaring reception of the Turner Field crowd.

"This is a time for celebration and I'm glad I made the decision (to invite him)," Selig had said before the ceremony.

"Otherwise I have no comment."

Rose applied for reinstatement two years ago, but he said in his pregame news conference that, hard as it may be to believe, he had never met Bud Selig or talked to him. "I might have to arm-wrestle him when I do," Rose said with a smile, and added, "I don't know if we'll get together (Sunday night). I don't think this is really the right time. If I do see him, I'm certainly going to thank him for giving me an opportunity to be here. The ball was in his court and he didn't double dribble."

According to baseball officials, Rose and Selig had a brief handshake and nothing more, leaving the possibility of arm-wrestling to Rose and NBC reporter Jim Gray, whom Rose accused of a prosecutorial-type assault during a tense pregame interview in which Gray, pushing hard, asked why Rose simply didn't ask for contrition and apologize for the actions that resulted in his suspension.

An obviously angry Rose, saying Gray's questions were inappropriate for a festive occasion, refused to budge, holding to the conviction that has left him ineligible for the Hall of Fame and banned permanently. "I am not going to apologize for something I didn't do," he said, disputing the testimony, betting slips and telephone transcripts gathered in the investigation by John Dowd that convinced the late Bart Giamatti, then the commissioner, that Rose had violated one of the game's most important rules by betting on baseball and betting on the Cincinnati Reds, whom he then managed.

Dowd, in a story appearing in Sunday's editions of the Los Angeles Times, had chastised Selig for permitting Rose to participate in Sunday's ceremony. However, members of the all-century team supported the decision.

Said Sandy Koufax: "It wouldn't make sense to have an all-century team without the all-time hits leader."

Brooks Robinson agreed, to an extent.

"I have no problem with Pete being on the team," the former Baltimore Oriole said, "but I do have a problem with the gambling part and putting him in the Hall of Fame. (Gambling) is the worst thing you can do. It undermines the whole integrity of the game."

While most of the team appeared at an afternoon news conference in Atlanta, Rose was wrapping up his casino autographing session, where he signed baseballs for $40, caps for $60 and bats for $75.

The commitment had been made six months earlier, he said, at which time the location had not been determined. The show included 14 members of the Hall of Fame, he said, and carried a 3,000-hit theme.

"You can't have a 3,000-hit show if I'm not there," said the man who had 4,256 hits.

Willie Mays, Stan Musial and Aaron, all members of the all-century team, had participated in the show but made it to Atlanta for the afternoon news conference. Rose insisted that their obligation ended Sunday morning, when his first began. His absence from the afternoon news conference became moot when he met with several hundred reporters at Turner Field and said of baseball's lack of response to his reinstatement appeal: "Even Charles Manson gets a hearing every two years. My son thinks I'm a monster."

He also said:

"I seriously believe that if Bart would have lived, and we all wish he would have, that he would have given me a second chance. That's the kind of man he was."

"I just think that somewhere down the line somebody's going to give me a second chance. I won't need a third. We all know that baseball has the tendency to give people more than one chance."

"I don't know a darn thing about Shoeless Joe Jackson (who received a life ban for participating in the 1919 Black Sox Scandal), but I kind of chuckle when I read in the paper that they're going to review this Joe Jackson case. How in the hell are you going to review something that happened 80 years ago? Who are they going to interview? I hope they don't wait 80 years to review my case."

"I don't want to say (the lack of response to my application) is depressing, but I don't quite understand it. (But) I'm not going to sit here and bash baseball. I mean, you may think I'm crazy, but I think today I'm the best ambassador baseball has. I mean, I'll be talking about baseball (Monday) in Florida, Wednesday in Chicago, Saturday back in Florida and Sunday in Los Angeles, because my name is kind of synonymous with the game of baseball, and I don't bad-mouth the game. The owners are great, the players are great and the fans are great."

Rose also said that what he missed most is teaching the game and changing player attitudes for the better. He said that he would want his Hall of Fame plaque – "it would have to be as long as this table," he said of a table at least 6 feet long – to include that he played in more winning games than any player in history. He said that he has a 10-year-old daughter and 15-year-old son to support and the casinos have been very good to him, but he doesn't participate in casino games and "I'm sure as hell not going to sit there and pull on a slot machine. You've got to be 70 years old before you do that. I'm right around the corner, but I'm not there yet."

He also said that this was not the first time he has been in a major league park, that he saw Pete Jr. play when he was up with the Reds, and he could take Tyler to Dodger Stadium every night but people were "paranoid" in dealing with him.

"Can you park here, can you go in this entrance, can you sit here, can you buy a hot dog. They're all scared that they're going to lose their job and I don't want to put anybody through that," he said. "Besides, I've got a big-screen TV at home and can watch all the games."

He also said again that he was sorry, that if there was anything in his power to change what has happened to him in the last 10 years, to erase it, he would invoke it.

"I've got feelings like anybody else," he said, "but maybe when I got the hit to break (Ty) Cobb's record I shouldn't have cried at first base because no one seems to think I'm sorry unless I cry."

Pete Rose didn't cry Sunday night. Nor did he concede anything.

If that didn't matter to the Turner Field crowd or the fans who voted him to the all-century team or those who have responded to recent polls with overwhelming support for his reinstatement, the politely applauding Bud Selig, a close friend of the late Giamatti and committed to protecting his legacy, may have illustrated that it still matters big-time to him.

Golfer Stewart dead at 42

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

PGA Tour golfing regular Payne Stewart died yesterday after a Learjet he was riding in crashed into a swamp field in South Dakota.

Stewart, who won this year's U.S. Open golf championship with a dramatic putt on the last hole of play, was one of five individuals in the plane who died when the plane apparently depressurized. The plane left Orlando, Florida on the way to Texas before losing pressure.

The plane took off from Orlando, Florida at 9:20 a.m. It was bound for Dallas, but the Federal Aviation Administration lost control with the small private jet over Gainesville, Florida. Payne and four other individuals, including the pilot, occupied the plane that can seat ten. Contact was lost shortly after takeoff, and military planes sent to track the Learjet's travel reported no signs of life from within. The windows were frosted over, indicating that the plane probably depressurized after takeoff. The plane then coasted, with all five victims aboard, northwest at 43,000 feet across five states before finally crashing.

The plane went down after it ran out of fuel in Mina, South Dakota. Nobody on the ground was injured in the crash.

Stewart was known for, if nothing else, reasons of appearance. He wore baggy knickerbockers called "plus-fours." He had also been known to occasionally play in a shirt and tie, in memory of how the game had been played at the beginning of the century. Besides winning this year's U.S. Open in June, Stewart was also a member of the Ryder Cup squad that came back to beat the European Team on the final day of play. He also won the 1991 U.S. Open, and the 1989 PGA Championship.

This season, he won more than $2 million, putting him at third on the PGA money list. He could have overtaken list leader Tiger Woods with wins this weekend at the PGA Tour Championship and the World Golf Championships in Spain.

Stewart was born in Jan. 30, 1957 in Springfield, Missouri. He leaves behind a wife, Tracey, and two children, Chelsea, 13, and Aaron, 10.

When the crash occurred, the U.S. Open Champion was headed to Dallas for practice rounds prior round to the tournament this weekend. The top-30 money winners on tour compete at the PGA Tour Championship. Tournament directors announced that his spot would not be filled.

A blue ribbon was tied to the nameplate on his parking place at the Chanipions Gold Club in Houston.

UM swimmers drown UNH

By Catherine Turner
Collegian Staff

The fans went wild this past weekend in New Hampshire as the Massachusetts men's and women's swim teams blew their competition out of the water. The opening of the season proved to be a splash, as the women swam away 169-137 over UNH and the men won 164-121.

"Everybody was really pumped up and focused," junior Sarah Newell said. "We're really excited as a team. I've been on the team for three years now, and I've never seen everyone this focused and unified."

In the women's events, junior tri-captain Shannon Rowell broke records in the backstroke, first taking the 100y-backstroke with a career best time of 1:00.21. She then went on to win the 200y, setting a personal record of 2:08.97, the fifth best time in the team's history.

In the deep end of the pool, the diving was incredible. Junior Robin Velona dominated the board, winning with personal best scores of 242.85 in the one-meter and 234.225 in the three-meter.

Sophomore Signe Dahlquist finished second behind Velona with a 203.625 in the one-meter. In her first collegiate meet, freshman Kalyn Knopf took second with a score of 228.00 and Dahlquist finished right behind her, in third with 195.075.

"This was really a time for the freshmen to get their feet wet," Newell said. "It was a building block for a successful season of beating out other teams."

As for men's events, the backstroke was also dominated by Minutemen, as junior Chris Arsenault won both the 100y and 200y events, with times of 53.69 and 1:54.42.

Junior Billy Brown conquered both breaststroke races, with winning times of 1:00.67 in the 100y and 2:08.64 in the 200y.

UNH continued to eat wake as senior Billy Grimes won the 200y-butterfly in 2:05.96, senior Henry Turner won the 50y freestyle in 22.35, and freshman Tommy Keane won the 500y freestyle in 4:50.22.

On the men's deck, UNH was shut out of first place by senior Ed Hefferon, who won the three-meter with a score of 266.475 and the one-meter with a score of 234.225.

UNH was just the beginning. As the season gets going, the waves of action are sure to crash all over the conference as UMass establishes itself as the big fish in the Atlantic 10 pond.

Both teams will be competing Saturday, November 6th, when they take on Central Connecticut in New Britain. The meet will start with diving at 10:30 am, and the swimming events are scheduled to follow at 1 pm.

■ soccer

continued from page 9

"The winning goal was a piece of work. Ciocca beat her player 1-on-1 and then put a ball across to Emma, who hit a one-timer at the near post," Rudy said.

Kuronuki then set up Green for the insurance goal on a serve in the box. The Poughkeepsie, NY product toe-poked home the pass for her seventh goal of the season.

Angie Napoli made five saves in goal to record her third shutout of the year for the Minutewomen. The win boosted Napoli's record to 6-1 on the season.

UMass will close out its regular season this weekend at Totman Field when it hosts Duquesne and St. Bonaventure. Both games will be important in determining the seeding for the Minutewomen in the A-10 tournament.

FUNKMASTER FLEX
With Special Guest D.J.
and featuring Original Vibe Monsters (Area 51 and Alias)
Student Union Ballroom
THURSDAY OCT. 28, 1999
DOORS OPEN @ 8pm
TICKETS AVAILABLE @ C.C. Concourse ~ Tix Unlimited ~ Northampton Box Office (586-8686) ~ The Grow Room
Only $15 for Umass Students
$18 five-college
$20 general public
Brought to you by U.P.C. ~ for more info call 5-2892

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UMSFS Presents: Rocky Horror Picture Show CCA 10pm Oct. 28

Free CD of Cool Indie Music when you register at MyBytes.com, the ultimate wesite for your college needs

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 Bedroom Atp. in Sunderland on bus route, Ht/HtW, electricity included. Well kept good location 665-4120

AUTO FOR SALE

1992 Jetta GL CD, A/C, 76K miles, sunroof $5500. 546-1773

COMPUTERS

Computer Problems? We've got solutions. New systems to technical service. Call 413-584-8857

Computer System and printer $675.000 O/BO. Call 413-268-0081

EMPLOYMENT

Campaign Jobs for the Environment $300-400/wk, F/T, P/T, and Career opportunities, Call Jeffe 256-6434

Baker/Cook/Customer Service Prepare foods,batters, doughs, recipes. In Village Market. FT/PT PM/Weekends 1 mile from campus. Cushman Village 413-549-1953

EMPLOYMENT

Flexible Part-Time Research Interviewers Abt Associates in nearby Hadley, MA has openings for evenings and weekend shift Telephone Interviewers. We require minimum of 20 hours/week with flexible scheduling. Applicants must have excellent reading/communication skills, some computer knowledge and a solid work ethic. We offer $6.75/hr to start, regular merit increases to $8.00, health and dental benefits, holiday pay and free shuttle service from Hampshire Mall PVTA Stop. For more information or to arrange a personal interview, please call Paul R. Bebo Recruiting Coordinator 1-800-792-4514 Equal Opportunity Employer

Earn $500 Weekly distributing phone cards. No experience necessary. Full or Part time Call 1-800-572-3361

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

EMPLOYMENT

Immediate Opening for a General Assignment Reporter for the Westfield Evening News, a daily paper in Westfield, MA. Ability to write clean concise copy in a strict deadline environment a must. Above average wages and benefits. Send resume to: Maria Brazee, General Manager, Westfield News 64 School St. Westfield, MA 01085

Spring 2000 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary—training provided. Contact the Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phsically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

DP Dough is hiring drivers and kitchen help. Must be able to work nights. Approxiametly $20/hour. Apply at DP Dough.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals - Free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Couch $80, Loveseat $60, Beds $50, Desks $50, Etc. Free Delivery 586-2221

2 COMPUTERS Specifications Processor: MMX 166 Mhz
Ram: 16 Mb
Hard Drive: 3.2 Gigs.
Floppys: One 2 MB
Monitor: 15"
CD: 24X
Zip Drive: Internal IDE
Video Card: Cirrus 2 Mbs
Keyboard: 101
Modem: 56K External
Software: Win95 and various others
$400.00 each

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons by retired pro Dajata Bumpus in Amherst. On bus rte. Call 256-0364

LOST & FOUND

LOST CAT: Near Leach, Orange Tabby Please Call 665-9950 Leave Message

ROOMMATE WANTED

3 Fun girls looking! 1/3 mile from campus. $250+utilities/mo. Call 549-9621. Spring Semester ONLY!!

Roommate Wanted to share 1bdrm in 2bdrm apt in Sunderland 15min from campus $365/mo + utilities. Call Paula 413-397-9768

SERVICES

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TICKETS

2 Sold Out Tickets to Phish concert down in Florida on December 30-31. 546-0470

TRAVEL

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

CALLING ALL ROOMMATES!

LOOKING FOR A NEW ONE??

YOU FOUND THE PLACE TO ADVERTISE!!

COME DOWN TO THE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT AND FIND YOUR NEW ROOMMATE TODAY!!

Are you looking to advertise to THOUSANDS of people???

WELL... you found the place! Call 545-3500!

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, OCT. 26

Meeting—The Graduate Employee Organization will be holding a membership meeting at 5 p.m. in room 168A of the Campus Center.

Video—A video showing and discussion entitled "Living the Legacy: Racism and Resistance in the Academy" will be held at 7 p.m. in room 174/176 of the Campus Center.

Information—Financial Aid Services will be holding an informational session for all students planning to go on international exchange from 3-6 p.m. in rooms 804-808 of the Campus Center. All students planning to go away must attend at least one workshop before leaving. There will be more informational sessions to come.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 27

Meeting—Anyone interested in contributing to the Student/Faculty Handbook on Disability should meet at 4 p.m. in rooms 903-909 of the Campus Center. Students are welcome, and refreshments will be available.

THURSDAY, OCT 28

Meeting—Anyone interested in contributing to the Student/Faculty Handbook on Disability should meet at 1 p.m. in rooms 903-909 of the Campus Center. Students are welcome, and refreshments will be available.

NOTICES

Art—The Wheeler Gallery will present "Cellblock Visions' Cell Division—Prison Art in America" on display until Nov. 7. The Gallery is located in Central Residential Area.

Art—The Student Union Visual and Performing Art Space will be showing an exhibit of undergraduate artwork, focusing on the self-portrait, until Oct. 29. Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday, 9:30 a.m.-5 p.m.

Crafts—The Student Union Craft Center is now open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops call 545-2046, or stop by the Craft Center.

Support—The Counseling Services Program at the Everywoman's Center is offering a free support group for women living with bipolar disorder, on Wednesdays from 5:15-6:45 p.m. There will be four consecutive sessions at the Everywoman's Center in Wilder Hall. Call 545-0665 for more information, or to register.

Support—A grief support group for undergraduate and graduate students is available starting Tuesday, Oct. 27 from 6-7:30 p.m. Telephone prescreening is required. Call 577-5316 or 545-0041 if interested.

Put your FYI here!!!!!

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Bookworks
PRESENTS
Professor Anne Simon PH.D., author of
"THE REAL SCIENCE BEHIND 'THE X-FILES'"
TODAY
OCTOBER 26th, 4-6pm
Campus Center RM# 162-75

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER
Just another way that WE GIVE 100%
We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	WSCH Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	26	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 26, 1999

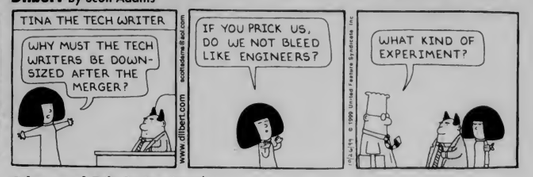
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Y2K-Winter of Our Discontent		Wonders of the African World (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 3)				Independent Lens (Part 2 of 10)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	JAG "Yeah, Baby" (In Stereo)		60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Yeah, Baby" (In Stereo)		60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Spin City	It's Like, You	Dharma-Greg	Sports Night	Once end Again (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Angel "Fall to Pieces"		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	World Series: Game 3 – Atlanta Braves or New York Mets at Boston Red Sox or New York Yankees				News		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Reel TV	Real TV (R)	Dilbert (R)	Dilbert (R)	The Strip "Murder by Numbers"		News	Caroline	Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	World Series: Game 3 – Atlanta Braves or New York Mets at Boston Red Sox or New York Yankees				News		Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Ally	The Show	Party of Five (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	World Series: Game 3 – Atlanta Braves or New York Mets at Boston Red Sox or New York Yankees				News		Tonight Show
WGBY	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Face – A Portrait (In Stereo)		Wonders of the African World (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 3)				Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Spin City	It's Like, You	Dharma-Greg	Sports Night	Once and Again (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Dilbert (R)	Dilbert (R)	The Strip "Murder by Numbers"		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Blind Date	Ricki Lake
WTBS	72	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★ "Nowhere to Run" (1993, Adventure) Jean-Claude Van Damme				★★ "Rocky IV" (1985, Drama) Sylvester Stallone
A&E	41	Simon & Simon		Law & Order "In Memory of..."		Biography: Angie Dickinson		Investigative Reports		City Confidential (R)		Law & Order "Forgiveness"
CNN	42	Worldview	Moneyline	Newshour		Crossfire		World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand	Sports
COM	43	Saturday Night Live				★½ "Fatal Instinct" (1993, Comedy) Armand Assante,				Com.-Presents	Uncomfortably	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	44	Your New House		Wild Discovery: Maneaters		On the Inside: Army		New Detectives "True Crime"		FBI Files "A Stranger in Town"		On the Inside: Army
ESPN	45	Sportscenter		Wonderful World of Golf			50 Greatest	Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders		Billiards		Timbersport	Sportscenter
LIFE	46	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait				Chicago Hope (In Stereo)				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	47	Global Groove	MTV Jams	Real World	Real World	TRL (R) (In Stereo)			Head Trip	Real World	Making-Video	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	48	All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Catdog		Eddie	All in Family	All in Family	All in Family	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	49	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Sentinel "Payback" (In Stereo)		Sentinel "True Crime"		Sentinel "Ice Man" (In Stereo)		Sentinel "The Rig" (In Stereo)		Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales
TLC	50	Home Again	Home Again	Solving Murder Kansas City		Trauma: Life in the ER		Science of Sex: To Have-Hold		Science of Sex: Why Is		Trauma: Life in the ER (R)
TNT	53	Due South "An Eye for an Eye"		ER "Happy New Year"		★½ "Robin Hood: Men in Tights" (1993, Comedy) Cary Elwes,				★½ "She's Apartment" (1996, Comedy) Jerry O'Connell,
USA	54	Baywatch (In Stereo)		JAG "The Shaker" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger		★★★ "Halloween" (1978, Horror) Jamie Lee Curtis. (In Stereo)				Baywatch (In Stereo)
HBO	61	★★ "Three Wishes" (1995, Drama) Patrick Swayze, Joely				★★ "Letters From a Killer" (1998) Patrick Dempsey,		"Absence of the Good" (1999, Suspense) Stephen Baldwin,				R Reverb
MAX	62	(4:45) "The Peacemaker" (1997)				"Walking to Extase" (1995, Drama) Whitney Houston.			R	★★½ "The Sex Monster" (1999, Comedy)		NR	"Confessions"
SHOW	65	★★★ "Elmo" (1985, Drama) Kate Nelligan. (In Stereo)		PG		★★ "Body Count" (1998) David Carson.			R	★½ "A Night at the Roxbury" (1998) Will Ferrell,		★★½ "Living Zoo" (1998)	R

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Spunk By Mike Lariccia



FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Rose Is Rose By Pat Brady

Horoscopes

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Are you prepared to give your heart away? Someone out there is eager to get closer to you, but this may involve a long-term commitment.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Don't hesitate to share a secret with someone who is eager to get closer to you. This could be a way to get a new relationship started.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – It's a good day to re-examine a friendship, particularly after a recent outburst that has forced you to re-evaluate your own self-worth.

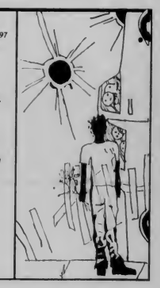
Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Someone you know well may actually fall under your spell all over again today. As a result, your evening hours may be filled with magic!

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – Take care that you don't say anything inappropriate today when you're asked for your opinion. Be honest, but tactful!

Aries (March 21-April 19) – The domestic scene provides you with both a challenge and renewed satisfaction today. Once you face the truth, you're home free.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – You may not know how to say what is really on your mind early in the day, but later on the words will seem to fill your head and your heart.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – People you love may find themselves in a difficult situation today, but you must resist the temptation to be their caretaker.



Cancer (June 21-July 22) – Safety may prove to be a prime concern today, though you mustn't be accustoms that you are unable to maneuver effectively.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – Sincerity is the watchword today. Take care you don't try to fool anyone with any kind of façade. It's the "real you" they're interested in today!

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Sitting still is not for you today. But you may have trouble deciding just which direction is for you at this time. When in doubt, just get moving!

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – The physical and the intellectual should be able to combine today with startling results. The routine can become exceptional.

Leold www.leold.com by Roger and Salem Salloom© 1997

My friend Wallace is a mellow smart guy.

He's an African American graduate student. He studies audio physics at the university.

He thinks it's amazing that when he is standing on a street corner and a fancy car pulls up, even though the windows are closed tight, he can still hear all four automatic door locks click.

Quote of the Day

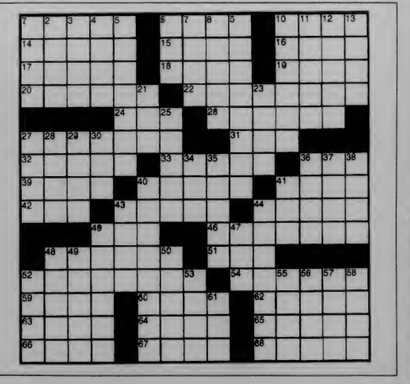
"If you were a hot dog, and you were hungry, would you eat yourself?"

–Will Ferrell as Harry Caray

Survey Says... No D.C. Menu Today

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Adam Shmoadom White
Photo Technition	Dan the Man Santella
Copy Editor	Samkind Wilkinson
Production Supervisor	Jet Superstar Santoro
Production Staff	Lovee Lovester Garg Jan-in-e in a Bottle Tangney



ACROSS
1 Duke or baron
6 Latch — get
10 Notre —
14 Farm measures
15 Unwanted plant
16 Take —
17 Reeked
18 Catch
19 Broad
20 Incapacitate
22 Closet freshener
24 Scratch
26 Fix a pump part
27 Curious maiden of myth
31 Head gesture
32 Wall climbers
33 Tangy
36 "Rear end
39 Hall-of-Famer Ty
40 Relocates
41 Blanch
42 Reply: abbr.
43 Olive-green bird
44 Sweetener
45 Greek letters
46 Not familiar
48 Self-defense art
51 Set (down)
52 Last-round participant
54 Came in second
59 Nervous
60 Isaac's son
62 Cherish
63 Ms. Adams
64 Bag
65 Object from the past
66 Tinted
67 Small child
68 Talent

DOWN
1 Humorous poet
2 Eight (pref.)
3 Boast
4 Fasting period
5 Some native Alaskans
6 Wise one
7 One of the tides
8 Singing voice
9 Remnants
10 Emerged
11 Tolerate
12 Pose
13 Jug
21 "In one — . . ."
23 Sailor's greeting
25 Toiletry article
27 Type size
28 Cosmetics company
29 Pan points
30 Society gal
34 12/31, e.g.
35 '88 Olympics site
36 Shake-spearean villain
37 Cole —
38 Seabird
40 Foggiest
41 Play on words
43 Small container
44 Melodious singer
45 Used a hospital machine
47 Doze
48 See 67 Across
49 Actress Dickinson
50 Writing assignment
52 Nourish
53 Small nail
55 Yemeni city
56 Soft drink
57 Running back Dickerson
58 Pack of cards
61 Hawaiian strings

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

A	F	A	R		J	E	L	L	S		M	A	R	Y
L	U	B	E		U	N	I	T		E	R	I	E
O	R	A	L		A	G	A	V	E		B	E	L	L
	N	O	T	I	O	N		M	E	A	T	B	A	L
G	R	E	E	D		G	A	N	D	H	I
		F	E	R	N			I	N	E
M	E	W	S		Y	A	M		I	N	G	R	I	D
I	D	A		A	W	I	N	G		A	N	D
D	E	N	T	I	N		S	A	L	O		O	B	E	Y
I	N	E	R	T			C	R	A	M
		A	C	C	E	S	S		R	I	G	E	R
L	O	N	G	J	O	H	A	N		E	N	T	R	E
O	D	I	E		A	N	I	S	E		T	A	R	A
S	O	L	D		T	R	I	B	A	L		E	V	I	L
T	R	E	Y		S	E	E	D		I	D	E	A

10-26-99 © 1999, United Feature Syndicate

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Tuesday, October 26, 1999

Water polo seizes ECAC title

Offense cruises, Huntley stymies opponents in goal

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

The dogs were kept on their leashes this weekend at Brown University, and the master came from Amherst. And more bark than bite was all these dogs could muster against the vaunted offense of the Massachusetts men's water polo team.

Standing between them and a conference title were the Terriers of St. Francis University. The offense tallied 35 goals over the weekend en route to the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference Championship.

St. Francis University has been UMass' nemesis all season. The No. 13 Terriers defeated the Minutemen in two of their three regular season match ups, but when it counted most the Maroon and White prevailed, beating SFU 8-5 to capture the ECAC crown.

It was the second consecutive year that the Minutemen have tamed St. Francis in the title game of the ECACs, winning by a score of 10-9 in Annapolis, MD.

In the title clinching game, UMass was led by seniors Timmy Troupis and Rich Slingluff who each tickled the twine twice. Sophomore Carlos Ramos also netted a pair in the winning effort.

Courtesy Media Relations

Timmy Troupis

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Mike Foley

Between the pipes, senior All-American Richard Huntley turned aside eight Terrier shots to solidify the Minutemen's stranglehold east coast water polo.

In order to make it to the championship game the Minutemen had to contend with No. 18 Bucknell and No.12 Princeton. Both the Bison and the Tigers were familiar faces for UMass having played them both earlier in the season.

On October 7 the Maroon and White scrapped out a 9-5 win, but this time the Minutemen were on a mission. The mission was to get an easy win under their belts early in the tournament, so that they could have enough steam left for the remainder of the weekend. And an easy win they got, pummeling Bucknell 15-7 behind four goals from Troupis and three from Mike Foley.

Pat Kain posted another solid game, scoring twice. Sophomore Greg Thayer also chipped in with a pair that reached the back of the net.

Huntley was the defensive stopper for UMass as he thwarted 12 Bucknell scoring attempts before being replaced by backup goalie Rafael Santana in the fourth quarter. Santana spoiled two Bison shots in his one quarter of play.

With the win, the Minutemen improve to 14-1 all-time against the Bison.

In the semifinal contest against Princeton, balanced offense was the story for UMass as they defeated the Tigers 12-10. In defeating Princeton, the Minutemen avenged a loss earlier in the season in which they lost to the hosts in the Princeton Invitational.

Foley led the offense with a hat trick, while Kain dented the net with a pair of goals.

In the end, it was the balance that allowed the Minutemen to propel themselves onward in the tournament. UMass had seven men score as they outlasting the Tigers.

Contributing to the goals were Justin Houck, Cory Koenemann, Adam Moore, Brook O'Neill Ramos, Thayer, and Troupis.

With the win, the Minutemen improved their record to 22-5 on the season. They will next be in action when they attempt to win their sixth Collegiate Water Polo Association title in the last seven seasons in Cambridge this weekend.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

The Massachusetts men's water polo team defeated Bucknell, Princeton, and St. Francis this weekend to capture their second consecutive Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference Championship.

UMass wins 2 games to qualify for A-10 tourney

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

BRONX, NY – At times this season, the Massachusetts women's soccer team has lacked the ability to deliver the knockout punch.

In a handful of games, the Minutewomen have jumped out to early leads, only to allow their opposition to rally back later in the game. Fortunately for UMass, it has only lost one game in which in led in the second half, that coming in double-overtime to Connecticut.

That wasn't the case on Sunday afternoon in the Bronx, though. The Minutewomen left Fordham down for the count with a ferocious scoring flurry late in the first half. Katelyn Jones and Kat Machamer each scored in a span of 1:04 to turn a 1-0 UMass lead into a three-goal cushion.

On the strength of those scores, the Minutewomen cruised to a 4-1 over the Rams at Edwards' Parade. That win, coupled with a victory over La Salle on Friday afternoon in Philadelphia, boosted UMass' record to 10-3-1, 8-1 in the Atlantic 10.

The Maroon and White also qualified for the A-10 tournament with the win on Sunday. It will be held at Totman Field on Nov. 5-7.

"[Winning both games] was big, especially after our loss to Dayton [on Oct. 17]. We really needed these games," said senior Cindy Garceau, who had the first goal of the afternoon on Sunday. "It was very important as far as our seeding and getting into the conference tournament."

After a host of scoring chances in the first 25 minutes, UMass finally got on the board with 17:25 left in the opening half. Garceau gathered an errant clearing attempt by the Rams and fired a shot past Fordham keeper Kim Kasper.

The Minutewomen kept the pressure on the hosts for the remainder of the half, then broke it open near the end of the stanza. The second goal of the game was the result of a picturesque series of passes by UMass.

Senior captain Robin Smith started the sequence in the midfield by threading a pass to Maggie LaBrode on the right flank. The freshman then crossed a ball into the box to Emma Kurowski, who delivered a shot that was saved by Kasper. However, Machamer was right on the doorstep to deposit the rebound into the net.

"It was nice to score because it was my first goal of the season. I don't score too often, so it was exciting to get the goal," Machamer said. "I was excited just to get in the game. Coach told me to try to break the flanks and get some work in [on the flanks], and I ended up scoring a goal."

The onslaught continued just over a minute later when Jones netted her third goal of the year off a pass from LaBrode. The Round Lake, NY native tiptoed along the goal line before tucking a shot past a fallen Kasper.

"First Spanky [Kristi Robicheau] wore down No. 2 [Casey Finnegan], then we brought in Maggie. Kristi fatigued her [Finnegan] to the point that when Maggie came on, she played the right wing midfield position like a fiddle," UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "She broke the [right] flank right away, and the insertion of Kat opened up the left flank."

Leading 3-0 at the half, the Minutewomen went back into a bit of a defensive mode in the second stanza. However, UMass finally put in the nail in Fordham's coffin with 29:53 left in the game. Junior Brooke Bartlett gathered a deflection in the box and blasted a shot home to close out the scoring for the Minutewomen.

The hosts would finally spoil the shutout for Cori Stevens with 19:16 remaining in the game on a goal by senior Beth Ganter.

"Brooke's goal was key because if they had scored their goal before she scored, they would have had some momentum," Machamer said. "But instead, her goal put the nail in their coffin."

Stevens made six saves in goal to earn her fourth win of the season for the Minutewomen.

Friday afternoon in Philadelphia, UMass got late goals from Kurowski and Kara Green to earn the 2-0 win. Kurowski got the first goal with 16:55 left in the game off a pass from Kara Ciocca.

Turn to SOCCER page 9

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Kat Machmer and the Minutewomen defeated LaSalle and Fordam this weekend to qualify for the Atlantic 10 Tournament.

Minutewomen zero in on Dartmouth Big Green

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

If they were golfers, they'd welcome the Big Green with open arms. If they were Finance majors, the Big Green would be the windfall that put them in the black.

But these are field hockey players. To them, the Big Green is just another foe to trample on their path to greatness.

Regular season Atlantic 10 Champion Massachusetts (9-8, 5-0 A-10) will try to play cruel hosts to No.18 Dartmouth tonight in a 7 pm regional showdown. This game will snap a winning streak for one of the programs: The Minutewomen have rattled off five straight victories, while the Big Green has won three in a row.

UMass will undoubtedly pack more momentum going into this matchup, having achieved two humongous victories over Temple and St. Joseph's over the weekend to capture the conference crown.

"We're pretty confident coming off of five wins; we kind of dug ourselves out of a hole," said UM goalkeeper Zowie Tucker. "We beat Dartmouth last year, but they're ranked this year, so that aught to make us more emotional to play them."

Coach Julie Dayton's Big Green (9-4, 3-2 Ivy League) certainly shouldn't be overlooked by the surging Maroon and White. Dartmouth has notched big wins over Rhode Island and New Hampshire behind an offense that many coaches would kill for: The Big Green has averaged a whopping three goals-per-game, and has found the net nine times in its last two contests.

But the high-octane Dartmouth "O" doesn't phase Tucker, who has stopped 98 shots and pitched three shutouts for the Minutewomen this year.

"We've faced a lot of teams this season with good forward play," Tucker said. "Our defense has gotten a lot better this year. And it's not only our backs that are playing well; our forwards are starting to run, which makes it easier on the midfield and the backs. I think we can cope with whatever Dartmouth has to throw at us."

What the Big Green will throw at UMass is dynamic forward Kim Jenkin, whose hat trick Saturday powered Dartmouth past Ivy League rival Cornell. Coach Dayton's roster also features one of collegiate field hockey's greatest sister acts, senior New York natives Lauren and Kristin Scopaz.

The Big Green has run up an enviable 4-1 road record this season, while UMass is 7-3 on its home turf in '99.

With UM having already sewn up both the conference title and the top seed in the upcoming A-10 tournament, it would seem that the team has little to play for in its final two games of the regular season. But according to Tucker, maintaining their momentum through the season finale will be crucial to the Minutewomen's post-season success.

"It's important that we prepare ourselves for the tournament," Tucker said. "Not only to play well over these next two games, but also to go into the tournament with some confidence. Coming off two wins, that means we would've won seven in a row. That can only help us to play better in the A-10 tournament, because we face a lot of teams that want to get back at us because we've beaten them this season."

Tucker and her teammates will look to add to their list of vanquished opponents in both the Dartmouth battle and their season finale, which is set to unfold at Northeastern at 1 pm on Halloween.

A-10 rivals take bite out of UMass

By Seth Szilagyi
Collegian Staff

This was one conference call they should have never answered.

The Massachusetts volleyball team was swept this weekend, as they were brushed back below .500 in the Atlantic 10 by conference foes Xavier and Dayton.

UM did battle with Xavier on Friday night. The Minutewomen came out with a flurry of points and made the Musketeers work, but Xavier prevailed in a 15-13 final. XU drew confidence off the first game win to push the match to a 2-0 lead, taking the game by a score of 15-7. UM tried to jump start their offense in game three, but were thwarted by Xavier, as the Musketeers closed out the match with another 15-7 win.

Senior co-captain Jill Meyers led the squad with a team-high 14 kills and 19 digs. Sophomore Janeen Demarte also tallied a double-double with 11 kills and 12 digs. Junior Rebecca Hasson went back to her defensive skills, as she posted a team-high 7 blocks. Hasson needs only five more solo blocks to become fourth on the school's list. Sophomore setter Heather Holtsberg put up 47 assists, as her counter-part junior Jennifer Drennan surpassed Katie Pearce (1995-96) for eighth all-time in digs at UMass with six on the night.

With the loss, the Minutewomen fall to 5-5 in the Atlantic 10 conference and 11-9 overall, while Xavier improved to 7-3 in the conference with a 16-5 overall mark.

Saturday, UMass stayed in Ohio to take on the Dayton Flyers. DU didn't take kindly to the Minutewomen's arrival, as they got revenge for a loss to UM earlier in the season.

UMass kept it close in game one but couldn't pull it out, losing 8-15. Game two saw the Minutewomen fight back against the Flyers to tie it at one apiece, 15-5. Game three mimicked game two, but flip-flopped the scores with UM on the losing end, 5-15. In the fourth game, the Minutewomen tried to put on their rally caps, only to have their hopes dashed in a 15-12 loss that cost them the match.

Meyers was once again the team leader, with 19 kills and 20 digs. The senior averaged 4.71 kills and 5.57 digs per game on the weekend. Senior Kari Hogancamp got back into form, posting her usual double-double with 13 kills and 18 digs. Hogancamp has been outstanding all season, leading the team and the nation in digs with 5.18 per game over the past four weeks. She also earned both A-10 and ECAC Player of the Week honors for the week ending October 10, averaging 5.33 kills and 6.67 digs in matches against Brown, Temple and LaSalle.

Sophomore Lymarie Llowet had herself a personal history-making night with a career-high 19 digs and adding 9 kills. Holtsberg was again the setter of choice for the squad, tallying just 4 assists shy of her career-high tallying 59.

The loss leaves the Minutewomen below .500 with a 5-6 record in the A-10, 11-10 overall. The Flyers find themselves up one in the plus column (6-5) in the conference, with a 10-10 overall mark.

UMass will take a needed rest and return home, where they're at their best, to face conference rival Rhode Island on Saturday, October 30. The game will kick off at 7pm in the Curry Hicks Cage.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Jennifer Drennan played solid for the volleyball team this weekend in a pair of losses.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 56 — Wednesday, October 27, 1999

UM staff member killed in shooting

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Jean Hosmer, 45, of Pelham was shot and killed Monday in Northampton by her husband William Bernotas, 46, of Sunderland. Hosmer was an employee of the University of Massachusetts Extension Office. She had just filed, and been granted, an extension of a restraining order against Bernotas at the Hampshire Probate and Family Court.

When Hosmer returned to her car from the courthouse, Bernotas was beside her. Police say, he then shot her.

Hosmer died at 11:53 a.m. Monday.

According to police, Bernotas then turned the gun on himself, but the shot wasn't fatal. He was hospitalized in Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton and later moved to Baystate Medical Center, where he is currently in critical condition.

He has been arrested and charged with murder. Hosmer and Bernotas had been in the middle of a divorce. She had filed for a restraining order on June 28, and it was granted. She had filed for the extension on the morning of her death. Both restraining orders required Bernotas to stay away from her at both her home and her work place.

Hosmer worked most recently as a Design Illustrator. Bernotas had recently been hired at UMass to work in the office of informational technologies.

The couple divorced March 23, 1999, but had last lived together on Nov. 1, 1998. They married in 1981.

After filing for the initial restraining order, Bernotas had threatened Hosmer's parents, and he later threatened Hosmer herself.

He had, reportedly, refused to accept divorce papers from Hosmer.

Hosmer's two daughters, Sandra Bernotas, 15, and Kevin Bernotas, 11, were notified of the death and are being housed with a family friend at an undeclared location. Bernotas did have visitation with his children. As part of the restraining order that prevented Bernotas from seeing Hosmer, a friend of Bernotas had to pick up both children to take them to the residence of a third party.

Teachers at Amherst Regional High School, where Hosmer's daughter is a sophomore, read a statement of grief to students. Grief counselors and peer counselors were available to both faculty and students throughout the day. Information from this article was taken from the Springfield Union News.

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Yesterday, Professor of psychology Ervin Straub spoke at a distinguished teacher's lecture at a packed Memorial Hall.

Individuals arrested for weekend fights

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

In a busy weekend, the University of Massachusetts Police Department arrested four individuals involved in one fight and three more involved in a second fight.

Early Sunday morning, one individual, Michael Hall, an 18-year-old Springfield resident, was arrested on Infirmary Way. He was charged with assault and battery, underage possession of alcohol and assault and battery with a dangerous weapon. The latter assault and battery charge is a felony.

Weekend Police Roundup

"A green van pulled up beside a second group of individuals and people then got out of the van. A fight was then started," John Luippold, Chief of the UMPD, said. "We believe it started after a verbal altercation."

According to Luippold, officers interviewed bystanders who told police that Hall was kicking an unidentified victim. Using the foot resulted in the assault and battery with a dangerous weapon charge.

A little less than two hours later, officers came upon the same green van in Lot 64, the parking lot outside of police offices in Dickinson Hall.

"Officers were alerted to the presence of the van, and went outside to investigate. Questioning individuals in the van, officers called in the names of the people in the van," Luippold said.

When the names came back to the police officers, it was discovered that one of the individuals in the van, Antoine Diaz, 19, was wanted in his hometown of Springfield on a warrant issued by the Hampden Superior Court. According to Luippold, the warrant had been issued after Diaz failed to appear after being charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon.

But Diaz wasn't the only individual in the van that was arrested. Ryan Robinson, an 18-year-old resident of Springfield, was charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon after he was identified to have been involved in the original assault on Infirmary Way.

"Statements gathered at the scene described Robinson, and officers, upon spotting him, arrested him," Luippold said. "He too had been kicking the victim. He was arrested on probable cause after he had been described to officers."

According to Luippold, at 11:00 a.m. the green van returned to Lot 64 to bail out the others. Joseph Murray's name was checked on police computers as he was trying to pay bail. Murray, 19, of Springfield, left before police found his name to carry an active warrant.

"He left, and then we got the information back. He was wanted on a warrant issued from Springfield District Court for failure to appear after being charged with selling or delivering alcohol," Luippold said.

All four individuals, Hall, Diaz, Robinson and Murray, were also issued trespasses, which prevents them from returning to UMass.

Turn to FIGHTS page 2

Professor leads lecture series on mass violence

By Jamie Loo
Collegian Correspondent

Focusing on the relationships between bystanders and violence, Ervin Staub, a psychology professor at the University of Massachusetts gave a talk yesterday entitled "Bystanders: Genocide, Youth Violence, and the Creation of Caring." This lecture was the first of four in this year's Distinguished Faculty Lecture Series. Staub, along with three other faculty members involved in the series, will receive the Chancellor's Medal, which is the highest honor given to professors for exemplary and extraordinary service to the University.

Staub discussed on how people, especially children, are impacted by mass violence and genocide, as well as the effects bystanders can have on violence. Staub spoke about his own personal experience and about the impact bystanders have on situations.

Bystanders have the responsibility of either turning away or getting involved in a situation, Staub said. Individual bystanders themselves are affected by their choice, in either a positive or negative way.

Genocide involves "continuum of destruction" that evolves into the dehumanization of the targeted group, according to Staub. With one group of bystanders ignoring the problem, the perpetrators of the genocide become affirmed in their actions continuing on their path of destruction. Gradually, these bystanders also begin to accept and believe in this degradation, making the cause and violence grow.

Staub said bystanders who take action change in a positive way include Holocaust "rescuers," people that helped to hide many Jewish people during the Nazi tyranny. Fifty percent of the rescuers thought that their committement was only short-term, however in the end became more committed to the cause of human welfare, continuing to hide people until the end of the war.

Staub said youth violence is a result of the mistreatment of children

Turn to LECTURE page 3

Survey shows smoking ban support decreasing

By William F. Larkin
Collegian Staff

Over the past few months, support for the ban on smoking in bars and restaurants appears to be weakening in both Amherst and Northampton.

On Oct. 5, the Amherst Area Chamber of Commerce came out in opposition to the Sept. 1, 1998 ban, which prohibits smoking in all bars and public places located in the town of Amherst, including enclosed places of employment as well as restaurants.

John Coull, the chamber executive director, said, "Allow choice, and don't harm going businesses," concerning the vote by the chamber's board of directors.

The chamber's decision to officially oppose the ban came after a meeting by a new government relations task force of chamber members. Coull said. At the meeting, the task force members decided to ask the chamber to oppose the ban officially, according to Coull. Coull said the chamber's vote, which was made specifically to support the Town Commercial Relations Committee's position opposing the ban, passed without much controversy.

Amherst is not the only municipality with questions surrounding a smoking ban. According to a recent survey published by Market Street Research, only 35.6 percent of people in Northampton favor the city's smoking ban.

Market Street Research conducted 500 telephone interviews with Northampton residents. Those interviewed were nearly equally divided between men and women, with an average age of 47.

Findings from the survey include:

– 84 percent of Northampton residents are non-smokers and 16 percent are smokers.

– 70.3 percent of all those polled favor the city's 1994 ban on smoking in restaurants.

– 17.7 percent of all those polled believe the ban on smoking in restaurants helped restaurants; 35 percent said it had no impact; 24.3 said the ban has hurt the restaurants; and 23 percent said they did not know what impact the ban had.

– 67.7 percent believe that a smoking ban in bars would economically hurt bars; 20.7 percent said a ban would have no impact; and 4 percent said a ban would improve business in bars.

According to the survey, those who oppose the ban said the government should not infringe on personal liberties, and the owner of the bar should determine whether to impose a ban. They also said bars are the last frontier for the social politic of smoking. Because of the ban, those polled said bars will experience a loss of business.

Resistance to the ban is not limited to Amherst and Northampton. On Aug. 17, the State Public Health Council voted to continue pursuing efforts to encourage cities and towns to seek restrictions on smoking, rather than implement a statewide ban.

"Right now, I think the best strategy is to have the locals continue it," said Greg Connolly, director of the state's tobacco control program. The program spends $4.5 million a year to promote local anti-smoking efforts.

In April, the council received the results of one study that found more than 1,000 people die every

Turn to BAN page 3

Racial conflicts remain a concern

Joby Gelbspan spoke before the screening of Living the Legacy: Racism and Resistance in the Academy. The video was followed by a discussion of efforts to re-instate a race-based Affirmative Action admissions policy at UMass.

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Students gathered last night to discuss the facilitation of a revival of race-based affirmative action on the University of Massachusetts campus.

The program entitled "Living the Legacy: Racism and Resistance in the Academy" included both a video showing and a discussion regarding racism and the need for race-based affirmative action on campus.

The video "Living the Legacy," was shown to the audience in order to draw a parallel between the UMass campus and that of the New School of Social Research in New York. The video told the story of the campus's struggle for racial equality and the effort to secure tenure for Jacqui Alexander, a West Indian faculty member, at the school.

Following the showing of the video was a discussion during which students contributed ideas about how to reinstate the race-based affirmative action policies on campus. In addition, Joby Gelbspan, a former student at the New School and a participant in the video, explained the situation that occurred and its relevance to students everywhere.

According to senior Jackie Leon, the video shown during the lecture directly parallels the struggle for equality that area students faced in March 1992. Leon explained that in 1992 a group of roughly 200 students took over the Goodell building for six days in order to force the discussion of issues regarding affirmative action.

She said the incident occurred because of "frustration with the administration." She went on to explain that in the cases of both the New School of Social Research and UMass that a similar quality was that of "the refusal of the administrators to talk to students."

Many students expressed dissatisfaction with the resolution of the Goodell incident, and said the school in general was still racially biased. According to Jon Zibbell, a representative from the Graduate Student Senate, the University revamped the picketing code and cut some feminist and minority programs following the incident.

Leon also spoke out about the negative responses that followed the Goodell takeover. She said little get resolved because issues "got caught up in task forces and committees that go absolutely nowhere."

In addition to speaking out about past problems with race related biases students also discussed how to go about eliminating problems in the future.

Diversifying the Commonwealth College was also discussed along with the decreased number of ALANA students currently enrolled at the University. Sheila Perdomo, Assistant Director of the Office of ALANA affairs, said "so many racial incidents have occurred," and asked the students present, "What are we to do?"

Overall, students agreed that in order to make any progress in affirmative action they must unify and work as a group.

"We have to make linkages for affirmative action," Zibbell said.

The discussion was held as a collective effort between the Office of ALANA Affairs, the Black Student Union, the Graduate Student Senate, Radical Student Union and the Graduate Employee Organization in an attempt to organize student activism in the area of affirmative action.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 56 LOW: 38	HIGH: 58 LOW: 30	HIGH: 60 LOW:38

SOURCE: WWLP.COM

The other side of Dr. Seuss

That famous writer/ author has a few skeletons in his closet. Check out page2 to find out what they are.

PAGE 2

How "Cool" can music get?

Turn to page 8 to find out what is up with the truly sensational improvinizational known as jazz.

PAGE 6

Mowing down the Big Green

Sarah Bobonowicz and the UMass field hockey team cut Dartmouth down to size in an exciting 2-1 win last night at Garber field.

PAGE 12

Arts & Living 6
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.dailycollegian.com

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Tuesday, October 26, 1999

Water polo seizes ECAC title

Offense cruises, Huntley stymies opponents in goal

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

The dogs were kept on their leashes this weekend at Brown University, and the master came from Amherst. And more bark than bite was all these dogs could muster against the vaunted offense of the Massachusetts men's water polo team.

Standing between them and a conference title were the Terriers of St. Francis University. The offense tallied 35 goals over the weekend en route to the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference Championship.

St. Francis University has been UMass' nemesis all season. The No. 13 Terriers defeated the Minutemen in two of their three regular season match ups, but when it counted most the Maroon and White prevailed, beating SFU 8-5 to capture the ECAC crown.

It was the second consecutive year that the Minutemen have tamed St. Francis in the title game of the ECACs, winning by a score of 10-9 in Annapolis, MD.

In the title clinching game, UMass was led by seniors Timmy Troupis and Rich Slinglulf who each tickled the twine twice. Sophomore Carlos Ramos also netted a pair in the winning effort.

Courtesy Media Relations
Timmy Troupis

Between the pipes, senior All-American Richard Huntley turned aside eight Terrier shots to solidify the Minutemen's stranglehold east coast water polo.

In order to make it to the championship game the Minutemen had to contend with No. 18 Bucknell and No.12 Princeton. Both the Bison and the Tigers were familiar faces for UMass having played them both earlier in the season.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Mike Foley

On October 7 the Maroon and White scrapped out a 9-5 win, but this time the Minutemen were on a mission. The mission was to get an easy win under their belts early in the tournament, so that they could have enough steam left for the remainder of the weekend. And an easy win they got, pummeling Bucknell 15-7 behind four goals from Troupis and three from Mike Foley.

Pat Kain posted another solid game, scoring twice. Sophomore Greg Thayer also chipped in with a pair that reached the back of the net.

Huntley was the defensive stopper for UMass as he thwarted 12 Bucknell scoring attempts before being replaced by backup goalie Rafael Santana in the fourth quarter. Santana spoiled two Bison shots in his one quarter of play.

With the win, the Minutemen improve to 14-1 all-time against the Bison.

In the semifinal contest against Princeton, balanced offense was the story for UMass as they defeated the Tigers 12-10. In defeating Princeton, the Minutemen avenged a loss earlier in the season in which they lost to the hosts in the Princeton Invitational.

Foley led the offense with a hat trick, while Kain dented the net with a pair of goals.

In the end, it was the balance that allowed the Minutemen to propel themselves onward in the tournament. UMass had seven men score as they outlasting the Tigers.

Contributing to the goals were Justin Houck, Cory Koenemann, Adam Moore, Brook O'Neill Ramos, Thayer, and Troupis.

With the win, the Minutemen improved their record to 22-3 on the season. They will next be in action when they attempt to win their sixth Collegiate Water Polo Association title in the last seven seasons in Cambridge this weekend.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO
The Massachusetts men's water polo team defeated Bucknell, Princeton, and St. Francis this weekend to capture their second consecutive Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference Championship.

UMass wins 2 games to qualify for A-10 tourney

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

BRONX, NY – At times this season, the Massachusetts women's soccer team has lacked the ability to deliver the knockout punch.

In a handful of games, the Minutewomen have jumped out to early leads, only to allow their opposition to rally back later in the game. Fortunately for UMass, it has only lost one game in which in led in the second half, that coming in double-overtime to Connecticut.

That wasn't the case on Sunday afternoon in the Bronx, though. The Minutewomen left Fordham down for the count with a ferocious scoring flurry late in the first half. Katelyn Jones and Kat Machamer each scored in a span of 1:04 to turn a 1-0 UMass lead into a three-goal cushion.

On the strength of those scores, the Minutewomen cruised to a 4-1 over the Rams at Edwards' Parade. That win, coupled with a victory over La Salle on Friday afternoon in Philadelphia, boosted UMass' record to 10-3-1, 8-1 in the Atlantic 10.

The Maroon and White also qualified for the A-10 tournament with the win on Sunday. It will be held at Totman Field on Nov. 5-7.

"[Winning both games] was big, especially after our loss to Dayton [on Oct. 17]. We really needed these games," said senior Cindy Garceau, who had the first goal of the afternoon on Sunday. "It was very important as far as our seeding and getting into the conference tournament."

After a host of scoring chances in the first 25 minutes, UMass finally got on the board with 17:25 left in the opening half. Garceau gathered an errant clearing attempt by the Rams and fired a shot past Fordham keeper Kim Kasper.

The Minutewomen kept the pressure on the hosts for the remainder of the half, then broke it open near the end of the stanza. The second goal of the game was the result of a picturesque series of passes by UMass.

Senior captain Robin Smith started the sequence in the midfield by threading a pass to Maggie LaBrode on the right flank. The freshman then crossed a ball into the box to Emma Kurowski, who delivered a shot that was saved by Kasper. However, Machamer was right on the doorstep to deposit the rebound into the net.

"It was nice to score because it was my first goal of the season. I don't score too often, so it was exciting to get the goal," Machamer said. "I was excited just to get in the game. Coach told me to try to break the flanks and get some work in [on the flanks], and I ended up scoring a goal."

The onslaught continued just over a minute later when Jones netted her third goal of the year off a pass from LaBrode. The Round Lake, NY native tiptoed along the goal line before tucking a shot past a fallen Kasper.

"First Spanky [Kristi Robicheau] wore down No. 2 [Casey Finnegan], then we brought in Maggie. Kristi fatigued her [Finnegan] to the point that when Maggie came on, she played the right wing midfield position like a fiddle," UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "She broke the [right] flank right away, and the insertion of Kat opened up the left flank."

Leading 3-0 at the half, the Minutewomen went back into a bit of a defensive mode in the second stanza. However, UMass finally put in the nail in Fordham's coffin with 29:33 left in the game. Junior Brooke Bartlett gathered a deflection in the box and blasted a shot home to close out the scoring for the Minutewomen.

The hosts would finally spoil the shutout for Cori Stevens with 19:16 remaining in the game on a goal by senior Beth Ganter.

"Brooke's goal was key because if they had scored their goal before she scored, they would have had some momentum," Machamer said. "But instead, her goal put the nail in their coffin."

Stevens made six saves in goal to earn her fourth win of the season for the Minutewomen.

Friday afternoon in Philadelphia, UMass got late goals from Kurowski and Kara Green to earn the 2-0 win. Kurowski got the first goal with 16:55 left in the game off a pass from Kara Ciocca.

Turn to SOCCER page 9

Minutewomen zero in on Dartmouth Big Green

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

If they were golfers, they'd welcome the Big Green with open arms. If they were Finance majors, the Big Green would be the windfall that put them in the black.

But these are field hockey players. To them, the Big Green is just another foe to trample on their path to greatness.

Regular season Atlantic 10 Champion Massachusetts (9-8, 3-0 A-10) will try to play cruel hosts to No.18 Dartmouth tonight in a 7 pm regional showdown. This game will snap a winning streak for one of the programs: The Minutewomen have rattled off five straight victories, while the Big Green has won three in a row.

UMass will undoubtedly pack more momentum going into this matchup, having achieved two humongous victories over Temple and St. Joseph's over the weekend to capture the conference crown.

"We're pretty confident coming off of five wins; we kind of dug ourselves out of a hole," said UM goalkeeper Zowie Tucker. "We beat Dartmouth last year, but they're ranked this year, so that aught to make us more emotional to play them."

Coach Julie Dayton's Big Green (9-4, 3-2 Ivy League) certainly shouldn't be overlooked by the surging Maroon and White. Dartmouth has notched big wins over Rhode Island and New Hampshire behind an offense that many coaches would kill for: The Big Green has averaged a whopping three goals per game, and has found the net nine times in its last two contests.

But the high-octane Dartmouth "O" doesn't phase Tucker, who has stopped 98 shots and pitched three shutouts for the Minutewomen this year.

"We've faced a lot of teams this season with good forward play," Tucker said. "Our defense has gotten a lot better this year. And it's not only our backs that are playing well; our forwards are starting to run, which makes it easier on the midfield and the backs. I think we can cope with whatever Dartmouth has to throw at us."

What the Big Green will throw at UMass is dynamic forward Kim Jenkin, whose hat trick Saturday powered Dartmouth past Ivy League rival Cornell. Coach Dayton's roster also features one of collegiate field hockey's greatest sister acts, senior New York natives Lauren and Kristin Scopaz.

The Big Green has run up an enviable 4-1 road record this season, while UMass is 7-3 on its home turf in '99.

With UM having already sewn up both the conference title and the top seed in the upcoming A-10 tournament, it would seem that the team has little to play for in its final two games of the regular season. But according to Tucker, maintaining their momentum through the season finale will be crucial to the Minutewomen's post-season success.

"It's important that we prepare ourselves for the tournament," Tucker said. "Not only to play well over these next two games, but also to go into the tournament with some confidence. Coming off two wins, that means we would've won seven in a row. That can only help us to play better in the A-10 tournament, because we face a lot of teams that want to get back at us because we've beaten them this season."

Tucker and her teammates will look to add to their list of vanquished opponents in both the Dartmouth battle and their season finale, which is set to unfold at Northeastern at 1 pm on Halloween.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Kat Machmer and the Minutewomen defeated LaSalle and Fordam this weekend to qualify for the Atlantic 10 Tournament.

A-10 rivals take bite out of UMass

By Seth Szlagyi
Collegian Staff

This was one conference call they should have never answered.

The Massachusetts volleyball team was swept this weekend, as they were brushed back below .500 in the Atlantic 10 by conference foes Xavier and Dayton.

UM did battle with Xavier on Friday night. The Minutewomen came out with a flurry of points and made the Musketeers work, but Xavier prevailed in a 15-13 final. XU drew confidence off the first game win to push the match to a 2-0 lead, taking the game by a score of 15-7. UM tried to jump start their offense in game three, but were thwarted by Xavier, as the Musketeers closed out the match with another 15-7 win.

Senior co-captain Jill Meyers led the squad with a team-high 14 kills and 19 digs. Sophomore Janeen Demarte also tallied a double-double with 11 kills and 12 digs. Junior Rebecca Hasson went back to her defensive skills, as she posted a team-high 7 blocks. Hasson needs only five more solo blocks to become fourth on the school's list. Sophomore setter Heather Holtsberg put up 47 assists, as her counter-part junior Jennifer Drennan surpassed Katie Pearce (1995-96) for eighth all-time in digs at UMass with six on the night.

With the loss, the Minutewomen fall to 5-5 in the Atlantic 10 conference and 11-9 overall, while Xavier improved to 7-3 in the conference with a 16-5 overall mark.

Saturday, UMass stayed in Ohio to take on the Dayton Flyers. DU didn't take kindly to the Minutewomen's arrival, as they got revenge for a loss to UM earlier in the season.

UMass kept it close in game one but couldn't pull it out, losing 8-15. Game two saw the Minutewomen fight back against the Flyers to tie it at one apiece, 15-5. Game three mimicked game two, but flip-flopped the scores with UM on the losing end, 5-15. In the fourth game, the Minutewomen tried to put on their rally caps, only to have their hopes dashed in a 15-12 loss that cost them the match.

Meyers was once again the team leader, with 19 kills and 20 digs. The senior averaged 4.71 kills and 5.57 digs per game on the weekend. Senior Kari Hogancamp got back into form, posting her usual double-double with 13 kills and 18 digs. Hogancamp has been outstanding all season, leading the team and the nation in digs with 5.18 per game over the past four weeks. She also earned both A-10 and ECAC Player of the Week honors for the week ending October 10, averaging 5.33 kills and 6.67 digs in matches against Brown, Temple and LaSalle.

Sophomore Lymarie Llovet had herself a personal history-making night with a career-high 19 digs and adding 9 kills, Holtsberg was again the setter of choice for the squad, tallying just 4 assists shy of her career-high tallying 59.

The loss leaves the Minutewomen below .500 with a 5-6 record in the A-10, 11-10 overall. The Flyers find themselves up one in the plus column (6-5) in the conference, with a 10-10 overall mark.

UMass will take a needed rest and return home, where they're at their best, to face conference rival Rhode Island on Saturday, October 30. The game will kick off at 7pm in the Curry Hicks Cage.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Jennifer Drennan played solid for the volleyball team this weekend in a pair of losses.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVJ Issue 36 — Wednesday, October 27, 1999

UM staff member killed in shooting

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Jean Hosmer, 45, of Pelham was shot and killed Monday in Northampton by her husband William Bernotas, 46, of Sunderland. Hosmer was an employee of the University of Massachusetts Extension Office. She had just filed, and been granted, an extension of a restraining order against Bernotas at the Hampshire Probate and Family Court.

When Hosmer returned to her car from the courthouse, Bernotas was beside her. Police say, he then shot her.

Hosmer died at 11:53 a.m. Monday.

According to police, Bernotas then turned the gun on himself, but the shot wasn't fatal. He was hospitalized in Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton and later moved to Baystate Medical Center, where he is currently in critical condition.

He has been arrested and charged with murder. Hosmer and Bernotas had been in the middle of a divorce. She had filed for a restraining order on June 28, and it was granted. She had filed for the extension on the morning of her death. Both restraining orders required Bernotas to stay away from her at both her home and her work place.

Hosmer worked most recently as a Design Illustrator. Bernotas had recently been hired at UMass to work in the office of informational technologies.

The couple divorced March 23, 1999, but had last lived together on Nov. 1, 1998. They married in 1981.

After filing for the initial restraining order, Bernotas had threatened Hosmer's parents, and he later threatened Hosmer herself.

He had, reportedly, refused to accept divorce papers from Hosmer.

Hosmer's two daughters, Sandra Bernotas, 15, and Kevin Bernotas, 11, were notified of the death and are being housed with a family friend at an undeclared location. Bernotas did have visitation with his children. As part of the restraining order that prevented Bernotas from seeing Hosmer, a friend of Bernotas had to pick up both children to take them to the residence of a third party.

Teachers at Amherst Regional High School, where Hosmer's daughter is a sophomore, read a statement of grief to students. Grief counselors and peer counselors were available to both faculty and students throughout the day.

Information from this article was taken from the Springfield Union News.

NICOLE GOTTWALS/ COLLEGIAN
Yesterday, Professor of psychology Ervin Straub spoke at a distinguished teacher's lecture at a packed Memorial Hall.

Individuals arrested for weekend fights

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

In a busy weekend, the University of Massachusetts Police Department arrested four individuals involved in one fight and three more involved in a second fight.

Early Sunday morning, one individual, Michael Hall, an 18-year-old Springfield resident, was arrested on Infirmary Way. He was charged with assault and battery, underage possession of alcohol and assault and battery with a dangerous weapon. The latter assault and battery charge is a felony.

Weekend Police Roundup

"A green van pulled up beside a second group of individuals and people then got out of the van. A fight was then started," John Luippold, Chief of the UMPD, said. "We believe it started after a verbal altercation."

According to Luippold, officers interviewed bystanders who told police that Hall was kicking an unidentified victim. Using the foot resulted in the assault and battery with a dangerous weapon charge.

A little less than two hours later, officers came upon the same green van in Lot 64, the parking lot outside of police offices in Dickinson Hall.

"Officers were alerted to the presence of the van, and went outside to investigate. Questioning individuals in the van, officers called in the names of the people in the van," Luippold said.

When the names came back to the police officers, it was discovered that one of the individuals in the van, Antoine Diaz, 19, was wanted in his hometown of Springfield on a warrant issued by the Hampden Superior Court. According to Luippold, the warrant had been issued after Diaz failed to appear after being charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon.

But Diaz wasn't the only individual in the van that was arrested. Ryan Robinson, an 18-year-old resident of Springfield, was charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon after he was identified to have been involved in the original assault on Infirmary Way.

"Statements gathered at the scene described Robinson, and officers, upon spotting him, arrested him," Luippold said. "He too had been kicking the victim. He was arrested on probable cause after he had been described to officers."

According to Luippold, at 11:00 a.m. the green van returned to Lot 64 to bail out the others. Joseph Murray's name was checked on police computers as he was trying to pay bail. Murray, 19, of Springfield, left before police found his name to carry an active warrant.

"He left, and then we got the information back. He was wanted on a warrant issued from Springfield District Court for failure to appear after being charged with selling or delivering alcohol," Luippold said.

All four individuals, Hall, Diaz, Robinson and Murray, were also issued trespasses, which prevents them from returning to UMass.

Turn to FIGHTS page 2

Professor leads lecture series on mass violence

By Jamie Loo
Collegian Correspondent

Focusing on the relationships between bystanders and violence, Ervin Staub, a psychology professor at the University of Massachusetts gave a talk yesterday entitled "Bystanders: Genocide, Youth Violence, and the Creation of Caring." This lecture was the first of four in this year's Distinguished Faculty Lecture Series. Staub, along with three other faculty members involved in the series, will receive the Chancellor's Medal, which is the highest honor given to professors for exemplars and extraordinary service to the University.

Staub discussed on how people, especially children, are impacted by mass violence and genocide, as well as the effects bystanders can have on violence. Staub spoke about his own personal experience and about the impact bystanders have on situations.

Bystanders have the responsibility of either turning away or getting involved in a situation, Staub said. Individual bystanders themselves are affected by their choice, in either a positive or negative way.

Genocide involves "continuum of destruction" that evolves into the dehumanization of the targeted group, according to Staub. With one group of bystanders ignoring the problem, the perpetrators of the genocide become affirmed in their actions continuing on their path of destruction. Gradually, these bystanders also begin to accept and believe in this degradation, making the cause and violence grow.

Staub said bystanders who take action change in a positive way include Holocaust "rescuers," people that helped to hide many Jewish people during the Nazi tyranny. Fifty percent of the rescuers thought that their commitment was only short-term, however in the end became more committed to the cause of human welfare, continuing to hide people until the end of the war.

Staub said youth violence is a result of the mistreatment of children

Turn to LECTURE page 3

Survey shows smoking ban support decreasing

By William F. Larkin
Collegian Staff

Over the past few months, support for the ban on smoking in bars and restaurants appears to be weakening in both Amherst and Northampton.

On Oct. 5, the Amherst Area Chamber of Commerce came out in opposition to the Sept. 1, 1998 ban, which prohibits smoking in all bars and public places located in the town of Amherst, including enclosed places of employment as well as restaurants.

John Coull, the chamber executive director, said, "Allow choice, and don't harm going businesses," concerning the vote by the chamber's board of directors.

The chamber's decision to officially oppose the ban came after a meeting by a new government relations task force of chamber members, Coull said. At the meeting, the task force members decided to ask the chamber to oppose the ban officially, according to Coull. Coull said the chamber's vote, which was made specifically to support the Town Commercial Relations Committee's position opposing the ban, passed without much controversy.

Amherst is not the only municipality with questions surrounding a smoking ban. According to a recent survey published by Market Street Research, only 35.6 percent of people in Northampton favor the city's smoking ban.

Market Street Research conducted 500 telephone interviews with Northampton residents. Those interviewed were nearly equally divided between men and women, with an average age of 47.

Findings from the survey include:

– 84 percent of Northampton residents are non-smokers and 16 percent are smokers.

– 70.3 percent of all those polled favor the city's 1994 ban on smoking in restaurants.

– 17.7 percent of all those polled believe the ban on smoking in restaurants helped restaurants; 35 percent said it had no impact; 24.3 said the ban has hurt the restaurants; and 23 percent said they did not know what impact the ban had.

– 67.7 percent believe that a smoking ban in bars would economically hurt bars; 20.7 percent said a ban would have no impact; and 4 percent said a ban would improve business in bars.

According to the survey, those who oppose the ban said the government should not infringe on personal liberties, and the owner of the bar should determine whether to impose a ban. They also said bars are the last frontier for the social politic of smoking. Because of the ban, those polled said bars will experience a loss of business.

Resistance to the ban is not limited to Amherst and Northampton. On Aug. 17, the State Public Health Council voted to continue pursuing efforts to encourage cities and towns to seek restrictions on smoking, rather than implement a statewide ban.

"Right now, I think the best strategy is to have the locals continue it," said Greg Connolly, director of the state's tobacco control program. The program spends $4.5 million a year to promote local anti-smoking efforts.

In April, the council received the results of one study that found more than 1,000 people die every

Turn to BAN page 3

Racial conflicts remain a concern

NICOLE GOTTWALS/ COLLEGIAN
Joby Gelbspan spoke before the screening of Living the Legacy: Racism and Resistance in the Academy. The video was followed by a discussion of efforts to re-instate a race-based Affirmative Action admissions policy at UMass.

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Students gathered last night to discuss the facilitation of a revival of race-based affirmative action on the University of Massachusetts campus.

The program entitled "Living the Legacy: Racism and Resistance in the Academy," included both a video showing and a discussion regarding racism and the need for race-based affirmative action on campus.

The video "Living the Legacy," was shown to the audience in order to draw a parallel between the UMass campus and that of the New School of Social Research in New York. The video told the story of the campus's struggle for racial equality and the effort to secure tenure for Iacqui Alexander a West Indian faculty member, at the school.

Following the showing of the video was a discussion during which students contributed ideas about how to reinstate the race-based affirmative action policies on campus. In addition, Joby Gelbspan, a former student at the New School and a participant in the video, explained the situation that occurred and its relevance to students everywhere.

According to senior Jackie Leon, the video shown during the lecture directly parallels the struggle for equality that area students faced in March 1997. Leon explained that in 1997 a group of roughly 200 students took over the Goodell building for six days in order to force the discussion of issues regarding affirmative action.

She said the incident occurred because of "frustration with the administration." She went on to explain that in the cases of both the New School of Social Research and UMass that a similar quality was that of "the refusal of the administrators to talk to students."

Many students expressed dissatisfaction with the resolution of the Goodell incident, and said the school in general was still racially biased. According to Ion Zibbell, a representative from the Graduate Student Senate, the University revamped the picketing code and cut some feminist and minority programs following the incident.

Leon also spoke out about the negative responses that followed the Goodell takeover. She said little got resolved because issues "got caught up in task forces and committees that go absolutely nowhere."

In addition to speaking out about past problems with race related biases, students also discussed how to go about eliminating problems in the future.

Diversifying the Commonwealth College was also discussed, along with the decreased number of ALANA students currently enrolled at the University. Shelly Perdomo, Assistant Director of the Office of ALANA affairs, said, "so many racial incidents have occurred," and asked the students present, "What are we to do?"

Overall, students agreed that in order to make any progress in affirmative action, they must unify and work as a group.

"We have to make linkages for affirmative action," Zibbell said.

The discussion was held as a collective effort between the Office of ALANA Affairs, the Black Student Union, the Graduate Student Senate, Radical Student Union and the Graduate Employee Organization in an attempt to organize student activism in the area of affirmative action.

Arts & Living 6
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 12

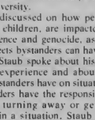
ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Extended Forecast

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 56 LOW: 38	HIGH: 58 LOW: 30	HIGH: 60 LOW:38

SOURCE WWLP.COM

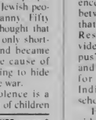
The other side of Dr. Seuss



That famous writer/ author has a few skeletons in his closet. Check out page2 to find out what they are.

PAGE 2

How "Cool" can music get?



Turn to page 8 to find out what is up with the truly sensational improvizational known as jazz.

PAGE 6

Mowing down the Big Green

Sarah Bohonowicz and the UMass field hockey team cut Dartmouth down to size in an exciting 2-1 win last night at Garber field.

PAGE 12

UM Professor reveals darker side of Dr. Seuss

By Andrea M. Peers
Collegian Staff

The controversial work of a political cartoonist, which has remained hidden for almost a whole generation, will now be revealed in Professor Richard H. Minear's book, Dr. Seuss Goes To War.

Minear will speak today in Herter Hall, in room 227, at 4 p.m.

Dr. Seuss Goes to War holds a collection of over 200 cartoons, mostly unseen to the public, of Dr. Seuss's controversial political cartoons. The focus of the book concentrates on drawings done during World War II. Dr. Seuss's corkscrew humor pokes fun at images of Hitler, Japanese Americans, Anti-Semites, Mussolini, Racism and the American attitudes about war.

Minear compiled the large format reproductions into one book, where he explains the other side of Dr. Seuss— the political author – that many do not know.

"I have the general sense we all have that Seuss is next to Mr. Rogers and a handful of others of the icons of the best in American tolerance and warmth and sympathy," Minear said in a Daily Hampshire Gazette article.

Minear has been a history teacher at the University of Massachusetts since 1976 and still currently teaches on his favorite field of study, American attitudes towards Japan. He is renowned as one of the leading historians in his field, and has extensive knowledge of Japan and World War II.

His concentration on World War II and Japanese studies came from a four-year experience in Japan. Minear is the editor, translator and author of many books and publications, besides his most recent one.

Newspapers and television broadcasts from The New York Times to Good Morning America have picked up on Minear and his studies.

Minear's new book, Going to War With Dr. Seuss, is his most up-to-date work, and he incorporates the ideas in the book into his lectures. The controversial cartoons move away from Seuss's famous children's publications, and focus on issues directly sprouting up as a result of World War II.

Theodor Seuss Geisel was born in 1904, in Springfield. During the war, he was a political cartoonist for the New York Daily Newspaper, PM.

When Geisel ran into problems with authorities, he was forced to use an alias, Seuss. The doctor part came later, even though Seuss never did receive a Ph.D.

Seuss drew his first editorial cartoon in 1939. This cartoon and the ones that followed, numbered at some 400, all had to do with war ideas, political figures, or the nation in general. The character in Seuss's children's book Yertle the Turtle was modeled after Adolf Hitler. The turtle originally bore a mustache, but Seuss later edited it out for the children's version.

Another political spinoff was his breakthrough book, Cat in the Hat, published in 1957. The cat was used to symbolize Uncle Sam. Seuss's illustrations go on to show squinty-eyed Japanese Americans, racism and the ideas of Hitler, such as Mein Kampf.

Dr. Seuss went on to continue his cartoons and children's publications, which won him the Pulitzer Prize in 1984, for his accomplishments in literature. Dr. Seuss died in 1991. He has been recognized as one of the greatest cartoonists, and remembered for his unique and expressive style.

COURTESY MARSHALL FIELD

One of Dr. Seuss's earlier political cartoons

UM courses to aid Russia

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

In support of efforts to figure out what to do with excess land in Russia, the University of Massachusetts has received a $300,000 grant from the United States Information Agency to develop courses that will answer exactly that.

The grant will fund the creation of courses in interdisciplinary land and property management at three universities in northwest Russia.

Richard Taupier, the associate of the Office of Geographic Information and Analysis and the Environmental Institute, (OGIA) will represent one of three groups working on the creation of courses. The two other groups, landscape architecture and regional planning, and resource economics, will combine with OGIA to create a core team of 10 faculty, administrators and graduate students that will work with 12 Russian administrators, faculty members and graduate students.

"Eventually, we're going to actually develop or improve eight courses," Taupier said. "We'll be working on everything from property management to environmental suitability of land use."

The classes will be taught at Novgorod State University's Academy of Agriculture and Natural Resource Planning, St. Petersburg State Technical University's Management Training Center and Pskov Polytechnic Institute's Center for Regional Planning.

"We already have a relationship with three of these universities," Taupier said. "This is our fourth project in that part of Russia. We had seen requests for proposals from the federal government, and we contacted all three universities and asked if they wanted to work with us."

Joint projects between UMass and the Russian universities have been going on since 1985.

According to Taupier, plans to do the kind of work that the group will be doing had been discussed before, but the source of funds will actually allow for carry-through on proposals.

The project will be a three-year project, with UMass offices doing some specialized work with the Russian universities.

"This is going to depend on what faculty members are interested in working on this project," Taupier said. "We're going to do some recruiting and hopefully add four to eight more faculty members than the four we currently have."

Taupier and others working on the project will visit Russia next week in an attempt to discuss the project with Russian faculty and students. For Taupier, it will be his seventeenth time in Russia.

"The first time I got involved was purely an accident. I was asked to go by a faculty member to do some consulting, and basically my involvements snowballed from there," Taupier said.

He encouraged students to contact him about possibilities for exchanges with Russian universities.

"We've hosted as many as 30 Russian faculty and students from these universities and they would be interested in doing the same kind of hosting," Taupier said, adding, "and we've had faculty and students go over, there hasn't been much student interest."

Taupier also said that while no student involvement is planned by UMass in the course development, there could be opportunities in the future if students were interested.

Grad. school fair to be held today

The Campus Career Network will host the Annual Graduate School Fair today from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. The Network has worked together with the Five Colleges to make it possible for over 140 graduate, medical and dentistry and law schools to be represented.

The atmosphere of the fair will be casual.

"The main goal of the fair is to set up a situation where students have an opportunity to talk with graduate schools about their options," said Tommie Joyner, Assistant Director of Campus Career Network. "They will be able to ask questions on such things as housing, financial aid and entrance requirements."

Joyner also said he encourages all students to stop at the fair to ask any questions they may have, and especially to learn what part grades will play in being accepted to a higher educational institution. He said often students do not look into continuing their education because they feel their grade point averages are too low, when in fact they are only limiting their options.

A range of post-baccalaureate options from across the United States, including schools of social work, theology, international relations, education and library science will be represented at the fair. In addition, representatives from Kaplan Services and the Princeton Review will be available to answer questions regarding graduate program entrance exams.

A few of the institutions that will have representation tomorrow are Boston University, including the Schools of Law and Education, Emerson College, Georgetown University Graduate School, New York University and University of California, San Diego Graduate School of International Relations

—Mary Grein

Style differences to be apparent when Gore and Bradley share stage

By Dan Balz
Washington Post

MANCHESTER, N.H. — When Vice President Gore and former New Jersey senator Bill Bradley appear at a town hall meeting at Dartmouth College, they are likely to try to draw sharp distinctions with each other.

Bradley already has labeled the vice president "timid" and himself "bold" in their approaches to domestic issues. Gore has gone in two directions, branding some of Bradley's policies "a throwback to an earlier generation" of free-spending liberalism while accusing his rival of being a disloyal Democrat for voting to cut spending during President Ronald Reagan's first term.

The reality is that Gore and Bradley share similar views and even many of the same policy priorities. "Historically," said Robert Borosage of the progressive Campaign for America's Future, "there's not much difference between the two."

But the campaign has revealed differences in both style and substance and it is those areas that will be put under the microscope as the competition for the Democratic nomination intensifies.

Where Bradley and Gore have diverged most is in their conception of the presidency. Bradley describes the office as a place to focus on a few large problems, using the presidency to move the country slowly toward a consensus for solving them. Gore, like President Clinton, appears more eclectic in his priorities, spreading projected budgetary surpluses around to more programs, looking for more

Turn to STYLE page 3

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

The final days of fall.

Junior Communications/Spanish major Beth Shakespeare and Aoife Nugent, junior sociology/ journalism major enjoy the last days of fall.

■ fights

continued from page 1

None were University students.

Three more individuals were arrested on charges of assault and battery over the weekend. Saturday morning at 3:30 a.m., police observed three individuals chasing three more individuals down the middle of North Pleasant Street.

At least one motorist was forced to brake quickly as a result of the chase.

"Officers observed the three chasing individuals assault one of the three individuals being chased," Luippold said. "When the police arrived, the victim ran, but was eventually caught up to on Western Massachusetts Avenue."

Luippold said that the three might have been chasing after the unidentified victim after an altercation involving a female.

Mark Diperna, an 18-year-old resident of Wayland, Scott Kline, a 21-year-old resident of Peabody, and Scott Spicer, a 21-year-old resident of Nashua, N.H. were all charged with disorderly conduct and assault and battery.

UNIVERSITY STORE'S
Textbook Annex
UMASS AMHERST

Please buy the textbooks you need today!
We return unsold books to the publishers!
• Be sure you have the books you need.

TEXTBOOK ANNEX

9AM-4PM Mon.-Fri. 545-3570

Attention Night Graphics Supervisors

There will be a mandatory meeting every Tuesday night at 7 pm

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Napping...

Catching up on some missed sleep in yesterday's warmth.

■ style

continued from page 2

modest improvements.

Since Labor Day, Bradley and Gore both have addressed three large domestic problems: the lack of health insurance for about 45 million Americans; the persistence of child poverty in an era of economic prosperity; and the burdens on parents attempting to balance the responsibilities of work and family. In each case, Gore has tried to preempt Bradley by delivering his speech first, although sometimes in a hurried and ad hoc way.

The greatest area of debate has been over health care, where Bradley has proposed a $65 billion-a-year plan that he said would eventually assure coverage for 95 percent of Americans. Gore has offered a more limited plan, valued at $10 billion to $15 billion annually, beginning with a pledge to cover all children by 2005.

The most obvious area of similarity is in their prescriptions for combating child poverty. Once again Bradley said he is prepared to spend more money than Gore, but their policy proposals are nearly identical. Each candidate, for example, would seek to raise the minimum wage, expand the earned income tax credit (EITC) and supply more federal assistance for child care costs.

The irony is that, while Bradley and Gore agree on many ideas for addressing child poverty, they have approached the issue from opposing camps in the acrimonious debate over welfare reform that split the Democratic Party, with Bradley opposed and Gore in favor of the bill enacted in 1996. On health care, they were allied in the effort to enact a national plan during Clinton's first term.

■ lecture

continued from page 1

at an early age. Early awareness is key, he said, and all adults are in a position to respond to kids who seem to be mistreated.

According to Staub, children who develop in positive situations develop more of a sense of caring and empathy for the people around them, whereas children who grow up mistreated are more aggressive and empathize less. As these children grow into adults, they either become increasingly empathetic to human welfare or more aggressive. This empathy or aggressiveness will determine their moral courage and who they become as bystanders.

Staub finished his lecture with a simple charge to the students and faculty: to be good bystanders.

The Distinguished Faculty Lecture Series is in its twenty-fifth year, and has honored four faculty members each year. Deputy Provost John Cunningham says that the biggest benefit of this program is recognizing the scholarship and leadership of faculty members of the University of Massachusetts. Helena Horack, a junior at UMass, has attended other talks in past series and said she finds them a worthwhile experience. A biochemistry major, she says that these talks are very informative and interesting, exposing students to other majors and faculty.

■ ban

continued from page 1

day and 27,000 fall ill each year in Massachusetts due to exposure to secondhand tobacco smoke.

The study suggested that the Department of Public Health (DPH) consider using the state sanitary code, which addresses such matters as food safety in restaurants, to ban smoking in restaurants across the state.

However, DPH attorney Howard Saxner advised the council against using the state sanitary code to ban restaurant smoking statewide, calling it a "serious legal challenge."

The town of Amherst has always been at the forefront of smoking regulation, according to Amherst Tobacco Control Coordinator Marlene Leach. In 1983, the Amherst Board of Health was among the first organizations in Massachusetts to "come to terms with regulation of secondhand smoke," Leach said.

Eleven years later, in 1994, the town of Amherst developed legislation that would prohibit smoking in public places and bars. On Sept. 4, a smoking ban was made effective on enclosed places of employment, including restaurants. Leach said bars were spared the ban until Feb. 26, 1998 due to "officialism and proliferation."

"Corporate aircraft" users feel insecure after crash

By Robin Fields and P.J. Huffstutter
Los Angeles Times

When pro golfer Payne Stewart's Learjet crashed into a field in rural South Dakota, the impact rattled corporate aircraft users.

Dick Engel, chief executive of Powerplant Maintenance Specialists Inc., based in Costa Mesa, in Orange County south of Los Angeles, used to own a twin-engine Learjet 35 – the same kind of plane that carried Stewart.

"He was built in 1976, mine was built in 1975," Engel said. "I woke up last night in a nightmare, just thinking, 'What if?'"

Jets have become increasingly common corporate accessories in the late '80s, as companies have expanded into faraway regions and executives have looked for ways to save time.

About 9,000 turbine-powered business aircraft are now operated in the United States, up from less than 7,000 in 1993, the National Business Aviation Association said.

Since Monday's crash of Stewart's plane, the association has been deluged with questions from members.

"They're asking, is there anything we can do?" said Bob Blouin, the group's senior vice president of operations. "Is there something we can improve? Is there something we can check, the pressurization system, the valves?"

New hormone may help reduce obesity

By David Brown
Washington Post

A recently discovered hormone that regulates appetite helped obese people lose weight in the first study of its use as a drug in human beings, researchers reported yesterday.

Obese men and women who injected themselves every day with leptin for the months while dieting lost about 15 pounds, compared with a loss of only about three pounds in people taking placebo injections, the researchers said.

The treatment, however, was not without drawbacks. Nearly everyone found the shots irritated the skin, and more than one-third of people taking the highest, most effective dose of leptin chose to stop it after a month.

Nevertheless, the study, in today's Journal of the American Medical Association, demonstrated the potential of a novel approach to one of the country's biggest medical problems. About half of American adults are overweight or obese by current medical definitions.

"I think this is an opening shot of the molecular biology revolution in the treatment of obesity – even though we may not see it as a magic bullet in the immediate therapeutic sense," said Steven B. Heymsfield, a physician at St. Lukes-Roosevelt Hospital and Columbia University, who headed the study.

The discovery of leptin in December 1994 was greeted with optimism by many scientists because it acted principally on the brain, the organ that ultimately regulates appetite and body metabolism. Produced primarily by fat-storing cells, the hormone suppresses hunger and speeds up metabolic activity as its concentration rises in the bloodstream and brain.

People with a rare, inborn deficiency of leptin are extremely obese. Curiously, people with less severe weight problems tend to have an excess, not a lack, of leptin. Many physiologists theorize people in the second group don't respond adequately to leptin and that their bodies produce even more in an attempt to compensate. The new study, funded in part by the Southern California firm, Amgen, which holds the patent on leptin, tested the idea that those people need even higher levels of leptin before they can get the hormone's appetite-curbing effect.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

A view of fall.

The resevoir in North Amherst offers quiet and contemplative scenery

Campus Career Network

ALL STUDENTS!!

ANNUAL FIVE COLLEGE GRADUATE AND PROFESSIONAL SCHOOLS INFORMATION DAY

Over 140 schools including:

Albany Law School
Assumption College
Boston University
Columbia University
Emerson College
Georgetown University
University of Hartford
Lesley College
New York University
Pace University
Simmons College
Western New England College

For a complete list of attendees
Check the News & Events section of our web site!
www-ccn.acad.umass.edu

Wednesday, October 27, 1999
Student Union Ballroom
University of Massachusetts Amherst
10:00 am – 3:00 pm

Information & Literature on Admissions, Financial Aid and Housing
Coordinated by the Campus Career Network at the University of Massachusetts Amherst in cooperation with Amherst, Hampshire, Mount Holyoke and Smith Colleges

THE MONKEY BAR & GRILLE

Want to win a FREE trip to Cancun?
Come down Wednesday Night to register
WEDNESDAY NIGHT IS PROMO NIGHT
with DJ Fooz
This Week Features
Tequila Rose
Come in and Win Free Prizes
THE ONLY PLACE TO DANCE IN WEDNESDAY NIGHTS WITH A DJ
GUARANTEED TO MAKE YOU MOVE
The Monkey Bar Features Mediterraneran / Cajun Cuisine
Featuring Daily Luncheon and Dinner Specials
63 N. Pleasant St. 259-1600

FUNKMASTER FLEX
With Special Guest D.J.
and featuring Original Vibe Monsters (Area 51 and Alias)
Student Union Ballroom
THURSDAY OCT. 28, 1999
DOORS OPEN @ 8pm
TICKETS AVAILABLE @ C.C. Concourse ~ Tix Unlimited ~ Northampton Box Office (586-8686) ~ The Grow Room
Only $15 for Umass Students
$18 five-college
$20 general public
Brought to you by U.P.C. ~ for more info call 5-2892

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

1-800-Help-God

Bored at 4:42 a.m. yesterday morning, this intrepid young reporter stumbled across a fine religious program called Make A Vow, hosted by one Pastor Tilton, who looks remarkably like some bastard amalgam of Ricardo Montalban and an orangutan. The man's a natty dresser, let's give him that, but his jittery hands and manic grin suggest cocaine use. He also has a disturbing habit of saying, "I wish I could just reach out and lay hands on all of you," like he really means it.

My relationship with organized religion has always been a rocky one. After morning mass one day when I was three, I asked the priest if he had a penis.

Boomer Pinches

He was very polite about it. "Yes, my son, I do have a penis."

I was very pleased. "Johnny Carson has a penis, too," I told him.

"He certainly does," said the priest.

This is what happens when you stay up late watching TV at age three.

I became disillusioned with the Christian faith in second grade, when I realized communion wafers were not, as I had always suspected, potato chips. I don't know why this was so important to me when I was a kid. It's not like I didn't get plenty of potato chips at home. At any rate, it may explain my predilection these days for Pringles and red wine, which, contrary to what modern nutritional science may tell you, is a hearty and well-rounded meal.

"God's inability to handle his finances puzzles me. Instead of lazing around on that seventh day, he should have created a good accountant for himself."

I remain curious, however, about the possibilities of communion wine. Does it go well with roast chicken dishes? Is it possible to get drunk on the blood of Christ? If you got pulled over after downing a few chalices of the stuff, would it show up on a breathalyzer? Could the police arrest you for drunk driving or could you legitimately claim God as your co-pilot?

Questions for another time, perhaps. What concerned me at the moment was this man Tilton. He was asking for my money. God needed it, he said. It's funny how many people go around panhandling for God. You figure all the churches and evangelists must provide him with a healthy income. So where does all that money go? What does God spend it on? Does he go on shopping sprees at Harrods? Does he like fast cars and loose women? Will I run into him one day at a roulette table at Caesar's in Vegas, letting it all ride on number 33? Maybe it's a drug problem. Certainly that seems the easiest way to explain the platypus.

God's inability to handle his finances puzzles me. Instead of lazing around on that seventh day, he should have created a good accountant for himself.

But Pastor Tilton was still talking. He wanted me to call the number at the bottom of the screen. The number, for all you true believers out there, is 1-800-705-7000. Use it only in cases of extreme boredom.

I decided to call. I didn't have much money. But perhaps I could help in other ways. If nothing else, I could probably loan God a few bucks until he got back on his feet again.

I was on hold for a few minutes because all their operators were busy. They make you listen to this really loud, godawful prayer music while you wait. I suppose this is a soothing sound to some people. But those people are not well.

My operator's name was Tom. He was very pleasant. He was from the Midwest, I think. I wondered if he was part of one of those work programs for prisoners, but when I asked him he seemed confused.

I decided to quit beating around the bush. "I want to help God," I said.

"You'd like to make a donation?"

"Yes, a donation, excellent. I've got, uh...thirteen bucks."

"Thirteen bucks?"

"Is that not good?"

"That's fine, sir. We'll take whatever you can give."

"They're Camel Dollars though."

"They're what?"

"Camel Dollars. Like the cigarettes."

"That's a new one on me."

"God can save them up to buy cigarettes. Does he smoke?"

"Um."

"If he doesn't smoke, he can give them away to kids, like Phillip Morris. Kids love cigarettes. They're a healthy vitamin supplement. Good for the teeth. Strengthen the cardiovascular system, too."

"I think you've lost me, sir."

Indeed, we seemed to have trouble communicating. I blame myself, mostly. Tom was either a remarkably patient or remarkably stupid young man. He told me Pastor Tilton would say a prayer for me. He didn't tell me where to mail the Camel Dollars. I asked him if he wanted to go out for dinner and a movie some time. He said, "Thank you for your call," and hung up. Tom works too hard, I think.

Boomer Pinches is a Collegian Columnist.

White meets Right

The same man that came out against gay Teletubbies and the Lilith Fair voluntarily sat down with actual gay people last weekend, then agreed with them, and made that agreement national news.

The good Reverend Jerry Falwell, founder of the right wing group, Moral Majority, sat surrounded by 200 of his supporters with gay Reverend Mel White, founder of the gay-rights group "Soulforce," and the 200 of his supporters and both agreed that the use of hateful words by Christians should be curbed.

They agreed?

Was Falwell aware that Mel White likes to have sex with other men? Was White aware that Falwell believes that homosexuality is a sin? Is the devil playing hockey in hell?

Sam Wilkinson

Apparently the devil must be shivering, as the two leaders agreed that hate speech was causing violence, be it against gays in cases like Matthew Shepard, or Christians in school shootings. Falwell then went so far as to follow through on the agreement, urging Christians to curb hateful speech against gays and lesbians.

Good lord in heaven, the signs of the Apocalypse are upon us. The ground hasn't opened up under our feet, but a major Christian leader is meeting with the enemy and actually agreeing to something? These are people that don't agree on what kind of music to listen to, movie to see, or person to screw, but when it comes to hate speech, they are together. It isn't quite Nelson Mandela and F.W. de Klerk, but hey, it's something.

But the point of all of this isn't the fact that Falwell sat down with White or that White sat down with Falwell; rather, it is who showed up to protest.

Fred Phelps can go to hell. Representing backward cavemen and women everywhere, he has made a name for himself bashing the living daylights out of gays. Want a hate filled website? Try his at www.godhatesfags.com. Want to religiously gay bash? He actually established a church based on gay bashing. So the fact that he was pissed off is predictable, and the fact that he protested isn't even remotely surprising. Phelps is just a human turned ignorant who should, at best, be taken into the backyard and shot. He's worth forgetting about. Which most people do.

So let's not worry about ignorant Mr. Phelps.

Instead, let's focus on Bob Kunst, who, as leader of the "Oral Majority," protested the meeting because White was "selling out" gays and lesbians everywhere.

"Selling out" is such an interesting term. The musical group the Offspring sold out by catering their music to a mainstream style, thus abandoning their musical roots. And what about that sellout Francis Ford Copola, who directed the Godfather and Apocalypse Now, only to later direct Robin Williams in Jack? In both the examples the people involved did what they did in pursuit of money.

So how did White sell out gays and lesbians?

He met with a key member of the opposition in an attempt to bring both sides closer together. He had the audacity to be within feet of a person with differing beliefs, sitting down to discuss those beliefs, and then, perhaps, agreeing on something. He had the guts to meet with a man that has a nationwide reputation as being anti-gay.

Thank god for individuals like Kunst who keep the gay community in line. He wants to ensure that the gay community doesn't spiral out of control and work with the opposition towards a common goal. Kunst wants to make sure that the gay community doesn't embarrass itself by listening to its opponents and then working with them to find common ground. And he wants to make sure the gay community is so totally insular that they don't get anywhere as far as progress is concerned.

"So how did White sell out gays and lesbians? He met with a key member of the opposition in an attempt to bring both sides closer together."

White Christian forces and society at large threaten the gay community from the outside. Kunst is the kind of moron who ends up being single-handedly responsible for antiprogress within that same gay community. Protesting when gays and Christians sit down to talk together is like blacks protesting against Martin Luther King for meeting with racist Chicago mayor Richard Daley. It just doesn't make sense. Shouldn't people who disagree come together to talk about their differences?

Besides, aren't there greater things for the gay community to be worried about? This nation barely accepts gays or queers or fags or whatever the hate term of the day is, and those who are accepted are part of only a few select communities. Students are beaten, sometimes to death, for having sexual relations with individuals who are the same gender. American soldiers can't be open about who they're sleeping with if they're sleeping with people who are the same gender.

And all that Kunst can find to protest is the fact that gays and their almost traditional American enemies, Christians, are sitting down together to talk about problems between the two groups?

Does Kunst really believe that insular political behavior on the part of gays is going to get things done? Does he really believe that if gays refuse to meet the opposition, anything is going to be accomplished in a political sort of way?

Mel White didn't come out against having sex with individuals of the same gender. He didn't propose that gays be burned at the stake. He didn't stand by and support a loss of gay rights.

He went out and met with a member of the very vocal opposition, and they came to agree on something that is very fair: that hatespell speech can be dangerous. He convinced Falwell to come out against such speech. It isn't the end of the problems. It isn't a solution. It's an agreement on one small part of a very large problem.

If Kunst really believes that the meeting was such a bad thing, he's no leader, and if he doesn't, then there is no point in protesting the good work a man like Mel White does by meeting with a member of the opposition like Jerry Falwell.

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian columnist.

Bad boys bad boys

Montgomery, Alabama is one twisted town. Among its residents one of the most watched television shows is a local version of "Cops" called "MPD: The Television Series." Despite being shot with a cheap camera bought at a pawnshop, the show is tops in its time slot and has a large enough audience to beat most network programs.

What is the drawing power of this show that has virtually no budget? Simple. People in Montgomery want to see their neighbors, friends, and acquaintances get arrested. For nine years "MPD" has proven to be a ratings topper. Watching people you know being pulled over for speeding or seeing an old high school classmate being cuffed after drinking too many of Milwaukee's Best and getting hyped up on wrestling before beating his wife is apparently some of the best stuff on TV.

Matt Frascella

What network would be desperate enough to air this show? You guessed it: Fox. Only on a Fox station could this show have taken off. Fox is the messed up white trash stepson of the television industry. Does anyone actually watch the Fox network for anything other than sports, The X-Files, and The Simpsons? I wouldn't be caught dead watching Fox even if they do have Jennifer Love-Hewitt.

Since our campus cable is in a sad state, I came up with an idea. UMass should start its own version of this show. If it works in Alabama it could work here. Campus cable is terrible. I get virtually no channels, and the channels I do get are all grainy. Somehow the Cartoon network, the Spanish channel and the International channel are just not getting it done.

Our cable needs a lift. We need more exciting programming. Last year UVC showed intramural championship games in reruns for months. Talk about excitement. If they can do that then why can't we have a camera crew follow the police around? We could call it "UMPD: College Cops."

The benefits are numerous. First of all it is cheaper than ESPN or MTV. Second, we can see if the UMass Police do anything other than bust kids for beer and prance around on horses. I really don't think that they do, contrary to what's written in the Police Log.

After reading the UMass Police Log, printed in the Collegian on Tuesdays, I have concluded that UMass crime is way more exciting than crime in Montgomery, Alabama. Have you ever taken the time to read it? Crazy stuff happens here every day. Just last week I was sitting in my dorm room watching baseball when I noticed that there were eight cop cars outside. Something had to be going on, and I would have known about it if it had been aired on our campus cable.

The best part of "UMPD" would be its stars because they would be all around us. Everyone who watches is bound to see someone they know if they watch long enough. Face it, we all know some unstable people. One week it could be the kid sitting next to you in class right now, or maybe the fruity girl who stalked you freshman year, or maybe the crazy foreign kids who always had loud parties and bloody noses. My point is this: I want to watch my classmates, professors, and Chancellor in their dealings with the police. I especially want to see the Chancellor.

Some dissenters may view this as an invasion of privacy, but I do not. Human beings are innately nosey; we want to get all the dirt on everyone. We want to know what goes on behind closed doors. Why else do scandals like the Bill and Monica situation dominate our press and our attention?

Besides, this new show could be a great tool in the prevention of crime. Sometimes it disgusts me how much crime occurs on this campus. It shocks me to think that my peers are capable of bigoted vandalism or of sex crimes. If someone is running around the library and the Campus Center flashing and assaulting women, I want to see him get dragged to jail. I want to see the person who was carrying an illegal weapon around campus. I want everyone to see these people and I want them to be embarrassed for the crimes that they have committed. The threat of everyone on campus seeing the ramifications of your criminal actions may just stop you before you launch water balloons or clap in front of a police horse.

Most of all I want to see the skateboarders arrested. Nothing irritates me more than skateboarders. If you are a skateboarder listen up, our buildings are ugly enough; you do not have to deface them any more. If I was 20 years old and still ran around with a tiny wooden board with wheels I would want to be shot for my immaturity. I just don't see the excitement in riding around ruining buildings while trying to do stupid little tricks on a skateboard, and I don't see how you can possibly get any girls. Wake up, no girl wants to date a loser with a little wooden board. I would pay extra to see the UMass police arrest skateboarders. It could be a weekly feature.

Most of all people need to think. This school has more useless deaths than I have ever seen. It seems that at least one young person dies needlessly every semester. If we had a show that documented these deaths, then maybe some of you out there would learn that driving around campus like you are in a racecar can be harmful to pedestrians, or that driving under the influence is never ever acceptable.

This is submitted for your approval as a positive endeavor. UMass should catch on to what Montgomery, Alabama has been doing for nine years and film our local criminals. We need to get SGA on this one right away. Trust me, they never do anything, so it will not interfere with more important school business they are supposed to be conducting. We need this new channel. It will beef up our campus cable, stop skateboarders and other criminals, and provide the lazy with hours of entertainment.

Matt Frascella is a Collegian columnist.

WRITE FOR ED/OP!!!! WRITE FOR ED/OP!!!! WRITE FOR ED/OP!!!! WRITE FOR ED/OP!!!! WRITE FOR ED/OP!!!! WRITE FOR ED/OP!!!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor

Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor

Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor

Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Woman's Affairs

Top 100 women of century honored

From near and far destinations throughout the 1900s; women have proved they are ready to take the next step

As we close out the twentieth century, teams, lists and rosters are sprouting up pertaining to who made the biggest impact or contributed the most to the human society in an attempt to sum up the last 100 years.

Athletes, albums and action films are being reviewed and categorized while lesser-known early century stars are being immortalized one final time in the limelight. The twentieth century also marks the catastrophic leap women made in creating a name for themselves and their accomplishments.

Last year Barbara Findlen, executive editor of Ms. Magazine and Kristen Golden, a Ms. contributing editor, began compiling a roster of the most remarkable women. Narrowing from the original group of 235-240 women, the goal was to accentuate women from every walk of life no matter how well publicized or not their contribution was. Emerging from their efforts is Remarkable Women of the Twentieth Century: 100 Portraits of Achievement.

Both authors acknowledge that some will raise their eyebrows at Madonna gracing the group while Mother Theresa failed to make the final cut. But Findlen and Golden looked to address the age gap issue and importance of contribution with a variety of representatives.

Think Lucille Ball was just a wacky redhead on an overrated sitcom? Besides being able to cry on cue, she stretched the female's capacity of humor for future generations to come. Tennis star Billy Jean King won more than a tennis match when she captured the 1970s showdown, Battle of the Sexes. Barbara Walters may not own a license to drive (can you believe it?), but she sure can drive a nail into her interviewees when it counts.

Whose the greatest athlete this century ESPN asks? Is it Muhammad Ali? Babe Ruth? Michael Jordan? How about the other Babe, Mildred "Babe" Didrikson Zaharias. She won over 82 professional golf tournaments, two gold medals in the 1932 Olympics for track and field all the while earning her stripes as an All-American basketball player. Not too shabby.

So take a look below and discover a new heroine or another side to contemporary leaders.

-Kathleen Rulls

Jane Addams, reformer
Marian Anderson, singer
Maya Angelou, poet and writer
Virginia Apgar, anesthesiologist
Hanan Ashrawi, political leader
Aung San Suu Kyi, political leader
Lucille Ball, actor and producer
Ann Bancroft, polar explorer
Mary McLeod Bethune, educator
Nguyen Thi Binh, political activist
Nadia Boulanger, teacher and conductor
Helen Caldicott, peace activist
Rachel Carson, environmentalist
Luisa Capetillo, activist
Chai Ling, revolutionary
Gabrielle "Coco" Chanel, fashion designer
Julia Child, chef
Shirley Chisholm, politician
Joan Ganz Cooney, television pioneer
Cynthia Cooper, athlete
Marie Curie, chemist and physicist
Simone de Beauvoir, philosopher
Diana, Princess of Wales, humanitarian
Amelia Earhart, aviator
Marian Wright Edelman, children's advocate
Gertrude Elion, chemist
Eka Esu-Williams, immunologist and AIDS educator
Geraldine Ferraro, politician
Anne Frank, diarist
Betty Friedan, writer and activist
Ichikawa Fusae, suffragist and politician
Lois Gibbs, environmentalist
Emma Goldman, anarchist
Katharine Graham, newspaper publisher
Martha Graham, dancer and choreographer
Clara McBride Hale, child care pioneer
Fannie Lou Hamer, civil rights activist
Katherine Hepburn, actor
Anita Hill, law professor
Billie Holiday, jazz singer
Grace Hopper, computer scientist
Dolores Fernandez Huerta, labor leader
Charlayne Hunter-Gault, journalist
Zora Neale Hurston, folklorist and anthropologist
Barbara Jordan, politician
Frida Kahlo, artist
Helen Keller, writer and lecturer
Billie Jean King, athlete
Maggie Kuhn, activist
Ann Landers, columnist
Dorothea Lange, photographer
Maya Lin, architect
Audre Lorde, poet and activist
Juliette Gordon Low, girls' advocate
Madonna, singer and actor
Wilma Mankiller, chief
Margaret Mead, anthropologist
Golda Meir, prime minister
Rigoberta Menchu, activist
Nell Merlino, communications strategist
Gabriela Mistral, poet
Joni Mitchell, singer and songwriter
Marilyn Monroe, actor
Julia Morgan, architect
Toni Morrison, writer
Carry Nation, reformer
Martina Navratilova, athlete
Georgia O'Keeffe, artist
Rosa Parks, civil rights activist
Alice Paul, suffragist
Eva Peron, first lady
Mary Pickford, actor and businessperson
Jeannette Rankin, peace activist and politician
Eleanor Roosevelt, humanitarian
Roseanne, actor and producer
Rosie the Riveter, working woman
Wilma Rudolph, athlete
Margaret Sanger, birth control pioneer
Huda Shaarawi, activist
Gertrude Stein, writer
Gloria Steinem, activist and writer
Ellen Stewart, theater producer
Meryl Streep, actor
Barbra Streisand, singer, actor, director and producer
Gladys Tantaquidgeon, anthropologist and medicine woman
Valentina Tereshkova, cosmonaut
Twyla Tharp, choreographer and dancer
Margaret Thatcher, prime minister
Helen Thomas, journalist
Yoshiko Uchida, writer
Lillian Vernon, entrepreneur
Alice Walker, writer and poet
Madam C.J. Walker, entrepreneur
Barbara Walters, journalist
Faye Wattleton, reproductive rights activist
Ida B. Wells-Barnett, journalist
Oprah Winfrey, talk show host, actor and producer
Virginia Woolf, writer
Chien-Shiung Wu, nuclear physicist
Mildred "Babe" Didrikson Zaharias, athlete

COURTESY OF KEN REGAN

"Beloved" talker
Academy Award nominee Oprah Winfrey took the world by storm with her yo-yo dieting and refusal to marry her longtime steady.

Silent film star set the table

Mary Pickford plays role of businessperson and actor

Moonlighting's female star Cybill Shepherd is considering a future run for the presidency. Legend Liz Taylor champions money for AIDS foundations. Former U.S. President Ronald Reagan was a former Hollywood actor.

Clearly, it is not unusual for entertainers to get involved in their own personal charity causes and political angles for the greater good of mankind. Attracting additional sponsorships and donations, today's movie and music stars have made their own lead in offering their own time and funds. Yet they are not exactly pioneers for their kind. In fact, stars back at the turn of the century were already helping out, including the film star known as "America's Sweetheart," Mary Pickford.

Born in Toronto, Canada on April 8, 1882, Pickford was a silent film star noted for her realist portrayals who retired after the talkies had grabbed the country's attention in the early 1930s. Noted for her natural good looks that included big eyes, long curly locks and a must-have expressive face, Pickford, the first female to amass one million, wooed her audiences with her charm and warmth.

Unafraid of imperfection, Pickford was not above filming without makeup to better portray her character despite her general audience appeal as a "winsome, beautiful" actress. In this manner, Pickford was considered liberal and hardworking for her time.

In fact, her achievements on the silver screen were far better noted than those off, despite her breakthrough into the corporate and financial conglomerations in Hollywood. According to one adoring fan, "She refused to retire to another room while the 'big boys' smoked their cigars and cut deals among themselves."

Aware that artists and actors were considered commodities, Pickford was an advocate for United Artists. Many leading industry producers were not amused with United Artists as one said, "the lunatics have taken over the asylum," if such a bold move was crazy, then Mary Pickford was considered "crazy like a fox."

Pickford always credited her mother, Charlotte, for providing her with support and stability, and for assisting her to build more lucrative business deals. She also formed a partnership of sorts with her actor/businessman husband, Douglas Fairbanks.

Married in 1920, Pickford and Fairbanks represented Hollywood with a unification of United Artists and collaborated on the 1929 X). Times "Top Ten Film List," with "Taming of the Shrew." She was always careful to maintain her independence by means of keeping her business deals apart from him. Pickford and Fairbanks divorced in 1936.

Keeping ahead of her times, Pickford helped with educational scholarships as well as sold war bonds through two world wars. Aside from United Artists, Pickford was a driving force behind the Motion Picture Country Home and Hospital, which assisted struggling actors with insurance and retirement benefits.

Though Pickford's shining star has become tarnished with age, proof of her contributions is exemplified with the closeness in acting wages between the genders and the after-career programs for actors and actresses still in existence today.

Kathleen Rulls is a Collegian columnist.

"Invest in the human soul. Who knows, it may be a diamond in the rough,"

– Mary McLeod-BethuneFounder of Bethune-Cookman College and American pioneer in African American education

No, not Mr. Graham, it's Katherine Graham to you

Daddy owns the paper and will pass it down to your husband. You're willing to accept the notion as it seems like your place in the world and you are just fine with it.

It certainly seemed that way to a young Katherine Graham whose father, Eugene Meyer, purchased The Washington Post in the 1930s. She had never really entertained the idea that she might be interested in the family business. Instead she married the dashing Philip Graham and set her sights on a more familial status in her family.

Katherine Graham

And like the fairy tale, when the time came for Meyer to pass down his passion in 1948, he looked beyond his daughter and straight to his son-in-law, Philip. Who else could do the job? His daughter, though educated, had not been prepared for such a position. Katherine, not expecting to even be considered, agreed with his decision.

"My father said to me, and I certainly went along with it, that 'No man should work for his wife,'" Graham said in a recent interview about the transaction.

In the footsteps of his father-in-law, Philip, a Harvard Law Graduate, transformed The Post into a newspaper that "played a vital role in politics and civic affairs in Washington." Yet life would not be so easy for Katherine and Philip.

Unlike the fairy tale, Philip Graham was mentally ill, in fact, manic-depressive, for many years. Unable to cope with the pressure, Philip took his own life in 1963, leaving his wife, Katherine, the easy option of selling The Post. But she had other ideas about the future of herself and the paper.

Despite her shyness and insecurities, Graham decided it was time to break into the newspaper-publishing world. A world in which males had dominated since their existence in America. Graham was not fully prepared for the job description nor was she prepared to give it up so easily either.

In a 1998 interview, Graham admitted that, "I had very little idea of what I was supposed to be doing, so I set out to learn."

Graham and The Post persevered together, however, highlighted by breaking open the Watergate scandal and printing the Pentagon Papers. Graham admits the decision to publish the Papers was the most difficult she made in her career. Making such bold decisions, Graham earned the respect of her peers while setting a staunch example for those who followed.

"I would go to a meeting. It would be addressed by a man saying very self-consciously 'Lady and Gentlemen', or 'Gentlemen and Mrs. Graham', said Graham about one uncomfortable aspect of the job. "I mean, you'd always stick out as something unusual."

From her on-the-job professional education, Graham began to take better notice of society on the advice of her friend, activist Gloria Steinem.

One instance in which Graham took a stand was at dinner parties after the meal had been finished. The men sat around the table and drank, smoked cigars and discussed issues while the women burrowed in a bedroom and talked of more domestic topics like food.

Disgusted with being issued to the bedroom, Graham informed one particular host that she would prefer to go home and read the newspaper.

"And I didn't do this with some great goal, I suddenly – something snapped, and I thought why am I doing this when I've worked all day and I've been to an editorial lunch with somebody that was interesting and I've been in these issues, and now I'm supposed to go into this bedroom and discuss other things."

"I had good women friends. I don't mean that I didn't like them, but I thought it was not a way I wanted to spend an hour," said Graham in a 1997 interview with U.S. News & World Report editor-at-large, David Gergen. Her wish of inclusion was duly granted.

Graham was surprised in April of 1998 when she was awarded a Pulitzer Prize for her autobiographical memoir entitled Personal History at the age of 79. Associating the Pulitzer with the work of her former star reporters, Graham was shocked at her accolade.

"It's a whole other scene when you win one yourself. Especially for your first and only book," said Graham.

Yet, it seems the perfect culmination to a career built on chance. Sustaining on natural instinct and desire, Graham sets an example for both males and females looking for reassurance that the American Dream is alive and well for those who think they can.

Kathleen Rulls is a Collegian columnist.

"To love what you do and feel that it matters — how could anything be more fun?" – Katherine Graham, Washington Post publisher Author of Personal History

Got school spirit?

Kathleen Rulls

She walked five miles to school everyday, literally. No, I'm not talking about your mother or your grandmother - I'm talking about Mary Jane McLeod-Bethune, who was born July 10, 1875 as the fifteenth child of Patsy McIntosh and Samuel McLeod of Mayesville, SC.

A true pioneer for education in America especially for African Americans, McLeod-Bethune was the first black women to head up a federal agency and also founded Bethune-Cookman College, which distinguishes her among this list of leaders.

Earning herself a ticket to school by way of hard work in the fields, McLeod-Bethune started her own first school, the Daytona Literary and Industrial School for Training Negro Girls, in 1904. She charged each of her first five students fifty cents, but only if they could afford it. With the assistance of her husband, Albertus Bethune, she never took away education from any children.

Tireless in her quest to educate the black population, McLeod-Bethune would not stop knowing that "there was "a single Negro boy or girl without a chance to prove his worth."

The school eventually expanded to a high school and then to a junior college. Eventually it merged with Cookman College to become BCC in 1923, which has since graduated over 9,000 students in 26 different majors.

But her work did not stop at the local level. McLeod-Bethune assisted four different presidential administrations including Calvin Coolidge, Herbert Hoover, Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry Truman. Her work included child-care conferences and traveling on a mission to Africa. She was also in charge of the Division of Negro Affairs in the National Youth Administration.

McLeod-Bethune was a major influence on the National Council of Negro Women and was president of both the Florida Federation of Colored Women and the National Association of Colored Women in 1924. In 1940, she served as Vice-President of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP).

Mary McLeod-Bethune died May 18, 1955 at the age of 80, but is the only American black women honored with a statue in Washington D.C.'s Lincoln Park.

-Kathleen Rulls

COURTESY OF DAVID JAMES

"I think I can, I know I can..."
Barbara Streisand is well rehearsed in the entertainment field as an actress, singer, director and producer.

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

Real life couple Nicolas Cage and Patricia Arquette try to find redemption in Martin Scorsese's Bringing Out the Dead

Cage shines, Scorsese drags with indulgence

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

BRINGING OUT THE DEAD
Directed by Martin Scorsese
With Nicolas Cage, Patricia Arquette, John Goodman
Playing at Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield

Bringing Out the Dead takes an eccentric, heavily stylized look at the life of a paramedic struggling for sanity in an insane environment. Nicolas Cage, in what may be his best performance to date, stars as Frank Pierce, a man whose life is being consumed by his work. He has begun seeing the ghosts of patients he failed to save. In fact, he hasn't saved a life in months, resulting in a cycle of self-doubt and borderline despair that is clearly taking a toll on his performance. It's difficult to say if he even cares about his work anymore; he arrives late, drinks on the job, and makes frightening moralizations about the nature of his work, such as declaring that his duty has less to do with saving lives, and more to do with hearing witness to all the suffering that surrounds him.

Most of the movie is plotless; we follow Frank's life for three days and watch the man come dangerously close to a nervous breakdown, but there is little conflict actually moving the story forward. The movie begins with Frank in a state of mental deterioration, and he is little or no better off as the movie comes to its insubstantial resolution, so we cannot say that we are witnessing man's decent into insanity: he is already there. When viewed as a slice-of-life piece, surreal as it may be, the movie holds together better (the fact that the movie is based upon a novel written by a 10-year paramedic adds to its credibility). Bringing Out the Dead clearly has something to say about the innate, pointless fragility of humanity and the kindness of euthanasia.

Over the course of the movie, Frank rides with three other paramedics, each a colorful, often humorously unstable person who has found his own way of coping with the overwhelming emotional stress their occupation places on them. Marcus, played excellently by Ving Rhames, is an outspoken Christian who equates their work as paramedics to the performing of miracles. In one scene, he has a crowd of punk-rockers hold hands and praise God while Frank saves a man's life through standard medical protocol. Bringing Out the Dead overflows with that sort of humorous hyperbole; the world it creates may be a little less believable for it, but works well as a reflection of its characters' inner confusion.

Early in the movie, Frank barely

Turn to Cage, page 7

Attention!!!..... UMass students and Daily Collegian fanatics

VOTE!!! For the 10 best movies and 10 best albums of the 90s. Either bring your entry down to the Collegian Office (Campus Center Basement) with your name and phone number or e-mail it to us at Daily_Collegian@hotmail.com. That's "Daily" underscore "Collegian."
At the end of the semester, all votes will be tallied and the results will be published on the final 2 Arts covers. I encourage everyone to participate in both contests, but please limit your entry to one per person.

Thanks, Adam Martignetti

GUESS WHICH ONE IS GETTING PAID?

TAKE NOTES. GET PAID.

You have to go to class anyway, so why not get paid to do it? Apply now @ allstudents.com or call 1-888-640-8810. Free online lecture notes, access to campus email, your virtual day planner.

allstudents.com

Dream Theater latest conception

By Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

DREAM THEATER
Metropolis Pt. 2: Scenes From A Memory
Elektra

The concept album. A term some people love and others hate. A concept album is an album that explores one theme throughout all the album's lyrics and music. There have been some great concept albums in the past. Iron Maiden's 1988 release Seventh Son Of A Seventh Son was a fine concept album that dealt with supernatural and religious themes, and is considered one of the band's best works. And just last year was Fear Factory's excellent Obsolete, which concerned a future overrun with machines and tyranny, and even featured a movie screenplay in the linear notes by vocalist Burton C. Bell. So now Dream Theater has unleashed their concept album, Metropolis Pt. 2: Scenes From A Memory. And as a concept album, they went all out, resulting in what must be the most detailed and thought out "concept" for a concept album ever.

"Metropolis Pt. 1: The Miracle and The Sleeper," was a track on the 1992 Dream Theater release Images And Words. The Miracle and The Sleeper are brothers, and were the two characters in this track, and are also main characters in Scenes. The brothers lived in the first half of the twentieth century, and were involved in a love triangle with a woman named Victoria. The story unfolds in Scenes to reveal the death of Victoria and one of her lovers, and Victoria's soul is reincarnated in the form of Nicolas, the main character in Scenes, who lives later in the century. Throughout the album, Nicolas is given regression therapy to revisit the life of Victoria, and he learns more about the fatal love triangle. As he learns more about Victoria's life, he finds out things about himself.

As you have read, the concept is amazingly detailed and interesting, and it is given the royal treatment by Dream Theater throughout the album. As you read the lyrics and listen to the album, it's like being caught up in a good murder mystery. and the denouement at the conclusion is genuinely satisfying. Sure, it may seem pretentious, especially when they bring in a gospel choir for "The Spirit Carries On," but by that time you are so involved in the excellent music and complex story that you just go with the flow. The linear notes are also well-done, and feature a cast of characters, a chronological key for past and present, and the music divided up into two acts and nine scenes, which give it the feel of a Broadway musical. And the cover art is first rate work from noted artist Dave McKean, the artist responsible for the excellent covers of both Machine Head's Burn My Eyes and Fear Factory's Demanufacture, among others.

Dream Theater consists of vocalist James LaBrie, guitarist John Petrucci, Mike Portnoy on drums, bass guitarist John Myung, and the one new addition to the band, Jordan Rudess on keyboards, replacing the defected Derek Sherinian. The group's last studio release was 1997's Falling Into Infinity, which was followed by the double disc live collection Once In A Livetime. The band has toured extensively in the past with the likes of Deep Purple and others, and is planning to do some dates in Europe before the end of the year in preparation for a worldwide tour beginning in January 2000.

So all right, you know the concept, but how does it sound? Predictably flawless, with some arrangements that are among the best Dream Theater has ever produced. A wide variety of sounds are present, ranging from what sounds like a sitar at the beginning of "Home," to the ragtime piano interlude in "The Dance Of Eternity." "Fatal Tragedy" is a great track that starts off slowly with only a piano and LaBrie's vocals, and builds to a chaotic ending with two or three crushingly heavy riffs layered on top of one another competing with both Portnoy's insane drumming skills and Rudess' keyboard sounds. The beautiful "The Spirit Carries On" displays the band's lyrical mastery. Nicolas is soul-searching reveals "I used to be frightened of dying/I used to think death was the end/But that was before/I'm not scared anymore/I know that my soul will transcend."

Can you toss Scenes From A Memory into the CD player and just enjoy the music without the story? Of course, but you owe it to yourself to explore the story at least once. It is more than worth it, and repeated readings do reveal many interesting secrets. Dream Theater has created without a doubt the finest concept album I have ever seen, an album that is sure to please long-time fans and hopefully grant the band a new and wider audience. A

Dream Theater from left: John Myung, James LaBrie, John Petrucci, Mike Portnoy and Jordan Rudess

On the nature of criticism

I wonder why art critics still exist. Maybe they're on the verge of extinction. That would be reasonable as the art world is either plummeting or ascending with the breakdown of aesthetic standards. Something that becomes more and more evident in every genre of contemporary art is that quality, fame, and talent are completely arbitrary tendencies. What is one person's trash is another person's ticket to artistic fortune. And we have no sound standards to measure one artistic expression fairly against another. It's all good and/or it's all bad. But the critic is still around and still owns a soapbox from which to proclaim the worth of any given art.

Kristi Ceccarossi

Universally artists consider critics their enemies, although they are sure that a critic – or anyone – could not truly rate their work. It's funny that at the same time the artists pursue critics and hope for their approval, they get pissed off when they receive a bad review. While the artists supposedly reject the words of a tough critic, they are actually empowering the very evaluator of their stuff. Remember how your mom would tell you to ignore the kids that tease you at school because that would piss them off more? Hey, artist! Listen to mama.

Maybe those poor, struggling, and very confused artists can't be entirely blamed for this cycle. We can't ignore that endearing American laziness. We're all okay with people making up our minds for us, right? For example, when someone tells us what they think, it helps us prepare for what we're going to think. And really, what makes Siskel and Ebert, Joyce Kulhawik, David Brudnoy and me any more legitimate to decide the worth of a film, a play, a piece of art, or literature?

But, oh well. This is the way it is. Critics are still socially acceptable, even if they're not always loved. This kind of reminds me of the judgment of art axioms, but it seems like there can be no objectivity in criticism. Schools of criticism, which are veritable rules to follow when approaching a work of art, (see the J. Evans Pritchard scene in Dead Poet's Society), leave art's value comparable to a machine's efficiency. So, all that remains to rate art is the individual perception, the individual experience.

I think we've come full circle now. And it's starting to look like criticizing the critic is not only useless, but also unfair. They're just really lucky people who get paid or recognized for attending a performance (probably for free) and then dictating what they liked and disliked about it. For whatever reason they've been said to either make or break an artist's career – and I'm sure that's often true. Doesn't someone say that negative acknowledgement is better than none at all? That's not important though. Because we already agreed that one bitter, pretentious reviewer's idea of your work certainly isn't everyone's idea of your work. And just as the artist must create, the critic must appraise – and both efforts work best when done with sincerity.

Kristi Ceccarossi is a Collegian staff member

And the award goes to...

Recently the popular men's magazine GQ held the GQ Awards, honoring those men and women in the television and movie industry. Honoring what exactly I do not know. Maybe it's the best-dressed award, but I thought only People magazine was that trite. The people who were awarded ranged from Dustin Hoffman to Calvin Klein. Why do this? So GQ can get the exclusive interviews with the stars and charge the other media outlets to get in the auditorium?

What is the point? Is there any prestige that comes with the GQ Awards or is just like the "People's Choice Awards", something no one cares about? Will Steven Spielberg lose any sleep if Saving Private Ryan loses to Shakespeare in Love for best picture? He probably won't. Is there any honor that goes along with 15-inch, glass abstract sculpture? No, there is not.

Nicholas Degnidge

The GQ Awards are just one in a long line of new award shows that for some reason networks keep putting on the air. Other award shows that for one reason or another keep finding their way on prime time television are The Billboard Music Awards, The People's Choice Awards, The Teen Choice Awards, VH1's Fashion Awards, The Soul Awards, The Screen Actor's Guild awards, and finally The Golden Globes. The funny thing is the more of them are put on TV the less people watch. Do the sponsors hope that people will eventually come around if they air more shows?

Let's face it, the first time you see Aerosmith perform on MTV for the MTV Video Music Awards it's cool. "Hey look it's Aerosmith, those guys were rocking when my dad was in college. They're cool." Then you see them on NBC for the Grammy's. "Aerosmith is on again. Well serves them right. They've paid their dues and it's a great song." A month later while you hold your Coke in one hand and the remote control in the other you come across ABC and their presentation of the Academy Awards as you settle in, Aerosmith pops up again. "Aerosmith again," you scream. "They suck. Haven't they been on enough freaking award shows? This song is not that good. My god they are soooo old. They were performing when my dad was in college." Not only are the networks hurting themselves, but also killing these stars careers. It's just plain redundant.

We don't need umpteen different awards shows. What's wrong with just having three awards shows? One set of awards for television, one for the movies, and one for music. The Emmys, the Grammys, and the Oscars plain and simple. No one has to know or for the most part even cares about those award shows anyways. After all it's just a bunch of superstars who think that their work actually means something to the public. (Maybe there is some influence on the people through music, but how many people say that their lives have been influenced through Third Rock from the Sun?). Basically they are rewarding themselves for the good work that they did. Can any group of people be any more self obsessive? They don't already make enough money, they also have to gold plated statuettes given to them on a night dedicated to them? Like every night in Tom Cruise's life isn't dedicated to him as hundreds of

Turn to Award, page 8

Cage

continued from page 6

saves a man's life and becomes vaguely involved with his daughter Mary (Patricia Arquette). Theirs is not a romance, not even a friendship, but we get the feeling that each sees his or her own salvation in the other; Mary has only recently emerged from a life of drug addiction, allowing her to symbolize, for Frank, every faceless body he brings back from the brink of death. She provides Frank with a motive for continuing his work.

Related to this is the humorous yet telling fact that Frank comes in late every day in hopes of getting fired, and yet he refuses to quit. He tells himself he's through, at one point, but then he shows up for work the next morning, as if unable to abandon the world to the pain and suffering which seems so inevitable. The daily struggle is taking a terrible toll on Frank's own mind, but he absorbs the suffering as best he can and forces himself to continue.

Bringing Out the Dead suffers from over-important direction that indulges in its music video-like rhythm, and the story may be too scatterbrained at times, but the picture it creates of the lives of these people has an undeniably fascinating power. The characters may not seem entirely real, but then, nor is the world in which they live, that of a relentless war against the unstoppable tide of death and human suffering. B

Share your artistic concepts... write for Arts!

The Nation's Premier Environmental Career Conference Right Here in New England!
1999 Nation at Environmental Career Conference
Hartford Civic Center - Hartford CT
October 22 & 23, 1999
2 days of educational sessions
And Career Fair with over 50 organizations including
AT &T, Bose, Allen & Hamilton, New England Aquarium, Peace Corps, Pharmakinetics, Inc, IBM Corporation, National Park Service, AIEEPA, Student Conservation Assoc, The Peace Corps, U.S. Bureau of Public Land Management, U.S. Department of Energy, U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, E Magazine
Call 617/422-0021 or visit www.eco.org
Register on-site!

Council Travel
Student Travel from A to Z
On the journey from A to Z, A is as important as Z
-buddhist saying
A To Z
44 Main St.
Amherst MA
413-256-1261
www.counciltravel.com

Wednesday Nights at:
fun•food•spirits
THE PUB amherst
Come and Sing!
Bring your friends!
with
Karaoke!
And Weekly Drink Specials all night long.
• 16 oz Captain & Coke $1.99
• 20 oz Miller Lite $1.99
• Pitcher of Icehouse $4.50
• Kamikaze Shots $2.00

A chance to help others. To make a difference in your field. To shape the future of health care. With a career in chiropractic, it's all possible. And at Western States Chiropractic College, we'll train you in a progressive career that's open to new ideas and techniques, and is focused on doing whatever it takes to help people. If you're interested in the health care field and have the desire and passion to make a difference in other lives, as well as your own, call today for our informational brochure or visit our website. The future is in your hands.
WESTERN STATES CHIROPRACTIC COLLEGE
800 641 5641
PORTLAND, OREGON
WWW.WSCHIRO.EDU

Coolman & Henderson: Lexicon

By Charles Apicella

The Todd Coolman Trio as captured here is a driving, bassist-led unit brimming with energy and creativity. Pianist Renee Rosnes is a creative catalyst whose ideas remain interesting and abundant throughout. The rapport between her and drummer Lewis Nash forms the core of the music; so much so that at times the two carry on as a duo which allows for only vague augmentation by the presence of a bass.

Rosnes contributes the bulk of the ideas as well as is responsible for the musical direction at any given moment of the set. Her attention to saxophonist Joe Henderson – the ringer and special guest of the group –makes for some very interesting excursions. Most notably is their interaction heard in Rosnes' "Lexicon," a sharply dynamic tune which "evokes memories of the music recorded some years ago by McCoy Tyner." Henderson and Rosnes unison the twelve bar theme twice, which propels the saxophonist into a burning, tricky set of blues-deviant changes fueled by rhythmically heavy piano comping. Henderson stretches and takes full advantage of this rhythmic spring-board.

His other two appearances – "Caravan" and "Cancion Para Cadiz" –place his improvisations on the harmonically loose accompaniment of Coolman and Rosnes. With "Caravan" the saxophonist is free to play ahead of and above the changes for an up tempo reading of the tune. "Cancion Para Cadiz," the only Coolman original presented here, offers all four improvisers a minor-modal form to explore.

The bulk of the tunes selected are standards, short of one more Rosnes piece; a cool tune entitled "One for Walton." The trio works together directly and dynamically to create a very enjoyable set which includes a number of interesting selections such as Dizzy Gillespie's "Con Alma" and a relaxed Latin in Benny Carter's "Summer Serenade." Unfortunately, the only extended showcase for Coolman is his head and opening solo for a nice reading of Bassman/Washington's "I'm Getting Sentimental Over You." The group stays focused and tight throughout, presenting an intimate, relaxed record.

Charles Apicella is a Collegian Columnist.

Backyard author uses mystery to address his own sexuality

Dennis McLellan
Los Angeles Times

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. – John Morgan Wilson doesn't have to go far to enter the world of Benjamin Justice, the gay protagonist of Wilson's critically acclaimed series of mysteries set in West Hollywood.

Wilson merely has to step outside his two-story house in the Norma Triangle, a tree-lined neighborhood of '20s and '30s-vintage homes, just above Santa Monica Boulevard.

The neighborhood where Marilyn Monroe and Dorothy Dandridge once lived is a cozy counterpoint to the nearby stretch of bars and clubs that attract thousands of gays and lesbians on weekends.

Wilson, a veteran newspaper and magazine writer who switched to writing television news, documentaries and reality programs in the early '90s, introduced the Norma Triangle and ex-newspaper reporter Benjamin Justice in Simple Justice, his 1996 mystery that earned him an Edgar Allan Poe Award from the Mystery Writers of America for best first novel.

Wilson tapped his journalistic background to create the jazz-loving Justice, whom he describes as a man who is "trying desperately to find hope in a world he sees as hopeless." Justice was a brilliant young investigative reporter who lost his Pulitzer, his job and his reputation when it was discovered that he had fabricated a series on AIDS.

Wilson's debut mystery opens six years after the scandal broke. Down and out and drinking heavily, Justice is tracked down by his ex-editor who talks him into helping out a young reporter who is working on a story about a murder in Silver Lake. In Wilson's third and latest mystery, Justice at Risk (Doubleday), Justice has turned 40, stopped drinking and been given a chance to work again: He's hired to write a segment on unprotected gay sex for a PBS documentary series on AIDS. But the segment's co-producer turns up missing, and his mutilated body is found in the Angeles National Forest. Then another documentary filmmaker is murdered, and Justice finds himself caught up in a decades-old police cover-up that leads him into the gay S&M underworld.

Publishers Weekly calls the book "a startlingly complex and refreshingly sophisticated mystery."

Wilson, who moved to West Hollywood from Venice in 1991, draws inspiration at just about every turn in the Norma Triangle and down on Santa Monica Boulevard, where he and Justice share the same haunts: A Different Light bookstore, Stonewall coffeehouse (the model for Tribal Grounds in his novels) and Tango Grill (which he renamed Boy Meets Grill).

"You know how writers are; they're always making mental notes," Wilson, 54, said during a recent afternoon stroll through the area. "There are scenes in the first book that came right out of things I saw when I was just walking around the neighborhood; in fact, a couple of very stark images."

Like the time Wilson was walking up Larrabee Street and saw, through an open window, an emaciated man who was clad only in a diaper and struggling with his walker to cross his living room to get to the refrigerator. He probably had AIDS, Wilson said.

"It's such a sort of stark, heart-rending image," recalled Wilson. "To me, it worked as a perfect moment in the book, so I used it."

Wilson, whose longtime partner died of AIDS in 1987, hadn't planned on having the disease play a significant role in the first book.

"But when I started writing, all this stuff from the past put itself down on the page, and it just seemed to become an issue that I haven't been able to escape," he said. "I really think it's so deeply embedded in the emotional fabric of every gay man who came through the '80s and survived it that it's difficult in some ways to keep it out of your story if the material is personal."

Wilson, who has taught writing at the University of California, Los Angeles Extension Writers' Program since 1982, also is the supervising writer for "Anatomy of Crime," a weekly, one-hour documentary scheduled to begin airing on Court TV early next year.

Although Wilson devoured mysteries while growing up in Manhattan Beach, Calif., he abandoned the genre by age 17, having grown tired of the formulaic plots and generic styles. He didn't return to mysteries until about six years ago when a friend urged him to read "Devil in a Blue Dress," the first of Walter Mosley's acclaimed Easy Rawlins mysteries set in L.A.'s post-World War II black community.

"I realized mystery writing had changed enormously in the '80s," Wilson said, noting the diversity of subject matter and characters, including gays and lesbians. "Mystery writing has finally grown up and joined the real world."

After a year of developing his characters and outlining his plot, Wilson wrote Simple Justice in seven weeks; he sold it in one. "Two publishers wanted it; a half-dozen rejected it, and they almost all rejected it for the same thing. They said it was too dark, too hard-edged and the character of Benjamin Justice was too unsympathetic.

"Doubleday bought it for all those reasons: They bought it because it was dark and hard-edged and frankly written."

From the start, Wilson said, "I wanted to write a gay character and write him very honestly and truthfully. At the same time, I didn't want to write a gay character in which his being gay was the primary issue, that he was coming out or struggling with coming out. With Justice, he's gay and you'd better accept it because it's in your face, and that's the way he is, and that's the way I write it."

Indeed, in the new book, Justice finds himself gawking when he meets the handsome young associate producer on the AIDS series: "As he stood, in shorts, T-shirt and sandals, I saw a body of average height that was compact but lean, with silky golden hair sprinkled generously along his firmly muscled legs and forearms. If there was anything imperfect about him, I didn't see it."

"For me to tiptoe around the sexuality when everything else is so frankly written would not fit the style of the book. I'm not writing the book worrying about people's comfort level. I'm writing the book in the way it feels right to me in telling the story and creating a world. And where does sexuality fit in within this world? Well, it has a natural place within it."

COURTESY LOS ANGELES TIMES

John Morgan Wilson

■ award

continued from page 7

thousands of women and girls alike send him fan letters, obsessed e-mails and are stalkers peeping through his windows with night vision goggles.

Not to mention that they feel obligated to give unreal acceptance speeches. Are there really that many people Tom Hanks needs to thank for repeating his name several dozen times and using cliches that make no sense like "Life is like a box of chocolates?" And trust me Sally Field – no one likes you. No one really likes you. And what do those stars hope to accomplish by denying the award they were just presented. Is the American Public supposed to feel empowered that Mr. three-million-dollar-per-movie says he doesn't believe in the concept of awards. Hey, if I got paid millions of dollars for six or less months of work I wouldn't care about a twelve-inch gold phallic symbol either.

So what's next? Let's set up a live satellite feed from Mrs. O'Malley's basement for the New Jersey chapter of the Girl Scouts of America and their annual local cookie awards, or as it is called in the biz "The Munchy Award." Hosted by Martha Stewart and Sean Connery.

"Hello, I'm Martha Stewart and as you all know from my magazines, books, and TV show I really enjoy cookies. And despite the fact that I deny the truth that I was born here, I tolerate New Jersey."

"That's Grrreat. And I'm Sean Connerry. And as I'm sure all your mothers know from my James Bond films. I am a sexual dynamo. Rrrrggllleee."

"That's wonderful Sean, now to give out the awards for most peanut butter cookies sold. Julie Dempsey from North Pleasant Ave. in Trenton."

"Ummmm.... Samantha Courtrite from Smith Blvd. in Hoboken."

"Ms. Courtney Johnson from Title St. in Newark."

"And finally.... Adrian? Adrian?? Why is a boy in the Girl Scouts? My God. Adrian Boise from Lake Circle in Atlantic City."

"And the winner right after these words." Can you imagine that? Not only are people watching this but they are also sticking around until after the commercial break to see who wins the Peanut Butter Cookie Award. Don't tell me you wouldn't be riveted to your televisions to see who the winner is, right after these words from the CBS network. Welcome Home.

Nicholas Pizzolato is a Collegian Columnist

Hartford author makes national splash

Owen McNally
Hartford Courant

Sometimes a nonfiction writer's greatest subject, the shortest, simplest route to best-seller gold, or at least to critical acclaim, is sitting right there in his or her own backyard.

Richard Adams Carey is the latest author to step into this "In My Backyard" (IMBY) category with his much-acclaimed account of the plight of the endangered fishing industry in Cape Cod, "Against the Tide: The Fate of the New England Fisherman."

Carey, 47, was raised in West Hartford, Conn., an upscale Hartford suburb seemingly light years removed from the hardscrabble existence of the small-boat fishermen he chronicles, even canonizes, so dramatically and compassionately.

So at first it might seem like a ridiculous stretch to put him in this increasingly popular IMBY genre, which most famously includes John Berendt and his "Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil." In the 1980s, Berendt became so seduced by the eccentric wiles of Savannah that the gothic southern city easily eclipsed his feelings for New York. Savannah became his "backyard" and the fertile subject of his modern classic.

It's not really a stretch to put Carey in this IMBY category if you examine his childhood. It was the sea, not suburban serenity, that played a central role in forming his character. It was the sea that whetted his appetite for writing, not the suburban bliss, security and comforting conformity of his hometown.

As a youngster, Carey and his tightly knit family vacationed every summer on the Connecticut shore. Young Carey developed a passion for sailing and fishing. And even before puberty and his ecstatic discovery of girls in bikinis on the beach, he was profoundly moved by a seductive sense of mystery and danger lurking about the sea.

"The sea was a theater of dreams," he writes in the prologue to "Against the Tide." So going to the Cape in 1995 to live and work side-by-side for a year with four fishermen was, at least psychologically, like mining a literary subject right in his own backyard.

To research the book, Carey hauled lobster traps, seeded clam beds, baited long lines for clams and emptied foul smelling bait bags filled with rotting fish offal. He set trawler nets right alongside four self-reliant fishermen, the main characters whose lives propel his narrative.

"I don't think I could have written with any authority about fishing without actually doing it," Carey said during a recent phone interview from Seattle, where he was vacationing from his book tour. "You can certainly learn a lot about an occupation, an economy or a lifestyle just by talking to authorities or practitioners. But your knowledge of what you're writing about progresses to another quantum level once you go out there and try it yourself."

"I found it real difficult to have to get up at 2 or 3 in the morning deep in the midst of REM sleep to get down to the harbor and catch a tide.

"I was very good up until one incident. But exhaustion finally caught up to me. One morning the alarm rang and I just clicked it off. 'Just five more minutes, please, God,' I prayed. I dozed off and didn't wake up until about an hour and 15 minutes later. Mike (one of Carey's subjects) was waiting for me at the dock, bless his heart, or curse him, one or the other. "Missing a tide is not a capital offense on a fishing boat, but it's one step removed," he says.

To recharge his flagging energy level, Carey periodically retreated to central New Hampshire for a few days to be with his wife; he now is a publications writer for Holderness School, a private school in that area. At home he'd just reflect in quiet tranquility. But he didn't write anything. In fact, he didn't write anything during that whole year working at the Cape. But he took copious, meticulous notes on everything from bits of dialogue to the smallest, telling novelistic detail about the sea, the sun, the weather, the way things looked, sounded or smelled.

Read Arts!!!!!!!!!! Read Arts!!!!!!!!!! Read Arts!!!!!!!!!! Read Arts!!!!!!!!!! Read Arts!!!!!!!!!!

WESTERN NEW ENGLAND COLLEGE
SCHOOL OF LAW

Short-term Commitment.
Long-term Benefits.

In today's society, you need the assurance that your legal education will provide the long-term benefits of a successful career with a short-term investment of time. Western New England College School of Law, founded in 1919, provides an environment focused on ensuring your success throughout your education. We have a nationally recognized faculty and the resources you will need to establish a fulfilling career. A representative will be on campus to explore with you the many opportunities that await you at Western New England College School of Law. Stop by and visit. If you are unable to attend, call for details about our series of open houses.

If you are ready to reap the long-term benefits of a law degree, attend our

CAMPUS VISIT
FOR PROSPECTIVE LAW STUDENTS
October 27, 1999 10am-3pm

Call us at 800-782-6665 for information about the campus location.

www.law.wnec.edu

Western New England College
School of Law
Springfield, Massachusetts

Great Reasons to use UHS Eye Care Services

1 Savings on eyeglasses from the new on-site Optical Service at UHS.
2 A great place to get contacts lenses.
3 Convenient hours and location.
4 FREE eyeglass adjustments and one year warranty on frames.
5 Savings on routine eye exams for students at UMass.

Frederick H.Bloom, O.D. Director, UHS Eye Care Services
University Health Services
For appointments or questions, Call 577-5244

TRAVEL SMART
with PRISM TRAVEL
For the best airfares,
CALL
800-272-9676
In NYC 212-986-8420
VISIT US AT
prismtours.com
Rail passes and Student ID cards available.

Arts
Write for Arts!!

Yankees' pen will outlast Braves starting pitching

By John Eisenberg
Baltimore Sun

Of all the indignities the Atlanta Braves suffered in losing the first two games of the World Series at Turner Field, the worst, in a way, was their two-run rally in the ninth inning of their 7-2 loss in Game 2.

That night sound strange – scoring a couple of runs wasn't nearly as embarrassing as the Braves' poor fielding, poor hitting and poor pitching – but they had needed those late-inning runs in Game 1 the night before, and as usual, the New York Yankees' bullpen had refused to budge.

Scoring the runs when they didn't need them, in the garbage time of a blowout loss, was the ultimate tease.

You know the Braves aren't going to have the same kind of luck in the late innings of a close game, not against the Yankees' bullpen.

Of the many reasons the Yankees are 20-3 in the playoffs during the past two seasons and zeroing in on a second consecutive Series sweep, their impregnable bullpen is the biggest.

That's how we win," outfielder Paul O'Neill said. "We get a lead and give it to them."

Any lead will do.

Only once in those 23 playoff games has the bullpen faltered even slightly when needed – in Game 2 of the 1998 American League Championship Series, when the Cleveland Indians scored three runs in the 12th inning to win. But even that was more the result of a brain lock by second baseman Chuck Knoblauch, who let ten runs score while holding the ball and arguing with the umpire.

Otherwise, closer Mariano Rivera and the rest of the Yankees' bullpen has come through every time, either protecting a lead or holding the opponent scoreless until Yankees bats delivered the decisive runs.

By contrast, those opponents have repeatedly let leads slip away in the late innings, as the Braves did in the eighth inning of Game 1, when the Yankees overcame a one-run deficit with a four-run rally.

"There's just no substitute for having a bullpen like ours," said Yankees pitcher David Cone. "Most playoff games are close, and knowing we're going to a strength in that situation breeds a lot of confidence."

Calling it "a strength" actually is an understatement in Rivera's case. The slender native of Panama has allowed only two earned runs in 44 career playoff innings, giving him the lowest lifetime ERA in playoff history among pitchers who have thrown at least 50 innings.

Relying mostly on a fastball with uncommon velocity and motion, as well as the perfect closer's personality – imperturbable – Rivera has emerged as the game's top closer since giving up a game-losing home run to Sandy Alomar in Game 4 of the Yankees' 1997 Division Series loss to the Indians.

He has since saved 88 regular-season wins and four of the Yankees' six World Series wins, including Game 1 against the Braves on Saturday night.

"He's come a long way since that Game 4 (pitch to Alomar)," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "We talked to him a lot that off-season, and he came back stronger. His mental makeup is so perfect for the role. He understands what being a short reliever is all about."

Raised in rural poverty, Rivera underwent elbow surgery two years into his professional career, putting his future in jeopardy. But now, at the age of 29, he is the Yankees' ultimate weapon, a pitcher who all but forces opponents to take the lead before the late innings – or else.

"Knowing he's back there puts so much pressure on the other team," Cone said. "I'm just glad we have him."

The rest of the Yankees' bullpen isn't quite as formidable as it was in 1998, when Graeme Lloyd, Jeff Nelson and Mike Stanton were all but perfect setting up Rivera. Lloyd was traded to Toronto, Nelson was hampered by injuries during the season and Stanton hasn't been as effective.

But like the rest of the Yankees, they still come through when really needed, as in Game 2 of the Championship Series this year, when Ramiro Mendoza escaped a one-out, bases-loaded jam to give the Yankees a one-run win over the Red Sox.

Overall, the bullpen has allowed only two earned runs in 16 1-3 innings in the Yankees' nine playoff wins this year – and those two runs came in the meaningless ninth inning Sunday night.

Granted, the bullpen wasn't the difference in the first two games against the Braves. The difference was the starting pitching of Cone and Orlando Hernandez, who combined to allow only two hits in 14 innings.

But the bullpen looms as the biggest reason the Braves won't be able to repeat what the Yankees did against them in 1996 and come back from losing the first two games at home to win the Series.

Given the Braves' limited offense, they have to win the close, well-pitched games to have a chance in any series. That's how they made it this far.

But winning close games is all but impossible against the Yankees, thanks to the bullpen and Rivera in particular.

The closer hasn't allowed a run since late July, and it's hard to envision him getting beaten even once, let alone three or four times.

"We're aware of what happened in '96 and how we came back on them," Torre said, implying that a repeat was possible this year.

Don't bet even a nickel on it.

■ Payne

continued from page 12

This city is headquarters for the PGA Tour. This is where its business is done, the decisions made. The clubhouse where dozens stood in silent shock overlooks the course where they play the TPC event, which is, after the four Grand Slams, the most prestigious tournament on the calendar.

The tour players come here often, especially those, such as Stewart, who live close by in Orlando. This is their home away from home, their place to practice, to work on things, to see friends and have meetings and practice putting. If you have a tour card, you have a membership.

That's why the pictures are on the wall of all the event winners of '99 – Stewart is up there not only for his U.S. Open but also for his title at the AT&T in Pebble Beach. That's why the semi-circle of flags is behind the driving range, one flag for each tour event.

Most likely, by the time those flags are raised this morning, two will remain at half-mast.

A couple of hundred yards away, at the PGA office headquarters, a stunned tour commissioner, Tim Finchem, stands outside on the grass. With him are a cameraman, another helper and the tour's vice president of communications, John Morris. It is a pretty autumn Florida scene, with trees, still green, swaying in the background, reflected in the picturesque pond behind Finchem.

Finchem appears to have little sense for the scenery. He is tense, somber. He recites, like a man who has just seen a ghost, a statement for general distribution to broadcast outlets all over the world. The words say that Stewart will be sorely missed, that the PGA Tour is experiencing a deep sense of loss, that all their thoughts are with Stewart's family and that Stewart was a man who did much for the game of golf. The way Finchem delivers the words says that his shock, his pain, are real.

There is to be no news conference, just the sound bite to the broadcast outlets and a statement read earlier to the news services.

There is no reason not to deal with the press en masse, no spin to put on this story, no shame to avoid. This was an accident, a horrible, unexplainable, shocking event. But Finchem is clearly not up to the circus that the media, by its very numbers, can bring to such things.

He decides he can handle one short one-on-one. His look is still far away, his mind perhaps drifting to memories of happy dinners or friendly rounds of golf or boys' locker room banter.

He says that he keeps thinking of Stewart's wife, Tracey, at home in Orlando, and how she knew her husband was probably dead long before the plane, flying on autopilot, crashed near Mina, S.D. How horrible that had to be, he says.

He says he hadn't seen Stewart since the Ryder Cup but had talked to him a couple of times on the phone, once just last week, when they discussed an event Finchem needed help with in the spring.

There is a short discussion about how prevalent it is for touring pros to use chartered jets so they can leave at the last second for commitments and can squeeze in as much time as possible at home. Finchem nods that that is, indeed, the case. Later, somebody else cites the case of golfer Scott Hoch, who said that, by using a rental jet in partnership with a few other golfers, he was able to stay home 29 more days than he could have otherwise this year.

Another conversation cites the general belief that there are 50-60 pro golfers, many of them on the Senior PGA Tour, using rental Learjets and Gulfstreams almost exclusively.

One story discusses Greg Norman's infatuation with planes. As the story goes, Norman had a Gulfstream G-5, but once Jack Nicklaus got his G-4 – a little better, a little safer, a little more expensive – Norman quickly one-upped Nicklaus back, buying the G-5 that he currently uses.

At PGA headquarters, around the golf course, at the stores and shops around town, conversations fill time, somehow providing a bond that is better than solo sorrow. Soon, the sun goes down on this crisp, sunny, Florida day that had, like dark clouds and stormy winds whipping in, turned Ponte Vedra Beach so grim.

Seminoles stand atop first BCS poll

By Chris Dufresne
Los Angeles Times

The first bowl championship series rankings were released Monday night and, surprise, there were no real surprises.

The top four schools in the ratings are Florida State, Penn State, Virginia Tech and Tennessee, the exact order in which the schools appear in this week's writers' and coaches' polls.

Florida State ranks first in the BCS with a total of 7.55 points, followed by Penn State at 5.75, Virginia Tech at 6.25, Tennessee at 9.75, Kansas State at 10.86 and Florida at 13.21.

This is the second year of the BCS rankings, a four-part formula designed to determine only which two schools will meet for the BCS "national title," to be played in the Jan. 4 Sugar Bowl. The Associated Press will crown its own champion independent of the Sugar Bowl winner.

The four BCS components are poll average, computer ranking, strength of schedule and losses, each defeat counting as one computer point against a school.

The first BCS rankings should be of concern to bubble-school Virginia Tech.

While the Hokies rank first in the computer component with a 1.57 average, they could be odd-team out should they finish undefeated along with Florida State and Penn State.

The reason?

Schedule strength. With a ranking of 1.68 in this component, Virginia Tech is a distant fourth among the top four schools, lagging behind Tennessee (0.16), Penn State (0.32), and Florida State (0.84).

In the BCS computer, Virginia Tech's schedule strength ranks as only the 42nd toughest.

Of the top seven schools, only Kansas State, at 43, has a worse ranking.

Virginia Tech's schedule strength only figures to weaken with remaining games against Pittsburgh, West Virginia, Miami, Temple and Boston College.

To get to the Sugar Bowl, the Hokies likely will need to finish the season 11-0 and hope for a Florida State or Penn State loss.

The Hokies could also pick up the half point by which they trail the Nittany Lions in the BCS computer by flopping spots in the writers and/or coaches' poll. This could happen, say, if pollsters docked Penn State for a sloppy win against a weak opponent, not likely to happen with Illinois, Minnesota, Michigan and Michigan State left on the Nittany Lion schedule.

The first BCS standings also revealed current undefeated schools Mississippi State and Marshall to be extreme national title longshots. Mississippi State ranks 11th, Marshall is 14th.

Bolts have no offense

By T.J. Simers
Los Angeles Times

A review of Week 7 in the NFL, and to set the record straight, it only seems as if opponents have caught more passes thrown by San Diego Charger quarterbacks than the team's own wide receivers.

The mistake is understandable. The city that thrilled to the exploits of Hall of Fame quarterback Dan Fouts now has witnessed 58 interceptions in the last 27 games.

In that time Charger quarterbacks have thrown 18 touchdown passes.

A DREAM MATCHUP

Three teams have already posted at least 40 points against San Francisco. Only five other teams have been hit by as many points this year and in each case it happened only once – to Cleveland, Washington, Dallas, New York Giants and Atlanta.

The 49ers are on pace to surrender a team-record 477 points.

The Chargers have scored more than one offensive touchdown in only nine of their last 38 games.

The excitement ... the intrigue. What if they played against each other?

ROOKIE-ITIS

When it comes time once again for the NFL draft, and all the commotion surrounding the selection of a quarterback, relax.

Chicago, Cincinnati and Cleveland all started rookie quarterbacks Sunday and each team scored three points.

Despite getting the ball on the average at the Bears' 40-yard line for his final five possessions, Cade McNown could not get the ball in position for the Bears to even try a field goal. McNown was benched, and Jim Miller set up Chicago's lone score in a 6-5 defeat.

Cincinnati quarterback Akili Smith went 24 minutes in the first half without leading his team to a first down, the Bengals running three plays and punting on eight of their first 11 possessions. Smith went to the bench with a bruised shin in the third quarter.

Cleveland's Tim Couch threw two interceptions.

Donovan McNabb only got the chance to warm up in Philadelphia, and as a result the Eagles were able to explode for two field goals under Doug Pederson.

DAN SANTELLA COLLEGIAN

Absolutely!

Jeff Blanchard and the hockey team will look to rebound from two defeats this past weekend with a win at Army on Friday.

Do You Have Any Of The Following Complaints?

- Runny, Itchy, or Congested Nose
- Sneezing
- Post Nasal Drip
- Watery ,Itchy Eyes
- Itchy Ears or Palate

Males and females 12 years of age and older who experience any of these problems are invited to participate in a clinical research study to evaluate an investigational medication to reduce these year round symptoms.

Qualified participants may recieve financial compensation for participation.

For information call:
413 - 584 -4010

MAKE SURE YOU CHECK WITH BRYAN OR BRETT TO FIND OUT YOUR WINTER BEAT

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
-DISCOUNT OIL-
NORTHAMPTON/HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

teradynamic
YOU'VE WORKED HARD FOR YOUR DEGREE.
MOVED FORWARD. MADE THINGS HAPPEN.
KEEP THE MOMENTUM GOING AT A COMPANY THAT IS AS DYNAMIC AS YOU ARE.

With sales exceeding $1.5 billion, Teradyne is the world's largest supplier of automatic test equipment and software for the electronics and telecommunications industries and a leading supplier of high-performance backplane assemblies and connectors. Our products are used to test semiconductors, computerized telephone lines, networks, software and the Internet. Here you won't be stuck doing repetitive work. You'll be involved in the entire lifecycle of a project and able to see the end results of your work. You'll do it all in an environment that is creative and entrepreneurial, where self-motivated people thrive. Join our team and make your career Teradynamic.

TERADYNE

CHECK WITH YOUR PLACEMENT OFFICE TO FIND OUT WHEN WE ARE ON CAMPUS AND COME BY TO SEE US.

TERADYNE.COM

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Congratulations to The UMass Equestrian Team on winning High Point College at their Horse Show on Saturday. We can do it again at Mt. Holyoke this weekend!!

UMSFS Presents: Rocky Horror Picture Show CCA 10pm Oct. 28

Free CD of Cool Indie Music when you register at MyBytes.com, the ultimate wesite for your college needs

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take Over Our Lease! Fun place to live. Available Jan 1st. $840/mo. All util included. 2 Bedroom. Call 549-9432!

AUTO FOR SALE

1992 Jetta GL, A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500. 546-1773

90 Chevy Blazer 4WD, AC, CD, Remote Starter 108k, runs great, Exc. Condition. $5500 or BO 253-6591

COMPUTERS

Computer System and Printer $675.00 O/B Call 413-268-0081

Computer Problems? We've got solutions. New systems to technical service. Call 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Aerobic Instructors Needed. Universal Health & Fitness. Call 585-9900

Earn $500 Weekly distributing phone cards. No experience necessary full or part time. Call 1-800-572-3361

Child Care Needed 3 days/wk 5:30am-8:30am including every other weekend. Must have car and good references $8/hr 323-6183

Campaign Jobs For The Environment $300-$400/wk, F/T, P/T, + Career opportunities. Call Jesse 256-6434

Immediate Opening for a General Assignment Reporter for the Westfield Evening News, a daily paper in Westfield, MA. Ability to write clean concise copy in a strict deadline environment a must. Above average wages and benefits. Send resume to: Maria Brazee, General Manager, Westfield News 64 School St. Westfield, MA 01085

DP Dough is hiring drivers and kitchen help. Must be able to work nights. Approxiametly $20/hour. Apply at DP Dough.

EMPLOYMENT

Spring 2000 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary—training provided. Contact the Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals - Free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

2 COMPUTERS Specifications Processor: MMX 166 Mhz Ram: 16 Mb Hard Drive: 3.2 Gigs. Floppys: One 2 MB Monitor: 15" CD: 24X Zip Drive: Internal IDE Video Card: Cirrus 2 Mbs Keyboard: 101 Modem: 56K External Software: Win95 and various others $400.00 each Call 549-5511

FOR SALE

Ski + Board All East Season Passes 7Mtn's only $350. Call Mark 413-527-3524

Couch $80, Loveseat $60, Beds $50, Desks $50, Etc. Free Delivery 586-2221

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons by retired pro Dajata Bumpus in Amherst. On bus rte. Call 256-0364

LOST & FOUND

LOST CAT: Near Leach, Orange Tabby Please Call 665-9950 Leave Message

ROOMMATE WANTED

3 Fun Girls Looking! 1/3 mi from campus. $250+util/mo. Call 549-9621 Spring Semester Only!

SERVICES

Feeling Ripped Off? Your new car is a lemon; the warranty on your stereo just expired and it needs major repairs; you loaned a friend money and can't get it back; or the dry cleaner ruined your favorite suit! Are dept collectors knocking at your door? Contact the Studnet Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

SERVICES

Cheap Heating Oil: Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Coop. Come to Commuter Services, RM 428 Student Union or Call 545-0865

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TICKETS

2 Sold Out Tickets to Phish concert down in Florida on December 30-31. 546-0470

TRAVEL

#1 SPRINGBREAK operator! Check our website for the best deals! www.vagabond-tours.com Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica & Florida Group organizers EARN FREE TRIPS & CASH...Call today! 800-700-0790

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

Don't

Stress

yourself out...

Get rid of that gas guzzling car or better yet buy a new one!!

Place an Ad in The Collegian Classsifieds and DO BOTH!!

Call 545-3500!! or come down to the Campus Center Basement

Your Advertisement could fill this space... if you call 545-3500!! The Daily Collegian!!

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 27

Information – Financial Aid Services will be holding an informational session for all students planning to go on international exchange from 3-6 p.m. in rooms 804-808 of the Campus Center. All students planning to go away must attend at least one workshop before leaving. There will be more informational sessions to come.

Meeting – Anyone interested in contributing to the Student/Faculty Handbook on Disability should meet at 4 p.m. in rooms 905-909 of the Campus Center. Students are welcome, and refreshments will be available.

THURSDAY, OCT. 28

Meeting – Anyone interested in contributing to the Student/Faculty Handbook on Disability should meet at 4 p.m. in rooms 905-909 of the Campus Center. Students are welcome, and refreshments will be available.

NOTICES

Art – The Wheeler Gallery will present "Cellblock Visions: Cell Division – Prison Art in America," on display until Nov. 7. The Gallery is located in Central Residential Area.

Art – The Student Union Visual and Performing Art Space will be showing an exhibit of undergraduate artwork, focusing on the self-portrait, until Oct. 29. Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday, 9:30 a.m.-5 p.m.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is now open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops call 545-2096, or stop by the Craft Center.

Support – The Counseling Services Program at the Everywoman's Center is offering a free support group for women living with bipolar disorder on Wednesdays from 5:15-6:45 p.m. There will be four consecutive sessions at the Everywoman's Center in Wilder Hall. Call 545-0663 for more information, or to register.

Support – A grief support group for undergraduate and graduate students is available starting Tuesday, Oct. 27 from 6-7:30 p.m. Telephone prescreening is required. Call 577-5316 or 545-0041 if interested.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

UStore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN & Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board	15 The Learning Channel
3 CBS/3 Hartford	18 UVC-TV19
4 CBS/4 Boston	20 ABC/40 Springfield
5 ABC/5 Boston	21 Gavel to Gavel
9 PBS/57 Springfield	22 NBC/22 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Ch.	23 Sundance
8 UPN/20 Hartford	24 Bloomberg Financial
9 Weather Channel	25 CTN
10 NBC/30 New Britain	27 TBS
11 Fox/61 Hartford	28 BET
12 PBS/24 Hartford	29 TV Land
13 WOCH & HSCN	30 Univision
14 International	31 Comedy Central
16 UMass Academic TV	32 Cartoon
18 WB/New Haven	33 Much Music
17 HSCN Programming

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campue — OCTOBER 27, 1999

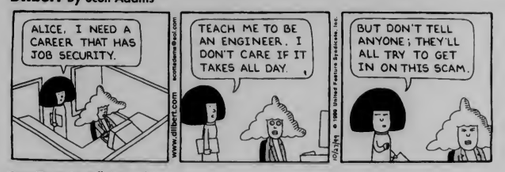
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Jane Goodall-Hope		Wonders of the African World (In Stereo) [Part 3 of 3]				Independent Lens
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Cosby	Work With Me	"A Secret Affair" (1999, Drama) Jeanne Tumer.				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Cosby	Work With Me	"A Secret Affair" (1999, Drama) Jeanne Tumer.				News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Two Guys-Girl	Norm	Drew Carey	Oh Grow Up	20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		Roswell "Leaving Normal"		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	World Series: Game 4 – Atlanta Braves on New York Mets at Boston Red Sox on New York Yankees.		News				News	Tonight Show
WTXX	6	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Real TV (R)	Star Trek: Voyager "Dark Frontier" (R) (In Stereo)		News		Caroline		Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	World Series: Game 4 – Atlanta Braves on New York Mets at Boston Red Sox on New York Yankees.		News				News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Get Real "Performance Anxiety"		News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	World Series: Game 4 – Atlanta Braves on New York Mets at Boston Red Sox on New York Yankees.		News				News	Tonight Show
WGBY	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Jane Goodall-Hope		Wonders of the African World (In Stereo) [Part 3 of 3]				Charlie Rose	(In Stereo)
WGGB	29	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Friends	Two Guys-Girl	Norm	Drew Carey	Oh Grow Up	20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Star Trek: Voyager "Dark Frontier" (R) (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Blind Date		Ricki Lake
WTBS		Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	[4:30] "Stuart Little" (1999, Comedy) Geena Davis, Hugh Laurie, Jonathan Lipnicki.		"Fatal Error" (1999, Suspense) Antonio Sabato Jr., Janine Turner.
A&E		Simon & Simon		Law & Order "Savages"		Biography: Linda Darnell		Investigative Reports (R)		American Justice		Law & Order "Aria"
CNN	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	First in the Nation		Larry King Live		World Today		Sports	Moneyline
COM	30	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Com.-Presents [Uncomfortably		Uncomfortably	Com.-Presents	South Park		N.Y. Friar's	Jerry Stiller
DISC		Your New House		Wild Discovery: Creatures-Dark		On the Inside		Nature's Wrath I (R)		Storm Warning! (R)		On the Inside
ESPN		Sportscenter		Major League Soccer: Eastern Conference Semifinal				PBA Bowling Greater Detroit Open.				X-Games	Sportscenter
LIFE		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		"Historia of Terror" (1994, Suspense) Barbara Eden, Michael Nouri.				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV		Global Groove	MTV Jams	Campus Invas.	TRL Wednes	TRL (R) (In Stereo)		Head Trip		True Life		Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK		All That	Caddo	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Kenan & Kel	All In Family	All In Family	All In Family	All In Family	All In Family	All In Family
SCIFI		Hercules: Legendary Journ.		Sliders "Gillian of the Spirits"		Sliders (R) (In Stereo)		Sliders (R) (In Stereo)		Sliders "Eli Sir" (In Stereo)		Sliders "Time Again and World"	Crypt Tales
TLC	28	Home Again	Home Again	Fugitive Son: Alex Kelly		Extreme Machines "Supercars"		Secrets of Forensic Science		Secrets-Forensic		Extreme Machines	"Supercars"
TNT		Due South (In Stereo)		ER "Luck of the Draw"		[4:15] "Jaws 2" (1978, Horror) Roy Scheider, Lorraine Gary.				[4:] "Jaws III" (1983, Horror) Dennis Quaid.
USA		Baywatch "Baywatch Angels"		JAG "Tiger, Tiger" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger		Messenger		[4:] "Halloween II" (1981, Horror) Jamie Lee Curtis. (In Stereo)		Baywatch "Bash at the Beach"
HBO		[4:] "Lee Mesrabee" (1998, Drama) Liam Neeson. (In Stereo)				"Beverly Hills Ninja" (1997, Comedy) Chris Farley, Nicholle Tom.				[4:] "Always Outnumbered" (1998) Laurence Fishburne. "R"		Chris Rock (R)	Oz (In Stereo)
MAX		(4:45) "Seeker"	"Wrongfully Accused" (1998) Leslie Nielsen.			"Black Cat, Run" (1998, Action) Mullioney, Yi		[4:] "Kiss Pit Girls" (1997, Suspense) Morgan Fairchan. "R"					Pleasure Zone
SHOW		(4:30) "Cover"	[4:] "Puller" (1998)	Cat in Your Ha 2-12		[4:] "Purpose Soldier 2: Brothers in Arms" (1998)		[4:] "Stonie Eyes" (1998, Suspense) Nicolas Cage. "R"					Beggars

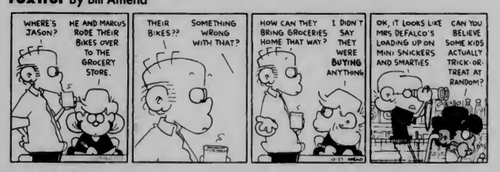
Joe Banani By J.D. Schneider

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams



Dilbert By Scott Adams

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Horoscopes

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – With the help of someone "in the know," you can put yourself in a position to receive a great many rare and invaluable benefits today.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You may be under more pressure today as a result of a recently formed alliance which may be attracting a great deal of scrutiny.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – "Better safe than sorry" is an adage best left to the timid and squeamish today. You are feeling daring, bold, and eager to experiment at this time.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Security and dependability are not to be taken lightly today. You can provide both, but are you in a situation that can provide them?

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – You are being too sensitive these days, and right now any kind of overreaction could threaten your personal progress.

Aries (March 21-April 19) – You must maintain tight control over all of your own affairs today. Once you begin to let down even a little, others will try to take over.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – You'll be the leader of the pack today, but you won't want to ignore the advice of those who are following in your footsteps. Be democratic!

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – You'll realize today that you are in a position to enjoy the best of both worlds. That which is most important to you will be very clear.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – You're sensing the presence of a threat where there is none today, and such unnecessary worry may actually sap your strength and prevent progress.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – Once your pride is wounded today, you may have trouble recovering – so no matter what you do, protect yourself! You can't afford a setback.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Someone else has what you most want, but you must take care and play your cards right if you expect to take possession before the day is out.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – The day, and the week, is likely to begin on a surprising note. This will lead you to believe, mistakenly, that difficulty lies ahead.

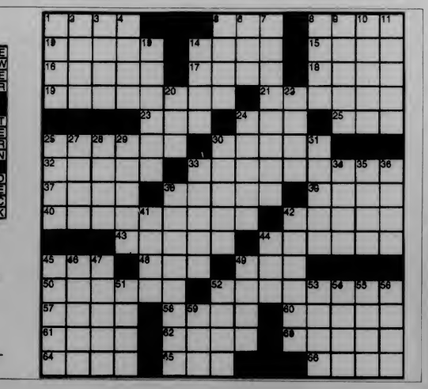
Quote of the Day

"I think animal testing is a terrible idea; they get all nervous and give the wrong answers."

–A bit of Fry and Laurie

Close to Home By John McPherson

A relentless prankster, Carol couldn't resist pulling the old dribble-IV-bag joke on Mr. Sweeney.



ACROSS
1 Wagers
5 Talent
8 Enthusiasm
12 Coral reef
14 BMW, e.g.
15 — Stanley Gardner
16 Digress
17 Proxy's asst.
18 Assess
19 Cuticle problem
21 More intimate
23 XX minus VI
24 Trouble
25 Um's cousins
26 Scratched
30 Cheer at the Met
32 Greek liqueurs
33 Thanks
37 Smudge
38 Beats (cream)
39 Food carrier
40 They croak!
42 Type
43 Boutique buy
44 Skilled
45 Psychic power: abbr.
48 Pretend
49 Cold
50 Recoiled
52 Abandoned
57 Part of a comet
58 Once more
60 Dodge adroitly
61 See eagle
62 — monster: lizard
63 Traffic officer's tool
64 Collections
65 Wing of a building
66 Japanese wrestling

DOWN
1 Festive event
2 Singer James
3 Ripped
4 Smelting residue
5 "The Mammoth Hunters" author
6 Map abbr.
7 Utters, e.g.
8 Zilch
9 Delete
10 Change
11 Sly looks
13 Wildcats
14 Tel —
20 Lend a hand
22 Clothier Strauss
24 Shawls
26 The "Georgia Peach"
27 Dilly
28 Blue, in Buenos Aires
29 Universal
30 Ships' jails
31 Playful animal
33 Wraith
34 Vases
35 Challenge
36 Looked at
38 Accident debris
41 Kukla's friend
42 Yellowstone attraction
44 TV add-on
45 Senator Kefauver
46 Quota
47 Computer command
49 Corn Belt state
51 Porter and stout
52 Slid
53 "Lackaday!"
54 African antelope
55 Dutch treat
56 Pianist Peter —
59 See 8 Down

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

NOBLE ONTO DAME
ACRES WEED ABOW
SHARK LAND WIDE
HOGTIE POMANDER
MAR REHEEL
PANDORA NOD
TWIBS ZESTY TIST
GOOBS MOVIES PIANO
ANS VIREO SUGAR
XTIS UNKNOWN
KARATE LAY
FINALIST PLACED
EDGY ESAU ADORE
DOLE SIARK REILLO
DYED TYKE KNACK

10-27-99 © 1999, United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Soup du Jour
Minuteman Croissant Sandwich
Old Fashioned Beef Pot Pie
Vegetable Croissant Sandwich

DINNER
Soup du Jour
Roast TurkeyDinner
Fried Shrimp
Hot & Spicy Pasta

Worcester

LUNCH
Soup du Jour
Minuteman Croissant Sandwich
Old Fashioned Beef Pot Pie
Vegetable Pot Pie

DINNER
Roast Turkey Dinner
Fried Shrimp
Hot & Spicy Pasta
Ratatouille

Hampshire

LUNCH
Soup du Jour
Minuteman Croissant Sandwich
Old Fashioned Beef Pot Pie
Vegetable Croissant Sandwich

DINNER
Soup du Jour
Roast Turkey Dinner
Fried Shrimp

Berkshire

LUNCH
Soup du Jour
Minuteman Croissant Sandwich
Old Fashioned Beef Pot Pie
Vegetable Croissi. Sandwich

DINNER
Roast Turkey Dinner
Fried Shrimp
Hot & Spicy Pasta
Ratatoille

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Ken Mc Donald
Photo Technition	Nicole Gottwald
Copy Editor	Mary Grein
Production Supervisor	Joylyn Lombard
Production Staff	Melanie Thomas, Roberto Delgado

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

BCS formula in question, Hokie fate at stake

Brett Mauser
College Football

At the very least, it's bearable. In a perfect world, it's a joke. With nearly every professional and collegiate sport decided on the field, the college football incompetents feel as though the Bowl Championship Series is the best way to find the deserved one.

Last year had the BCS backers scrambling for an out, an answer for why an undefeated team would have to settle for parting gifts despite not having been beaten at the line of scrimmage. For a three solid months, Kansas State, UCLA and Tennessee were neck and neck before the Wildcats and the Bruins bowed out coming down the stretch. Phil Fulmer's Volunteers had undergone the true test, playing in a tough SEC Conference and coming out unscathed. As the New Year kicked in, UT ended its perfect run with an emotional 23-16 victory over Florida State.

Happy? Tennessee. Undefeated season. Knoxville's going nuts.

Even happier? The BCS. Thanks to a finish that the committee themselves couldn't have molded better, those in charge were saved from a tidal wave of nationwide ridicule.

That day will come, though, when the polls and the statistics lie.

Five years ago, the Nittany Lions finished the season 12-0 but were left out in the cold. Nebraska took home the national championship while Joe Paterno's good will kept PSU from feeling the fever, settling for wins and a respectable reputation rather than matching the Huskers desire for voter-influencing 50-point blowouts.

While the Hokies are challenging for a date in this year's Sugar Bowl, the site of the 1 vs. 2 showdown, but they still aren't regarded as a national power. With a 24-point win at Virginia and a 62-0 drubbing of Syracuse, Tech is turning heads, but its home loss to lowly Temple last season still haunts its image.

If there's a mistake in their blueprint this season, it is overlooking what happened to Kansas State late last year. A weak schedule led to little respect in the BCS rankings and, if a trio of teams ended the season unblemished, the 'Cats would be playing in some second-rate Bowl rather than anteing up for a national championship.

In other words, Tech needs help.

Penn State wraps the season up with home dates against Minnesota and Michigan before traveling to East Lansing to take on the Spartans. Without a big boost from the Big Ten, Florida State must travel to Virginia before locking horns with the Gators in Gainesville.

The Hokies have to be smiling. Both teams have shown signs of tenderoni (see Pittsburgh and Clemson). Tech points to a winner-take-all home date with Miami, but outside of that, the coast is clear of what would be considered a test.

If the Vols can close out the season in impressive fashion, which would mean good showings against Notre Dame and an Arkansas, its strength of schedule might carry it in to the Sugar Bowl despite having a loss. A 23-21 heartbreaker at the Swamp is no need for Fulmer and Co. hanging their heads.

Florida, too, has a shot, playing its cards like FSU last season. After UCLA and KSU fell unexpectedly, the 'Noles used a 23-12 victory against the Gators to boost its resume. This time, the ball is in Gator territory, and Florida can team a victory there with wins against the Vols and against SEC rival Georgia this weekend.

Ah, back to Kansas State. Undefeated again, but a cupcake schedule wasn't helped by Nebraska's loss to Texas didn't help its standing among the beasts. An undefeated season capped by a solid victory in Lincoln would surely give the 'Cats some consideration, but, in the end, it's still the Big 12.

Last week: 2-3
Overall: 17-12-1

All right, let's talk Look of the Decade. Let's go on the line here. With the loss of Ricky Williams in the season opener, the season looked grim for the Red Raiders of Texas Tech. Not so. After a humiliating loss at home to North Texas, the Red Raiders are better than ever, beating Texas A&M and Colorado on its way to the top of the Southern Division.

This weekend, Missouri takes on Tech in Columbia. The Tigers have lost three straight, including a 21-0 collapse against Kansas, giving the Jayhawks their first conference win to go along with wins over Cal-St. Northridge and SMU.

Pick 'em? You're kidding me. Gimme the Raiders.

In other games, I'll take Oregon, giving seven, against Arizona State, and Georgia, getting 14, against Florida. In addition, gimme Minnesota to finally win a big one at home, getting three from Purdue, and BYU, giving just six to a struggling Air Force Academy.

Maroon and White leaves Big Green feeling blue

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Dartmouth may have been the team with the national ranking coming into last night's field hockey war with Massachusetts, but it really didn't matter. By the time the final whistle sounded, the Big Green was left with a very appropriate emotion to snack on: Envy.

The surging Minutewomen (10-8, 5-0 Atlantic 10) hung onto an early two-goal lead to shock No. 18 Dartmouth, 2-1, at Richard F. Garber field last night in their final home game of the season. The win was UM's sixth in a row, and its first against a ranked opponent since it defeated then No. 19 Harvard on Sept. 29. Dartmouth fell to 9-5 with the loss.

Game time was originally slated for 7 p.m., but had to be pushed back a full hour by the late arrival of one of the officials. UM had faced an identical scenario earlier in the season, and that unfortunate experience may have been the difference in the early goings of last night's affair.

"Of course it's a worry when you're disrupted in your pregame warm-up," UM coach Patty Shea said. "But the exact same thing happened to us at Syracuse. And it helped that we were at home; that made it even more familiar."

Once the opening pass-back was finally struck, the Minutewomen were clearly the more comfortable team on Garber's chilly Astroturf. UM midfielder Chrissy Millbauer invaded the Big Green's circle on the Maroon and White's very first offensive series, trying in vain to hook a pass around Dartmouth's Kate Alexander to set up lurking UM sniper Anke Bruemmer.

The Big Green came back with a little pressure of its own, but a picturesque tackle-and-clear sequence by Bruemmer led to a UMass free hit at midfield. The Minutewomen used a sequence of crisp passes to get right back into Dartmouth keeper Brittany D'Augustine's face, setting up the first of UM's five penalty corners at the 29:21 mark.

Bruemmer unloaded a rocket on the ensuing set piece, but D'Augustine dove boldly across the mouth of the Big Green goal to slap away the shot. Dartmouth's backs were in no position whatsoever to clear the ball, though, enabling UM forward Lindsay Abbott to rifle in the rebound over the prone Big Green keeper.

Abbott's goal was her third in two games, and raised the Northampton native's point total on the year to seven.

"Forward scoring is being in the right place at the right time," Shea said. "Lindsay's had a knack to do that these last couple of games. Her natural instincts are just really incredible, and she always seems to know where the ball is going to be."

Minutewoman Kristen Schmidt took the ensuing possession and sliced through Dartmouth's defense, setting the stage for UM's second penalty corner. Bruemmer's aim this time was true, and the natural lift caused by the German's gorgeous swing was enough to get the ball over D'Augustine's outstretched glove.

"I thought we came out very, very strong," Shea said. "In the first ten minutes, we were really taking steps forward, into where we needed to go."

Punch-drunk, Dartmouth was forced to call for time, as the Maroon and White had jumped out to a 2-0 lead. But for a UM team that made its money through much of the season as comeback specialists, sitting on an early lead against a ranked opponent proved to be dangerous, uncharted territory.

"It's just a matter of understanding how much hard work it took to get up 2-0, and continuing that hard work," Shea said. "Dartmouth's a very good team. We had a two-goal lead, but it never felt like we were up by two goals."

While the Minutewomen may have grown complacent with the lead, the Big Green used the deficit as fuel to just-start its offense. DC's Kristen Scopaz got her team fired up with a sensational tackle of UM's Sarah Bohonowicz at the 17:11 mark, as the Big Green midfielder cleanly picked the ball and flipped it to her sister Lauren on the wing.

The final 15 minutes of the first half were an absolute dogfight, but the home team hung on and took its two-goal cushion into halftime.

UMass started the second half with style, as forward Nicole Bardell displayed some skillful flair by putting the ball between Dartmouth midfielder Abigail Clark's legs and beating her down the right sideline. But Schmidt then tried to make something happen by attacking the Big Green's middle, which resulted in a DC steal and a definite shift in momentum.

"Dartmouth has some great players up the middle," Shea said. "So we knew that we needed to go wide. When we got in trouble was when we tried to go down the middle; that's when we lost the ball a lot, and that's when they came right back down our throats."

But luckily for the Maroon and White, when the Big Green was able to gain the upper hand, it ran into a brick wall known as Zowie Tucker. The Welsh goalkeeper appeared nothing short of invincible between the pipes, keeping DC off the board with four of the most spectacular saves yet seen on Garber field.

"Zowie just made the saves that she needed to make," Shea said. "She's starting to be proactive back there, which is what makes Zowie so successful."

PAUL BELGODAU / COLLEGIAN

Minutewomen Lucy Koch, Tamra Geryk and Chrissy Millbauer all played a hand in UM's 2-1 upset of No. 18 Dartmouth last night at Richard F. Garber Field.

The Maroon and White's luck finally ran out with 16:49 to play, when a Tucker trap led to a Dartmouth penalty stroke. Big Green forward Kim Jenkin stuck the stroke, chopping UM's lead in half and setting the stage for a DC comeback.

"It was a nip and tuck game all the time," Shea said. "At any point, Dartmouth could have put three or four goals in, and some of that is because we sat back."

The Minutewomen may have sat back over the game's final stretch, but Tucker truly stepped up. Though the Big Green fought to the final whistle, in the end it saw its three game winning streak die at the hands of the Maroon and White.

UM will wrap up its season at Northeastern, in a 1 p.m. Halloween contest.

Cycling Team sweeps Easterns at PSU

Quimby wins Omnium, UM still second in conference

By Catherine Turner
Collegian Staff

Route 116 is a lonely road at 4 a.m. Monday morning, as the rest of campus slept soundly, the UMass cycling team rolled into the Puffton parking lot singing Boston's "More than a feeling" with 30 bikes and a myriad of medals after a successful weekend race at Penn State.

The event was hosted by Penn State, which had a strong showing of its own. Competing in the three events there were a total of 26 schools and 265 individual riders.

"The courses were well designed compared to other collegiate courses," said senior downhill captain Ken Avery.

On Saturday, the cross-country action was just the beginning of the Minuteman sweep. The course was a ten-mile loop of single track that proved to be technically challenging with rock gardens and a mile long climb from the start that immediately thinned out the competition. Not only was it hard to pass, the bone-chilling cold in the air made it hard to ride the 20 miles required to finish.

In men's A race, Donny Quimby came in second place, two minutes ahead of third, followed by Tyson Kaman in 11th out of 40 other riders. John Linville was unable to finish the men's B race due to his hospital trip in which he received 14 stitches in his shin.

In the women's cross-country A race, UMass packed the ranks with Kelly Foster, Alaine Knipes and Linda Fjol taking 6th, 7th and 8th, and Erin Farmsworth just behind them in 11th.

In women's B, Maryann Shirley took 5th.

On Sunday, the action continued in the downhill and slalom events. The downhill course started down a rocky shoot and wound through tight off-camber single track littered with rocks, stumps and debris. The fans had plenty of opportunity to witness riders catching air off the numerous jumps and steep drop-offs before they sprinted through waterbars to the finish.

"There was a potential 25-foot drop," Avery said. "The consequence of getting off-line was smackin' it face down on the access road."

In the men's class A downhill race, UMass clinched the Eastern Conference with four riders finishing in the top ten. Avery, ranked number one in the conference, took third, with Clay-ton Harper and Marty Walsh coming in fourth and fifth behind him. Cross-country star Quimby also took 8th in the race.

In men's class B, Sean Boland won the bronze followed by Bill Hansen winning silver in class C.

Following the downhill race was dual slalom. In this course, the 16-foot high start ramp gave the riders speed to hit the four-foot high, 15 foot gap double jump that led into the heavily bermed course that wound down the mountain with kicker jumps toward the end.

"The jump was an all-or-nothing kind of a thing," Avery said. "A bunch of people rode away in ambulances, but it paid off for the ones who made it."

Cameras flashed while riders caught air off the jump. This race was the action-packed event of the weekend. The head to head racing drew spectators along the course.

In the men's A, only the top eight qualifiers made it into the final elimination rounds and four of the top eight were from UMass. The top three riders were separated by one-tenth of a second. Harper beat Avery to win second, while Marty Walsh and Quimby tied for fifth.

In men's B, cycling club president Erik Miller took second, missing first by hundredths of a second. He fell on his last run because he was hanging it out. In class C, Hansen was the only racer in his class to jump the double and went on to win the gold in the event.

The overall weekend was a complete success for the Maroon and White. Super rider Quimby won the Omnium award for being the single person who did the most consistent in all three events. He is favored to win the Omnium in the national races in November. He is also ranked second in the conference for cross-country for the '99 season.

UMass remains a solid second behind UVM in the Eastern Conference with only five riders traveling to Helen, Georgia for nationals. In the meantime, the cycling club will be hosting a cyclo-cross race near Orchard Hill on Nov. 6.

Though the van ride to and from Penn State was eight hours long, the team spirit never dwindled. Everyone was excited about the results and proud of the riders for working so hard.

"The bike team is almost like a brotherhood," Avery concluded. "The trip proved to be a bonding experience for everyone. We all get along so well and support each other. You don't find unity that strong with some other teams."

CATHERINE TURNER/COLLEGIAN

The UMass cycling team took home the Eastern Conference crown this past weekend at Penn State.

NBC stands by reporter

By Leonard Shapiro
Washington Post

NBC Sports reporter Jim Gray said this week that he is surprised at the torrent of criticism he's received after his Sunday night interview with Pete Rose before the start of the World Series. But, he said, "I'm not sorry for it, and I don't apologize for it."

NBC Sports and locally owned or affiliated stations nationwide received hundreds of calls after Gray's interview. He pressed baseball's all-time hits leader about being banned from the game and his not admitting to gambling on baseball, as found by a special report prepared by Washington attorney John Dowd commissioned by Major League Baseball.

In a telephone interview, Gray said: "I thought I was doing my job. I am surprised (by the reaction). Pete has let run because he was hanging it out. In class C, Hansen was the only racer in his class to jump the double and went on to win the gold in the event.

The overall weekend was a complete success for the Maroon and White. Super rider Quimby won the Omnium award for being the single person who did the most consistent in all three events. He is favored to win the Omnium in the national races in November. He is also ranked second in the conference for cross-country for the '99 season.

UMass remains a solid second behind UVM in the Eastern Conference with only five riders traveling to Helen, Georgia for nationals. In the meantime, the cycling club will be hosting a cyclo-cross race near Orchard Hill on Nov. 6.

Though the van ride to and from Penn State was eight hours long, the team spirit never dwindled. Everyone was excited about the results and proud of the riders for working so hard.

"The bike team is almost like a brotherhood," Avery concluded. "The trip proved to be a bonding experience for everyone. We all get along so well and support each other. You don't find unity that strong with some other teams."

there?' in the Dowd report, or 'How do I change my approach?' in getting the ban lifted. To me, this was an opportunity to find out if he'd had a change of heart because public approval doesn't seem to be helping him," Gray said. "The issues raised are the issues he's raised. My only point was that he's gone this route for 10 years so what will you do now, because this hasn't been effective. I fail to see how it's unfair in any way, shape or form."

Gray said he'd received "total support" from NBC executives. But many viewers called NBC stations nationwide to complain. In Cincinnati, Rose's home town and where he was a longtime member of the Reds, WLWT-TV got hundreds of calls and e-mails after the interview. When the game ended, portions of the interview were rebroadcast, prompting more angry calls.

"A lot of people were flooding the newsroom with calls," said Reban Matthews, the station's president and general manager.

"They're saying that (Rose) was mistreated in the interview process. Most of them agree it may be difficult to make Pete Rose look like a sympathetic character, but Jim Gray managed to do it."

Matthews said some callers thought Gray's initial inquiry "was fair game." He also indicated callers said they were upset by "the manner in which (Gray) pressed it when it was clear that he wasn't going to answer it, that maybe that wasn't the right time or the right place... and he should have moved on to talk about the event of the evening which was the reason Rose was there.

Mastercard International, sponsor of the All-Century Team, issued a statement asking Gray to apologize after the company received thousands of calls and e-mails. Chris O'Neill, Mastercard vice president for global public relations, said fans complained about "the style and tone of the interview and the timing."

Fans mourn golfer Payne Stewart's death

By Bill Dwyre
Los Angeles Times

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. – This northeast Florida resort community that was spared the trauma of two huge hurricanes in recent weeks was visited by a different sort of tragedy Monday.

By mid-afternoon, some flags flew at half-mast and people in drugstores and supermarkets went about their business with grim faces. At the Sawgrass TPC Club golf course, players just finishing their rounds and hearing the news stood in small clusters in front of television sets in the pro shop. To one after another, club pro Billy Peterson delivered the news. He spoke in hushed tones, head down.

Payne Stewart, the reigning U.S. Open champion, the man pictured on the famous champions' wall just a few feet away at the entrance to the pro shop, pictured with his fist clenched in victory celebration, was dead. He had died in a bizarre plane incident, only hours ago, and only three days before he was to play in the Tour Championship in Houston.

Turn to PAYNE , page 9

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CXI Thursday, October 28, 1999

UMPD keeps order through restraint

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Jean Hosmer, 45, of Pelham was shot and killed in Northampton Monday after being granted an extension to a restraining order that she had against former husband William Bernotas, 46. According to the Northampton Police Department, Bernotas, of Sunderland, shot Hosmer later that same day.

Hosmer died at 11:53 a.m. Bernotas, after turning the gun on himself, was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital before being transferred to Baystate Medical Center in critical condition. He has been arrested and charged with murder.

James Cahill, 24, of Stoneham, who had previously been arrested after an altercation with his girlfriend, was arrested again on Sunday after violating a restraining order.

"We got a call at 5 a.m. Sunday morning that the victim was receiving phone calls that she believed were coming from Cahill," John Luippold, the Chief of the University of Massachusetts Police Department, said. "An officer determined Cahill's location, and he was arrested on Lincoln Ave. for violation of an abuse prevention order."

According to Luippold, the arrest means that Cahill faces possible jail time, in addition to the possibility of being permanently removed from UMass.

The commonality between the two very recent events is the restraining order. According to Deputy Chief of Police Barbara O'Connor, some individuals approach the UPMD bringing restraining orders against another individual.

"When that restraining order is brought into our department, we assign that order a number, which then requires that we put information into department computers," O'Connor said. "Therefore, if officers are dispatched to a certain location, they'd know that there was a restraining order on the house or the workplace."

Additionally, according to O'Connor, if officers respond to a scene of domestic violence, officers will advise the victim his or her rights under the law.

"Individuals are given the information about their rights to a restraining order under the law, and they then sign those copies to ensure that victims have been advised of those rights," O'Connor said.

O'Connor said that if a victim were to want a restraining order to be put in place, a judge will be contacted and that if the situation warrants, a restraining order will be issued. "We can page an on-call judge, who will receive a fax of the information and possibly speak to the victim, and then restraining orders can be issued immediately," O'Connor said. The defendant will then be served with the order as soon as is possible." O'Connor's officers will also stay with a victim until the victim feels safe or can be transported to a safe location.

This situation applies to both students and on-campus employees.

"Restraining orders are statewide, and so, if we respond to a call, we can establish if there is a restraining order out there," O'Connor said, adding that, "we will find out about a restraining order if it is a 'stayaway' at work, which prevents the individual from coming to the workplace of the victim."

O'Conner explained further that if an individual went home for the weekend and got a restraining order against someone from home, that information would come to the UPMD from local jjudges.

O'Connor said currently the UMPD oversees 27 restraining orders, but added that there could be easily more at UMass that the UMPD just hasn't heard about. She also said that anyone who violates a restraining order faces an immediate arrest.

SGA votes pro-student On ATMs and parking

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

The Student Senate, after some debate, successfully passed all of the motions on the agenda last night. Two of the main motions discussed included the parking problem in Orchard Hill/Central Residential Areas and the issue of placing an ATM in the Southwest Residential Area.

The goal of the motion on parking was to temporary alleviate the problems caused by a lack of available spaces in the purple parking lot located behind Orchard Hill and Central Residential Areas. The motion would therefore change metered spots in front of Brett and Wheeler Residential Areas and next to Franklin Dining Commons to a purple lot for the remainder of the fall semester. Ten spaces will remain for commuters and employees.

After concerns were voiced, it was amended that two of those ten spaces will be designated for commuter spaces. One senator, representing commuters on campus, said that though he didn't disagree that purple parking in the area was a problem, the commuters utilized those spaces and could not afford to waste time walking across campus to get to the Franklin Dining Commons or other services in the area.

Others were also concerned with how changing the meter spaces would affect people wanting to go to the New Africa House or other programs.

The motion resolves to make this transition a top priority for parking services, who will review the idea. The area will then be able to be changed as soon as possible.

A second pro-student motion was passed last night involving the 5,000 plus students who live in the Southwest Residential Area. The motion requests that the University's President's Office look into installing an ATM in the area.

The idea of an ATM in the Southwest Residential Area has been a topic for years, and was most recently brought up as an issue in the spring presidential campaigns. The exact location of the ATM has yet to be decided, although a group of senators recently walked around the area and decided on possible places.

In addition, a motion concerning the Wellman Document was passed. The Wellman Document states that the University of Massachusetts Administration respect the powers granted to the Student Government Association. President Jeff Howe expressed his concern that administrators have not always taken the SGA seriously and that this motion is a way to re-affirm that policies passed by the Student Senate body will be implemented by administration.

As special speakers at the meeting, John Luippold, UMass Police Chief and Charlie Scherpa, Amherst Deputy Chief, spoke to the Senate, specifically concerned with answering any of the senators' questions. The issue of pedestrian safety was addressed by Luippold. He said actions were being taken to increase safety, including painting the crosswalks and adding new signs on Massachusetts Avenue and Commonwealth Avenue. Luippold said the best solution is continued conversation and awareness.

PAM FITZPATRICK/ COLLEGIAN

Balancing act

Vito Colonna, a senior Civil Engineering major, makes his best attempts to be the next karate kid by practicing on the fire hydrant.

Hosmer remembered by coworkers as integral

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Wesley Blixt misses his co-worker, an integral part of his staff, but he mostly misses Jean Hosmer.

"She had a lot of real interests in her life," Blixt, the University of Massachusetts Extension Editor, said. "She had a lot of passions."

According to police, Hosmer, 45, died Monday after being shot by her former husband, William Bernotas, outside of the Hampshire Probate and Family Court. She had filed for, and had been granted an extension to a restraining order against Bernotas, who worked in UMass' Office of Information Technologies.

"This is a very slow, a very intimate office," Blixt said. "Everyone works closely together, and she was at the center of our group."

Blixt said that he'd always been impressed with Hosmer.

"We knew her through our interactions; and that she's gone leaves a huge hole in our office," Blixt said.

The UMass Extension office attended a memorial service in Northampton last night that remembered Hosmer. Almost the entire office went, Blixt said.

Hosmer, a graphics designer for the UMass Extension Office, created everything from publications to stationary to signs, Blixt said. But the Extensions Editor knew her on more than a business level.

"We really connected on outdoor activities and adventure," Blixt said. "She liked hiking and bicycling and mountaineering. We used to talk a lot about those sorts of things."

Blixt remembered when Hosmer had taken her son Kevin, 11, to see Tom Pollard, who'd found George Mallory's body on Mt. Everest.

"She was really interested in high altitude mountaineering," Blixt said.

For Blixt and other members of the Extension staff, stories were one of the best ways to remember Hosmer.

"People are telling funny stories remembering her," Blixt said. "We're telling the kinds of stories that come out of the intimate group that we were and still are. We're telling stories that didn't seem as funny at the time as they do now."

Blixt said the staff relies on those sorts of things.

"She was a great musician, and sometimes she would get together with other people to play some folk music or whatever other type of music was being played," Blixt said.

SGA empowers dorms

House Councils to be defined

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

As the half-way point of the semester quickly passes, House Councils on campus are still struggling to establish themselves. Elections, a task usually done at the end of the spring semester, have just recently been completed for some buildings on campus, specifically in the Southwest Residential Area. This delay has negatively impacted how quickly the councils could start running effectively. Although, according to Eleanor Gerome, attorney general, the elections are only one of the many factors contributing to why House Councils have yet to fully affirm their presence on campus.

For the most part, the House Councils are unclear of where their jurisdictions fall. "It isn't the fault of the House Councils, it's the Student Government Association's (SGA) responsibility to explain what the groups can and can not do," Gerome said. "They (House councils) are not trying things because they don't know what they are able to."

To rectify this lack of knowledge, Gerome is currently working to rewrite Title V of the SGA Constitution in order to define what role House Councils play on campus.

"The new Title V will define the role, responsibility and privileges of the House Councils and Area Governments," Gerome said. It is something that will affect everyone on campus, including the commuter government." From her past experiences involving the issue, Gerome believes that House Councils have not felt as important as they should to the SGA and that needs to change.

"They were completely ignored in the past, although it's slowly getting better," Gerome said.

Members of House Councils from varying areas on campus have mixed comments on whether they feel that they have been made aware of their responsibilities. Jaime Moore, vice president of Webster House Council said she felt that though she attended a training session held by the SGA, she still isn't confident on what the group should be doing.

"We don't know what we're doing or how to do it," Moore said.

She also said that one of the main problems she sees is that students don't take the House Council seriously.

"They don't believe we can do anything, although right now we as a group are confident. We feel we could do whatever we want if we raise enough money," Moore said. Darren Smith, president of Gorman House Council, agrees that student attendance and support for the council could be stronger, but that interest is increasing.

On the other hand, he said the council's main responsibilities are clear. They include raising money, facilitating programs and addressing the needs of students. "We can address main issues, it will take effort and time, but we can make changes, nothing is keeping us back," Smith said.

He said the Gorman House Council is looking this semester to bring the weight room back to their basement, and as a long-term project, to have a party on the second floor lounge that would include having a DJ.

Gerome hopes that the title will help to guide all House Councils to expand their role and capabilities.

"We are working to empower them as government bodies within SGA, as a form of unity," Gerome said. "It is more to help them understand what they can do, then to stop them from doing things."

Investigators pull portion of jet wreckage from South Dakota crash site

By William Claiborne
Washington Post

MINA, S.D. – Federal safety investigators yesterday removed from a deep crater about a fourth of the wreckage of the executive jet that crashed here Monday after a 1,400-mile flight on autopilot with all six people aboard, including champion golfer Payne Stewart, apparently already dead from oxygen deprivation.

Until now, National Transportation Safety Board workers had confined their search to the perimeter of the impact area, a cow pasture about 15 miles west of Aberdeen in northeastern South Dakota. They had recovered some human remains and parts of the twin-engine Learjet 35 that were spread 150 feet around the crash site in knee-high grass.

Before returning to Washington Wednesday morning, NTSB vice chairman Robert T. Francis said that because the Learjet was in a vertical dive when it burrowed into wet ground at a high speed, there will be "some slow going" because the wreckage is so compacted and commingled with mud.

"It's going to be a challenge, with the wreckage and sorting out what's there," Francis said. It will take several days to remove what is left of the aircraft to a hangar at the Aberdeen airport for closer examination, he said. And it could take months more to pinpoint a cause of the accident, which he said he thought was "unique in the history of aviation."

Robert Benzon, NTSB investigator in charge, said at an afternoon news briefing that searchers were close to finding a voice recorder in the plane's nose cone that, while not expected to yield any voice data, may have recorded "ambient noises" in the cockpit just before the crash and possibly even frequency sounds that would give clues to the engines' operating status.

"We're very anxious to listen to [the recorder]," Benzon said. Earlier, officials had said there would be no recorded voices of the pilots because the device operates on a 30-minute loop and would have wiped the tape clean after the occupants of the plane were presumed to have died of oxygen deprivation.

He said some parts of the aircraft's door have been removed from the scene, but there has been no indication yet whether the wreckage yielded any sign of damaged seals, which could have caused a loss of cabin pressure. Benzon said several oxygen masks were found, but that it was impossible to tell whether they had deployed before the crash. He said that some personal effects, including a golf bag, were also recovered. Benzon said investigators had determined that a modulator valve that bleeds air from the engines to the cabin pressurization system was changed two days before the crash.

He said it was not related to an outflow pressure valve that the Learjet's owner has said was installed at the direction of the Federal Aviation Administration. Benzon said the modulator valve's only interest is that it was a "maintenance anomaly that happened to be repaired just before" the accident.

Although one of the Air force pilots observed that the Learjet's inside windows had frosted over from the minus-70 degree temperature in the cabin, Francis said that a videotape taken through the windscreen "head-up" display of one of the military aircraft may not be helpful. "The quality is probably not going to be good enough to help us," he said.

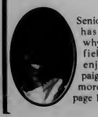
EXTENDED FORE-CAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 56 LOW: 34	HIGH: 65 LOW: 32	HIGH: 57 LOW: 37

A Different Side of Seuss

What do the Cat in the Hat and Adolf Hitler have in common? Find out inside.

PAGE 2



What's your favorite Scary Movie?

The Blair Witch Project reminded us of how horror films should be made. With that in mind and Halloween looming only two days away, this week's Arts cover takes a look at "When Movies Were Scary."

PAGE 5

Hot Wheels

Senior Chrissy Millbauer has been a big reason why the Massachusetts field hockey team is enjoying a solid campaign this year. To learn more about her, turn to page 16.

PAGE 16

Arts & Living 5
Comics 15
Crossword 15
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 11

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Professor discusses Dr. Seuss's politics

By Andrea M. Peers
Collegian Staff

Highlighting the American cultural icon Dr. Seuss, history professor Richard H. Minear lectured yesterday. Minear's talk, the fourth annual History Faculty Lecture, focused on his new book, Dr. Seuss Goes to War. Minear's speech was accompanied by a show comprised of 50 slides, in order to view Seuss's cartoons throughout the social and cultural change of American history.

At the start of World War II, Seuss began his political cartoons with his magazine, the New York Daily Newspaper, PM. He remained there from 1940-1948. PM was a paper that ran only on weekdays, with a special Sunday edition that carried a second section, now known as the present magazine, Parade. The paper's circulation ran at around 150,000, and was published throughout the war. PM and Seuss published controversial articles, cartoons and editorials, without any advertising in the paper, for the price of five cents an issue. The significance of these unseen cartoons is the richness they bring back from the era of Seuss, and the exploration of U.S. attitudes towards war and society in the early 1940's, according to Minear.

Seuss drew his very first political cartoon on Dec. 8, 1941, just after Pearl Harbor. His ideas pushed toward U.S. involvement in the war with Europe and his depictions of an Eagle (Uncle Sam) looking in the mirror, reflected the worm-out look he was suggesting Americans had at this time in history. As Minear suggested in his speech, Seuss was "battling against folks he called isolationists." Seuss and his newspaper wanted less talk and more action.

Another cartoon that pushed Americans into the war was Seuss's depiction of Hitler and Germany. The phrase that heads one of his drawings said, "I feel strong enough to punch Mister Hitler right in the snoot." Another cartoon also suggested similar ideas about Germany and Hitler's evil. A simple bedtime story cartoon of red riding hood turns into a political illustration, stating: "And the wolf chewed up the children and spit out their bones. But those were Foreign Children and it really didn't matter." The book was titled Adolf the Wolf. Hitler was even shown wrapping Christmas gifts with cards that said: "race hatred – my annual gift to civilization."

"If it hadn't been for Hitler, Dr. Seuss might have never done a political cartoon," Minear said.

Many of Seuss's cartoons were a direct line to the emotions and history in America. His cartoons looked at everything from Hitler, to Anti-Semites, to Japanese Americans. When Charles Lindbergh, the first pilot and major spokesperson for America, made a speech on his view of certain groups in the country, he was an immediate target for political cartoons. His views of Germany and Jews became the center of Seuss's drawings, depicting Lindbergh as an ostrich with his head in the sand.

"He attacked and discredited Lindbergh. His persecution of Jews was a major thrust of PM and Seuss against their attack on Hitler," Minear said.

Other topics that reflected American culture were stereotypes of blacks, and racial prejudice. Cartoons show black labor being discredited during the war industry, often forcing them to find labor elsewhere. The point of his drawings was to show citizens to hold loose racial prejudices. This theme also carries into his depiction of Japanese Americans, with their "cookie-cutter" faces. Cartoons would focus on issues including the Japanese internment camps in California, American embargo shipments, and the bond between Germany and Japan. In 1941, Mt. Rushmore was completed; Seuss altered the presidents' heads, adding in Hitler's and a Japanese stereotype figure as the center of his depiction of the monument.

All of these cartoons were used to poke fun at the social structure of the United States during this era. According to Minear, Seuss's cartoons aim at the power of the white male worker, and exclude women and people of color in his depictions, running relevant to the history of America. Seuss poked fun at the political and social demeanor of America, and painted a picture of the attitudes of the 1940's.

"It demonstrates the genius of Dr. Seuss and the chapter that most of us did not know about him," Minear said.

PAM FITZPATRICK/ COLLEGIAN

Richard H. Minear listens to a question after his lecture on Suess.

PAM FITZPATRICK/ COLLEGIAN

A days work completed

Political Science major Gillian Econopouly takes a nap while on her return home from classes.

Abortion may reach top court?

By Joan Biskupic
Washington Post

A federal appeals court in Chicago Tuesday upheld bans on late-term abortions in Wisconsin and Illinois, opening the way for a confrontation at the Supreme Court over the constitutionality of a controversial but prolifcraing type of abortion law. The 5 to 4 ruling contrasts with a decision last month by another federal appeals court that invalidated similar laws in three other states.

If the contrasting rulings reach the Supreme Court, it would mark the first time in seven years that the nation's highest court addressed a woman's right to end a pregnancy. Given how narrowly divided the justices are likely to be on the subject and the enduring emotional furor that surrounds the abortion debate, Tuesday's decision is likely to have great repercussions, including in the 2000 elections.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the 7th Circuit concluded Tuesday that laws in Wisconsin and Illinois are constitutional, but it temporarily suspended their enforcement until lower courts could determine whether the ban on "partial birth" abortion might unfairly restrict other abortion procedures protected by prior Supreme Court decisions.

"We concluded that both laws can be applied in a constitutional manner," said Judge Frank Easterbrook, writing for the majority. He said lower courts should review individual situations to ensure that women are not being denied constitutionally protected abortions. He said the laws do not violate a woman's right of privacy, nor are they an undue burden on a woman deciding whether to end a pregnancy.

"If the Supreme Court adopts the Easterbrook majority opinion, it's the death knell for Roe v. Wade," said Janet Benshoof, president of the New York-based Center for Reproductive Law and Policy. "This ruling disregards a woman's health, a doctor's practice and the Constitution." She asserted that the 7th Circuit specifically breached Supreme Court decisions by putting a fetus's health above a woman's at every stage of pregnancy.

The Roe vs. Wade decision set off a national debate that has touched nearly every part of American life and hasn't waned over the decades. Just seven years ago, amid continuing political and social fallout, the Supreme Court affirmed by a 5 to 4 vote that a woman has a constitutional right to end a pregnancy.

friday marks the end of the world wide web as you know it.

On Friday, October 29, pixelon.com introduces the world's first full-screen, full-motion, tv-quality internet broadcast network.

Unveiling three years of revolutionary research, pixelon.com will provide on-demand entertainment, sports and news programming unlike any in Internet history. iBash'99 – the single largest entertainment event ever held in Las Vegas – is our way of introducing pixelon.com to the world.

FRIDAY! iBash '99! Live concert Webcast from the MGM Grand in Las Vegas...

A Reunion of Rock Legends – The Who

KISS • The Offspring • The Brian Setzer Orchestra • Tony Bennett

The Hottest Divas of Country – The Dixie Chicks, Faith Hill, LeAnn Rimes and Chely Wright

View iBash '99 for free at pixelon.com beginning Friday, October 29 at 2 p.m. PST. You can even direct the cameras yourself! Log on now for more information and a concert schedule.

The University of Massachusetts'
Something Every Friday
presents
en cross

Vocalist Ellen Cross
Friday, October 29th in the Bluewall at 8pm

Followed by a showing of:

THE BLAIR WITCH PROJECT

In the C.C.A. at 10:30 pm... Be there!

Visit us on the Web: http://www.umass.edu/events/calendar.htm
This program is made possible by a grant from the Auxiliary Services Department and the vice-chancellor for Student Affairs.

PAM FITZPATRICK/ COLLEGIAN

A fence for a break

Senior communications major John Trudeau takes a break on the fence as he waits for a friend.

Ordinary subjects, extraordinary study

By Stephanie Simon
Los Angeles Times

RICHARDTON, N.D. – For this, they pay him? Tom Fricke, long blond hair clipped back in a ponytail, is hanging out. He's hanging out with farmers, with a high school principal, with a manufacturing executive. He orders the 13-ounce prime rib when they do. He matches them, scoop for scoop, at the ice cream counter. He zips about town in his mini-sport-utility vehicle, gabbing with the locals every chance he gets. And yes- although even his parents don't believe it- all this hanging out is work.

Fricke, a professor at the University of Michigan, is on the vanguard of a new trend in academia: an intense, anthropological study of us.

That is, of average, hard-working, middle-class Americans. Folks who wake up, grumbling, to an alarm clock each morning, who juggle job and family, who try to give their kids the best. "We're interested in the extraordinariness of everyday life," said Charles Darrah, an anthropologist at California State University at San Jose.

Darrah focuses on Silicon Valley professionals. Fricke, on rural North Dakotans. Other anthropologists are examining suburbanites in Philadelphia, blacks in New York and stressed-out families in Atlanta. Using what they call an "ethnographic" approach- which basically means shadowing their subjects at home, at work and at play- they watch our humdrum lives up close in an effort to figure out how we're all coping. "It's not exactly that we're voyeurs," Fricke starts to say. Then he thinks about it and backtracks. "If we are voyeurs," he amends, sounding pretty sure the description fits, "at least we have degrees." He chuckles. "We're credentialed voyeurs."

"We are in the midst of profound changes in society, but people are not aware of them because we're so caught up in living them," said Kathleen Christensen, a Sloan Foundation program director. "Just as a fish doesn't understand the water, I don't know that we fully understand what day-to-day life is like." By tailing actual people through typical days, anthropologists - who have traditionally focused on exotic foreign cultures- hope to help us understand ourselves.

So far, Fricke has discovered that this exodus of the young has forced the parents they leave behind to adjust their definition of family. North Dakotans have typically viewed family as an overflowing clan of extended relatives who all got together every Sunday for supper. Now, those left in Richardton are forced to adjust to their kids' priorities, which involve moving out of state for work or for school. It's been a painful wrench into the realities of modern, middle-class life, where jobs often take top billing over family.

"There's tension and friction there," Fricke says.

Fricke hopes, after another year of study here, to turn his insights into a book on the peculiar stresses of life in a fading rural community. The Silicon Valley anthropologists, meanwhile, are working on a text of their own, about a very different culture- one where parents network, cell phones at the ready, even as they pace the sidelines of their children's soccer games.

Disparate themes, to be sure, but with a common goal: exposing the tensions and trade-offs in everyday life that everyone seems aware of, if only in a vague, unsettling sense.

"The feeling that there is a problem is pervasive. It's absolutely pervasive," said Bradd Shores, an anthropologist studying family rituals in Atlanta.

Sugar linked to reduced stress

By Jamie Talan
Newsday

Scientists may have discovered why people eat more sugar when they are stressed. Sugar has a direct effect on lowering stress hormones, according to studies now under way in animals. Elizabeth Bell, a neuroscientist at the University of California, San Francisco, presented her findings at a recent symposium sponsored by the National Alliance for Research on Schizophrenia and Depression, a national organization based in Great Neck, N.Y., that has raised $82.7 million to fund research. "While people are in the throes of a stressful situation, sugar may help," said Bell. "But once the stress is over, there may be obesity to contend with."

Bell is interested in understanding the relationship between sugar and stress and unraveling the brain mechanisms that control weight and appetite. It is thought that a pathway called the hypothalamo-pituitary-adrenal axis is the main regulator of the body's stress response. Stress hormones called corticosteroids are produced by the adrenal gland that sits atop the kidneys. The hormones makes their way north to the pituitary gland, at the base of the brain, and on to the hypothalamus, a structure deep in the brain that regulates a number of processes, including eating, sleeping and reproductive behavior.

Bell decided to disrupt this system in animals, provoke them with stress and have sugar on hand to see what happens. The question was: Do animals increase their eating behavior in response to stress- in this case a pool of cold water? There were four groups of animals: Rats were given either sugar or water when exposed to warm water (non-stressful) or cold water (stressful). In each of these situations, sugar and food intake, body weight, fat weight and hormones were measured.

According to Bell, there was no difference in the caloric intake between the four groups of rats. But the animals in warm water used only one-third the amount of sugar, compared to the stressed group. As expected, those who consumed more sugar increased their body weight. She also found that the stressed animals had elevated levels of corticosteroids. But the most interesting piece of the story is this: Animals in the cold who consumed more sugar cut their corticosteroid levels in half. Animals consuming sugar were also able to sustain their body temperature in the cold water, compared with the animals drinking only water.

"Sugar helps animals withstand stress better," Bell told her colleagues. If sugar acts to reduce stress- as her study shows, how is it working to lower stress hormones that circulate through the brain and body? Or might it be something about stress hormones themselves that motivate a desire for sweets?

In the next series of experiments, Bell will control the level of corticosteroids and then give the stressed animals a choice between water or sugar. "Stress hormones can be cut in half," Bell added. "But it's not without its price."

Call, call, call

Freshman David Bonorni takes advantage of a call box on campus.

FREE DELIVERY

PIZZA
PAPA JOHN'S
331 Russell Street, Hadley
5 8 6 - 7 2 7 2

OPEN 'TIL 3AM FRIDAY & SATURDAY

PAPA JOHN'S

DON'T FORGET Our Hot Bread Sticks & Mouth-Watering Cheese Sticks

is now accepting OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan

SPECIAL
THURS-SUN OCT.31ST
LARGE CHEESE PIZZA
$6.99

Sunday - Thursday 11am - 2am
Friday & Saturday 11am - 3am

Accepting: VISA MasterCard

1 LARGE 1 TOPPING $7.99
2 LARGE 1 TOPPING $13.99
3 LARGE 1 TOPPING $19.99

•Not Valid with any other offer
•Valid only at participatin locations
• Customer pays all applicable sales tax
•Additional toppings extra

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

This is Jeopardy

Dear Diary: Each and every day I wander through life. I get up, go to class, eat some pudding, hang out, do some work, drink some Berkshire Brewing company, look at Playboy and go to bed. My days are fine. Some prove to be outstanding, and others make me want to sleep for a week. During these days, I am unable to understand what is going on in the world around me. When I'm sitting by the pond enjoying my lackadaisical day, I can't fathom what is going on in the real world. Most people out there are working eight straight hours. Sometimes I'm on campus for eight hours, but I ain't doing serious stuff the whole time. I don't understand anything about that foreign land which surrounds my little, isolated haven. I don't understand resumes, how to get a job, Medicare, social security or anything that the government does. I am so confused about everything that my head is spinning.

Dan Viens

I wrote the above entry exactly one week ago. Since then everything has changed. I did some searching on the Internet. The results of my search put my mind at ease. I was just surfing the web between classes when I stumbled upon one of the greatest discoveries of my life. I was doing a search on the recent film Double Jeopardy. I was hoping to find some sweet pictures of Ashley Judd. When the results of my search came up there were two categories of sights. The first was about the movie and the second said, "Jeopardy: Secret Government Project." The sight said that anyone who was not part of the United States government would be prosecuted for entry. At first I was intimidated, but then I figured since I was in the library there was no way they could track down who I was. I decided to enter.

Once I entered, I was astonished at the document that stood in front of me. The entire web site was a description of the secret government project that is now utilizing the game show Jeopardy as a mind control device for the population of the United States. For a while, Jeopardy was a privately owned enterprise. Then the U.S. government realized that the show could be a very powerful tool. The government took Jeopardy and it hasn't been the same since. This is a perfect example of the government control and conspiracy, which X-Files freaks are always worried about.

In 1990 when the government took control of one of America's most beloved game shows, it felt that the morale and overall attitude of its citizens was in a constant state of flux. They believed that this constant state of flux could be detrimental to society. At the time our country was in the midst of its worst economic downturn since the Great Depression. As a result of this recession, which George Bush failed to acknowledge, many Americans were left out of work and down in the dumps. The percentage of happy people dropped to a 25 year low. The government was completely baffled. It knew that there was nothing it could actually do to lift everyone's spirits. They could not stop the recession nor could they make everyone happy.

There were secret midnight meetings of the House of Representatives and the Senate. They came up with a few ideas. The first was to send birthday cards to each American citizen within one week of their birthdays. When they tried this, The U.S. Postal service was so overcome with the surplus of mail that 235 mailmen went on workplace massacres and 594 of them killed themselves. The second "solution" that our wonderful government came up with was to spray a euphoric drug throughout our country. Everyone except farmers loved it.

Most people loved it so much that they were committing indecent acts with other people affected by the drugs wherever they could find an empty space. As a result of this, AIDS and teen pregnancy rates went through the roof. As for the farmers, they hated the euphoric drug because it made all of their crops smell like perfume. Finally a state senator from Colorado came up with the idea to take control of Jeopardy. At first this drew a tremendous amount of laughter from the rest of our leaders, but after a while most everyone was convinced.

Here is how the government takeover of Jeopardy works and how it affects us. First, the government fired everyone who worked on the show except for Alex Trebek, the host, and Johnny Miller, the announcer. They figured that in order to get the American people out of the recession they had to get everyone into an optimistic state of mind. The easiest way to do this is to make people feel good about themselves. They used two different tactics to do this. The first was they increased the number of special Jeopardy episodes. By this I mean there were more celebrity, college, high school and even elementary school tournaments. Each of these had a slightly different effect on the typical American viewer. Because of the fact that the questions in these tournaments were easier, people felt good that they were answering many of them correctly. Also, when they beat the contestants in Celebrity Jeopardy, they become very confident because they felt that they were smarter than some of the most famous people in the world. When the tournaments for younger people were on, most of the audience didn't really have to pay attention because the questions are so damn easy. During this half hour, they could daydream about the good ole' days back in college or high school. This would usually lift their spirits and make them want to have as happy a life now as they did then.

Another tactic they used was to make the overall questions easier. The government figured that no one would think that the questions on normal Jeopardy were easy. After all, the contestants are supposed to be some of the smartest people around. If they made the questions easier, then people would get more answers correct. If people got more answers correct, then they would think that it would be possible for them to be a contestant on Jeopardy. If most of the American public thought that it was possible to be a contestant on the game show of their dreams, then the sky would be the limit and we would get out of the recession. Obviously these tactics worked because ratings for Jeopardy were higher than ever and we escaped our recession.

However, the government did not relinquish control over the show. Once we were out of the recession and our economy started to boom, the government became afraid that members of our society would take our good fortune for granted and become complacent. They decided to make the questions increasingly harder. Now, about every six months the questions become just a little more difficult. The end result of this has been that people are constantly driven to find the answers to the questions that they don't know. They are constantly driven to do better in life. This has resulted in the astounding rise in the stock market over the last five or so years.

The final thing that the government was worried about as far as the world according to Jeopardy goes was that many people would become over-confident and try to take over the world. In order to curb Jeopardy inspired world domination, they made a few strategic moves. The first was to insert a few fake questions every now and then which were impossible to know and impossible to figure out. This way no one would think that they were perfect or indomitable. Also they became very strict with the phrasings of contestants questions. If the contestant did not truly annunciate the "what is/ who is," then they would be penalized. The reason for this is that they want everyone to know that the United States is a place where rules must be followed and anarchy will not be accepted.

Yes, Jeopardy is responsible for these lucrative times in which we live. Government control of our society has begun to run rampant throughout society. They control what we watch, what we buy, where we go and how we act. The U.S. Government controls nearly every facet of our lives without us even knowing it. I'll probably mysteriously disappear after this column, but remember that our taxpayer dollars are funding the Jeopardy winnings, and just because you get the answer to Final Jeopardy doesn't mean you're smart. It means that your government wants something from you.

Dan Viens is a Collegian columnist.

All those catchy advertisements

So, what do you guys think of commercials these days? Personally, I think they suck. Well, come on... you have to admit that there are some pretty damn stupid ones out there.

... There is a beautiful landscape and a long, winding road alongside some beautiful mountains. There is a brand new car driving down the road with a happy family smiling and laughing inside the luxury vehicle, clearly enjoying a sunny Saturday afternoon...

And then what happens? You guessed it: a little sign comes up that says, "Metamucil: to make you regular again." What?! Am I the only person that thinks this is completely screwed up? Did I miss some subliminal message in the commercial? Did I do too many Quaaludes last night? I don't think so.

There are so many commercials out there that have nothing to do with the products they are advertising. Why? Oh, don't try to tell me that it's a marketing scheme to make people remember a product and then buy it, because that's a bunch of b.s. Sure, it makes you remember the stupid waste of airtime (I mean commercial); but it certainly won't make you go out and buy the goods it represents.

Anyway, I'm sick of it. And being the marketing genius that I am, I have come up with a few commercials of my own – some ads that will certainly grab your attention and just might get your ass off the couch and out to the stores!

My first ad is a bit crude, but I think it's funny, so deal with it. This one is dedicated to those nauseating Gap commercials. In this marketing masterpiece, those losers dressed in khakis and white T-shirts start singing "Mellow Yellow" and everything seems to be just fine and dandy when boom! One by one, the Gap kids are picked off by sniper rifles. That's right... heads are flying off and instead of "Mellow Yellow," they start singing, "Help!"

And at the end of this lovely commercial, the bottom of the TV screen reads the words "Structure was here." Now is that an ad for the home of the single-striped sweater or what?

Gary Mendese

The next one on my list of eye-catching advertisements goes out our friends at Old Navy and the pretentious lady with the oversized black specs. In this commercial, the Old Navy crew begins singing the "Old Navy, Old Navy, Old Navy performance fleece" song when suddenly, Austin Powers in a tie-dye Billabong shirt jumps out of the audience and attacks the freak with the glasses and begins to smash her in the face with a wooden baseball bat –over and over again until someone tries to stop him with no success. After he is done mauling her, he drops the bat, walks off the stage and says, "God, I hate that bitch!"

I have no idea what company this would represent, but it's a must-have-ad anyway. "It's the flashpoint of fashion"? Who is that hag kidding?

Anyway, let's get away from clothing stores now and move onto something better. The next ad was inspired by the absolute worst and most disgusting commercial that I have ever seen. In this ad, there are about 10 cheerleaders doing their thing: you know, jumping, flipping, cheering and the like. Everything seems to be normal and then all of a sudden, the words "Tampax was here" appears on the screen, nauseating every man that was unfortunate enough to witness it! I don't want to picture that or care to think about it! (Sorry, feminists) That's really nasty, you know?

So, in dedication to this lovely piece of marketing, I have come up with my own commercial. In this one, two couples are shagging in separate apartments; and I mean shagging hardcore... things are falling off the walls and everything. Well, at the end of the ordeal, couple #1 gets out of the bed, folds the sheets and blankets and goes about their day. But couple #2 gets out of bed, gathers up the sheets and pillowcases, squeamishly crumpling them into a ball, avoiding any contact with the soiled linen, and throws them down the laundry chute. The woman then takes a shower, scrubbing her body and washing her hair two or three times.

Then you see couple #1 again, this time walking down the street. The guy turns and faces the camera and gives that Mentos smile, giving two huge "thumbs up." Then at the bottom of the screen, we see "Trojan was here."

Oh, come on... don't act disgusted. It's a natural male bodily function and if we can advertise "that time of the month," certainly we can promote condoms.

My next advertisement pertains to a more local audience: mainly the UMass campus. In this commercial, you see Charles Manson, Ted Kazynski, Mumia, David Berkowitz and a bunch of other killers roaming the streets murdering and raping anyone they please. Also, you see the remaining few inmates in maximum-security prisons with leather reclining chairs and HBO, eating Filet Mignon. Then the great ad comes up on the screen... RAIL: we help you do the crime and forget about the time.

I know I've been complaining about some lousy advertisements, but there is one really nice one out there. You know the one I'm talking about: the 3-D Doritos one with the two guys and a woman in the laundry mat. The woman with robust jubblies (sorry, feminists, but damn) catches flying chips with her teeth, leaving the two men's jaws on the floor.

Well, I've got a similar idea for a commercial. In mine, two guys are in the laundry mat when a Parking Services lady comes in with her militant strut. She tries the Doritos catching bit, grossing out the Innocent men washing their clothes. Then, just like the woman in the real commercial, she catches the final chip sitting in a split on the floor. Yeah, baby, yeah!

The men begin to vomit profusely as Bertha leaves to go and ruin some more days with tickets and tows. Then the screen reads, "Dexatrim: because other people can see you, too."

OK, OK, so I'm not the nicest person in the world, but neither are you. If you laughed at least once at this column, then my mission has been accomplished. There are so many commercials out there that should be banned by the FCC; it's disgusting. At least have some relevance to your advertisement!

Ah, what do I know? I'm just a little guy that wears Gap jeans, Structure sweaters and eats Doritos. I'm not going to comment on Trojans... we'll save that for another column.

Gary Mendese is a Collegian columnist.

It's the flashpoint of fashion

I got the hint.

Standing next to my friend in a new skirt and sweater ensemble on Tuesday, I felt a little inadequate after watching her receive two compliments about her outfit. After her second appraisal in five minutes, I jokingly questioned why I didn't deserve the same compliments. We tried to reason that it was only because she was wearing nylons that she qualified as dressed up, but I knew better than that. I knew before I even asked that my lack of flair and color was the reason.

So maybe I have settled into the lazy person's wardrobe this semester. Yeah, that's right, I'm making the most of my running pants, long sleeve UMass t-shirts and Gamecock hooded sweatshirt. Got a problem with that? I should. The girls on the field hockey team I coach have asked me on a number of occasions, if I own any other clothing whatsoever. I attempt to make excuses about not being able to wash my clothes and they offer invite me to their homes for free laundry services.

It happens every year. The first few weeks the weather is nice and you make the effort to coordinate cute or at least decent outfits. For me, that period lasted all of three days this year. So sooner did I wake up one morning and forget about anything decent hanging in the closet, then I went straight for the drawers full of dirty shorts and old t-shirts. Coaching a high school team, it was much too easy to make the transition from class to practice to bed with just one change in between instead of two.

I don't want to alarm anyone who is struggling with the same syndrome. You might make it through this. But maybe I can provide some of my own examples as early warning signs for those in fear of falling into the same trap. Here's a rundown on some of my not-so-trendy fashions and staples for this semester.

Last Friday

Wake up at 9:36 a.m. just in time to make the 9:50 a.m. bus for my 10:10 a.m. What should I wear? I looked no further than the clothes already on me: blue running pants and a gray long-sleeve t-shirt over a white short sleeve.

Kathleen Ralls

Add to that a pair of blue and green sneakers. I have gathered enough common sense to understand that I am the only one who bought this style of Nikes because nobody else likes them, but that's OK with me. I'd like to think they are a character builder like that awful pink and black polka-dot dress with the white bib I wore for my fifth grade pictures. At least I am confident enough to admit that it was not from the Gap, rather the store that also carries dishwashers and tool sets, the almighty Sears.

A quick reminder. I wore this outfit all day long, even to my game and out to dinner. Hey, we're talking versatility here.

The Headband

Granted the picture of me here is absolutely stunning, but I'd like to think it's not my best look. Don't ask about the major crisis I endured when it cracked for no apparent reason. With uncontrollably thick and wavy locks, I can't quite resist the simplicity of sliding one into my hair, hoping that today will be the day it will become the missing ingredient to a fab outfit.

My purple fleece

This jacket and I go way back, all the way back to the night before Valentine's Day my freshman year. With no boy to share my riches with, I bought it to make myself feel better as my two friends shopped for their boy toys. I was worth every penny of it and I'd like to think I still am.

Last Saturday

Hung out all day in the same shirt combination with gray flannel pajamas. Did I mention that I have an all gray outfit that consists of gray sneakers complete with one sole flapping, gray and red wind pants, gray t-shirt and gray sweatshirt? My mother taught me the lessons of basic and classic before going out on a limb with say, some color.

The $4.99 running-striped jeans from the Gap

My dad asked me on Sunday what kind of mileage I was getting out of them, after only being home for four days since the semester started. Not a good sign. The only pants suitably long enough for my approval, these jeans will not be leaving my wardrobe any time soon. Granted the bottoms are spotted with mud because I haven't washed them since May, but they make any morning drizzle a little brighter. Anyway, $4.99? I dare you to beat that.

Yellow Slicker

Possibly the only thing my roommate and I have in common is a love for the yellow rain jacket. Heavy clouds or just a heavy dew? Break out the vinyl, baby. Plus, you don't have to feel obligated to share it with someone you are walking with like you might if you carried an umbrella. Overalls

So comfy yet so slack looking. Pockets full of dirty tissues, gum wrappers and possibly a couple pens – overalls were never this resourceful. Unfortunately, I just don't cut any kind of figure in these things no matter what I do. I resemble Huckleberry Finn more closely than I do a senior in college.

Soon to be making its way back into "the rotation": The blue and aqua headband

Replacing a need for the headband, this accessory not only works with the purple fleece, but it also works with gray and blue running pants. Not a coincidence, I might add.

After reviewing my exploits, maybe I am not ready for the catwalk anytime soon. But if it calls for rain, snow, a field hockey game or a contest for the ugliest sneakers, I'm your girl.

Kathleen Ralls is a Collegian columnist.

So much to say, so little time.

Write for Ed/Op.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagodin Jewish Affairs Editor

Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Dana Prymack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Britt Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor

Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Wenschel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor

Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Forteciac Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Ben Alamed Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

ARTS AND LIVING

Image

MOVIES THAT WILL REALLY MAKE YOU SCREAM

DAVID TROUPES • • • COLLEGIAN STAFF

I don't know about you, but I came home after seeing The Blair Witch Project with an intense desire to crawl into my parents' bed. The imagery of that movie took hold of my mind like a nightmare so vivid you'd swear it was real. Sixth Sense was another surprisingly spooky movie, with a more subtle, moody style; it was a textbook example of understatement and proper use of a twist ending. Seeing these movies left me with more than the habit of carrying around a crucifix and a baseball bat, however. I was left thinking, when was the last time I'd been scared like that? I honestly couldn't remember. It seemed as though modern filmmakers, for a time, had completely forgotten how to scare an audience.

For the culprit, I didn't have to look any further than Scream, the kingpin of the new slasher flicks. Now, don't get me wrong, I thought Scream was entertaining, intelligent, and witty. What it wasn't, however, was scary. Kevin Williamson, pop-culture guru and demi-god of the teenage entertainment industry, had fooled everyone, intentionally or otherwise, into thinking that his parody of a scary movie was the real thing, and its commercial success gave rise to a loathsome barrage of new slasher flicks. Why weren't any of these new movies frightening? For all of the following reasons, which should hereby be consulted before any new such movies are made:

Not knowing the identity of the killer is not scary. Scream 2 illustrates this point wonderfully, as it takes the two most inconsequential characters the movie has and turns them into the killers in a ludicrously contrived way. The ability to fool the audience is not the same as the ability to scare them. For an example of how knowing exactly who the psycho is can be excruciatingly scary, check out Misery.

Gore is not scary. It's gory. It's gross, and it can make you squirm, but the dependence of these movies on elaborate, gruesome death sequences cannot make up for the deficiencies in plot.

Teenage culture is not scary. Unless you're a parent, that is. Nothing ruins a

Turn to SCARY, page 10

SLASHER FLICKS–CLEVER, BUT NOT SCARY

DAVID TROUPES* • • COLLEGIAN STAFF

It's hard to find a good scary movie these days. Everywhere you look, teens are being chased by masked killers, aliens are invading our high schools, and not one moment of it gives you the creeps. Look no further, for below is a list of just some of the entertaining, well-made, and, most importantly, frightening movies you can rent at your local video shop.

The Exorcist: This is one of the all-time heavy-hitters of the horror genre, and the movie all of the modern slashers should be striving to become. Yes, there's blood; yes, the cast is picked off; but what sets this film apart from others like it is the depth of its characters. The kids in Scream couldn't get a 900 on the SATs if they pooled their efforts, and each one is a walking, talking stereotype with absolutely no personality and uniqueness. The Exorcist's characters, however, are well developed and provide the emotional backbone of the movie, letting the audience become invested in their survival, and thereby making the movie's horrific developments all the more gripping. This is a must-see for anyone looking to be scared.

The Haunting: Leave it to Hollywood to take a classic psychological horror film and make not one, but two disastrous remakes. My heart goes out to anyone who saw The Haunting remake this summer, but don't let that stop you from renting the original. The Haunting was made in 1963, filmed in black and white, and contains no special effects, no gore, no ghosts, and no monsters. You never see anything. And yet, to those willing to loose themselves in the characters' psychologies and place themselves in their shoes, this movie is deeply troubling. Its use of sound alone to set moods and instill fear is incredible.

Psycho: The movie that needs no introduction. Forget the pointless remake; the original has much more style and spookiness. The acting is subtle but effective, the black and white cinematography is much creepier than the modern equivalent, and the ending is a classically disturbing Hitchcockian twist. The idea of killing off the heroine halfway through the movie has lost some of the shock it had on its original audience, but the act is still unsettling.

Alien: This movie defines the creature-horror genre. Director Ridley Scott, who also directed sci-fi milestone Blade Runner, creates a hellish science fiction world of walking demons and claustrophobic chambers and tunnels. Every organically-shaped passageway exudes a terrifying suspense. The aliens themselves are the nightmarish products of Swiss surrealist artist H. R. Giger.

Halloween: If you're going to see a slasher movie, you might as well see the original, right? Halloween's insistence on reigning in the gore and concentrating on mood and atmosphere sets it apart from the sea of copycats which followed. This is the perfect movie to watch with a bunch of friends on a rainy night with the lights turned off.

Angel Heart: Just as Alien successfully crossed horror with science-fiction, so does this movie mix horror with a detective story. What begins as a simple missing persons/insurance scam descends slowly into a world of religious fervor and dark voodoo magic. Angel Heart's twist ending is immensely effective and disturbing; only after the movie ends does the terrifying reality of what you've just witnessed sink in, lingering long after you've walked away from the television.

I encourage all of you to rent one of these movies. Halloween is approaching, after all, and what better time is there to remind yourself of what it means to be truly scared?

BLOOD AND GUTS

MICHAEL DELANO • • • • • COLLEGIAN STAFF

"Where's the gore?!" That's what I was asking myself after sitting through both The Sixth Sense and The Blair Witch Project. "Where are the rotting zombies, the flesh-eating imps, and for god sakes where is the guy with the dead skin mask and the chainsaw?" There's nothing wrong with Sixth Sense or Blair Witch; I liked them both. But this new breed of "horror" movie is so serious and so tame, that it makes you long for that time, not too long ago, when real horror movies existed, that were funny AND gory. If you have had enough of crap like The Faculty or Idle Hands, which are really just glorified Tommy Hilfiger and movie soundtrack advertisements, head to your local video store this weekend (not Blockbuster). Rent some great horror movies where the people involved actually cared about their vision, and wanted to make good movies that horror fans could enjoy without worrying about being PC or offending Jack Valenti or Jerry Falwell with a little gore and nudity. So I have compiled a list of my favorite gore movies, which can serve as a beginners guide to horror movies, or gore fans can view all of the selections on my list as highly recommended rentals. And gore is only a small part of what makes these movies enjoyable. They all have certain qualities, whether it is humor or direction, which make them worthwhile. One final note: the gore in these movies is not sadistic, instead, it is so over-the-top that it is laughable. I don't like to maul people with drills in real life because I enjoy these movies, and I don't like watching the Faces Of Death crap because seeing violence done to real people is disgusting, not funny. So if you take these movies in the right spirit, as the filmmakers I assume intended them to be taken, you should have a great time.

1. Meet The Feebles, Bad Taste, and Dead Alive. These movies

Turn to GORE, page 9

DESIGN BY BRIDGET DOLEZSAR

The Five College Area's Source for Discovering the Weekly Happenings of New England and Beyond

THE SOURCE

Another Fine Product of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Every Thursday!

It's actually going to occur at UMass; this can't be true. In case you have been vacant from the campus the past week, nightlife makes a triumphant return to the campus in November when The Skybox, the second largest music club in Western Massachusetts, officially opens its doors. Showcasing emerging national and regional talent along with producing weekly dance nights, The Skybox should boost the campus social scene. Acts rumored to be coming this semester include a diverse lineup from Guster and Godsmack to the Dropkick Murphy's and Rane. For further information head to www.umass.edu/skybox.

There are just a few more days left to make a visit to Crazy Al and his Haunted Hayride. Located at the Long Hollow Bison Farm on Route 9 in Hadley, continuous rides begin at 7 p.m. and last for half an hour, taking you through the dark forest and Corn Field of Death providing for "a frightfully good time."

Tonight The Mitchells have a release party for their first full-length titled Contraption at Grandstands in Northampton. The all UMass alumni band lineup has Tizzy opening. If you're in the Halloween mood, don't miss the Rocky Horror Picture Show, a cult classic, showing in the Campus Center Auditorium.

If you're in the mood to attend one of the countless parties occurring this weekend up and down North Pleasant or in the apartments, just do yourself a favor and obey the local ordinances along with your own tolerance. The police are certain to be in full force this weekend.

A good place to warm up on Friday is Amherst College's Alumni Gym as it hosts The Pietasters, Spring Heeled Jack and the Pillers. Afterwards drive down to Freaky 2 in Hartford where the party goes on strong until the daylight hours. If you are looking to cool it, public skating is going strong at the Mullins Center from 9:30 to 11:20 p.m.

Butterfield kicks off their concert season on Saturday when Kay Jah Funk returns opening for Uncle Sammy. In past years the dormitory has hosted a wide array of indie, hardcore, and jam bands most recently including Strangefolk and Percy Hill. A great triple bill in Boston presents itself when locals Guster and the Push Stars team up with Jump Little Children at the Orpheum.

The Counting Crows touring for their most recent studio release spend time at the Orpheum with Adam Duritz's label's Gigolo Aunts.

New th. weekend in the theaters are House on Haunted Hill, Music of the Heart, Stop Making Sense and Returns With Honor.

Men's Basketball tips off in exhibition play on Wednesday at the M.

-Adam Martignetti

Thursday, Oct. 28

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
North of Center, 10 p.m., 21+
AVALON
Eitel plus Bil Naked, 7 p.m.
BAYSTATE
Broker plus Lo-fine, 21+
CALVIN THEATER
Bela Fleck & the Flecktones
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Eat Hands, 8 p.m.
Anne Weiss, 9 p.m.
Mokijam, 10 p.m.
GRANDSTANDS
The Michells plus Tizzy, 10 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Buttfield Band, 7 p.m.
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
Funkmaster Flex, 7:30 p.m.

Dance Clubs
HOT CLUB
Techno and Top 40 with DJ Bill
MARS NIGHTCLUB
Top 40, Hip-Hop, R&B with DJ's K.I.S and M.I.C., 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+

Performing Arts
TOTMAN 101 - UM
Ballroom Dance Club, 6:45 p.m.
ROOKE THEATER - MHC
Lysistrata, 8 p.m.
THEATER 14 – SC
How I Learned To Drive, 8 p.m.

Sports
BLUE WALL
WMUA's Sportsline, 5:30 p.m.

Additional On-Campus Events
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
Rocky Horror Picture Show, 10 p.m.

Friday, Oct. 29

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Ben Swift Band, 10 p.m., 21+
AMHERST COLLEGE ALUMNI GYM
The Pietasters, Spring Heeled Jack and the Pillers, 8 p.m.
BAYSTATE
Chandler Travis Philharmonic plus Bamboo Steamers, 21+
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Will Daily, 8 p.m.
Rik Ekstrom, 9 p.m.
Hummer, 10 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Little Charlie & the Nightcats, 7 p.m.
Ware River Club, 10 p.m.
PEARL STREET
Rustic Overtones plus Gran Torino, 8:30 p.m.
TOAD'S PLACE
They Might Be Giants, 9 p.m.

Raves
FREAKY 2
Featuring Bad Boy Bill and DJ Venom, West Indian Ballroom, 3340 Main Street, Hartford, CT, 9 p.m.- 8 a.m.

Dance Clubs
CLUB METRO
House with DJ Ranpage, 9 p.m.-2 a.m.
HOT CLUB
70's and 80's Hits with DJ Donnie
MARS NIGHTCLUB
Disco with DJ Michael Kane, 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+
PEARL STREET
Chemistry Friday with Groove Creator and Chris Carter, 10 p.m.
THE GROTTO
Dance with DJ Otis, 10 p.m.-2 a.m., 18+

Performing Arts
ROOKE THEATER - MHC
Lysistrata, 8 p.m.
THEATER 14 – SC
How I Learned To Drive, 8 p.m.
BOWKER AUDITORIUM
MotherSON, 8 p.m.

Karaoke
WORLD WAR II VETERANS ASSN.
9:30 p.m., 21+

Sports
TOTMAN FIELD
Women's Soccer vs Duquesbe, 3 p.m.

Additional On-Campus Events
METAWAMPEE LAWN
Feathered hot-air balloon rides, 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.
BLUEWALL
Something Every Friday with the music of Ellen Cross and movie The Blair Witch Project, 8 p.m.

Saturday, Oct. 30

Notices
Tickets go on sale for Phish at the Hartford Civic Center on Sunday, December 12th.

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Ed Vada & the Fabulous Heavyweights, 10 p.m., 21+
AVALON
Type O Negative, Puya, Nok, 7 p.m.
BAYSTATE
Drunk Stuntman, 21+
BUTTERFIELD
Uncle Sammy plus Kay Jah Funk
BLACK SHEEP CAFE
Plump, 8 p.m.
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Patty Giurleo, 6 p.m.
Dogwood Moon, 8 p.m.
Eric Walker Band, 10 p.m.
HOTEL WARREN
The King Bees, 9 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Mike Welch, 7 p.m.
Electric Blue & the Koznick Truth, 10 p.m.
ORPHEUM THEATRE
Guster, The Push Stars, Jump Little Children, 7:30 p.m.

Dance Clubs
CLUB METRO
All ages dance, 8 p.m.-1 a.m.
HOT CLUB
House, Dance and Top 40 with DJ Andy
MARS NIGHTCLUB
House and Techno with DJ Dave "The Wave," 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+
PEARL STREET
Merengue and salsa with DJ Oliveras, 10 p.m., 21+
THE GROTTO
Dance with DJ Steve, 10 p.m.-2 a.m., 21+

Comedy & Improv
CAMPUS CENTER
Mission Improvable, 8 p.m.

Performing Arts
ROOKE THEATER - MHC
Lysistrata, 2 & 8 p.m.
THEATER 14 – SC
How I Learned To Drive, 8 p.m.

Sports
MCGUIRK STADIUM
Football vs Rhode Island, 12:30 p.m.
CURRY HICKS CAGE
Volleyball vs Rhode Island, 7 p.m.

Sunday, Oct. 31

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Interplay Jazz Band, 9 p.m., 21+
BAYSTATE
Stash, 21+
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Ben Swift Band, 9 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Robyn Hitchcock, 7 p.m.
LUPO'S HEARTBREAK HOTEL
Dropkick Murphy's, Anti-Flag, Blood for Blood, Bombshell Rocks, 8 p.m.
MAINE STATE THEATER
"Weird Al" Yankovic, 7:30 p.m.
ORPHEUM THEATRE
Counting Crows, Gigolo Aunts, Joe 90, 7 p.m.

Dance Clubs
MARS NIGHTCLUB
Upscale Hip-Hop and R&B with DJ Kurupt, 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+

Sports
TOTMAN FIELD
Women's Soccer vs St. Bonaventure, 3 p.m.

Additional On-Campus Events
CAMPUS CENTER AUDIOTRIUM
Movie The Blair Witch Project, 8 p.m.

Monday, Nov. 1

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Amherst Jazz Orchestra, 8:30 p.m., 21+
AVALON
Iggy Pop, 9 p.m.
BAYSTATE
Copper's Tappen-Zee, King Phooey and Sucker Punch, 21+
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Open Stage, sign-up at 6:30 p.m., starts at 8 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Warren Zevon, 7 p.m.
PEARL STREET
Dan Bern plus Pamela Means, 7 p.m.

Tuesday, Nov. 2

Music
AVALON
Ben Harper & The Innocent Criminals plus Rahzel, 9 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Project / Object (featuring Ike Willis), 7 p.m.
ORPHEUM THEATRE
Meatloaf, 7:30 p.m.

Performing Arts
TOTMAN 101 - UM
Ballroom Dance Club, 6:45 p.m.

Sports
GARBER FIELD
Field Hockey vs Dartmouth, 7 p.m.

Wednesday, Nov. 3

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Michael Gregory & Friends, 10 p.m., 21+
AVALON
MxPx, Too Bad Eugene, No Motive and 22 Jacks, 7:30 p.m.
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Open Poetry, sign-up at 6:30 p.m., starts at 8 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Chris Williamson & Tret Fure, 7 p.m.
PEARL STREET
The Beatnuts plus Dead Pres, 8:30 p.m.

Dance Clubs
NORTHAMPTON CENTER FOR THE ARTS
Swing and salsa with DJ Jitterbug, lessons from 7-8:30 p.m., Open Dance 8:30-11:30 p.m.
THE GROTTO
DJ Dance Party, 10:30 p.m.-2 a.m., 18+

Sports
MULLINS CENTER
Men's Basketball vs California All-

Turn to THE SOURCE, page 7

The Source

continued from page 6

Stars (exhibition), 7 p.m.

Film

Call for latest movie times or go to excite.com and click on movie listings for zip code 01003 for desired date.

Academy of Music Theatre
274 Main Street, Northampton (584-8435)
South Park: Bigger, Longer & Uncut, Stop Making Sense, Three Kings

AMC Mountain Farms 4
Mountain Farms Mall - Route 9 Hadley (584-9153)
Random Hearts, The Sixth Sense, Three Kings, Three to Tango, Music of the Heart

Amherst Theatre
30 Amity Street, Amherst (253-5426)
200 Cigarettes

Greenfield Cinemas
Route 2, The Mohawk Trail, Greenfield (772-0298)
Bringing Out the Dead, Double Jeopardy, Random Hearts, The Story of Us, Three Kings, Three to Tango

Pleasant Street Theatre
27 Pleasant Street, Northampton (586-0955)
American Beauty, The Loss of Sexual Innocence, Return with Honor, eXistenZ

Showcase Cinemas
864 Riverdale Street, West Springfield (733-5131)
The Adventures of Elmo in Grouchland, American Beauty, Bats, The Best Man, Blues Streak, Bringing Out the Dead, Crazy in Alabama, Double Jeopardy, Drive Me Crazy, Fight Club, Random Hearts, The Sixth Sense, The Story of Us, Superstar, Three Kings, Three to Tango, House on Haunted Hill, Music of the Heart

Tower Theatres
19 College Street, South Hadley (533-3456)
Double Jeopardy, Random Hearts, The Story of Us

Outdoors & Trips

UMass Ski 'n' Board Club
434 Student Union (545-3457)
50th Annual Ski 'n' Board Sale (Student Union Ballroom), Nov. 18-20 Learn-to Ski/Board (Killington, VT), Dec. 12
Quebec Weekend, Dec. 3-5
Millennium Ski and Party Weekend (Quebec, Canada), Dec. 30 – Jan. 2 or Dec. 29 – Jan. 2
Winter Gateway Weekend (Quebec, Canada), Feb. 18-21
Escape to the Rockies (Location TBA), March 12-17
Mount Tremblant (Montreal, Canada), March 12-15
Jamaica, March 12-17

Outing Club
432C Student Union (545-3151)
Rock Climbing, Wednesday Oct. 27 (final trip of the season) meeting at 2:20 P.M. at the Student Union steps
Kayak Rolling, Every Friday at Curry Hicks Cage Pool
Costume Hike, Saturday Oct. 30
Mt. Toby Hike, Sunday Oct. 31

Pioneer Valley Sierra Club
586-5586
Quabbin Reservoir Hike led by Alexandra Dawson and will be approximately 5 miles, Oct. 30

Other Activities

If the previous events fail to catch your attention then consider disco bowling at Northampton Bowl; biking, rollerblading, or running the Rail Trail from Northampton to Sunderland; hiking, mountain-biking or rock-climbing one of the area mountains; visiting Puffer's Pond; shopping at the Hampshire or Holyoke Mall; hayride at the Bison Farm in Hadley; mini-golf on route 9; billiards in the UMass campus center, Mike's Billiards in Amherst, or Packard's in Northampton.

Volunteer

Blood Drive
Campus Center Concourse, UMass (1-800-462-2229). The American Red Cross will be holding blood drives during this month. Thursday October 28 from 10:50 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Xmas Bell Ringers Needed!
27 Brewster Court, Northampton (585-8729). Join in the spirit of giving by volunteer to be a bell ringer for the Salvation Army's kettle campaign during Nov. and Dec. Flexible hours, outdoor work, sites in Northampton, Amherst, Hadley and Easthampton. Last year the Salvation Army spent $185,926 in Hampshire County alone, helping 4,508 residents with emergency needs. Help raise money for this worthy cause.

Lectures & Discussions

None scheduled at this time.

Book Readings

Christain Parenti
Food For Thought Books, 106 North Pleasant, Amherst (253-5432). Christian Parenti teaches at the New College of California, in San Francisco. He has worked as a radio journalist in Central America, New York and California, and his writing has appeared in The Nation, The Progressive, In These Times, The Baffler, and the Christian Science Monitior. Friday, October 29 at 7 p.m.

Archer Mayor
All Souls Unitarian Universalist Church, 399 Main Street, Greenfield (773-8523). Archer Mayor, mystery writer, discussing his newest book, Occum's Razor. Friday, October 29 at 7:30 p.m.

Art Galleries
Paintings out of Poems
Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space, UMass (545-0792). The genesis of an investigation into traditional Japanese haiku and explores the interaction of poetry, painting, and calligraphic imagery. Mon-Thurs 10 a.m.- 5 p.m., Fri 10 a.m.-3 p.m., Sat-Sun 1-4 p.m. opens November 1.

Poiesis: The Language of Imahes
Augusta Savage Gallery, 101 New Africa House, UMass (545-5177). Books, paintings, and drawings by Leandro Soto, a Cuban artist and visiting professor at Mount Holyoke College. Mon-Tue 1-7 p.m., Wed-Fri 1-5 p.m. opens October 26.

I Want to Feel the Way You Do, All the Time
Hampden Gallery, Southwest Residential Area, UMass (545-0680). An installation contrasting nature and culture by Hirokazu Fukawa. Mon-Fri 3-7 p.m., Sun 2-5 p.m. through October 30.

Think Again
Hampden Film 7 Photo Gallery, Humpshire College (559-5447). An exhibit of print works by a collaborative team of two artists, S.A Bachman and David Attyah, who create agitprop art with a political twist. Mon-Thurs 9-12 a.m., Fri-Sun 1-6 p.m. through October 29

Libraries

Only regular hours listed, call for holidays.

Biological Sciences
214 Morrill Science Center, UMass (545-2674)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-9 p.m.
Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-9 p.m.

Forbes Library
20 West Street, Northampton (587-1011)
Monday 1-9 p.m.
Tuesday 9 a.m.-6 p.m.
Wednesday 9 a.m.-9 p.m.
Thursday 1-5 p.m.
Fri-Sat 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Coolidge Room: Mon-Wed 12-3 p.m.

Johnson Library Center
Hampshire College (559-5418)
Mon-Fri 8:30 a.m.-midnight
Sat-Sun 10 a.m.- midnight

Keefe Science
Amherst College (542-2076)
Mon-Thurs 8:30 a.m.-1 a.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m.-10 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Sunday noon-1 a.m.

Mount Holyoke College
MHC Main Library, 50 College Street, South Hadley (538-2225)
Mon-Fri 8 a.m.-midnight
Saturday 9 a.m.- midnight
Sunday 10 a.m.- midnight

Neilson
Smith College (585-2910)
Mon-Thurs 7:45 a.m.-midnight
Friday 7:45 a.m.-11 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-1 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Physical Sciences & Engineering
Lederle Lowrise, 2nd floor, UMass (545-1570)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-9 p.m.
Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-9 p.m.

Robert Frost
Amherst College (542-2519)
Mon-Thurs 8:30 a.m.-1 a.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m.-midnight
Saturday 9:30 a.m.-11 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-1 a.m.

Vincent Morgan Music
Amherst College (542-2387)
Mon-Thurs 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Friday 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday noon-5 p.m.
Sunday 2 p.m.-11 p.m.

W.E.B. DuBois
UMass Main Library (545-0150)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-midnight
Friday 8 a.m.-10 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.-10 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Upcoming Concerts

SAVE FERRIS
Nov. 4, Avalon
COUNTING CROWS, GIGOLO AUNTS
Nov. 6, Orpheum Theatre
MIGHTY PURPLE
Nov. 6, Iron Horse
MIRACLE ORCHESTRA
Nov. 6, Iron Horse
RAT DOG
Nov. 10, Worcester Palladium
PRIMUS, INCUBUS, BUCKETHEAD
Nov. 10, Avalon
MARK ERELLI
Nov. 11, Iron Horse
BUFFALO TOM
Nov. 11, Middle East
WILCO
Nov. 11, Avalon
LOSER KIDS TOUR W/ BLINK 182, SILVERCHAIR, FENIX TX
Nov. 12, Worcester Palladium
FOUNTAINS OF WAYNE
Nov. 12, Amherst College Frontroom
LETTERS TO CLEO
Nov. 12, Paradise Rock Club
MICHAEL GLABICKI (of Rusted Root)
Nov. 13, Pearl Street
THEY MIGHT BE GIANTS
Nov. 15, Amherst College Frontroom
CHRIS CORNELL
Nov. 15, Orpheum Theatre
PENNYWISE, STRUNG OUT, ALL
Nov. 15, Avalon
INSANE CLOWN POSSE
Nov. 15, The Webster
311
Nov. 15, Worcester Palladium
BOB DYLAN & PHIL LESH
Nov. 14, Worcester Centrum
GET UP KIDS, AT THE DRIVE-IN, ULTIMATE FAKEBOOK
Nov. 14, Amherst College Frontroom
LIVE
Nov. 18, Orpheum Theatre
VOICES ON THE VERGE: ROSE POLENZANI, ERIN MCKEOWN, JESS KLEIN AND BETH AMSEL
Nov. 18, Iron Horse
BOB DYLAN, PHIL LESH ? FRIENDS
Nov. 18, Mullins Center
FILTER, DRAIN STH
Nov. 20, Avalon
MEGADETH, STATIC-X, ALL
Nov. 21, Orpheum Theatre
MEDESKI, MARTIN & WOOD
Nov. 22, Calvin Theater
BUCKCHERRY
Nov. 24, The Webster
SING
Nov. 27, Orpheum Theatre
BIG BAD VOODOO DADDY, BLUE HAWAIIANS
Nov. 27, Avalon
THE THE
Nov. 30 & Dec. 1, Iron Horse
RAGE AGAINST THE MACHINE, GANG STARR
Nov. 30, Worcester Centrum
MOXY FRUVOUS
Dec. 3, Amherst College Frontroom
MELISSA FERRICK
Dec. 3, Iron Horse
BELIZBEHA
Dec. 4, Iron Horse
GODSMACK, REVEILLE, JIM ROSE CIRCUS
Dec. 4, The Webster
EDDIE FROM OHIO
Dec. 5, Iron Horse
B.B. KING
Dec. 5, Worcester Palladium
EDDIE FROM OHIO
Dec. 5, Iron Horse
B.B. KING
Dec. 7, Fine Arts Center
LUNA
Dec. 9, Pearl Street
YES
Dec. 11, Orpheum Theatre
BARENAKED LADIES
Dec. 12, Orpheum Theatre
PHISH
Dec. 12, Hartford Civic Center
PHISH
Dec. 13, Providence Civic Center

Venues

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
36 North Pleasant Street, Amherst (253-4400)
AVALON 15 Landsdowne Street, Boston (617-262-2424)
BAY STATE 41 Strong Avenue, Northampton (584-8515)
BILL'S BAR 5-5 Landsdowne Street, Boston (617-421-9676)
CALVIN THEATER 17 King Street, Northampton (584-0610)
CHAPIN AUDITORIUM Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley
CLUB 21 62 Turkey Hill Road, Belchertown (323-4117)
CLUB KAOS 1592 Main Street, Springfield (739-7900)
CLUB METRO 492 Pleasant Street, Northampton (582-9898)
FIRE & WATER CAFE 5 Old South Street, Northampton (586-8536)
IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL 20 Center Street, Northampton (584-0610)
JOHN M. GREENE HALL Smith College, Main Street, Northampton
MIDDLE EAST 472/480 Mass. Ave, Central Square, Cambridge (617-864-3278)
THE SKYBOX 1109 Campus Center, UMass (545-5216 or www.umass.edu/skybox)
THE SOLUTION 84-90 Worthington Street, Springfield (253-4400)

General Information
All events all ages unless otherwise noted. What do you think? Would you like to read one-line event previews, desire a format change, or post an event? Please call (413) 545-1361, fax (413) 545-1592 or email eventicalendar@excite.com.

Wanna be an Internet Star?

Enter the MassLive Off-Campus Cam Talent Search

One lucky off-campus apartment will be wired with the latest technology that will put you and your roommates on the Web 24/7.

To enter, go to www.masslive.com/offcampuscam and follow the instructions.

You could be the next star on the World Wide Web!

mass LIVE

www.masslive.com/offcampuscam

FUNKMASTER FLEX

FMF

With Special Guest D.J.

and featuring Original Vibe Monsters (Area 51 and Alias)

Student Union Ballroom
TODAY OCT. 28, 1999
DOORS OPEN @ 8pm

TICKETS AVAILABLE @ C C. Concourse ~ Tix Unlimited ~ Northampton Box Office (586-8686) ~ The Grow Room

Only $15 for Umass Students
$18 five-college
$20 general public

Brought to you by U.P.C. ~ for more info call 5-2892

INTERESTED IN A CO-OP OR INTERNSHIP THIS SPRING ?

Let the Campus Career Network help YOU get started !

Come to a "Welcome to Field Experience Session"

MONDAYS
3 - 4 pm	103 South College
TUESDAYS
3 - 4 pm	124 Draper Hall
4 - 5 pm	13 SOM Building
WEDNESDAYS
2:45 - 3:45 pm	13 SOM Building
3:30 - 4:30 pm	304 ELAB
THURSDAYS
3 - 4 pm	103 South College
FRIDAYS
10 - 11 am	329 ELAB
2 - 3 pm	114 Stockbridge Hall

Check out these HOT opportunities!

Dateline NBC : Internship, seeking COMM, ENGL, and JOUR majors
Fidelity Investments : 6 month co-op, seeking ACCT, ECON, FIN and MGMT majors
Compaq : Spring co-op, seeking COMP, CSE, and EE majors
Pratt and Whitney : 6 month co-op, seeking COMP and CSE majors
Boston Globe : 6 month and summer co-ops, seeking COMM, ENGL, and JOUR majors
Reebok : 6 month co-op, seeking COMM majors

Contact the Field Experience Coordinator in YOUR college !

College of Food and Natural Resources, 109 Stockbridge Hall, 577-0421
College of Engineering, 126A Marston Hall, 577-0419
College of Natural Sciences and Math, 209 Mather Building, 577-0428
College of Arts and Humanities, 264 Bartlett Hall, 545-6266
College of Education, Nursing and Public Health, 416 Arnold House, 577-0427
College of Social and Behavioral Sciences, 102A South College, 545-6267
Isenberg School Of Management, 208C SOM Building, 577-0418

Campus Career Network

GUESS WHICH ONE IS GETTING PAID?

TAKE NOTES. GET PAID.

You have to go to class anyway, so why not get paid to do it? Apply now @ allstudents.com or call 1-888-640-8810. Free online lecture notes, access to campus email, your virtual day planner.

allstudents.com

Baseball Playoffs, Costner recall Hollywood's past

COURTESY LOS ANGELES TIMES

Recently seeing Kevin Costner in a baseball movie, For Love of the Game, reminded us of all Hollywood's efforts to capture our National Pastime, including 1992's A League of their Own.

By Chris Kaltenbach
The Baltimore Sun

When it comes to the national pastime, Hollywood hasn't always kept its eye on the ball.

Sure, baseball has been a major player in any number of films. But how many of them have really been about the game? How many have really offered insight into what it's like to swing a bat, hurl a pitch or stand there in front of thousands of screaming people? How many of them have really looked at the game, as opposed to using it as simply a plot device?

Or to put it another way, how many baseball films are truly major-league efforts?

Fortunately, there are some good ones. Anything with Kevin Costner in it is guaranteed to at least get the game part right. But there are some serious misses out there as well, baseball films that are no more about baseball than iKing Learl is about royalty.

Herewith, a dozen examples, in no particular order, that range over the entire spectrum. And yes, I know plenty of movies aren't even on the list, including The Winning Team (with Ronald Reagan as Grover Cleveland Alexander), Bang the Drum Slowly and The Fan.

The Natural (1984): A film not so much about baseball as about baseball as myth. Gets extra points for casting Robert Redford, who actually played the game in college (although that final slo-mo swing looks a tad awkward), and for a fireworks show to end all fireworks shows. Rating: Solid double to left that would have been a triple if the batter had any speed.

Field of Dreams (1989): A sweet fable for all us kids who were never happier than when we were sitting next to our dads at the ballpark. You don't learn much about playing the game, but you sure learn about loving it. Docked a base for having Shoeless Joe Jackson hit from the wrong side of the plate. Rating: Two-base hit that hugged the right-field foul line.

The Jackie Robinson Story (1950): Robinson, in the prime of his playing career, stars as himself. A little more about the enormous pressures he faced breaking baseball's color barrier than about how wonderfully he played the game, but still a film to be treasured. Rating: Game-winning, bases-loaded single.

Bull Durham (1988): The Casablanca of baseball films, as two men vie for the soul of the woman they love. Actually, they fight just as hard for the soul of the game they love. Neither baseball nor Susan Sarandon ever seemed sexier, while Costner looks and acts like a ballplayer. Here's betting you actually learn something about baseball watching this film. Rating: Home run to dead center.

Pride of the Yankees (1945): A great film, as Gary Cooper plays that most tragic of baseball's heroes, Lou Gehrig, although the game is ancillary to the man. Still, they tried so hard, Cooper, a natural right-hander, learned to bunt and throw left-handed, and would run to third base when he hit the ball (the filmmakers then reversed the film, so it looked like he was batting left-handed). And Babe Ruth even got to play himself! Rating: Bases-loaded triple.

Fear Strikes Out (1957): Anthony Perkins, as troubled Boston Red Sox outfielder/shortstop Jimmy Piersall, looks as much like a ballplayer as my Aunt Flo, and I don't even have an Aunt Flo. Sure, there are some nice scenes, including Perkins scaling the backstop after hitting a home run, but you don't for a second believe these guys would last a minute inside the real Fenway Park. Rating: Swinging strike three.

The Babe Ruth Story (1948): Blecch! William Bendix plays Babe Ruth as comic-book hero, not sports icon. The scene where he calls the shot in the 1932 World Series vs. the Chicago Cubs may be the single most ludicrous moment in all of film. And don't even get me started on the dying kid who's promised a home run; just reliving that in memory is making my blood sugar go up. Rating: Ground out, runner trips over first base.

It Happens Every Spring (1949): Lots of laughs, as Ray Milland plays a chemist who discovers a wood repellent that, when applied to his pitches, makes them unhittable, and carries his team to the World Series. Great fun, especially the relationship between Milland and Paul Douglas as his catcher, and the games look real (except for that darting screwball, of course). Rating: A long fly that becomes a ground-rule double when a dog grabs it and runs off the field. The crowd roars.

For Love of the Game (1999): Great job of depicting the mind games that play out between a pitcher and a batter, and of showing what a lonely place the pitching mound can be. If only that overwrought romance didn't keep getting in the way. Rating: Double, out trying to stretch it into a triple.

The Bingo Long Traveling All-Stars and Motor Kings (1974): Billy Dee Williams, James Earl Jones and Richard Pryor are 1930s Negro Leaguers who start their own barnstorming team. Few baseball films have had more fun depicting the game than this one, and isn't that what the game's supposed to be about? Rating: Game-winning single by a career journeyman.

Damn Yankees (1958): Love the title. And the music. And the dancing. A love letter to every baseball fan who ever hated a team because it was so good. Rating: Game-winning homer, and guess which New York team just lost.

A League of Their Own (1992): A real mixed bag. Geena Davis could doubtless hold her own on the baseball diamond, and the iThere's no crying in baseball\ scene kinda defines the game, if you think about it. Still, that ending, with the suggestion that Davis may have dropped the ball to let her sister's team win, sticks in my craw. Rating: Let's call it a home run, but only because the umpire didn't notice the fan interference.

THE MONKEY BAR & GRILLE

NEW YORK STYLE SCENE IN DOWNTOWN AMHERST.
NEW AND EXCITING PLACE TO EAT, OFFERING CAJUN CUISINE AND OUTDOOR PATIO AND UPSCALE MICROBREWS.

AFTER 10 IT'S TIME TO DANCE

WEDNESDAY - PROMO NIGHT WITH DJ FOOZ. FREE PRIZES!!
THURSDAY - HOUSE MUSIC WITH DJ FOOZ
FRIDAY - HOUSE, HIP-HOP & TOP 40 WITH DJ FOOZ
SATURDAY - HOUSE, HIP-HOP & TOP 40 WITH DJ CREME
SUNDAY - LATIN NIGHT WITH DJ CREME FEATURNG FREE DANCE LESSONS FROM THE THERESA CASTANO CENTER FOR LATIN DANCE

63 N. PLEASANT ST. 259-1600

Do You Have Any Of The Following Complaints?

- Runny, Itchy, or Congested Nose
- Sneezing
- Post Nasal Drip
- Watery ,Itchy Eyes
- Itchy Ears or Palate

Males and females 12 years of age and older who experience any of these problems are invited to participate in a clinical research study to evaluate an investigational medication to reduce these year round symptoms.

Qualified participants may recieve financial compensation for participation.

For information call:
413 - 584 -4010

REMEMBER!!!!!

Vote for the 10 best movies and 10 best albums of the 90s at the Collegian Office (Campus Center Basement) or e-mail it to us at Daily_Collegian@hotmail.com. That's "Daily" underscore "Collegian."

At the end of the semester, all votes will be tallied and the results will be published on the final 2 Arts covers.

ROCKY HORROR PICTURE SHOW

Tonight 10/28/99

With the Tesseract Players (Live Cast)

Campus Center Auditorium 10 pm

Brought to you by the UMass Science Fiction Society
Admission General public $5
UMSFS Members $3

Please no: Drugs, Alcohol, liquids, glass bottles, Squirt Guns

you look Mavi-lous.

Mavi Jeans at Zanna

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

安城中国餐店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 = 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

Council Travel
Student Travel from A to Z
On the journey from A to Z, A is as important as Z
-buddhist saying
A To Z
44 Main St.
Amherst MA
413-256-1261

■gore

continued from page 5

were all directed by the Australian director Peter Jackson, who recently directed the excellent Frighteners and Heavenly Creatures, and is destined to become a big name soon due to his upcoming direction of the Lord Of The Rings movies. Bad Taste and Dead Alive are his two horror movies, and both are amazing and classics of the genre. Dead Alive, made in 1992, has also been called by numerous sources the goriest movie ever made, and it holds that crown to this day. Meet the Feebles was Jackson's first movie, and even though it's not horror, it is required viewing for all gore fans. A send-up of the Muppets, Feebles features a cast entirely made of puppets, including a crack-addicted Vietnam veteran crocodile, a cat obsessed with sodomy, and a sex-addicted walrus. Gore fans will not be disappointed by the finale, which includes a hippopotamus mowing down nearly one hundred puppets with a gattling gun.

Gore Rating: 10

2. Re-Animator, Bride Of Re-Animator, and From Beyond. These movies were all directed by Stuart Gordon, who is a consistently good horror director with other films like Castle Freak and The Pit And The Pendulum. And the one thing all these films have in common, besides Gordon, is actor Jeffrey Combs. Despite his recent embarrassing role in I Still Know What You Did Last Summer, Combs is a consistently good actor, perfect for the roles in these films, since they demand an actor who is a little creepy and can still maintain the audience's sympathy. Re-Animator is a legend in the horror genre, and was even given a shout-out recently in American Beauty. Both Bride and Beyond stick close to that movie's formula, and are enjoyable if not a little familiar.

Gore Rating: 9

3. Evil Dead, Evil Dead II, Army Of Darkness. Director Sam Raimi has gone Hollywood as of late with the excellent A Simple Plan and the ho-hum For The Love Of The Game, but this trio of fantasy-horror flicks achieve success as both horror films and comedies. All three are laugh-out-loud funny, mostly thanks to star Bruce Campbell, but also due to some great writing and wonderful creative ideas. Especially noticeable in the first installment is Raimi's mastery of the camera, as it contains some camera angles and editing techniques that just have to be seen to be believed.

Gore Rating: 8

4. Night of the Living Dead, Dawn of the Dead, Day of the Dead. Director George Romero's zombie trilogy is probably the most influential group of movies on the list. It even spawned a knockoff trilogy, Return of the Living Dead, which take a more humorous view of zombies, but are all excellent on their own. Dawn is my favorite of the three movies, and it is a marathon of gore. Special effects legend Tom Savini provides the first rate effects and even has a pretty large role as the leader of a gang of thugs. Night is of course an all time classic horror film, which has lost none of its bite over the years. Day has its moments, but I would recommend saving that one until you have seen the others.

Gore Rating: 10

5. Troma Movies. Troma is an independent film studio responsible for movies such as Surf Nazis Must Die!, Class Of Nuke 'Em High, and one of my favorite movies of all time, The Toxic Avenger. Troma is a gore fan's dream come true. Not all of their movies are horror films, but nearly all of them feature gore, no matter what genre. Their most recent release was a remake of Romeo and Juliet titled Tromeo and Juliet, and featured a healthy and hilarious amount of gore. All Troma movies are hilarious, and are geared directly toward horror fans that don't take every movie too seriously. If you don't like bad movies, and by bad I mean don't come out of Hollywood and don't star Tom Hanks, then steer clear of Troma. But fans of Troma find it easy to recognize the huge amount of heart, work, and fun that goes into each of their self-produced (they also buy and publish other movies under the name Troma) movies.

Gore Rating: 10

Cousin of Spike Lee Takes successful turn

By Sharon Waxman
The Washington Post

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. - The broad, elegant man seated on the gray velour loveseat in the lobby of the Four Seasons Hotel- one leg casually draped over the other, an arm confidently embracing the ridge of the couch-may be the least angry man in Hollywood.

He's Malcolm Lee, 29, cousin of filmmaker Spike Lee (probably one of the most angry men in moviedom), and he has made the kind of movie that is hard to come by these days-a mainstream, upbeat, human film about a bunch of people who just happen to be African-American.

The Best Man, a first feature written and directed by Lee, stars a group of impossibly beautiful twentysomething actors as former college pals getting together for a wedding. Long-gone sexual tensions reemerge and current-day romantic complications arise when the eight pals reassemble, which has led more than one reviewer to dub the film a Big Chill for African-American audiences. (And yes, of course, there's a soundtrack: Stevie Wonder, Bob Marley, Lauryn Hill, Me'shell NdegeOcello, you get the picture.)

In this film black people drive nice cars. Wear beautiful clothes. Have outrageously successful careers, lonely personal lives, romantic frustrations. They're religious, they're profane. They speak in full, college-educated sentences and homey slang. But Malcolm? (As in "X"?) Lee? (As in Spike?) Where's the politics? Where's the anger?

He smiles, kindly, composed and, may we say, sexy as he reflects on the question. Lee wears a tailored brown sport coat, square glasses and a big diamond stud in one ear. Everything about him bespeaks confidence.

Patiently, he explains that he has different priorities. "What I set out to do was create characters that were interesting, multi-layered characters and put them in a world where there would be tension," he says as he sips some bubbly water. "People want to see good-looking people on screen. They want to see educated, intelligent people who have careers, not jobs, who can get married, who have issues with men."

You see, Lee says, he's very interested in the black experience. Just a different black experience than audiences usually see.

"You rarely see black men bond on screen, unless it's some violent action pictures," he continues. "I just wanted my characters to tell a story that was universal, where it didn't matter if you were black."

He says: "It's important to

Turn to LEE, page 10

COURTESY DEPT. MUSIC AND DANCE

Pied Piper

Flute player, Christopher Krueger will with the University Orchestra this Friday at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center.

Glamor, politics and corruption Rule EW's most powerful list

This week's Entertainment Weekly gave us a list of the 101 most powerful people in the world of entertainment. The results were not as much shocking, as they were disappointing. The list turned into nothing more than an easy way to publicize who is popular, and not who is powerful. Though some of the choices near the top of this list were both obvious and correct. Some of the people who were left off of the list completely are the true losers. Of course, the people at the top of the list are the select few who run the television world. Television is a piece of media that hits more people that anything else. It seems like whoever controls your TV, controls the world!

There are quite a few people that could be considered number one for this list. A few of the people who may come to mind are Steven Spielberg, Oprah Winfrey and Ted Turner. Though all worthy opponents, none of these people were number one.

The number one most powerful influence on the world of entertainment according to EW is the team of Sumner Redstone and Mel Karmazin. Perhaps you remember a few months ago, when Viacom merged with Time Warner. The biggest merger in the history of entertainment, created not only a media giant, but a borderline dynasty of control as well. Between these two companies, there is pretty much nothing on television that you can find, that they don't have some sort of influence in it's creation. The merger made these two superpowers even more influential than they had been before, which might have been seen as an impossible task a year ago. The choice for Redstone and Karmazin at number one is simply a no-brainer.

In respective order from numbers two through ten, the people on EW's list are; the team of Rupert Murdoch & Peter Chernin, the team of Ted Turner & Gerald Levin, George Lucas, Steven Spielberg, Oprah Winfrey, Tom Hanks, Julia Roberts, David E. Kelley, and Michael Eisner.

Of these top ten, there are three groups of media owners, one specific media owner, a pretty woman, the most powerful woman in the world, a guy who won both Emmy awards for best drama series and best comedy series in the same year, a guy with two Best Actor Oscars, and two men who combined have made four out of the top five grossing films in history. Anyone who could argue that this isn't the ultimate group of powerful people, I challenge you to do so.

As I said before, television plays such a huge influence in the world of media. With the exception of Julia Roberts, television has been a major factor in their rise to power.

Though the top ten is definitely nothing to argue with, there are some major problems with much of the rest of the list. The front cover of the magazine boasts that Leonardo DiCaprio and Adam Sandler are among the most powerful people in the world of entertainment. I'm sorry, but though they may bring people into the theaters, these men have no power at all compared to people such as Kevin Williamson and Don Imus. Neither of these two people were in the list of top 101 powerful people, but Pokemon was. The most ironic thing about that is that I don't disagree with Pokemon being in the top 101 most powerful people in entertainment. Right now, Pokemon is the center of every child's life, under the age of twelve. That's an incredible feat. However, I'm sure that two years from now, Pokemon will find his way to the sewer, just like the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles did about a decade ago.

My big complaint about the list is that it's so deceiving. The list claims that the people are the most powerful people in entertainment in the world, but there's pretty much nothing other than American influences. With all of those credentials that made the people in the top ten so qualified, there are some questionable holes. Who won Best Actor at the Oscars this year? Who is by far the most popular person in the world of music this year, and is also People Magazine's sexiest man alive? Who won the Emmy award for Best Comedy Special? The three answers here are Roberto Begnini and Ricky Martin and John Leguizamo. None of them are on the list, but Drew Barrymore and Bruce Willis are. The latter two are hardworking white Americans who really have no place being anywhere near this list. Barrymore hasn't made a film worth watching yet, and in Willis' last four movies, one (The Sixth Sense) has received favorable reviews. Begnini and Martin are easily much more successful and powerful in the world of entertainment than Willis and Barrymore, but perhaps their impact on places other than the US does not count. I can't imagine how Ricky Martin was left out though, since he can be seen absolutely everywhere. Leguizamo has more talent in his left finger than Willis and Barrymore combine. He, like Ricky Martin is Latino. I love Entertainment Weekly, but I can also spot racism when I see it.

Tube Notes with Ryan Benharris

The last problem that I have with the list, is its denial of people who are as much politically influential as they are in the world of entertainment. I already mentioned Don Imus, but what about people like Rush Limbaugh, who spends as much time on the radio as Imus, entertaining and influencing millions of people? Minnesota Governer Jesse Ventura was left off of the list, and he might have just a bit of power. Finally, where is Warren Beatty? The man has been in films for almost thirty years, and may run for President. If he were President of the United States, he'd be leader of the free world. Wouldn't that make him a little more powerful than Master P?

Some people, however, were deservingly on this list that haven't been recognized as much as they should have. Chris rock came in at number 77, and Russell Simmons, who has been extremely influential over the past few years, found himself at number 65.

I guess I started off by trying make the point that television is the most powerful medium in all of entertainment, simply because this list has so many people in TV ranked so high. However, how real is this list? I simply don't trust it. It's definitely worth a read, but in reality, I really don't think it's worth a damn.

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian Columnist.

¡ Escribe Para Artes !

UMass Alumni Association
"Leaders in the Making" Scholarships

Applicants must be full-time junior undergraduate students to be eligible. Applications may be picked up Monday through Friday at the Alumni Relations Office in Memorial Hall from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. They must be completed and returned to Jason Germain in the Alumni Office no later than November 19, 1999. Winners will be recognized at a ceremony in April.

For more information, please contact Jason Germain at 545-2317 or alumni@admin.umass.edu

UMASS Alumni Association
University of Massachusetts Amherst

Write For Arts and Living!

GIFTS from GLASS to GOLD

starting under $20.00

Earrings by Ed Levin — The Finest — Earrings by Ed Levin

silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY
Elm/King St., Northampton 584-2424
204 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3424
www.silverscapedesigns.com • 800-729-8971

8 9 MICHAEL'S BILLARDS AND SPORTS BAR
10A Belchertown Road, Amherst, MA 01002 256-8284

Easy Day from 3 -Open
Pool 3 days Every Day
Tuesday Pool
Wednesday Thursday, Friday and Saturday
Wednesday Daddy
Friday, Sept 29 at 10 pm
Tuesday Comedy
Thursday, Oct 28 at 10 pm

Easy! 1998 UMASS Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Best Place to Play Pool
Mike's Billiards

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Thursday, October 28, 1999

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

This is Jeopardy

Dear Diary: Each and every day I wander through life. I get up, go to class, eat some pudding, hang out, do some work, drink some Berkshire Brewing company, look at Playboy and go to bed. My days are fine. Some prove to be outstanding, and others make me want to sleep for a week. During these days, I am unable to understand what is going on in the world around me. When I'm sitting by the pond enjoying my lackadaisical day, I can't fathom what is going on in the real world. Most people out there are working eight straight hours. Sometimes I'm on campus for eight hours, but I ain't doing serious stuff the whole time. I don't understand anything about that foreign land which surrounds my little, isolated haven. I don't understand resumes, how to get a job, Medicare, social security or anything that the government does. I am so confused about everything that my head is spinning.

Dan Viens

I wrote the above entry exactly one week ago. Since then everything has changed. I did some searching on the Internet. The results of my search put my mind at ease. I was just surfing the web between classes when I stumbled upon one of the greatest discoveries of my life. I was doing a search on the recent film Double Jeopardy. I was hoping to find some sweet pictures of Ashley Judd. When the results of my search came up there were two categories of sights. The first was about the movie and the second said, "Jeopardy: Secret Government Project." The sight said that anyone who was not part of the United States government would be prosecuted for entry. At first I was intimidated, but then I figured since I was in the library there was no way they could track down who I was. I decided to enter.

Once I entered, I was astonished at the document that stood in front of me. The entire web site was a description of the secret government project that is now utilizing the game show Jeopardy as a mind control device for the population of the United States. For a while, Jeopardy was a privately owned enterprise. Then the U.S. government realized that the show could be a very powerful tool. The government took Jeopardy and it hasn't been the same since. This is a perfect example of the government control and conspiracy, which X-Files freaks are always worried about.

In 1990 when the government took control of one of America's most beloved game shows, it felt that the morale and overall attitude of its citizens was in a constant state of flux. They believed that this constant state of flux could be detrimental to society. At the time our country was in the midst of its worst economic downturn since the Great Depression. As a result of this recession, which George Bush failed to acknowledge, many Americans were left out of work and down in the dumps. The percentage of happy people dropped to a 25 year low. The government was completely baffled. It knew that there was nothing it could actually do to lift everyone's spirits. They could not stop the recession nor could they make everyone happy.

There were secret midnight meetings of the House of Representatives and the Senate. They came up with a few ideas. The first was to send birthday cards to each American citizen within one week of their birthdays. When they tried this, The U.S. Postal service was so overcome with the surplus of mail that 255 mailmen went on workplace massacres and 594 of them killed themselves. The second "solution" that our wonderful government came up with was to spray a euphoric drug throughout our country. Everyone except farmers loved it.

Most people loved it so much that they were committing indecent acts with other people affected by the drugs wherever they could find an empty space. As a result of this, AIDS and teen pregnancy rates went through the roof. As for the farmers, they hated the euphoric drug because it made all of their crops smell like perfume. Finally a state senator from Colorado came up with the idea to take control of Jeopardy. At first this drew a tremendous amount of laughter from the rest of our leaders, but after a while most everyone was convinced.

Here is how the government takeover of Jeopardy works and how it affects us. First, the government fired everyone who worked on the show except for Alex Trebek, the host, and Johnny Miller, the announcer. They figured that in order to get the American people out of the recession they had to get everyone into an optimistic state of mind. The easiest way to do this is to make people feel good about themselves. They used two different tactics to do this. The first was they increased the number of special Jeopardy episodes. By this I mean there were more celebrity, college, high school and even elementary school tournaments. Each of these had a slightly different effect on the typical American viewer. Because of the fact that the questions in these tournaments were easier, people felt good that they were answering many of them correctly. Also, when they beat the contestants in Celebrity Jeopardy, they become very confident because they felt that they were smarter than some of the most famous people in the world. When the tournaments for younger people were on, most of the audience didn't really have to pay attention because the questions are so damn easy. During this half hour, they could daydream about the good ole' days back in college or high school. This would usually lift their spirits and make them want to have as happy a life now as they did then.

Another tactic they used was to make the overall questions easier. The government figured that no one would think that the questions on normal Jeopardy were easy. After all, the contestants are supposed to be some of the smartest people around. If they made the questions easier, then people would get more answers correct. If people got more answers correct, then they would think that it would be possible for them to be a contestant on Jeopardy. If most of the American public thought that it was possible to be a contestant on the game show of their dreams, then the sky would be the limit and we would get out of the recession. Obviously these tactics worked because ratings for Jeopardy were higher than ever and we escaped our recession.

However, the government did not relinquish control over the show. Once we were out of the recession and our economy started to boom, the government became afraid that members of our society would take our good fortune for granted and become complacent. They decided to make the questions increasingly harder. Now, about every six months the questions become just a little more difficult. The end result of this has been that people are constantly driven to find the answers to the questions that they don't know. They are constantly driven to do better in life. This has resulted in the astounding rise in the stock market over the last five or so years.

The final thing that the government was worried about as far as the world according to Jeopardy goes was that many people would become over-confident and try to take over the world. In order to curb Jeopardy inspired world domination, they made a few strategic moves. The first was to insert a few fake questions every now and then which were impossible to know and impossible to figure out. This way no one would think that they were perfect or indomitable. Also they became very strict with the phrasings of contestants questions. If the contestant did not truly annunciate the "what is/ who is," then they would be penalized. The reason for this is that they want everyone to know that the United States is a place where rules must be followed and anarchy will not be accepted.

Yes, Jeopardy is responsible for these lucrative times in which we live. Government control of our society has begun to run rampant throughout society. They control what we watch, what we buy, where we go and how we act. The U.S. Government controls nearly every facet of our lives without us even knowing it. I'll probably mysteriously disappear after this column, but remember that our taxpayer dollars are funding the Jeopardy winnings, and just because you get the answer to Final Jeopardy doesn't mean you're smart. It means that your government wants something from you.

Dan Viens is a Collegian columnist.

All those catchy advertisements

So, what do you guys think of commercials these days? Personally, I think they suck. Well, come on... you have to admit that there are some pretty damn stupid ones out there.

... There is a beautiful landscape and a long, winding road alongside some beautiful mountains. There is a brand new car driving down the road with a happy family smiling and laughing inside the luxury vehicle, clearly enjoying a sunny Saturday afternoon...

And then what happens? You guessed it: a little sign comes up that says, "Metamucil: to make you regular again." What?! Am I the only person that thinks this is completely screwed up? Did I miss some subliminal message in the commercial? Did I do too many Quaaludes last night? I don't think so.

There are so many commercials out there that have nothing to do with the products they are advertising. Why? Oh, don't try to tell me that it's a marketing scheme to make people remember a product and then buy it, because that's a bunch of b.s. Sure, it makes you remember the stupid waste of airtime (I mean commercial); but it certainly won't make you go out and buy the goods it represents.

Anyway, I'm sick of it. And being the marketing genius that I am, I have come up with a few commercials of my own – some ads that will certainly grab your attention and just might get your ass off the couch and out to the stores!

My first ad is a bit crude, but I think it's funny, so deal with it. This one is dedicated to those nauseating Gap commercials. In this marketing masterpiece, those losers dressed in khakis and white T-shirts start singing "Mellow Yellow" and everything seems to be just fine and dandy when boom! One by one, the Gap kids are picked off by sniper rifles. That's right... heads are flying off and instead of "Mellow Yellow," they start singing, "Help!"

And at the end of this lovely commercial, the bottom of the TV screen reads the words "Structure was here." Now is that an ad for the home of the single-striped sweater or what?

Gary Mendese

The next one on my list of eye-catching advertisements goes out our friends at Old Navy and the pretentious lady with the oversized black specs. In this commercial, the Old Navy crew begins singing the "Old Navy, Old Navy, Old Navy performance fleece" song when suddenly, Austin Powers in a tie-dye Billabong shirt jumps out of the audience and attacks the freak with the glasses and begins to smash her in the face with a wooden baseball bat –over and over again until someone tries to stop him with no success. After he is done mauling her, he drops the bat, walks off the stage and says, "God, I hate that bitch!"

I have no idea what company this would represent, but it's a must-have-ad anyway. "It's the flashpoint of fashion"? Who is that hag kidding?

Anyway, let's get away from clothing stores now and move onto something better. The next ad was inspired by the absolute worst and most disgusting commercial that I have ever seen. In this ad, there are about 10 cheerleaders doing their thing: you know, jumping, flipping, cheering and the like. Everything seems to be normal and then all of a sudden, the words "Tampax was here" appears on the screen, nauseating every man that was unfortunate enough to witness it! I don't want to picture that or care to think about it! (Sorry, feminists) That's really nasty, you know?

So, in dedication to this lovely piece of marketing, I have come up with my own commercial. In this one, two couples are shagging in separate apartments; and I mean shagging hardcore... things are falling off the walls and everything. Well, at the end of the ordeal, couple #1 gets out of the bed, folds the sheets and blankets and goes about their day. But couple #2 gets out of bed, gathers up the sheets and pillowcases, squeamishly crumpling them into a ball, avoiding any contact with the solled linen, and throws them down the laundry chute. The woman then takes a shower, scrubbing her body and washing her hair two or three times.

Then you see couple #1 again, this time walking down the street. The guy turns and faces the camera and gives that Mentos smile, giving two huge "thumbs up." Then at the bottom of the screen, we see "Trojan was here."

Oh, come on... don't act disgusted. It's a natural male bodily function and if we can advertise "that time of the month," certainly we can promote condoms.

My next advertisement pertains to a more local audience: mainly the UMass campus. In this commercial, you see Charles Manson, Ted Kazynski, Mumia, David Berkowitz and a bunch of other killers roaming the streets murdering and raping anyone they please. Also, you see the remaining few inmates in maximum-security prisons with leather reclining chairs and HBO, eating Filet Mignon. Then the great ad comes up on the screen... RAIL: we help you do the crime and forget about the time.

I know I've been complaining about some lousy advertisements, but there is one really nice one out there. You know the one I'm talking about: the 3-D Doritos one with the two guys and a woman in the laundry mat. The woman with robust jubblies (sorry, feminists, but damn) catches flying chips with her teeth, leaving the two men's jaws on the floor.

Well, I've got a similar idea for a commercial. In mine, two guys are in the laundry mat when a Parking Services lady comes in with her militant strut. She tries the Doritos catching bit, grossing out the innocent men washing their clothes. Then, just like the woman in the real commercial, she catches the final chip sitting in a split on the floor. Yeah, baby, yeah!

The men begin to vomit profusely as Bertha leaves to go and ruin some more days with tickets and tows. Then the screen reads, "Dexatrim: because other people can see you, too."

OK, OK, so I'm not the nicest person in the world, but neither are you. If you laughed at least once at this column, then my mission has been accomplished. There are so many commercials out there that should be banned by the FCC; it's disgusting. At least have some relevance to your advertisement!

Ah, what do I know? I'm just a little guy that wears Gap jeans, Structure sweaters and eats Doritos. I'm not going to comment on Trojans... we'll save that for another column.

Gary Mendese is a Collegian columnist.

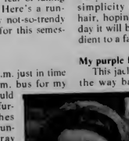
It's the flashpoint of fashion

I got the hint.

Standing next to my friend in a new skirt and sweater ensemble on Tuesday, I felt a little inadequate after watching her receive two compliments about her outfit. After her second appraisal in five minutes, I jokingly questioned why I didn't deserve the same compliments. We tried to reason that it was only because she was wearing nylons that she qualified as dressed up, but I knew better than that. I knew before I even asked that my lack of flair and color was the reason.



So maybe I have settled into the lazy person's wardrobe this semester. Yeah, that's right, I'm making the most of my running pants, long sleeve UMass t-shirts and Gamecock hooded sweatshirt. Got a problem with that? I should. The girls on the field hockey team I coach have asked me on a number of occasions, if I own any other clothing whatsoever. I attempt to make excuses about not being able to wash my clothes and they offer invite me to their homes for free laundry services.

It happens every year. The first few weeks the weather is nice and you make the effort to coordinate cute or at least decent outfits. For me, that period lasted all of three days this year. No sooner did I wake up one morning and forget about anything decent hanging in the closet, then I went straight for the drawers full of dirty shorts and old t-shirts. Coaching a high school team, it was much too easy to make the transition from class to practice to bed with just one change in between instead of two.

I don't want to alarm anyone who is struggling with the same syndrome. You might make it through this. But maybe I can provide some of my own examples as early warning signs for those in fear of falling into the same trap. Here's a rundown on some of my not-so-trendy fashions and staples for this semester.

Last Friday

Wake up at 9:36 a.m. just in time to make the 9:50 a.m. bus for my 10:10 a.m. What should I wear? I looked no further than the clothes already on me: blue running pants and a gray long-sleeve t-shirt over a white short sleeve.

Kathleen Ralls

Add to that a pair of blue and green sneakers. I have gathered enough common sense to understand that I am the only one who bought this style of Nikes because nobody else likes them, but that's OK with me. I'd like to think they are a character builder like that awful pink and black polka-dot dress with the white bib I wore for my fifth grade pictures. At least I am confident enough to admit that it was not from the Gap, rather the store that also carries dishwashers and tool sets, the almighty Sears.

A quick reminder, I wore this outfit all day long, even to my game and out to dinner. Hey, we're talking versatility here.

The Headband

Granted the picture of me here is absolutely stunning, but I'd like to think it's not my best look. Don't ask about the major crisis I endured when it cracked for no apparent reason. With uncontrollably thick and wavy locks, I can't quite resist the simplicity of sliding one into my hair, hoping that today will be the day it will become the missing ingredient to a fab outfit.

My purple fleece

This jacket and I go way back, all the way back to the night before Valentine's Day my freshman year. With no boy to share my nights with, I bought it to make myself feel better as my two friends shopped for their boy toys. I was worth every penny of it and I'd like to think I still am.

Last Saturday

Hung out all day in the same shirt combination with gray flannel pajamas. Did I mention that I have an all gray outfit that consists of gray sneakers complete with one sole flapping, gray and red wind pants, gray t-shirt and gray sweatshirt? My mother taught me the lessons of basic and classic before going out on a limb with say, some color.

The $4.99 running-striped jeans from the Gap

My dad asked me on Sunday what kind of mileage I was getting out of them, after only being home for four days since the semester started. Not a good sign. The only pants suitably long enough for my approval, these jeans will not be leaving my wardrobe any time soon. Granted the bottoms are spotted with mud because I haven't washed them since May, but they make any morning drizzle a little brighter. Anyway, $4.99? I dare you to beat that.

Yellow Slicker

Possibly the only thing my roommate and I have in common is a love for the yellow rain jacket. Heavy clouds or just a heavy dew? Break out the vinyl, baby. Plus, you don't have to feel obligated to share it with someone you are walking with like you might if you carried an umbrella.

Overalls

So comfy yet so slack looking. Pockets full of dirty tissues, gum wrappers and possibly a couple pens overalls were never this resourceful. Unfortunately, I just don't cut any kind of figure in these things no matter what I do. I resemble Huckleberry Finn more closely than I do a senior in college.

Soon to be making its way back into "the rotation": The blue and aqua headband

Replacing a need for the headband, this accessory not only works with the purple fleece, but it also works with gray and blue running pants. Not a coincidence. I might add.

After reviewing my exploits, maybe I am not ready for the catwalk anytime soon. But if it calls for rain, snow, a field hockey game or a contest for the ugliest sneakers, I'm your girl.

Kathleen Ralls is a Collegian columnist.

So much to say, so little time.

Write for Ed/Op.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager

Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor

Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Britt Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor

Jolyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Jolyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor

Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Ben Alamed Webmaster

ARTS AND LIVING

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

SLASHER FLICKS–CLEVER, BUT NOT SCARY

DAVID TROUPES• • • COLLEGIAN STAFF

It's hard to find a good scary movie these days. Everywhere you look, teens are being chased by masked killers, aliens are invading our high schools, and not one moment of it gives you the creeps. Look no further, for below is a list of just some of the entertaining, well-made, and, most importantly, frightening movies you can rent at your local video shop.

The Exorcist: This is one of the all-time heavy-hitters of the horror genre, and the movie all of the modern slashers should be striving to become. Yes, there's blood; yes, the cast is picked off; but what sets this film apart from others like it is the depth of its characters. The kids in Scream couldn't get a 900 on the SATs if they pooled their efforts, and each one is a walking, talking stereotype with absolutely no personality and uniqueness. The Exorcist's characters, however, are well developed and provide the emotional backbone of the movie, letting the audience become invested in their survival, and thereby making the movie's horrific developments all the more gripping. This is a must-see for anyone looking to be scared.

The Haunting: Leave it to Hollywood to take a classic psychological horror film and make not one, but two disastrous remakes. My heart goes out to anyone who saw The Haunting remake this summer, but don't let that stop you from renting the original. The Haunting was made in 1963, filmed in black and white, and contains no special effects, no gore, no ghosts, and no monsters. You never see anything. And yet, to those willing to loose themselves in the characters' psychologies and place themselves in their shoes, this movie is deeply troubling. Its use of sound alone to set moods and instill fear is incredible.

Psycho: The movie that needs no introduction. Forget the pointless remake; the original has much more style and spookiness. The acting is subtle but effective, the black and white cinematography is much creepier than the modern equivalent, and the ending is a classically disturbing Hitchcockian twist. The idea of killing off the heroine halfway through the movie has lost some of the shock it had on its original audience, but the act is still unsettling.

Alien: This movie defines the creature-horror genre. Director Ridley Scott, who also directed sci-fi milestone Blade Runner, creates a hellish science fiction world of walking demons and claustrophobic chambers and tunnels. Every organically-shaped passageway exudes a terrifying suspense. The aliens themselves are the nightmarish products of Swiss surrealist artist H. R. Giger.

Halloween: If you're going to see a slasher movie, you might as well see the original, right? Halloween's insistence on reigning in the gore and concentrating on mood and atmosphere sets it apart from the sea of copycats which followed. This is the perfect movie to watch with a bunch of friends on a rainy night with the lights turned off.

Angel Heart: Just as Alien successfully crossed horror with science-fiction, so does this movie mix horror with a detective story. What begins as a simple missing persons/insurance scam descends slowly into a world of religious fervor and dark voodoo magic. Angel Heart's twist ending is immensely effective and disturbing; only after the movie ends does the terrifying reality of what you've just witnessed sink in, lingering long after you've walked away from the television.

I encourage all of you to rent one of these movies. Halloween is approaching, after all, and what better time is there to remind yourself of what it means to be truly scared?

Turn to SCARY, page 10

DESIGN BY BRIDGET DOLEZSAR

Image

MOVIES THAT WILL REALLY MAKE YOU SCREAM

DAVID TROUPES • • • COLLEGIAN STAFF

I don't know about you, but I came home after seeing The Blair Witch Project with an intense desire to crawl into my parents' bed. The imagery of that movie took hold of my mind like a nightmare so vivid you'd swear it was real. Sixth Sense was another surprisingly spooky movie, with a more subtle, moody style; it was a textbook example of understatement and proper use of a twist ending. Seeing these movies left me with more than the habit of carrying around a crucifix and a baseball bat, however. I was left thinking, when was the last time I'd been scared like that? I honestly couldn't remember. It seemed as though modern filmmakers, for a time, had completely forgotten how to scare an audience.

For the culprit, I didn't have to look any further than Scream, the kingpin of the new slasher flicks. Now, don't get me wrong, I thought Scream was entertaining, intelligent, and witty. What it wasn't, however, was scary. Kevin Williamson, pop-culture guru and demi-god of the teenage entertainment industry, had fooled everyone, intentionally or otherwise, into thinking that his parody of a scary movie was the real thing, and its commercial success gave rise to a loathsome barrage of new slasher flicks. Why weren't any of these new movies frightening? For all of the following reasons, which should hereby be consulted before any new such movies are made:

Not knowing the identity of the killer is not scary. Scream 2 illustrates this point wonderfully, as it takes the two most inconsequential characters the movie has and turns them into the killers in a ludicrously contrived way. The ability to fool the audience is not the same as the ability to scare them. For an example of how knowing exactly who the psycho is can be excruciatingly scary, check out Misery.

Gore is not scary. It's gory. It's gross, and it can make you squirm, but the dependence of these movies on elaborate, gruesome death sequences cannot make up for the deficiencies in plot.

Teenage culture is not scary. Unless you're a parent, that is. Nothing ruins a

BLOOD AND GUTS

MICHAEL DELANO • • • • • COLLEGIAN STAFF

"Where's the gore?!" That's what I was asking myself after sitting through both The Sixth Sense and The Blair Witch Project. "Where are the rotting zombies, the flesh-eating imps, and for god sakes where is the guy with the dead skin mask and the chainsaw?" There's nothing wrong with Sixth Sense or Blair Witch; I liked them both. But this new breed of "horror" movie is so serious and so tame, that it makes you long for that time, not too long ago, when real horror movies existed, that were funny AND gory. If you have had enough of crap like The Faculty or Idle Hands, which are really just glorified Tommy Hilfiger made movie soundtrack advertisements, head to your local video store this weekend (not Blockbuster). Rent some great horror movies where the people involved actually cared about their vision, and wanted to make good movies that horror fans could enjoy without worrying about being PC or offending Jack Valenti or Jerry Falwell with a little gore and nudity. So I have compiled a list of my favorite gore movies, which can serve as a beginners guide to horror movies, or gore fans can view all of the selections on my list as highly recommended rentals. And gore is only a small part of what makes these movies enjoyable. They all have certain qualities, whether it is humor or direction, which make them worthwhile. One final note: the gore in these movies is not sadistic, instead, it is so over-the-top that it is laughable. I don't like to maul people with drills in real life because I enjoy these movies, and I don't like watching the Faces Of Death crap because seeing violence done to real people is disgusting, not funny. So if you take these movies in the right spirit, as the filmmakers I assume intended them to be taken, you should have a great time.

1. Meet The Feebles, Bad Taste, and Dead Alive. These movies

Turn to GORE, page 9

The Five College Area's Source for Discovering the Weekly Happenings of New England and Beyond

THE SOURCE

Another Fine Product of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Every Thursday!

It's actually going to occur at UMass; this can't be true. In case you haven't been vacant from the campus the past week, nightlife makes a triumphant return to the campus in November when The Skybox, the second largest music club in Western Massachusetts, officially opens its doors. Showcasing emerging national and regional talent along with producing weekly dance nights, The Skybox should boost the campus social scene. Acts rumored to be coming this semester include a diverse lineup from Guster and Godsmack to the Dropkick Murphy's and Rane. For further information head to www.umass.edu/skybox.

There are just a few more days left to make a visit to Crazy Al and his Haunted Hayride. Located at the Long Hollow Bison Farm on Route 9 in Hadley, continuous rides begin at 7 p.m. and last for half an hour, taking you through the dark forest and Corn Field of Death providing for "a frightfully good time."

Tonight The Mitchells have a release party for their first full-length titled Contraption at Grandstands in Northampton. The all UMass alumni band brings Tizzy opening. If you're in the Halloween mood, don't miss the Rocky Horror Picture Show, a cult classic, showing in the Campus Center Auditorium.

If you're in the mood to attend one of the countless parties occurring this weekend up and down North Pleasant or in the apartments, just do yourself a favor and obey the local ordinances along with your own tolerance. The police are certain to be in full force this weekend.

A good place to warm up on Friday is Amherst College's Alumni Gym as it hosts The Pietasters, Spring Heeled Jack and the Pilfers. Afterwards drive down to Freaky 2 in Hartford where the party goes on strong until the daylight hours. If you are looking to cool it, public skating is going strong at the Mullins Center from 9:30 to 11:20 p.m.

Butterfield kicks off their concert season on Saturday when Kay Jah Funk returns opening for Uncle Sammy. In past years the dormitory has hosted a wide array of artists, hardcore, and jam bands most recently including Strungfolk and Percy Hill. A great triple bill in Boston presents itself when locals Guster and the Push Stars team up with Jump Little Children at the Orpheum.

The Counting Crows touring for their most recent studio release spend time at the Orpheum with Adam Duritz's label's Gigolo Aunts.

New th weekend in the theaters are House on Haunted Hill, Music of the Heart, Stop Making Sense and Return With Honor.

Men's Basketball tips off in exhibition play on Wednesday at the M.

-Adam Murtigniett

Thursday, Oct. 28

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
North of Center, 10 p.m., 21+
AVALON
Duel plus Bil Naked, 7 p.m.
BAYSTATE
Broker plus Tu-fine, 21+
CALVIN THEATER
Bela Heck & the Flecktones
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Lat Hands, 8 p.m.
Anne Weiss, 8 p.m.
Mokilam, 10 p.m.
GRANDSTANDS
The Mitchells plus Tizzy, 10 p.m.
IRON HORSE
How I Learned To Drive, 8 p.m.
Sports
BLUE WALL
WMUA's Sportsline, 5:30 p.m.
Additional On-Campus Events
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
Rocky Horror Picture Show, 10 p.m.

Friday, Oct. 29

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Ben Swift Band, 10 p.m., 21+
AMHERST COLLEGE ALUMNI GYM
The Pietasters, Spring Heeled Jack and the Pilfers, 8 p.m.
BAYSTATE
Chandler Travis Philharmonic plus Bamboo Steamers, 21+
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Will Daily, 8 p.m.
Rik Ekstrom, 9 p.m.
Hummer, 10 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Little Charlie & the Nightcats, 7 p.m.
Ware River Club, 10 p.m.
PEARL STREET
Rustic Overtones plus Gran Torino, 8:30 p.m.
TOAD'S PLACE
They Might Be Giants, 9 p.m.
Raves
FREAKY 2
featuring Bad Boy Bill and DJ Venom, West Indian Ballroom, 3340 Main Street, Hartford, CT, 9 p.m.- 8 a.m.
Dance Clubs
CLUB METRO
House with DJ Rampage, 9 p.m.-2 a.m.
HOT CLUB
70's and 80's Hits with DJ Donnie
MARS NIGHTCLUB
Disco with DJ Michael Kane, 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+
PEARL STREET
Chemistry Friday with Groove Creator and Chris Carter, 10 p.m.
THE GROTTO
Dance with DJ Otis, 10 p.m.-2 a.m., 18+
Performing Arts
ROOKE THEATER - MHC
Lysistrata, 8 p.m.
THEATER 14 – SC
How I Learned To Drive, 8 p.m.
BOWKER AUDITORIUM
MotherSON, 8 p.m.
Karaoke
WORLD WAR II VETERANS ASSN.
9:30 p.m., 21+
Sports
TOTMAN FIELD
Women's Soccer vs Duquesbc, 3 p.m.
Additional On-Campus Events
METAWAMPEE LAWN
Feathered hot-air balloon rides, 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.
BLUEWALL
Something Every Friday with the music of Ellen Cross and movie The Blair Witch Project, 8 p.m.

Saturday, Oct. 30

Notices
Tickets go on sale for Phish at the Hartford Civic Center on Sunday, December 12th.
Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Ed Vada & the Fabulous Heavyweights, 10 p.m., 21+
AVALON
Type O Negative, Puya, Nok, 7 p.m.
BAYSTATE
Drunk Stuntman, 21+
BUTTERFIELD
Uncle Sammy plus Kay Jah Funk
BLACK SHEEP CAFE
Phunjy, 8 p.m.
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Patty Giurleo, 6 p.m.
Dogwood Moon, 8 p.m.
Eric Walker Band, 10 p.m.
HOTEL WARREN
The King Bees, 9 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Mike Welch, 7 p.m.
Electric Blue & the Kuzmick Truth, 10 p.m.
ORPHEUM THEATRE
Guster, The Push Stars, Jump Little Children, 7:30 p.m.
Dance Clubs
CLUB METRO
All ages dance, 8 p.m.-1 a.m.
HOT CLUB
House, Dance and Top 40 with DJ Andy
MARS NIGHTCLUB
House and Techno with DJ Dave "The Wave," 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+
PEARL STREET
Merengue and salsa with DJ Oliveras, 10 p.m., 21+
THE GROTTO
Dance with DJ Steve, 10 p.m.-2 a.m., 21+
Comedy & Improv
CAMPUS CENTER
Mission Improvable, 8 p.m.
Performing Arts
ROOKE THEATER - MHC
Lysistrata, 2 & 8 p.m.
THEATER 14 – SC
How I Learned To Drive, 8 p.m.
Sports
MCGUIRK STADIUM
Football vs Rhode Island, 12:30 p.m.
CURRY HICKS CAGE
Volleyball vs Rhode Island, 7 p.m.

Sunday, Oct. 31

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Interplay Jazz Band, 9 p.m., 21+
BAYSTATE
Stash, 21+
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Ben Swift Band, 9 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Robyn Hitchcock, 7 p.m.
LUPO'S HEARTBREAK HOTEL
Dropkick Murphy's, Anti-Flag, Blood for Blood, Bombshell Rocks, 8 p.m.
MAINE STATE THEATER
"Weird Al" Yankovic, 7:30 p.m.
ORPHEUM THEATRE
Counting Crows, Gigolo Aunts, Joe 90, 7 p.m.
Dance Clubs
MARS NIGHTCLUB
Upscale Hip-Hop and R&B with DJ Kurupt, 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+
Sports
TOTMAN FIELD
Women's Soccer vs St. Bonaventure, 3 p.m.
Additional On-Campus Events
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
Movie The Blair Witch Project, 8 p.m.

Monday, Nov. 1

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Amherst Jazz Orchestra, 8:30 p.m., 21+
AVALON
Iggy Pop, 9 p.m.
BAYSTATE
Copper's Tappen-Zee, King Phooey and Sucker Punch, 21+
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Open Stage, sign-up at 6:30 p.m., starts at 8 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Warren Zevon, 7 p.m.
PEARL STREET
Dan Bern plus Pamela Means, 7 p.m.

Tuesday, Nov. 2

Music
AVALON
Ben Harper & The Innocent Criminals plus Rahzel, 9 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Project / Object (featuring Ike Willis), 7 p.m.
ORPHEUM THEATRE
Meatloaf, 7:30 p.m.
Performing Arts
TOTMAN 101 - UM
Ballroom Dance Club, 6:45 p.m.
Sports
GARBER FIELD
Field Hockey vs Dartmouth, 7 p.m.

Wednesday, Nov. 3

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Michael Gregory & Friends, 10 p.m., 21+
AVALON
MxPx, Too Bad Eugene, No Motive and 22 Jacks, 7:30 p.m.
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Open Poetry, sign-up at 6:30 p.m., starts at 8 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Chris Williamson & Tret Fure, 7 p.m.
PEARL STREET
The Beatnuts plus Dead Pres, 8:30 p.m.
Dance Clubs
NORTHAMPTON CENTER FOR THE ARTS
Swing and salsa with DJ Jitterbug lessons from 7-8:30 p.m., Open Dance 8:30-11:30 p.m.
THE GROTTO
DJ Dance Party, 10:30 p.m.-2 a.m., 18+
Sports
MULLINS CENTER
Men's Basketball vs California All-

Turn to THE SOURCE, page 7

Wanna be an Internet Star?

Enter the MassLive Off-Campus Cam Talent Search

One lucky off-campus apartment will be wired with the latest technology that will put you and your roommates on the Web 24/7.

To enter go to www.masslive.com/offcampuscam and follow the instructions.

You could be the next star on the World Wide Web!

mass LIVE

www.masslive.com/offcampuscam

FUNKMASTER FLEX

With Special Guest D.J.

and featuring Original Vibe Monsters (Area 51 and Alias)

Student Union Ballroom
TODAY OCT. 28, 1999
DOORS OPEN @ 8pm

TICKETS AVAILABLE @ C C. Concourse ~ Tix Unlimited ~ Northampton Box Office (586-8686) ~ The Grow Room

Only $15 for Umass Students
$18 five-college
$20 general public

Brought to you by U.P.C. ~ for more info call 5-2892

■ The Source

continued from page 6

Stars (exhibition), 7 p.m.

Film

Call for latest movie times or go to excite.com and click on movie listings for zip code 01003 for desired date.

Academy of Music Theatre
274 Main Street, Northampton (584-8455).
South Park: Bigger, Longer & Uncut, Stop Making Sense, Three Kings

AMC Mountain Farms 4
Mountain Farms Mall - Route 9 Hadley (584-9155).
Random Hearts, The Sixth Sense, Three Kings, Three to Tango, Music of the Heart

Amherst Theatre
30 Amity Street, Amherst (253-5426).
200 Cigarettes

Greenfield Cinemas
Route 2, The Mohawk Trail, Greenfield (772-0298).
Bringing Out the Dead, Double Jeopardy, Random Hearts, The Story of Us, Three Kings, Three to Tango

Pleasant Street Theatre
27 Pleasant Street, Northampton (586-0935).
American Beauty, The Loss of Sexual Innocence, Return with Honor, eXistenZ

Showcase Cinemas
864 Riverdale Street, West Springfield (733-5131).
The Adventures of Elmo in Grouchland, American Beauty, Bats, The Best Man, Blues Streak, Bringing Out the Dead, Crazy in Alabama, Double Jeopardy, Drive Me Crazy, Fight Club, Random Hearts, The Sixth Sense, The Story of Us, Superstar, Three Kings, Three to Tango, House on Haunted Hill, Music of the Heart

Tower Theatres
19 College Street, South Hadley (533-3456).
Double Jeopardy, Random Hearts, The Story of Us

Outdoors & Trips

UMass Ski 'n' Board Club
454 Student Union (545-3457).
50th Annual Ski 'n' Board Sale (Student Union Ballroom), Nov. 18-20
Learn-to Ski/Board (Killington, VT), Dec. 12
Quebec Weekend, Dec. 3-5
Millennium Ski and Party Weekend (Quebec, Canada), Dec. 30 – Jan. 2 or Dec. 29 – Jan. 2
Winter Gateway Weekend (Quebec, Canada), Feb. 18-21
Escape to the Rockies (Location TBA), March 12-17
Mount Tremblant (Montreal, Canada), March 12-15
Jamaica, March 12-17

Outing Club
452C Student Union (545-3513).
Rock Climbing, Wednesday Oct. 27 (final trip of the season) meeting at 2:20 P.M. at the Student Union steps
Kayak Rolling, Every Friday at Curry Hicks Cage Pool
Costume Hike, Saturday Oct. 30
Mt. Toby Hike, Sunday Oct. 31

Pioneer Valley Sierra Club
586-5580
Quabbin Reservoir Hike led by Alexandra Dawson and will be approximately 5 miles, Oct. 30

Other Activities

If the previous events fail to catch your attention then consider disco bowling at Northampton Bowl; biking, rollerblading, or running the Rail Trail from Northampton to Sunderland; hiking, mountain-biking or rock-climbing one of the area mountains; visiting Puffer's Pond; shopping at the Hampshire or Holyoke Mall; hayride at the Bison Farm in Hadley; mini-golf on route 9; billiards in the UMass campus center; Mike's Billiards in Amherst, or Packard's in Northampton.

Volunteer

Blood Drive
Campus Center Concourse, UMass (1-800-462-2229).
The American Red Cross will be holding blood drives during this month. Thursday October 28 from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Xmas Bell Ringers Needed!
27 Brewster Court, Northampton (585-8729).
Join in the spirit of giving by volunteer to be a bell ringer for the Salvation Army's kettle campaign during Nov. and Dec. Flexible hours, outdoor work, sites in Northampton, Amherst, Hadley and Easthampton. Last year the Salvation Army spent $185,926 in Hampshire County alone, helping 4,308 residents with emergency needs. Help raise money for this worthy cause.

Lectures & Discussions

None scheduled at this time.

Book Readings

Christain Parenti
Food For Thought Books, 106 North Pleasant, Amherst (253-5432).
Christian Parenti teaches at the New College of California, in San Francisco. He has worked as a radio journalist in Central America, New York and California, and his writing has appeared in The Nation, The Progressive, In These Times, The Buffler, and the Christian Science Monitior. Friday, October 29 at 7 p.m.

Archer Mayor
All Souls Unitarian Universalist Church, 399 Main Street, Greenfield (773-8523). Archer Mayor, mystery writer, discussing his newest book, Occam's Razor. Friday, October 29 at 7:30 p.m.

Art Galleries
Paintings out of Poems
Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space, UMass (545-0792). The genesis of an investigation into traditional Japanese haiku and explores the interaction of poetry, painting, and calligraphic imagery. Mon-Thurs 10 a.m.- 5 p.m., Fri 10 a.m.-3 p.m., Sat-Sun 1-4 p.m. opens November 1.

Poiesis: The Language of Imahes
Augusta Savage Gallery, 101 New Africa House, UMass (545-5177). Books, paintings, and drawings by Leandro Soto, a Cuban artist and visiting professor at Mount Holyoke College. Mon-Tue 1-7 p.m., Wed-Fri 1-5 p.u. opens October 26.

I Want to Feel the Way You Do, All the Time
Hampden Gallery, Southwest Residential Area, UMass (545-0680). An installation contrasting nature and culture by Hirokazu Fukawa. Mon-Fri 3-7 p.m., Sun 2-5 p.m. through October 30.

Think Again
Hampden Film / Photo Gallery, Hampshire College (559-5447). An exhibit of print works by a collaborative team of two artists, S.A. Bachman and David Attyah, who create agitprop art with a political twist. Mon-Thurs 9-12 a.m., Fri-Sun 1-6 p.m. through October 29

Libraries

Only regular hours listed, call for holidays.

Biological Sciences
214 Morrill Science Center, UMass (545-2674).
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-9 p.m.
Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-9 p.m.

Forbes Library
20 West Street, Northampton (587-1011).
Monday 1-9 p.m.
Tuesday 9 a.m.-6 p.m.
Wednesday 9 a.m.-9 p.m.
Thursday 1-5 p.m.
Fri-Sat 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Coolidge Room: Mon-Wed 12-3 p.m.

Johnson Library Center
Hampshire College (559-5418).
Mon-Fri 8:30 a.m.-midnight
Sat-Sun 10 a.m.- midnight

Keefe Science
Amherst College (542-2076).
Mon-Thurs 8:30 a.m.-1 a.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m.-10 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Sunday noon-1 a.m.

Mount Holyoke College
MHC Main Library, 50 College Street, South Hadley (538-2225).
Mon-Fri 8 a.m.-midnight
Saturday 9 a.m.- midnight
Sunday 10 a.m.- midnight

Neilson
Smith College (585-2910).
Mon-Thurs 7:45 a.m.-midnight
Friday 7:45 a.m.-11 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-1 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Physical Sciences & Engineering
Lederle Lowrise, 2nd floor, UMass (545-1370).
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-9 p.m.
Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-9 p.m.

Robert Frost
Amherst College (542-2519).
Mon-Thurs 8:30 a.m.-1 a.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m.-midnight
Saturday 9:30 a.m.-11 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-1 a.m.

Vincent Morgan Music
Amherst College (542-2587).
Mon-Thurs 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Friday 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday noon-5 p.m.
Sunday 2 p.m.-11 p.m.

W.E.B. DuBois
UMass Main Library (545-0150).
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-midnight
Friday 8 a.m.-10 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.- 10 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Upcoming Concerts

SAVE FERRIS
Nov. 4, Avalon
COUNTING CROWS, GIGOLO AUNTS
Nov. 6, Orpheum Theatre
MIGHTY PURPLE
Nov. 6, Iron Horse
MIRACLE ORCHESTRA
Nov. 6, Iron Horse
RAT DOG
Nov. 10, Worcester Palladium
PRIMUS, INCUBUS, BUCKETHEAD
Nov. 10, Avalon
MARK ERELLI
Nov. 11, Iron Horse
BUFFALO TOM
Nov. 11, Middle East
WILCO
Nov. 11, Avalon
LOSER KIDS TOUR W/ BLINK 182, SILVERCHAIR, FENIX TX
Nov. 12, Worcester Palladium
FOUNTAINS OF WAYNE
Nov. 12, Amherst College Frontroom
LETTERS TO CLEO
Nov. 12, Paradise Rock Club
MICHAEL GLABICKI (of Rusted Root)
Nov. 13, Pearl Street
THEY MIGHT BE GIANTS
Nov. 15, Amherst College Frontroom
CHRIS CORNELL
Nov. 15, Orpheum Theatre
PENNYWISE, STRUNG OUT, ALL
Nov. 15, Avalon
INSANE CLOWN POSSE
Nov. 15, The Webster
311
Nov. 15, Worcester Palladium
BOB DYLAN & PHIL LESH
Nov. 14, Worcester Centrum
GET UP KIDS, AT THE DRIVE-IN, ULTIMATE FAKEBOOK
Nov. 14, Amherst College Frontroom
LIVE
Nov. 18, Orpheum Theatre
VOICES ON THE VERGE: ROSE POLENZANI, ERIN MCKEOWN, JESS KLEIN AND BETH AMSEL
Nov. 18, Iron Horse
BOB DYLAN, PHIL LESH & FRIENDS
Nov. 18 Mullins Center
FILTER, DRAIN STH
Nov. 20, Avalon
MEGADETH, STATIC-X, ALL
Nov. 21, Orpheum Theatre
MEDESKI, MARTIN & WOOD
Nov. 22, Calvin Theater
BUCKCHERRY
Nov. 24, The Webster
STING
Nov. 27, Orpheum Theatre
BIG BAD VOODOO DADDY, BLUE HAWAIIANS
Nov. 27, Avalon
THE THE
Nov. 30 & Dec. 1, Iron Horse
RAGE AGAINST THE MACHINE, GANG STARR
Nov. 30, Worcester Centrum
MOXY FRUVOUS
Dec. 3, Amherst College Frontroom
MELISSA FERRICK
Dec. 3, Iron Horse
BELIZBEHA
Dec. 4, Iron Horse
GODSMACK, REVEILLE, JIM ROSE CIRCUS
Dec. 4, The Webster
EDDIE FROM OHIO
Dec. 5, Iron Horse
B.B. KING
Dec. 5, Worcester Palladium
EDDIE FROM OHIO
Dec. 5, Iron Horse
B. B. KING
Dec. 7, Fine Arts Center
LUNA
Dec. 9, Pearl Street
YES
Dec. 11, Orpheum Theatre
BARENAKED LADIES
Dec. 12, Orpheum Theatre
PHISH
Dec. 12, Hartford Civic Center
PHISH
Dec. 13, Providence Civic Center

Venues

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
36 North Pleasant Street, Amherst (253-4400).
AVALON 15 Landsdowne Street, Boston (617-262-2424).
BAY STATE 41 Strong Avenue, Northampton (584-8515).
BILL'S BAR 5-5 Landsdowne Street, Boston (617-421-9678).
CALVIN THEATER 17 King Street, Northampton (584-0610).
CHAPIN AUDITORIUM Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley.
CLUB 21 62 Turkey Hill Road, Belchertown (323-4117).
CLUB KAOS 1592 Main Street, Springfield (739-7900).
CLUB METRO 492 Pleasant Street, Northampton (582-9898).
FIRE & WATER CAFE 5 Old South Street, Northampton (586-8536).
IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL 20 Center Street, Northampton (584-0610).
JOHN M. GREENE HALL Smith College, Main Street, Northampton
MIDDLE EAST 472/480 Mass. Ave, Central Square, Cambridge (617-864-3278).
THE SKYBOX 1109 Campus Center, UMass (545-5216 or www.umass.edu/skybox).
THE SOLUTION 84-90 Worthington Street, Springfield (253-4400).

General Information
All events all ages unless otherwise noted. What do you think? Would you like to read one-line event previews, desire a format change, or post an event? Please call (413) 545-1361, fax (413) 545-1592 or email eventcalendar@excite.com.

INTERESTED IN A CO-OP OR INTERNSHIP THIS SPRING ?

Let the Campus Career Network help YOU get started !

Come to a "Welcome to Field Experience Session"

MONDAYS
3 - 4 pm	103 South College
TUESDAYS
3 - 4 pm	124 Draper Hall
4 - 5 pm	13 SOM Building
WEDNESDAYS
2:45 - 3:45 pm	13 SOM Building
3:30 - 4:30 pm	304 ELAB
THURSDAYS
3 - 4 pm	103 South College
FRIDAYS
10 - 11 am	329 ELAB
2 - 3 pm	114 Stockbridge Hall

Check out these HOT opportunities!

Dateline NBC : Internship, seeking COMM, ENGL, and JOUR majors
Fidelity Investments : 6 month co-op, seeking ACCT, ECON, FIN and MGMT majors
Compaq : Spring co-op, seeking COMP, CSE, and EE majors
Pratt and Whitney : 6 month co-op, seeking COMP and CSE majors
Boston Globe : 6 month and summer co-ops, seeking COMM, ENGL, and JOUR majors
Reebok : 6 month co-op, seeking COMM majors

Contact the Field Experience Coordinator in YOUR college !

College of Food and Natural Resources
109 Stockbridge Hall
577-0421

College of Engineering
126A Marston Hall
577-0419

College of Natural Sciences and Math
209 Mather Building
577-0428

College of Arts and Humanities
264 Bartlett Hall
545-6266

College of Education, Nursing and Public Health
416 Arnold House
577-0427

College of Social and Behavioral Sciences
102A South College
545-6267

Isenberg School Of Management
208C SOM Building
577-0418

Campus Career Network

GUESS WHICH ONE IS GETTING PAID?

TAKE NOTES. GET PAID.

You have to go to class anyway, so why not get paid to do it? Apply now @ allstudents.com or call 1-888-640-8810. Free online lecture notes, access to campus email, your virtual day planner.

allstudents.com

The Five College Area's Source for Discovering the Weekly Happenings of New England and Beyond

THE SOURCE

Another Fine Product of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Every Thursday!

It's actually going to occur at UMass; this can't be true. In case you have been vacant from the campus the past week, nightlife makes a triumphant return to the campus in November when The Skybox, the second largest music club in Western Massachusetts, officially opens its doors. Showcasing emerging national and regional talent along with producing weekly dance nights, The Skybox should boost the campus social scene. Acts rumored to be coming this semester include a diverse lineup from Guster and Godsmack to the Dropkick Murphy's and Rane. For further information head to www.umass.edu/skybox.

There are just a few more days left to make a visit to Crazy Al and his Haunted Hayride. Located at the Long Hollow Bison Farm on Route 9 in Hadley, continuous rides begin at 7 p.m. and last for half an hour, taking you through the dark forest and Corn Field of Death providing for "a frightfully good time."

Tonight The Mitchells have a release party for their first full-length titled Contraption at Grandstands in Northampton. The all UMass alumni band lineup has Tizzy opening. If you're in the Halloween mood, don't miss the Rocky Horror Picture Show, a cult classic, showing in the Campus Center Auditorium.

If you're in the mood to attend one of the countless parties occurring this weekend up and down North Pleasant or in the apartments, just do yourself a favor and obey the local ordinances along with your own tolerance. The police are certain to be in full force this weekend.

A good place to warm up on Friday is Amherst College's Alumni Gym as it hosts The Pietasters, Spring Heeled Jack and the Pilfers. Afterwards drive down to Freaky 2 in Hartford where the party goes on strong until the daylight hours. If you are looking to cool it, public skating is going strong at the Mullins Center from 9:30 to 11:20 p.m.

Butterfield kicks off their concert season on Saturday when Kay Jah Funk returns opening for Uncle Sammy. In past years the dormitory has hosted a wide array of indie, hardcore, and jam bands most recently including Strangefolk and Percy Hill. A great triple bill in Boston presents itself when locals Guster and the Push Stars team up with Jump Little Children at the Orpheum.

The Counting Crows touring for their most recent studio release spend time at the Orpheum with Adam Duritz's label's Gigolo Aunts.

New th. weekend in the theaters are House on Haunted Hill, Music of the Heart, Stop Making Sense and Return With Honor.

Men's Basketball tips off in exhibition play on Wednesday at the M.

-Adam Martignetti

Thursday, Oct. 28

Music

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
North of Center, 10 p.m., 21+

AVALON
Fuel plus Bil Naked, 7 p.m.

BAYSTATE
Broker plus Lo-lime, 21+

CALVIN THEATER
Bela Fleck & the Flecktones

FIRE & WATER CAFE
Fat Hands, 8 p.m.
Anne Weiss, 9 p.m.
Mokium, 10 p.m.

GRANDSTANDS
The Mitchells plus Tizzy, 10 p.m.

IRON HORSE
Battfield Band, 7 p.m.

STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
Funkmaster Flex, 7:30 p.m.

Dance Clubs

HOT CLUB
Techno and Top 40 with DJ Bill

MARS NIGHTCLUB
Top 40, Hip-Hop, R&B with DJ's KLS and M.I.C., 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+

Performing Arts

TOTMAN 101 - UM
Ballroom Dance Club, 6:45 p.m.

ROOKE THEATER - MHC
Lysistrata, 8 p.m.

THEATER 14 – SC
How I Learned To Drive, 8 p.m.

Sports

BLUE WALL
WMUA's Sportsline, 5:30 p.m.

Additional On-Campus Events

CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
Rocky Horror Picture Show, 10 p.m.

Friday, Oct. 29

Music

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Ben Swift Band, 10 p.m., 21+

AMHERST COLLEGE ALUMNI GYM
The Pietasters, Spring Heeled Jack and the Pilfers, 8 p.m.

BAYSTATE
Chandler Travis Philharmonic plus Bamboo Steamers, 21+

FIRE & WATER CAFE
Will Daily, 8 p.m.
Rik Ekstrom, 9 p.m.
Hummer, 10 p.m.

IRON HORSE
Little Charlie & the Nightcats, 7 p.m.
Ware River Club, 10 p.m.

PEARL STREET
Rustic Overtones plus Gran Torino, 8:30 p.m.

TOAD'S PLACE
They Might Be Giants, 9 p.m.

Raves

FREAKY 2
Featuring Bad Boy Bill and DJ Venom, West Indian Ballroom, 3340 Main Street, Hartford, CT, 9 p.m.- 8 a.m.

Dance Clubs

CLUB METRO
House with DJ Ranpage, 9 p.m.-2 a.m.

HOT CLUB
70's and 80's Hits with DJ Donnie

MARS NIGHTCLUB
Disco with DJ Michael Kane, 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+

PEARL STREET
Chemistry Friday with Groove Creator and Chris Carter, 10 p.m.

THE GROTTO
Dance with DJ Otis, 10 p.m.-2 a.m., 18+

Performing Arts

ROOKE THEATER - MHC
Lysistrata, 8 p.m.

THEATER 14 – SC
How I Learned To Drive, 8 p.m.

BOWKER AUDITORIUM
MotherSON, 8 p.m.

Karaoke

WORLD WAR II VETERANS ASSN.
9:30 p.m., 21+

Sports

TOTMAN FIELD
Women's Soccer vs Duquesbe, 3 p.m.

Additional On-Campus Events

METAWAMPEE LAWN
Feathered hot-air balloon rides, 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.

BLUEWALL
Something Every Friday with the music of Ellen Cross and movie The Blair Witch Project, 8 p.m.

Saturday, Oct. 30

Notices

Tickets go on sale for Phish at the Hartford Civic Center on Sunday, December 12th.

Music

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Ed Vada & the Fabulous Heavyweights, 10 p.m., 21+

AVALON
Type O Negative, Puya, Nok, 7 p.m.

BAYSTATE
Drunk Stuntman, 21+

BUTTERFIELD
Uncle Sammy plus Kay Jah Funk

BLACK SHEEP CAFE
Plump, 8 p.m.

FIRE & WATER CAFE
Patty Giurleo, 6 p.m.
Dogwood Moon, 8 p.m.
Eric Walker Band, 10 p.m.

HOTEL WARREN
The King Bees, 9 p.m.

IRON HORSE
Mike Welch, 7 p.m.
Electric Blue & the Kozmick Truth, 10 p.m.

ORPHEUM THEATRE
Guster, The Push Stars, Jump Little Children, 7:30 p.m.

Dance Clubs

CLUB METRO
All ages dance, 8 p.m.-1 a.m.

HOT CLUB
House, Dance and Top 40 with DJ Andy

MARS NIGHTCLUB
House and Techno with DJ Dave "The Wave," 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+

PEARL STREET
Merengue and salsa with DJ Oliveras, 10 p.m., 21+

THE GROTTO
Dance with DJ Steve, 10 p.m.-2 a.m., 21+

Comedy & Improv

CAMPUS CENTER
Mission Improvable, 8 p.m.

Performing Arts

ROOKE THEATER - MHC
Lysistrata, 2 & 8 p.m.

THEATER 14 – SC
How I Learned To Drive, 8 p.m.

Sports

MCGUIRK STADIUM
Football vs Rhode Island, 12:30 p.m.

CURRY HICKS CAGE
Volleyball vs Rhode Island, 7 p.m.

Sunday, Oct. 31

Music

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Interplay Jazz Band, 9 p.m., 21+

BAYSTATE
Stash, 21+

FIRE & WATER CAFE
Ben Swift Band, 9 p.m.

IRON HORSE
Robyn Hitchcock, 7 p.m.

LUPO'S HEARTBREAK HOTEL
Dropkick Murphy's, Anti-Flag, Blood for Blood, Bombshell Rocks, 8 p.m.

MAINE STATE THEATER
"Weird Al" Yankovic, 7:30 p.m.

ORPHEUM THEATRE
Counting Crows, Gigolo Aunts, Joe 90, 7 p.m.

Dance Clubs

MARS NIGHTCLUB
Upscale Hip-Hop and R&B with DJ Kurupt, 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+

Sports

TOTMAN FIELD
Women's Soccer vs St. Bonaventure, 3 p.m.

Additional On-Campus Events

CAMPUS CENTER AUDIOTRIUM
Movie The Blair Witch Project, 8 p.m.

Monday, Nov. 1

Music

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Amherst Jazz Orchestra, 8:30 p.m., 21+

AVALON
Iggy Pop, 9 p.m.

BAYSTATE
Copper's Tappen-Zee, King Phooey and Sucker Punch, 21+

FIRE & WATER CAFE
Open Stage, sign-up at 6:30 p.m., starts at 8 p.m.

IRON HORSE
Warren Zevon, 7 p.m.

PEARL STREET
Dan Bern plus Pamela Means, 7 p.m.

Tuesday, Nov. 2

Music

AVALON
Ben Harper & The Innocent Criminals plus Rahzel, 9 p.m.

IRON HORSE
Project / Object (featuring Ike Willis), 7 p.m.

ORPHEUM THEATRE
Meatloaf, 7:30 p.m.

Performing Arts

TOTMAN 101 - UM
Ballroom Dance Club, 6:45 p.m.

Sports

GARBER FIELD
Field Hockey vs Dartmouth, 7 p.m.

Wednesday, Nov. 3

Music

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Michael Gregory & Friends, 10 p.m., 21+

AVALON
MxPx, Too Bad Eugene, No Motive and 22 Jacks, 7:30 p.m.

FIRE & WATER CAFE
Open Poetry, sign-up at 6:30 p.m., starts at 7 p.m.

IRON HORSE
Chris Williamson & Tret Fure, 7 p.m.

PEARL STREET
The Beatnuts plus Dead Pres, 8:30 p.m.

Dance Clubs

NORTHAMPTON CENTER FOR THE ARTS
Swing and salsa with DJ Jitterbug lessons from 7-8:30 p.m., Open Dance 8:30-11:30 p.m.

THE GROTTO
DJ Dance Party, 10:30 p.m.-2 a.m., 18+

Sports

MULLINS CENTER
Men's Basketball vs California All-

Turn to THE SOURCE, page 7

Wanna be an

Internet Star?

Enter the MassLive Off-Campus Cam Talent Search

One lucky off-campus apartment will be wired with the latest technology that will put you and your roommates on the Web 24/7.

To enter, go to www.masslive.com/offcampuscam and follow the instructions.

You could be the next star on the World Wide Web!

mass LIVE

www.masslive.com/offcampuscam

FUNKMASTER FLEX

FMF

With Special Guest D.J.

and featuring Original Vibe Monsters (Area 51 and Alies)

Student Union Ballroom

TODAY OCT. 28, 1999

DOORS OPEN @ 8pm

TICKETS AVAILABLE @ C C. Concourse ~ Tix Unlimited ~ Northampton Box Office (586-8686) ~ The Grow Room

Only $15 for Umass Students

$18 five-college

$20 general public

Brought to you by U.P.C. ~ for more info call 5-2892

The Source

continued from page 6

Stars (exhibition), 7 p.m.

Film

Call for latest movie times or go to excite.com and click on movie listings for zip code 01003 for desired date.

Academy of Music Theatre
274 Main Street, Northampton (584-8455)
South Park: Bigger, Longer & Uncut, Stop Making Sense, Three Kings

AMC Mountain Farms 4
Mountain Farms Mall - Route 9 Hadley (584-9153)
Random Hearts, The Sixth Sense, Three Kings, Three to Tango, Music of the Heart

Amherst Theatre
30 Amity Street, Amherst (253-5426)
200 Cigarettes

Greenfield Cinemas
Route 2, The Mohawk Trail, Greenfield (772-0298)
Bringing Out the Dead, Double Jeopardy, Random Hearts, The Story of Us, Three Kings, Three to Tango

Pleasant Street Theatre
27 Pleasant Street, Northampton (586-0955)
American Beauty, The Loss of Sexual Innocence, Return with Honor, eXistenZ

Showcase Cinemas
864 Riverdale Street, West Springfield (733-5131)
The Adventures of Elmo in Grouchland, American Beauty, Bats, The Best Man, Blues Streak, Bringing Out the Dead, Crazy in Alabama, Double Jeopardy, Drive Me Crazy, Fight Club, Random Hearts, The Sixth Sense, The Story of Us, Superstar, Three Kings, Three to Tango, House on Haunted Hill, Music of the Heart

Tower Theatres
19 College Street, South Hadley (533-3456)
Double Jeopardy, Random Hearts, The Story of Us

Outdoors & Trips

UMass Ski 'n' Board Club
434 Student Union (545-3437)
30th Annual Ski 'n' Board Sale (Student Union Ballroom), Nov. 18-20
Learn-to Ski/Board (Killington, VT), Dec. 12
Quebec Weekend, Dec. 3-5
Millennium Ski and Party Weekend (Quebec, Canada), Dec. 30 – Jan. 2 or Dec. 29 – Jan. 2
Winter Gateway Weekend (Quebec, Canada), Feb. 18-21
Escape to the Rockies (Location TBA), March 12-17
Mount Tremblant (Montreal, Canada), March 12-15
Jamaica, March 12-17

Outing Club
432C Student Union (545-3151)
Rock Climbing, Wednesday Oct. 27 (final trip of the season) meeting at 2:20 P.M. at the Student Union steps
Kayak Rolling, Every Friday at Curry Hicks Cage Pool
Costume Hike, Saturday Oct. 30
Mt. Toby Hike, Sunday Oct. 31

Pioneer Valley Sierra Club
586-5506
Quabbin Reservoir Hike led by Alexandra Dawson and will be approximately 5 miles, Oct. 30

Other Activities

If the previous events fail to catch your attention then consider disco bowling at Northampton Bowl; biking, rollerblading, or running the Rail Trail from Northampton to Sunderland; hiking, mountain-biking or rock-climbing one of the area mountains; visiting Puffer's Pond; shopping at the Hampshire or Holyoke Mall; hayride at the Bison Farm in Hadley; mini-golf on route 9; billiards in the UMass campus center, Mike's Billiards in Amherst, or Packard's in Northampton.

Volunteer

Blood Drive
Campus Center Concourse, UMass (1-800-462-2229). The American Red Cross will be holding blood drives during this month. Thursday October 28 from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Xmas Bell Ringers Needed!
27 Brewster Court, Northampton (585-8729). Join in the spirit of giving by volunteer to be a bell ringer for the Salvation Army's kettle campaign during Nov. and Dec. Flexible hours, outdoor work, sites in Northampton, Amherst, Hadley and Easthampton. Last year the Salvation Army spent $185,926 in Hampshire County alone, helping 4,508 residents with emergency needs. Help raise money for this worthy cause.

Lectures & Discussions

None scheduled at this time.

Book Readings

Christain Parenti
Food For Thought Books, 106 North Pleasant, Amherst (253-5432).
Christian Parenti teaches at the New College of California, in San Francisco. He has worked as a radio journalist in Central America, New York and California, and his writing has appeared in The Nation, The Progressive, In These Times, The Baffler, and the Christian Science Monitor. Friday, October 29 at 7 p.m.

Archer Mayor
All Souls Unitarian Universalist Church, 399 Main Street, Greenfield (773-8523). Archer Mayor, mystery writer, discussing his newest book, Occam's Razor. Friday, October 29 at 7:30 p.m.

Art Galleries

Paintings out of Poems
Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space, UMass (545-0792). The genesis of an investigation into traditional Japanese haiku and explores the interaction of poetry, painting, and calligraphic imagery. Mon-Thurs 10 a.m.- 5 p.m., Fri 10 a.m.-3 p.m., Sat-Sun 1-4 p.m. opens November 1.

Poiesis: The Language of Imahes
Augusta Savage Gallery, 101 New Africa House, UMass (545-5177). Books, paintings, and drawings by Leandro Soto, a Cuban artist and visiting professor at Mount Holyoke College. Mon-Tue 1-7 p.m., Wed-Fri 1-5 p.m. opens October 26.

I Want to Feel the Way You Do, All the Time
Hampden Gallery, Southwest Residential Area, UMass (545-0680). An installation contrasting nature and culture by Hirokazu Fukawa. Mon-Fri 3-7 p.m., Sun 2-5 p.m. through October 30.

Think Again
Hampden Film / Photo Gallery, Hampshire College (559-5447). An exhibit of print works by a collaborative team of two artists, S.A. Bachman and David Attyah, who create agitprop art with a political twist. Mon-Thurs 9-12 a.m., Fri-Sun 1-6 p.m. through October 29.

Libraries

Only regular hours listed, call for holidays.

Biological Sciences
214 Morrill Science Center, UMass (545-2674)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-9 p.m.
Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-9 p.m.

Forbes Library
20 West Street, Northampton (587-1011)
Monday 1-9 p.m.
Tuesday 9 a.m.-6 p.m.
Wednesday 9 a.m.-9 p.m.
Thursday 1-5 p.m.
Fri-Sat 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Coolidge Room: Mon-Wed 12-5 p.m.

Johnson Library Center
Hampshire College (559-5418)
Mon-Fri 8:30 a.m.-midnight
Sat-Sun 10 a.m.- midnight

Keefe Science
Amherst College (542-2076)
Mon-Thurs 8:30 a.m.-1 a.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m.-10 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Sunday noon-1 a.m.

Mount Holyoke College
MHC Main Library, 50 College Street, South Hadley (538-2225)
Mon-Fri 8 a.m.-midnight
Saturday 9 a.m.- midnight
Sunday 10 a.m.- midnight

Neilson
Smith College (585-2910)
Mon-Thurs 7:45 a.m.-midnight
Friday 7:45 a.m.-11 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-1 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Physical Sciences & Engineering
Lederle Lowrise, 2nd floor, UMass (545-1370)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-9 p.m.
Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-9 p.m.

Robert Frost
Amherst College (542-2319)
Mon-Thurs 8:30 a.m.-1 a.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m.-midnight
Saturday 9:30 a.m.-11 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-1 a.m.

Vincent Morgan Music
Amherst College (542-2387)
Mon-Thurs 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Friday 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday noon-5 p.m.
Sunday 2 p.m.-11 p.m.

W.E.B. DuBois
UMass Main Library (545-0150)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-midnight
Friday 8 a.m.-10 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.-10 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Upcoming Concerts

SAVE FERRIS
Nov. 4, Avalon

COUNTING CROWS, GIGOLO AUNTS
Nov. 6, Orpheum Theatre

MIGHTY PURPLE
Nov. 6, Iron Horse

MIRACLE ORCHESTRA
Nov. 6, Iron Horse

RAT DOG
Nov. 10, Worcester Palladium

PRIMUS, INCUBUS, BUCKETHEAD
Nov. 10, Avalon

MARK ERELLI
Nov. 11, Iron Horse

BUFFALO TOM
Nov. 11, Middle East

WILCO
Nov. 11, Avalon

LOSER KIDS TOUR W/ BLINK 182, SILVERCHAIR, FENIX TX
Nov. 12, Worcester Palladium

FOUNTAINS OF WAYNE
Nov. 12, Amherst College Frontroom

LETTERS TO CLEO
Nov. 12, Paradise Rock Club

MICHAEL GLABICKI (of Rusted Root)
Nov. 13, Pearl Street

THEY MIGHT BE GIANTS
Nov. 13, Amherst College Frontroom

CHRIS CORNELL
Nov. 13, Orpheum Theatre

PENNYWISE, STRUNG OUT, ALL
Nov. 15, Avalon

INSANE CLOWN POSSE
Nov. 15, The Webster

311
Nov. 13, Worcester Palladium

BOB DYLAN & PHIL LESH
Nov. 14, Worcester Centrum

GET UP KIDS, AT THE DRIVE-IN, ULTIMATE FAKEBOOK
Nov. 14, Amherst College Frontroom

LIVE
Nov. 18, Orpheum Theatre

VOICES ON THE VERGE: ROSE POLENZANI, ERIN MCKEOWN, JESS KLEIN AND BETH AMSEL
Nov. 18, Iron Horse

BOB DYLAN, PHIL LESH 7 FRIENDS
Nov. 18, Mullins Center

FILTER, DRAIN STH
Nov. 20, Avalon

MEGADETH, STATIC-X, ALL
Nov. 21, Orpheum Theatre

MEDESKI, MARTIN & WOOD
Nov. 22, Calvin Theater

BUCKCHERRY
Nov. 24, The Webster

STING
Nov. 27, Orpheum Theatre

BIG BAD VOODOO DADDY, BLUE HAWAIIANS
Nov. 27, Avalon

THE THE
Nov. 30 & Dec. 1, Iron Horse

RAGE AGAINST THE MACHINE, GANG STARR
Nov. 30, Worcester Centrum

MOBY REVIVOS
Dec. 3, Amherst College Frontroom

MELISSA FERRICK
Dec. 3, Iron Horse

BELIZBEHA
Dec. 4, Iron Horse

GODSMACK, REVEILLE, JIM ROSE CIRCUS
Dec. 4, The Webster

EDDIE FROM OHIO
Dec. 5, Iron Horse

B.B. KING
Dec. 5, Worcester Palladium

EDDIE FROM OHIO
Dec. 5, Iron Horse

B. B. KING
Dec. 7, Fine Arts Center

LUNA
Dec. 9, Pearl Street

YES
Dec. 11, Orpheum Theatre

BARENAKED LADIES
Dec. 12, Orpheum Theatre

PHISH
Dec. 12, Hartford Civic Center

PHISH
Dec. 13, Providence Civic Center

Venues

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
36 North Pleasant Street, Amherst (253-4400)

AVALON 15 Landsdowne Street, Boston (617-262-2424)

BAY STATE 41 Strong Avenue, Northampton (584-8513)

BILL'S BAR 5.5 Landsdowne Street, Boston (617-421-9678)

CALVIN THEATER 17 King Street, Northampton (584-0610)

CHAPIN AUDITORIUM Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley

CLUB 21 62 Turkey Hill Road, Belchertown (323-4117)

CLUB KAOS 1592 Main Street, Springfield (739-7900)

CLUB METRO 492 Pleasant Street, Northampton (582-8898)

FIRE & WATER CAFE 5 Old South Street, Northampton (586-8536)

IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL 20 Center Street, Northampton (584-0610)

JOHN M. GREENE HALL Smith College, Main Street, Northampton

MIDDLE EAST 472-480 Mass. Ave., Central Square, Cambridge (617-864-3278)

THE SKYBOX 1109 Campus Center, UMass (545-5210 or www.umass.edu/skybox)

THE SOLUTION 84-90 Worthington Street, Springfield (253-4400)

General Information
All events all ages unless otherwise noted. What do you think? Would you like to read one-line event previews, desire a format change, or post an event? Please call (413) 545-1361, fax (413) 545-1592 or email eventcalendar@excite.com.

INTERESTED IN A CO-OP OR INTERNSHIP THIS SPRING ?

Let the Campus Career Network help YOU get started !

Come to a "Welcome to Field Experience Session"

MONDAYS
3 - 4 pm — 103 South College

TUESDAYS
3 - 4 pm — 124 Draper Hall
4 - 5 pm — 13 SOM Building

WEDNESDAYS
2:45 - 3:45 pm — 13 SOM Building
3:30 - 4:30 pm — 304 ELAB

THURSDAYS
3 - 4 pm — 103 South College

FRIDAYS
10 - 11 am — 329 ELAB
2 - 3 pm — 114 Stockbridge Hall

Check out these HOT opportunities!

Dateline NBC : Internship, seeking COMM, ENGL, and JOUR majors
Fidelity Investments : 6 month co-op, seeking ACCT, ECON, FIN and MGMT majors
Compaq : Spring co-op, seeking COMP, CSE, and EE majors
Pratt and Whitney : 6 month co-op, seeking COMP and CSE majors
Boston Globe : 6 month and summer co-ops, seeking COMM, ENGL, and JOUR majors
Reebok : 6 month co-op, seeking COMM majors

Contact the Field Experience Coordinator in YOUR college !

College of Food and Natural Resources, 109 Stockbridge Hall, 577-0421
College of Engineering, 126A Marston Hall, 577-0419
College of Natural Sciences and Math, 209 Mather Building, 577-0428
College of Arts and Humanities, 264 Bartlett Hall, 545-6266
College of Education, Nursing and Public Health, 416 Arnold House, 577-0427
College of Social and Behavioral Sciences, 102A South College, 545-6267
Isenberg School Of Management, 208C SOM Building, 577-0418

Campus Career Network

GUESS WHICH ONE IS GETTING PAID?

TAKE NOTES. GET PAID.

You have to go to class anyway, so why not get paid to do it? Apply now @ allstudents.com or call 1-888-840-8810. Free online lecture notes, access to campus email, your virtual day planner.

allstudents.com

Baseball Playoffs, Costner recall Hollywood's past

COURTESY LOS ANGELES TIMES

Recently seeing Kevin Costner in a baseball movie, For Love of the Game, reminded us of all Hollywood's efforts to capture our National Pastime, including 1992's A League of their Own.

By Chris Kaltenbach
The Baltimore Sun

When it comes to the national pastime, Hollywood hasn't always kept its eye on the ball.

Sure, baseball has been a major player in any number of films. But how many of them have really been about the game? How many have really offered insight into what it's like to swing a bat, hurl a pitch or stand there in front of thousands of screaming people? How many of them have really looked at the game, unexpressed to using it as simply a plot, theme or [illegible]

Or to put it another way, how many baseball films are truly major-league efforts?

Fortunately, there are some good ones. Anything with Kevin Costner in it is guaranteed to at least get the game part right. But there are some serious miscues out there as well, baseball films that are no more about baseball than iKing Lear\ is about royalty.

Herewith, a dozen examples, in no particular order, that range over the entire spectrum. And yes, I know plenty of movies aren't even on the list, including The Winning Team (with Ronald Reagan as Grover Cleveland Alexander), Bang the Drum Slowly and The Fan.

The Natural (1984): A film not so much about baseball as about baseball as myth. Gets extra points for casting Robert Redford, who actually played the game in college (although that final slo-mo swing looks a tad awkward), and for a fireworks show to end all fireworks shows. Rating: Solid double to left that would have been a triple if the batter had any speed.

Field of Dreams (1989): A sweet fable for all us kids who were never happier than when we were sitting next to our dads at the ballpark. You don't learn much about playing the game, but you sure learn about loving it. Docked a base for having Shoeless Joe Jackson hit from the wrong side of the plate. Rating: Two-base hit that hugged the right-field foul line.

The Jackie Robinson Story (1950): Robinson, in the prime of his playing career, stars as himself. A little more about the enormous pressures he faced breaking baseball's color barrier than about how wonderfully he played the game, but still a film to be treasured. Rating: Game-winning, bases-loaded single.

Bull Durham (1988): The Casablanca of baseball films, as two men vie for the soul of the woman they love. Actually, they fight just as hard for the soul of the game they love. Neither baseball nor Susan Sarandon ever seemed sexier, while Costner looks and acts like a ballplayer. Here's betting you actually learn something about baseball watching this film. Rating: Home run to dead center.

Pride of the Yankees (1945): A great film, as Gary Cooper plays that most tragic of baseball's heroes, Lou Gehrig, although the game is ancillary to the man. Still, they tried so hard. Cooper, a natural right-hander, learned to hunt and throw left-handed, and would run to third base when he hit the ball (the filmmakers then reversed the film, so it looked like he was batting left-handed). And Babe Ruth even got to play himself! Rating: Bases-loaded triple.

Fear Strikes Out (1957): Anthony Perkins, as troubled Boston Red Sox outfielder/shortstop Jimmy Piersall, looks as much like a ballplayer as my Aunt Flo, and I don't even have an Aunt Flo. Sure, there are some nice scenes, including Perkins scaling the backstop after hitting a home run, but you don't for a second believe these guys would last a minute inside the real Fenway Park. Rating: Swinging strike three.

The Babe Ruth Story (1948): Blecch! William Bendix plays Babe Ruth as comic-book hero, not sports icon. The scene where he calls the shot in the 1932 World Series vs. the Chicago Cubs may be the single most ludicrous moment in all of film. And don't even get me started on the dying kid who's promised a home run; just reliving that in memory is making my blood sugar go up. Rating: Ground out, runner trips over first base.

It Happens Every Spring (1949): Lots of laughs, as Ray Milland plays a chemist who discovers a wood repellent that, when applied to his pitches, makes them unhittable, and carries his team to the World Series. Great fun, especially the relationship between Milland and Paul Douglas as his catcher, and the games look real (except for that darting screwball, of course). Rating: A long fly that becomes a ground-rule double when a dog grabs it and runs off the field. The crowd roars.

For Love of the Game (1999): Great job of depicting the mind games that play out between a pitcher and a batter, and of showing what a lonely place the pitching mound can be. If only that overwrought romance didn't keep getting in the way. Rating: Double, out trying to stretch it into a triple.

The Bingo Long Traveling All-Stars and Motor Kings (1974): Billy Dee Williams, James Earl Jones and Richard Pryor are 1930s Negro Leaguers who start their own barnstorming team. Few baseball films have had more fun depicting the game than this one, and isn't that what the game's supposed to be about? Rating: Game-winning single by a career journeyman.

Damn Yankees (1958): Love the title. And the music. And the dancing. A love letter to every baseball fan who ever hated a team because it was so good. Rating: Game-winning homer, and guess which New York team just lost.

A League of Their Own (1992): A real mixed bag. Geena Davis could doubtless hold her own on the baseball diamond, and the iThere's no crying in baseball\ scene kinda defines the game, if you think about it. Still, that ending, with the suggestion that Davis may have dropped the ball to let her sister's team win, sticks in my craw. Rating: Let's call it a home run, but only because the umpire didn't notice the fan interference.

gore

continued from page 5

were all directed by the Australian director Peter Jackson, who recently directed the excellent Frighteners and Heavenly Creatures, and is destined to become a big name soon due to his upcoming direction of the Lord Of The Rings movies. Bad Taste and Dead Alive are his two horror movies, and both are amazing and classics of the genre. Dead Alive, made in 1992, has also been called by numerous sources the goriest movie ever made, and it holds that crown to this day. Meet The Feebles was Jackson's first movie, and even though it's not horror, it is required viewing for all gore fans. A send-up of the Muppets, Feebles features a cast entirely made of puppets, including a crack-addicted Vietnam veteran crocodile, a cat obsessed with sodomy, and a sex-addicted walrus. Gore fans will not be disappointed by the finale, which includes a hippopotamus mowing down nearly one hundred puppets with a gatlling gun.

Gore Rating: 10

2. Re-Animator, Bride Of Re-Animator, and From Beyond. These movies were all directed by Stuart Gordon, who is a consistently good horror director with other films like Castle Freak and The Pit And The Pendulum. And the one thing all these films have in common, besides Gordon, is actor Jeffrey Combs. Despite his recent embarrassing role in I Still Know What You Did Last Summer, Combs is a consistently good actor, perfect for the roles in these films, since they demand an actor who is a little creepy and can still maintain the audience's sympathy. Re-Animator is a legend in the horror genre, and was even given a shout-out recently in American Beauty. Both Bride and Beyond stick close to that movie's formula, and are enjoyable if not a little familiar.

Gore Rating: 9

3. Evil Dead, Evil Dead II, Army Of Darkness. Director Sam Raimi has gone Hollywood as of late with the excellent A Simple Plan and the ho-hum For The Love Of The Game, but this trio of fantasy-horror flicks achieve success as both horror films and comedies. All three are laugh-out-loud funny, mostly thanks to star Bruce Campbell, but also due to some great writing and wildly creative ideas. Especially noticeable in the first installment is Raimi's mastery of the camera, as it contains some camera angles and editing techniques that just have to be seen to be believed.

Gore Rating: 8

4. Night of the Living Dead, Dawn of the Dead, Day of the Dead. Director George Romero's zombie trilogy is probably the most influential group of movies on the list. It even spawned a knockoff trilogy, Return of the Living Dead, which take a more humorous view of zombies, but are all excellent on their own. Dawn is my favorite of the three movies, and it is a marathon of gore. Special effects legend Tom Savini provides the first rate effects and even has a pretty large role as the leader of a gang of thugs. Night is of course an all time classic horror film, which has lost none of its bite over the years. Day has its moments, but I would recommend saving that one until you have seen the others.

Gore Rating: 10

5. Troma Movies. Troma is an independent film studio responsible for movies such as Surf Nazis Must Die!, Class Of Nuke 'Em High, and one of my favorite movies of all time, The Toxic Avenger. Troma is a gore fan's dream come true. Not all of their movies are horror films, but nearly all of them feature gore, no matter what genre. Their most recent release was a remake of Romeo and Juliet titled Tromeo and Juliet, and featured a healthy and hilarious amount of gore. All Troma movies are hilarious, and are geared directly toward horror fans that don't take every movie too seriously. If you don't like bad movies, and by bad I mean don't come out of Hollywood and don't star Tom Hanks, then steer clear of Troma. But fans of Troma find it easy to recognize the huge amount of heart, work, and fun that goes into each of their self-produced (they also buy and publish other movies under the name Troma) movies.

Gore Rating: 10

Cousin of Spike Lee Takes successful turn

By Sharon Waxman
The Washington Post

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. - The broad, elegant man seated on the gray velour loveseat in the lobby of the Four Seasons Hotel- one leg casually draped over the other, an arm confidently embracing the ridge of the couch-may be the least angry man in Hollywood.

He's Malcolm Lee, 29, cousin of filmmaker Spike Lee (probably one of the most angry men in moviedom), and he has made the kind of movie that is hard to come by these days-a mainstream, upbeat, human film about a bunch of people who just happen to be African-American.

The Best Man, a first feature written and directed by Lee, stars a group of impossibly beautiful twentysomething actors as former college pals getting together for a wedding. Long-gone sexual tensions reemerge and current-day romantic complications arise when the eight pals reassemble, which has led more than one reviewer to dub the film a Big Chill for African-American audiences. (And yes, of course, there's a soundtrack: Stevie Wonder, Bob Marley, Lauryn Hill, Me'shell NdegeOcello, you get the picture.)

In this film black people drive nice cars. Wear beautiful clothes. Have outrageously successful careers, lonely personal lives, romantic frustrations. They're religious, they're profane. They speak in full, college-educated sentences and homey slang. But Malcolm? (As in -"X"?) Lee? (As in Spike?) Where's the politics? Where's the anger?

He smiles, kindly, composed and, may we say, sexy as he reflects on the question. Lee wears a tailored brown sport coat, square glasses and a big diamond stud in one ear. Everything about him bespeaks confidence.

Patiently, he explains that he has different priorities. "What I set out to do was create characters that were interesting, multi-layered characters and put them in a world where there would be tension," he says as he sips some bubbly water. "People want to see good-looking people on screen. They want to see educated, intelligent people who have careers, not jobs, who can get married, who have issues with men."

You see, Lee says, he's very interested in the black experience. Just a different black experience than audiences usually see.

"You rarely see black men bond on screen, unless it's some violent action pictures," he continues. "I just wanted my characters to tell a story that was universal, where it didn't matter if you were black."

He says: "It's important to

Turn to LEE page 10

COURTESY DEPT. MUSIC AND DANCE

Pied Piper

Flute player, Christopher Krueger will with the University Orchestra this Friday at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center.

Glamor, politics and corruption Rule EW's most powerful list

This week's Entertainment Weekly gave us a list of the 101 most powerful people in the world of entertainment. The results were not as much shocking, as they were disappointing. The list turned into nothing more than an easy way to publicize who is popular, and not who is powerful. Though some of the choices near the top of this list were both obvious and correct. Some of the people who were left off of the list completely are the true losers. Of course, the people at the top of the list are the select few who run the television world. Television is a piece of media that hits more people that anything else. It seems like whoever controls your TV, controls the world!

There are quite a few people that could be considered number one for this list. A few of the people who may come to mind are Steven Spielberg, Oprah Winfrey and Ted Turner. Though all worthy opponents, none of these people were number one.

The number one most powerful influence on the world of entertainment according to EW is the team of Sumner Redstone and Mel Karmazin. Perhaps you remember a few months ago, when Viacom merged with Time Warner. The biggest merger in the history of entertainment, created not only a media giant, but a borderline dynasty of control as well. Between these two companies, there is pretty much nothing on television that you can find, that they don't have some sort of influence in its creation. The merger made these two superpowers even more influential than they had been before, which might have been seen as an impossible task a year ago. The chance for Redstone and Karmazin at number one is simply a no-brainer.

In respective order from numbers two through ten, the people on EW's list are: the team of Rupert Murdoch & Peter Chernin, the team of Ted Turner & Gerald Levin, George Lucas, Steven Spielberg, Oprah Winfrey, Tom Hanks, Julia Roberts, David E. Kelley, and Michael Eisner.

Of these top ten, there are three groups of media owners, one specific media owner a pretty woman, the most powerful woman in the world, a guy who won both Emmy awards for best drama series and best comedy series in the same year, a guy with two Best Actor Oscars, and two men who combined have made four out of the top five grossing films in history. Anyone who could argue that this isn't the ultimate group of powerful people, I challenge you to do so.

As I said before, television plays such a huge influence in the world of media. With the exception of Julia Roberts, television has been a major factor in their rise to power.

Though the top ten is definitely nothing to argue with, there are some major problems with much of the rest of the list. The front cover of the magazine boasts that Leonardo DiCaprio and Adam Sandler are among the most powerful people in the world of entertainment. I'm sorry, but though they may bring people into the theaters, these men have no power at all compared to people such as Kevin Williamson and Don Imus. Neither of these two people were in the list of top 101 powerful people, but Pokemon was. The most ironic thing about that is that I don't disagree with Pokemon being in the top 101 most powerful people in entertainment. Right now, Pokemon is the center of every child's life, under the age of twelve. That's an incredible feat. However, I'm sure that two years from now, Pokemon will find his way to the sewer, just like the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles did about a decade ago.

Tube Notes with Ryan Benharris

My big complaint about the list is that it's so deceiving. The list claims that the people are the most powerful people in entertainment in the world, but there's pretty much nothing other than American influences. With all of those credentials that made the people in the top ten so qualified, there are some questionable holes. Who won Best Actor at the Oscars this year? Who is by far the most popular person in the world of music this year, and is also People Magazine's sexiest man alive? Who won the Emmy award for Best Comedy Special? The three answers here are Roberto Begnini and Ricky Martin and John Leguizamo. None of them are on the list, but Drew Barrymore and Bruce Willis are. The latter two are hardworking white Americans who really have no place being anywhere near this list. Barrymore hasn't made a film worth watching yet, and in Willis' last four movies, one (The Sixth Sense) has received favorable reviews. Begnini and Martin are easily much more successful and powerful in the world of entertainment than Willis and Barrymore, but perhaps their impact on places other than the US does not count. I can't imagine how Ricky Martin was left out though, since he can be seen absolutely everywhere. Leguizamo has more talent in his left finger than Willis and Barrymore combine. He, like Ricky Martin is Latino. I love Entertainment Weekly, but I can also spot racism when I see it.

The last problem that I have with the list, is its denial of people who are as much politically influential as they are in the world of entertainment. I already mentioned Don Imus, but what about people like Rush Limbaugh, who spends as much time on the radio as Imus, entertaining and influencing millions of people? Minnesota Governer Jesse Ventura was left off of the list, and he might have just a bit of power. Finally, where is Warren Beaty? The man has been in films for almost thirty years, and may run for President. If he were President of the United States, he'd be leader of the free world. Wouldn't that make him a little more powerful than Master P?

Some people, however, were deservingly on this list that haven't been recognized as much as they should have. Chris rock came in at number 77, and Russell Simmons, who has been extremely influential over the past few years, found himself at number 65.

I guess I started off by trying make the point that television is the most powerful medium in all of entertainment, simply because this list has so many people in TV ranked so high. However, how real is this list? I simply don't trust it. It's definitely worth a read, but in reality, I really don't think it's worth a damn.

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian Columnist.

¡ Escribe Para Artes !

UMass Alumni Association
"Leaders in the Making" Scholarships

Applicants must be full-time junior undergraduate students to be eligible. Applications may be picked up Monday through Friday at the Alumni Relations Office in Memorial Hall from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. They must be completed and returned to Jason Germain in the Alumni Office no later than November 19, 1999
Winners will be recognized at a ceremony in April.

For more information, please contact
Jason Germain at
545-2317 or alumni@admin.umass.edu

UMASS Alumni Association®
University of Massachusetts Amherst

THE MONKEY BAR & GRILLE
New York Style scene in Downtown Amherst.
New and exciting place to eat, offering Cajun Cuisine and outdoor patio and upscale microbrews.
AFTER 10 IT'S TIME TO DANCE
WEDNESDAY - Promo Night with DJ Fooz. Free prizes!!
THURSDAY - House music with DJ Fooz
FRIDAY - House, Hip-Hop & Top 40 with DJ Fooz
SATURDAY - House, Hip-Hop & Top 40 with DJ Creme
SUNDAY - Latin Night with DJ Creme featurng Free Dance Lessons from The Theresa Castano Center for Latin Dance
63 N. Pleasant St. 259-1600

Do You Have Any Of The Following Complaints?
• Runny, Itchy, or Congested Nose • Sneezing • Post Nasal Drip • Watery ,Itchy Eyes • Itchy Ears or Palate
Males and females 12 years of age and older who experience any of these problems are invited to participate in a clinical research study to evaluate an investigational medication to reduce these year round symptoms.
Qualified participants may recieve financial compensation for participation.
For information call:
413 - 584 -4010

REMEMBER!!!!!
Vote for the 10 best movies and 10 best albums of the 90s at the Collegian Office (Campus Center Basement) or e-mail it to us at Daily_Collegian@hotmail.com. That's "Daily" underscore "Collegian."
At the end of the semester, all votes will be tallied and the results will be published on the final 2 Arts covers.

安城中國飯店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 or 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

you look Mavi-lous.
Mavi Jeans at Zanna
ZANNA downtown Amherst

Council Travel
Student Travel from A to Z
On the journey from A to Z, A is as important as Z.
44 Main St.
Amherst MA
413-256-1261

ROCKY HORROR PICTURE SHOW
Tonight 10/28/99
With the Tesseract Players (Live Cast)
Campus Center Auditorium
10 pm
Brought to you by the [illegible]
Admission: General Public [illegible]
UMSFS Members $3
Please no: Drugs, Alcohol, liquids, glass bottles, Squirt Guns

Write for Arts and Living!

GIFTS from GLASS to GOLD
starting under $20.00
The Finest
silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY
Hampshire Mall, Hadley 584-3224
249 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3224
www.silverscapedesigns.com • 800-729-8971

MICHAEL'S BILLARDS AND SPORTS BAR
10A Belchertown Road, Amherst, MA 01002 256-8284
Best of 1998 UMass Minutemen Daily Collegian

■ lee

continued from page 9

make full black male characters, because we've been ... vilified in the media, not only in Hollywood and television, but by ourselves, that we're violent, misogynists, criminal, negative low-lifes who don't want to work. Maybe plenty are, but it's not reality. It's so ingrained in the American psyche that even black people think they have to be a 'nigger' or a 'nigga,' or a bitch or a whore to be understood as 'black.'

Lee didn't set out to make a film about black normalcy. The Best Man is more simply a reflection of his own experiences, refracted through a writer's prism.

He grew up in Crown Heights, a Brooklyn suburb divided between African-Americans and Hasidic Jews, his father a music teacher, his mother an administrator in the medical industry. But Lee, an exceedingly focused kid, spent most of his childhood at predominantly white preparatory schools. He was smart, played three different sports and excelled in theater and drawing. He says simply, "I was a good student."

From fifth to eighth grade Lee attended a snobby private school on the Upper East Side of Manhattan (on scholarship), and in ninth grade he transferred to another elite prep school in Brooklyn Heights. In both places he was the only black male in his class, and he spent afternoons hanging out with rich friends on Park Avenue, frequently taking holidays with them in the Caribbean, in Aspen, places his family could never afford.

But until puberty hit and dating became an issue, he never thought about it much. "My parents kept reminding me I was black," he says, with no intended irony. "It was easy to be seduced by the white people I was around. My parents constantly told me, 'You can't (expletive) around like your white counterparts. Their parents have money.' " Pause. "They just wanted to keep me aware that there's a difference. But I don't think my friends thought of me as 'black' per se."

If occasionally Lee would feel like an outsider, he remembers attending a birthday party on Park Avenue at age 12 where Blazing Saddles was shown and the kids laughed uproariously through repeated references to the N-word; he walked out of the room crying. For the most part he felt remarkably grounded, normal and accepted. And lucky. Still, when it came time to choose a university, Columbia, University of Pennsylvania and Emory came calling, he strongly considered a black college. Think of all the women!

In the end, he says, he chose Georgetown, where he could play intramural basketball and learn an appreciation "for the beauty of black women," of whom he didn't see much during high school. (He's now engaged to marry a teacher, Camilla Banks.) He went on to NYU Film School, took a year-long fellowship in screenwriting at Disney but also learned plenty from assisting his cousin Spike as production assistant, editor and assistant director. But his concerns could not be more different from those of his political, and taboo-breaking, cousin, who is a producer on The Best Man. Malcolm Lee wrote five scripts before this one, and they all seem to deal with the upper-middle-class black experience. There's Morningside Prep, about being a lone African-American student at a prep school, there's another script called GEMS, which stands for Georgetown Ebony Man, it's about six black guys in a largely white university. One senses a trend here.

In point of fact, while Lee admires his cousin, he feels closer in spirit to the soul-searching angst of Woody Allen. Stories of relationships and personal struggle are the sort he wants to tell. He grew up on the films of John Hughes, Sixteen Candles and The Breakfast Club, and remembers thinking, "You see that black kid in the background? What's that kid's story? That's me." And then he thought, "It will probably be me who'll tell it."

COURTESY YAHOO.COM

Malcom Lee directing traffic on the set of his new movie, The Best Man, which topped last weekend at the box office.

■ scary

continued from page 5

spooky mood faster than seeing Abercrombie & Fitch-sporting teens walking around a high school while the newest pop-radio single advertises the film's soundtrack. Take a look at The Faculty: this movie spent so much time trying to be cool that it forgot to be scary.

Watching a group of slick, beautiful friends get killed one by one until only the heroine is alive is not scary. This is true simply because it happens in every single one of these movies. "Oh my God, who'll be next?" Who cares?! We all know it's going to be someone, and none of the characters in these movies is ever so compelling that you actually care whether or not he or she gets axed.

Shallow psychological motives are not scary. You could write a textbook on the mental pathology at work inside the head of Misery's Annie Wilkes or Silence of the Lamb's Hannibal Lector. In this new crop of slasher flicks, however, someone's motivation to take knife in hand is often a tacked-on, "You killed my son," or some other thoughtless excuse.

Running around is not scary. And damn, do these people love to run around. The entire plot of Disturbing Behavior is predicated on the idea that watching people run around is somehow entertaining, and I just don't get it.

And finally, formulas are not scary. Somewhere in Hollywood there exists a machine that churns out these cookie-cutter slasher flicks once every few months with zero modification of the original idea. Kevin Williamson wrote Scream, Scream 2, I Know What You Did Last Summer, The Faculty, and Teaching Mrs. Tingle, and they're all so similar as to be laughable. How they made any money, I have no idea, but I hope the other articles in this issue of The Collegian help you all to track down some genuinely frightening movies, and I hope this run-down of why and how the new slasher flicks couldn't scare my cat towards a steak help, in some small way, to end this terrible trend in "scary movies."

REMEMBER!!!!!

Vote for the 10 best movies and 10 best albums of the 90s at the Collegian Office (Campus Center Basement) or e-mail it to us at Daily_Collegian@hotmail.com. That's "Daily_underscore_Collegian."

At the end of the semester, all votes will be tallied and the results will be published on the final 2 Arts covers.

Spirit Haus
SPECIALTY BEVERAGE STORE
OCTOBER SPECIALS!
Stoli Coffee, Fl. Vodka $9.99
Cuervo Gold $12.75
Bacardi Limon $9.59
Goldschlager $8.99
Pratice for the Millennium Rotari $9.49 Martini & Rossi $9.49
Grad Students-10%off regular fine wine prices with ID
Magic Hat 6pk bottles $5.99
Bass 12pk btls $10.99
Guinness 8pk Pub Cans $9.49
Long Trail 6pk btls $5.29
Ice House/Red Dog 10pk cans $10.99
COME IN TO SEE MORE!
338 College St, Rte. 9
1 mile east of Amherst Center
Open 9am - 11pm
Full Redemption Center • (413) 253-5384

The Fine Arts Center Series Nov.-Dec. Events
Leapin Lizards! Annie's Back!
Annie
America's most beloved musical, Annie, is back on tour after a triumphant Broadway engagement. Winner of seven Tony Awards, Annie continues to capture hearts and delight audiences of all ages! It's a experience for the entire family.
WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 3, CONCERT HALL AT 7:30PM
Join us for a free reception in the lobby at 6:30pm – free juice and cookies, freckle painting, and Sandy the dog Art!
Sponsored by Peoples Bank, FamilyFun magazine, and WRNX 100.9FM.
An All-Chopin Evening
POLISH FESTIVAL ORCHESTRA
Krystian Zimerman
conductor and pianist
The lush music of Frederic Chopin, Poland's greatest composer, interpreted by one of the country's greatest orchestras. The evening will include Piano Concertos No. 1 and No. 2. Soloist Krystian Zimerman, fresh from a recent engagement with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, also conducts.
SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 7, CONCERT HALL AT 7:30PM
Hark! It's the Clerks!
THE CLERKS' GROUP
One of the world's acclaimed a cappella vocal ensembles performs music from the Flemish Renaissance, in a program so glorious it will transport you into more heavenly realms.
"Beautifully shaped, impeccably tuned and miraculously well blended." – The London Times
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 12, BOWKER AUDITORIUM AT 8PM
STOMP SOLD OUT
NOVEMBER 16 & 17
Sponsored by The Daily Hampshire Gazette and WRNX
A New Holiday Tradition
The Nebraska Theater Caravan presents
Charles Dickens' A Christmas Carol
It's the holly, the ivy, the ghosts of Christmas Past, Present, and Future! It's a festive celebration with traditional music, wrapped up in a beautiful Currier-and-Ives package. Bring the whole family!
SUNDAY, DECEMBER 5, CONCERT HALL AT 3PM
Sponsored by Holyoke Mall at Ingleside and WRNX
The King of the Blues
AN EVENING WITH
B. B. KING
The living legend and Lucille come to the Fine Arts Center with a full band for one night of the best blues in the galaxy.
TUESDAY, DECEMBER 7
CONCERT HALL AT 7:30PM
Presented with the generous support of Coca-Cola and WRNX 100.9 FM
We've got a New Lobby! Check out our new entrance when you visit the box office, now open at its Concert Hall location, 10-6pm, M-F
Please note new time: weeknight performances begin at 7:30pm
Call 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS for tickets
The Fine Arts Center at the University of Massachusetts Amherst

Write For Arts

From zero to babe in Ten minutes.
Buy any tanning package & get the second one at 1/2 price.
We can't promise dramatic results for everybody but we can promise you the fastest, darkest, healthiest looking tan you can get anywhere. And with average sessions of 10 minutes or less, you'll see the difference in just 1 or 2 sessions.
*If you have yet to experience the ultra high performance of the system that is revolutionizing indoor tanning, then bring in this ad for a FREE session call today
Oasis Body Wraps
479 West Street
Amherst, MA 01002
413-256-3477
Offer Expires 11-30-99

UMass
GET THOSE FORMS IN BY
3-On-3 Basketball (M/W/C)..... 11/1
Holiday Basketball (M/W)..... 11/1
Spring Basketball (M/W/C)... 12/6
MANDATORY FOR ALL SPRING BASKETBALL OFFICIALS-ARE SCHEDULED IN TWO PARTS. PART #1 CLINICS ON RULES ARE SCHEDULED FOR JANUARY 26TH AND 28TH AT 8PM. PART #2 CLINICS ON MECHANICS ARE SCHEDULED FOR JANUARY 27TH AND 28TH AT 7PM. CALL FOR CLINIC LOCATION call for times and locations
LATE ENTRANTS SHOULD CHECK FOR EXTENSIONS IN BOYDEN 215
On the Web: http://www.umass.edu/umsm/
INTRAMURAL SPORTS
Don't Miss The ACTION
For entry forms and info
545-2693
545-0022

Sports Bar and Dance Club
City Cafe
x1 Pearl St. Northampton•584-4100
• 4 BARS • 2 Dance Floors • Gameroom • Pool Table • 19 Tap Lin
• Satelite Dish • ATL Ticket • KENO • 1 MASS Monitor Onward

DELIVERY HOTLINE
549-0077
Newly Rennovated Sushi Bar!
CHINESE & JAPANESE RESTAURANT
103 N. Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-8923 • 256-8924
NOW ACCEPTING OCMP!

Dolphins doing it on the field with depth

By Dan Pompei
The Sporting News

Attrition over the course of an NFL season can turn majestic Alps into piles of dust. It happens every season. That's why this year the Dolphins, as pro football's deepest team, are best prepared to survive the August through January marathon.

"They have outstanding depth at fullback, tight end, offensive line and quarterback," Colts general manager Bill Polian says. "And they have great depth on defense."

The Dolphins are so deep that five players they let go are major contributors for other teams, including Raiders running back Tyrone Wheatley. Already, the Dolphins' depth has been critical to their five victories.

Six reserves have replaced starters without hurting the team: quarterback Damon Huard, cornerback Patrick Surtain, fullback Stanley Pritchett, guard Kevin Gogan, offensive tackle Brent Smith and defensive end Rich Owens.

Except for Huard, all of those players could start on other teams. So could defensive end Trace Armstrong, defensive tackle Lorenzo Bromell, receiver Oronde Gadsden and safety Shawn Wooden. The one position where depth was considered questionable is quarterback, but Huard has led the Dolphins to two victories in as many tries.

"I've said for two years that Damon Huard is a talent that can win games," Dolphins Coach Jimmy Johnson says. "I like him a lot. With preparation and experience, he'll only play better. He's got an outstanding arm, can run, he's got a flair for the game and is very accurate."

Huard didn't show all of his attributes last Sunday against the Eagles. With Dan Marino sidelined with a sore shoulder, offensive coordinator Kippy Brown devised a game plan to protect Huard that led to the Dolphins running 65 percent of the time. The most impressive thing about Huard was his ability to move in the pocket, run bootlegs and draw plays.

"If we're going to go to the Super Bowl, we need Dan in there for the confidence of the team," Gogan said in the locker room after the game. "But Damon got the respect of the players in the New England game. There is not a confidence problem when he is in there."

Huard showed considerably more of his abilities the previous week against the Patriots, throwing a 69-yard touchdown pass and leading his team to a 59-yard, game-winning drive in the final minute. A lot of teams wouldn't mind having a player capable of that as their backup.

Given the salary cap restraints, the Dolphins' depth is highly unusual. The only other team that's anywhere near as deep is the Bills.

The Dolphins didn't develop this depth by happenstance.

Every conceivable avenue of player acquisition was used. Guard Kevin Donnalley and safety Brock Marion were high-profile, free-agent signings. Gogan, starting tight end Troy Drayton and reserve quarterback Jim Druckenmiller were acquired in trades.

The Dolphins found starting guard Mark Dixon playing for the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian League and found Gadsden playing for the Portland Forest Dragons of the Arena League. Olindo Mare, the best kicker in the league, was signed as a free agent after being on the Giants' practice squad.

"Every time there is a value, an opportunity to improve our roster, we do it," Johnson says.

For instance, the Dolphins didn't need a kickoff return man last week, with Marion ranking second in the NFL, but they signed free agent Roell Preston anyway because Johnson thought Preston, a 1998 Pro Bowl selection, would improve their depth at the position.

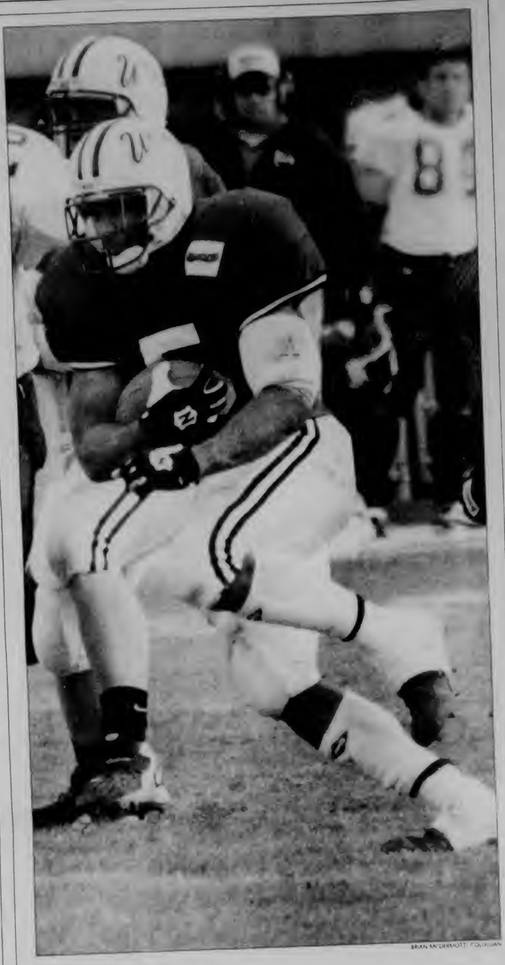
Drafting well in the later rounds also has helped the Dolphins maintain depth by giving them salary-cap relief. Players who are drafted in the lower rounds have lower salaries, and their salaries generally stay low for four years. Subsequently, you can find more good bargains on the Miami roster than at a flea market.

The Dolphins have maintained depth without compromising themselves in future seasons' salary caps, as the 49ers became infamous for doing. Johnson is pretty strident about not paying players more than the team thinks they are worth, allowing the Dolphins to spread the cap wealth more evenly than a lot of teams.

Director of football operations Bob Ackles says the Dolphins pay no attention to the perceived "market value" of a player.

"We've had to hard-line some of our own players," Johnson says, referring to negotiations with Marino, tackle Richmond Webb and defensive lineman Tim Bowens, among others. "All players are overpaid, but we won't overpay to the point of being ridiculous."

The Dolphins also are fortunate to a degree because Marino and Webb are their only players who are perennial Pro Bowl players and could demand an inordinate amount of cap space. Still, it hasn't been easy to pay so many good players.



In order to create cap space in the offseason, the Dolphins moved around money the way some people move around living room furniture. They extended the contracts of Marino and receiver O.J. McDuffie. And they renegotiated or gave pay cuts to Gogan, Donnalley, Marion, linebacker Dwight Hollier, Wilson, center Tim Ruddy, defensive lineman Daryl Gardener, receiver Lamar Thomas and tackle James Brown.

The Dolphins' waves of players wouldn't be of much benefit if they weren't prepared to play. This is an area where Johnson, assistant head coach Dave Wannstedt and their coaching staff excel.

Dolphins' backups get more practice reps with the first team - about 30 percent of the total - than most other teams' backups.

"All of our starters work on the (scout team) except Dan (Marino)," Johnson says. "Some teams give starters all the practice time and have the backups do all the service work. We don't do it that way."

The Dolphins don't wait for injuries to play reserves in games. Eight defensive linemen play regularly. If all of the offensive linemen had been healthy, the plan was to have three guards split time. When reserves make plays, starters feel pressure. That's not a bad thing.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Nineteen and counting...

UMass junior running back Marcel Shipp will go for his 20th straight 100-yard game on Saturday against Rhode Island

When it's Fourth and Inches, you know we're going to punt.
Collegian Sports.

Committee for Open Debate on the Holocaust
Read the evidence. Judge for yourself.
Bradley R. Smith, Director
Voice Mail: 619-687-1950
POB 439016, San Diego CA, 92143
www.codoh.com

$1 Sushi Rock & Roll 10:30-1:00 Fri-Sat Nights
KARAOKE Rock & Roll 10:30-1:00 Fri-Sat Nights
ICHIBAN いちばん
AUTHENIC JAPANESE AND KOREAN RESTAURANT
Roundhouse Plaza, Northampton, M
(413) 585-1185
(Behind City Hall, off Main St.)
10% off Dinner w/ Stuent I.D.
Birthday Party Chefs Treat Meal 4 person table

A FORCE TO RECKON with!
Y[illegible] Our Parents, S[illegible] and Saudi Aramco have [illegible] And created A Force To Reckon With!
at the same time.
We're searching for outside the box thinkers-people to make our alliance companies better, stronger, sharper. We offer you professional growth potential and opportunities in petroleum refining, distribution, marketing, transportation, crude and product trading, and lubricants operations. Become part of a team that embraces new ideas and opinions, a team that will lead the industry far into the future.
We will be interviewing on your campus in November.
Please contact your Career Placement Office for details.
For more info on opportunities: www.equiva.com/services-recruitment
EQUILON ENTERPRISES LLC
MOTIVA ENTERPRISES LLC
EQUIVA TRADING COMPANY
EQUIVA SERVICES LLC
Equal Opportunity Employer

IMPORTANT
PRE-REGISTRATION FOR SPRING 2000
The WRITING PROGRAM PLACEMENT TEST will be offered on MONDAY, NOVEMBER 1 @ 7P.M. IN BARTLETT 61.
(This is the last scheduled test until summer 2000 orientation)
This test may be taken only once.
Students should pre-register for ENGWLP before pre-registration ends.
Students do not need to register for the test.
ANNOUNCEMENT

festival of (de) lights!
Please join INDIA HOUSE in celebration of the Indian New Year
SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 7
45 State Street · Northampton · 586-6344
Serv[illegible] dinner Tuesday through Sunday

■ seniors

continued from page 16

But one thing is for certain: Her years of hard work and dedication to the team and sport have yielded some lessons that will not only help her throughout the future, but also stand as fantastic lines of guidance for up-and-coming athletes.

"The moments in general that stand out the most are the times that you don't think you can survive, you don't think that you can get through," Crooks said. "And looking back, you realize that you've gone through more, and survived more and accomplished more than you ever thought you possibly could. And I think that's the one thing that I would tell freshmen: Don't limit yourself because in four years you'd be surprised at how much you can accomplish and how much you can achieve. Things that you didn't even think you had in you."

Michelle Crooks

While Crooks has made her career out of perfecting play at one position, Millbauer has carved her name into UMass field hockey lore as the quintessential utility player. The Easton, Connecticut native has played every position short of goalkeeper for the Maroon and White and done so with such smoothness that even a guru of the sport would have a hard time sizing up her "natural" spot.

A true natural athlete, Millbauer was a four-sport star at Joel Barlow High School. But when it came time for the daughter of Gerald and Arlene Millbauer to choose between field hockey, basketball, gymnastics and track & field, the answer was pretty clear. After leading the Falcon field hockey team in scoring throughout her entire four-year career, the team captain and two-time All State selection had a pretty good idea which sport to pursue at the collegiate level.

But despite her MVP senior year numbers (25 goals, 11 assists) at Barlow, Millbauer knew that her seemingly superhuman high school skills would prove to be merely mortal in college. So the pure forward went to work on rounding out her game.

"When I came here in the beginning, I knew that I would play a little bit, but I was playing forward for just a couple of minutes here and there," Millbauer said. "So I tried to work on everything; I tried to work on my offense, my defense, my attacking skills, and my stickwork. That allowed me to try different things; I stepped right in and took on the responsibility of learning to play better defense."

While learning the ropes on both sides of the ball, Millbauer showed flashes of great things to come. Despite seeing action in only eight games as a freshman, she still managed to notch two shots on goal and an assist. And more importantly, she established a truly admirable balance between her labors on the field and her toils in the classroom, one that would land her on the Athletic Director's Honor Roll each of her four years at UM.

Millbauer's sophomore campaign saw her emerge as one of Shea's most improved players, as she took center stage in 20 games with five goals and three assists for 13 points. Her unprecedented offensive output placed her third on the team and tenth in the A-10 conference in scoring, but Millbauer still refused to be categorized as a one-dimensional scoring machine: Her prowess without the ball also turned heads, as she chalked up a defensive save in a tough overtime loss at James Madison.

"Our coaches have always stressed that you need to play offense and defense everywhere on the field," Millbauer said. "I happen to be one of those people who can do both. I'm not great at both, but I can hold my own. And because I played forward for so long, it was not so hard to switch to defense, because I knew what the forwards were going to do."

Millbauer took on a slightly different role in her junior year, as the team's primary spark off the bench in 20 of UM's 22 games. She also maintained her outstanding scholastic achievements, as both the National Field Hockey Coaches Association and the A-10 honored her as an Academic All-American.

With constant hard work and a consummate "team player" attitude, Millbauer had brought her game full-circle heading into the '99 campaign. With practically inhuman speed and fantastic full-field instincts and vision, number 18 had morphed into a player whom Shea could insert in practically any position, in any situation, and against any opponent.

"I used to feel much better on the outside of the field, but now that I've been playing in the middle a lot, I feel OK," Millbauer said. "When I was younger, I couldn't play in the middle; I was a bad distributor."

Chrissy Millbauer

But throughout this year's A-10 Championship run, Millbauer has done a lot more than just distribute. She has driven home three goals and dished off four assists, giving her 10 points in 17 starts for the Maroon and White. But it's not just her '99 numbers that make Millbauer such a vital cog in the UMass field hockey machine; it's her incredible knack for making the plays when they count the most.

"The first moment that steps into my mind is the Harvard game," said Millbauer, referring to UM's September 29th comeback win over the Crimson that hinged on her two-goal performance. "That was the first time I've completed a [penalty] stroke in competition since High School! That was very memorable for me, especially because I felt that the whole game was very much dependent on what I did at that moment.

"I've never actually felt that much pressure, and succeeded. Whether we won the game or not, I would've felt like that was a turning point in my career because I felt like I had a [g]rabbed a little piece of what I did and fed off of it."

The Minutewomen have indeed fed off of the drive and desire of their fiery utility superstar. And throughout a somewhat tumultuous '99 slate, the team has used her on-field leadership to battle a number of the country's top programs to the bitter end in some tight losses. Unfortunately for those schools, Millbauer has composed her own little "hit list" of top dogs she'd like to run up against again in this year's postseason.

"There are tons of them! I can think of half a season's worth," laughed Millbauer. "Obviously, Virginia, Duke and a couple of the close 2-1 games that we thought could have gone either way are ones that we'd like another crack at. UConn and Boston University were also games that we could have won, and those are teams that we'd like to see again."

But for the time being, Millbauer will use what is perhaps her most dangerous weapon- her intense focus- to help guide the team towards its ultimate goals. Never is her maturity and team value more evident than when she contemplates the conclusion of her last season with the Minutewomen.

"We would all like to go to the NCAA tournament, which is very feasible," Millbauer said. "But we need to take care of each day, one day at a time. We need to take care of our last game of the season, take care of the A-10 Tournament, and take care of the play-in game. In the last three years, since I've been here, we've made it to the NCAA Tournament and only made it to the first game. Last year, we lost 1-0 to Penn State. That was a very tough loss for us.

"This year, we want to go further. I think that's a goal that all of us have pretty much tried to work toward, but that won't come unless we take care of our conference."

And going farther seems like the perfect note for these two class-act seniors to end their careers on.

While Michelle Crooks has been consistent in goal this year for the UMass field hockey team, the aggressive, all-around play of Chrissy Millbauer has been a spark for the rest of the Minutewomen.

...e to run out the ...llegian Spor...

All the Digital Power in the Palm of Your Hands
www.omniplayer.com

We're willing to take the the toucback.
Collegian Sports.
STUDENTS NEEDED TO TRYOUT
ESSAY QUESTIONS
Undergraduate students in all majors are invited to tryout essay questions. The tryout will be conducted Tuesday, November 2, 1999, from noon until 8:00PM in Campus Center Room 163C. Participants will be reimbursed for each completed essay (approximately $12 per hour).
For more information please call Jennifer Murray at 256-7473.

Thinking about grad school?
Talk isn't cheap...
it's free.
Saturday, October 30
Boston
Radisson Hotel Boston
• Meet one-on-one with over 100 Graduate School Representatives
• Learn how to prepare for the GRE tests
• Attend workshops and discussion of various graduate disciplines
• Obtain catalogs, applications, and financial aid information
Registration begins at 8:00 a.m. Workshops begin at 8:30 a.m.
Graduate school exhibits open from 10:00 a.m. - 3:30 p.m.
Admission $5.00 or bring this ad and get in FREE!
For more information, call 1-609-771-7670 or check out our Web site at www.gre.org
GRE
ETS Educational Testing Service
Individuals who are hearing impaired and wish to request an interpreter must contact ETS at least four weeks prior to The Forum
Sponsored by the GRE Board and the Council of Graduate Schools. EDUCATIONAL TESTING SERVICE, ETS, GRADUATE RECORD EXAMINATIONS and GRE are registered trademarks of Educational Testing Service. The modernized ETS logo is a trademark of Educational Testing Service.

oh behave!
shoes to party in.
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
"ONE OF THE MOST EXCITING AND UNUSUAL ACTION THRILLERS OF THE YEAR!" JEFFREY STEIN, WNBC
THREE KINGS
STOP MAKING SENSE
Stop Making Sense (1984)½ The Talking Heads. Riveting rock concert film that eschews the traditional approach to this sort of material (laser shows, shots of screaming fans, etc.) by focusing on the Talking Heads's eccentric and entertaining stage work, which is led by David Byrne. (Dir: Jonathan Demme, 88 mins.)†
ACADEMY MUSIC NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

NFL Week Eight	Las Vegas Point Spread Note: Selections to be used strictly for entertainment and not for betting purposes	 Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief	 Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor	 Kathleen Ralls Women's Affairs Editor	 Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor	 Adam White Sports Associate
Last Week (Overall)		7-7 (46-52)	7-7 (50-48)	4-10 (42-56)	7-7 (44-51)	10-4 (47-51)
New England @ Arizona	N.E. by 3 1/2	New England	New England	New England	New England	Arizona
Carolina @ Atlanta	Atlanta by 1 1/2	Carolina	Atlanta	Carolina	Carolina	Carolina
Buffalo @ Baltimore	Buffalo by 3 1/2	Buffalo	Buffalo	Buffalo	Buffalo	Buffalo
Dallas @ Indianapolis	Indianapolis by 3	Indianapolis	Indianapolis	Dallas	Dallas	Indianapolis
Jacksonville @ Cincinnati	Jacksonville by 12 1/2	Jacksonville	Cincinnati	Jacksonville	Jacksonville	Cincinnati
San Diego @ Kansas City	Kansas City by 6	San Diego	Kansas City	Kansas City	Kansas City	Kansas City
Minnesota @ Denver	Minnesota by 2 1/2	Minnesota	Minnesota	Minnesota	Minnesota	Minnesota
Cleveland @ New Orleans	New Orleans by 10	New Orleans	New Orleans	New Orleans	Cleveland	Cleveland
N.Y. Giants @ Philadelphia	N.Y.G. by 2 1/2	N.Y.G.	Philadelphia	N.Y.G.	N.Y.G.	Philadelphia
Miami @ Oakland	Oakland by 3 1/2	Oakland	Oakland	Oakland	Oakland	Miami
St. Louis @ Tennessee	St. Louis by 3	St. Louis	St. Louis	St. Louis	Tennessee	St. Louis
Tampa Bay @ Detroit	Tampa Bay by 2 1/2	Detroit	Detroit	Detroit	Tampa Bay	Detroit
Chicago @ Washington	Washington by 8 1/.2	Washington	Washington	Chicago	Chicago	Washington
Seattle @ Green Bay	Green Bay by 5 1/2	Green Bay	Green Bay	Green Bay	Green Bay	Green Bay

■ goalies

continued from page 16

our thinking," Rudy said. "They are pretty darn close in ability, so it helps us in our training sessions, and gives each of them great incentive and motivation to train hard."

Hometown girl makes good

The veteran of the pair, Napoli is enjoying her best campaign while donning the Maroon and White this season. In seven games so far she is 6-1, including a perfect 4-0 mark in A-10 play, to go along with three shutouts and a 1.10 goals against average.

"I think that I've been playing pretty well. I've been solid and pretty consistent," said Napoli, whose 152 career saves places her fifth on the all-time list at UMass. "I try to go and get everything while I'm out there, and not second guess myself. If I make a mistake, then I've just got to let it go."

Fortunately for the Minutewomen, mistakes have been far and few between for Napoli this year. Her goals against mark places her second in the conference in that category, while her three shutouts trail only Stephanie Weissenfeld of Dayton, who has 5.5 blankings.

"Angie is more laid back [then Cori], but she is also more explosive," Rudy said. "Her ability to get up to the bar is also better."

For her career, Napoli sports a 17-9 record in her three-plus years at UMass. However, she would surely like to add a few more to that total before all is said and done.

Providing some Southern comfort

Only a sophomore, Stevens emerged as a reliable keeper from her first days on campus. However, there has been no sign of a second-year jinx for the Greensboro, NC product, after posting a 3-5 mark as a freshman.

From her first start of the season, a 21-save effort against Syracuse, Stevens made it known that she came back ready to play this year. Through seven games, she has a 4-2-1 record and is fifth in the nation with an average of close to 10 saves per outing.

"I tried to work hard in the preseason because I didn't think that I had my best season last year," she said. "I knew that I wanted to step it up this year...Being a sophomore with a year of experience under my belt, there are no excuses. My main thing is that I want to play well and help the team win."

Added Rudy: "Cori is a little more expressive, visual and vocal behind the defense...but both of them [Stevens and Napoli] give us something more then what Danielle Dion [this year's USL Player of the Year] gave us, and that's the ability to play behind the defense and recognize the dangerous situations."

Stevens earned her first collegiate shutout against Virginia Tech earlier this month. However, she feels that the low number of perfect games in goal isn't really indicative of how both her and Napoli have played.

"You don't see many shutouts, but there's been a lot of games where we've only allowed one goal," added Stevens. "We just want to get wins. That's our goal."

A total team effort

Although both goalies have had stellar seasons thus far, it's safe to say that they couldn't have reached this point without the rest of their teammates.

Defensively, the quartet of Webb and freshmen Holly Wildenhaus, Mesi Rudd and Maggie LaBrode has seen most of the action in the backfield for the Minutewomen. Both goalies acknowledge the fact that without their solid play in front of them, neither the two keepers nor the team would be enjoying a successful season.

"They [the rookie trio] have settled down and played amazing for freshmen," Stevens said. "It's up to Angie and I to let them know that we have confidence in them. The biggest thing is let the freshmen know that we're able to trust them."

Of course, offensively, it's impossible to win without scoring goals. In that respect, UMass is also averaging close to three goals a game, making a keeper's job a little bit less stressful between the pipes.

"We know that even if it's 0-0 at the half, we are going to score because we've done it so many times before. We always seem to get the big goals," Napoli said. "Last year it seemed like every small mistake we made resulted in a goal, but this year we're a little luckier."

The good news for this duo and the rest of the Minutewomen is that winning has been commonplace in Amherst this year, a trend hopefully will continue this weekend when they host Duquesne and St. Bonaventure.

■ rugby

continued from page 16

Wasserman and Doherty each found the try zone again, before Sundlin rolled in on a lineout to cap the scoring with two minutes left. The Huskies would add a late score but UMass effectively killed off the clock to secure the victory.

The game's most valuable players, called "Men of the Match" were seniors Hass and Wasserman.

"Hass was all over the pitch getting to the breakdowns and causing them and setting up for the backline to have a supposed shot," Ludlow said. "Wasserman set up a beautiful try by Doherty and scored one of his own."

With the improvement of the team's skills, it's no wonder that their record is a solid 5-1, and their confidence is on the rise for the finals.

"Where we're winning is better skills," UMass assistant Coach Glenn Gorman stated. "We have better ball handling than most other teams."

In the beginning of the season, the team was behind in the league, with losses at UConn and Norwich. However, as the season has progressed, the team has improved and the victories have been numerous.

The division one rugby is set up into two leagues, a green league and a white one. In 1997 the UMass team dominated the green league and was scheduled to move up, but instead gave their spot to the West Point players, who are one of the best teams in the country. This is UMass' second time winning the league, and the team is pumped for the finals.

The B-side, or second 15, has had its own successful season, with a boat game shut out led by Hyhalf Jason Laliberte. The camaraderie of both sides was captured well by fullback Tommy Ryan.

"We have a very good unity," Ryan said. "We're all on one line on the field."

The club returns to action this weekend when it heads to Syracuse, NY to go up against a yet undetermined Empire State foe.

■ hockey

continued from page 16

ankle, and has resume practice with the team later in the week. Sundin reports that other than some weakness in pushing off his ankle, everything is feeling fine. The Leafs had already solidified their lineup with the addition of Dimitri Khristich, but seeing as he has a tendency to pack his game up before the playoffs, the return of Sundin can't come soon enough.

And finally, though it's no surprise, the NHL has reported that its few remaining Canadian clubs are having problems staying financially afloat. Apparently, no shared solution can be reached, and more clubs are operating on unstable ground.

Ottawa majority owner Rod Bryden has said that if the government does not step in and offer some sort of assistance, there is no doubt that his team will be moved to the states, last another sad sign of where the NHL and professional sports as a whole, is headed.

Matt Despres is a Collegian Staff member.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS
1999
AND INTO THE NEW MILLENNIUM

Spirit Haus
SPECIALTY BEVERAGE STORE
OCTOBER SPECIALS!
STOLI COFFEE FL. VODKA 1 LT. $9.99
CUERVO GOLD 750ML $12.75
BACARDI LIMON 750ML $9.59
GOLDSCHLAGER 175ML $8.99
PRATICE FOR THE MILLENNIUM
ROTARI $9.49
MARTINI & ROSSI (ASTI) $9.49
(BRUT OR BLANC DE NOIR)
338 COLLEGE ST, RTE. 9
1 MILE EAST OF AMHERST CENTER
OPEN 9AM - 11PM
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER • (413) 253-5384
Grad Students-10%off regular fine wine prices with ID
MAGIC HAT 6PK BOTLS $5.99
BASS 12PK BTLS $10.99
GUINNESS 8PK PUB CANS $9.49
LONG TRAIL 6PK BTLS $5.29
ICE HOUSE/RED DOG 30PK CANS $10.99
COME IN TO SEE MORE!

Taipei Tokyo
DINE-IN OR TAKE-OUT
Chinese & Japanese Restaurant
GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE
(413) 582-1888
Open 7 Days
18 Main Street
Northampton, MA 01060

MASSACHUSETTS SCHOOL OF LAW
Although it also produces highly intellectual programs seen on over 500 television stations and a general intellectual magazine that is read across the country, MSLs main focus is on teaching you the practical skills you need for success in law, business and government. We teach you to analyze legal, business and human problems, uncover facts and organize them logically, write well, be persuasive both orally and in writing, negotiate, arbitrate and mediate, try cases, and write specialized legal documents. And at MSL, you will be taught by experts who regularly practice these skills.
The non-specialized skills that we teach you, such as the ability to analyze problems, amass and organize facts, and write and speak persuasively, are needed not only in law, but are greatly desired in business.
MSL teaches you all these crucial skills at a tuition that is by far the lowest of any law school in New England – about half of the median tuition elsewhere in New England. The following chart of full-time tuitions illustrates this:

School 1	$25,550	School 7	$21,750	School 13	$17,075
School 2	$24,448	School 8	$21,200	School 14	$15,950
School 3	$24,090	School 9	$20,200	School 15	$14,850
School 4	$23,520	School 10	$30,150	MSL	$10,800
School 5	$22,708	School 11	$19,084
School 6	$22,054	School 12	$17,986

• LSAT not required • Rolling Admissions
Classes enter in January 2000 and August 2000
500 Federal Street, Andover, MA 01810 • (978) 681-0800
WWW.MSLAW.EDU

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free CD of Cool Indie Music when you register at MyBytes.com, the ultimate wesite for your college needs

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Alpine Commons 4 Bedroom, 2 Baths, Fully applianced kitchen, Private Balconies, All utilities included, perfect roommate living. Just 3 miles to UMass. Move-in special. 256-0741

Take Over Our Lease! Fun place to live. Available Jan 1st. $840/mo. All util included. 2 Bedroom. Call 549-9432!

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Crown Victoria Station Wagon Automatic, Lg. Interior, very good condition, Power windows, AM/FM $1200 or B/O Call 542-3130

1992 Jetta GL, A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500. 546-1773

COMPUTERS

Computer System and Printer $675.00 O/B Call 413-268-0081

Computer Problems? We've got solutions. New systems to technical service. Call 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Want to Learn to Vacuum + Clean my house? I'll teach you to do it. Close to campus Call Jay or Jane 549-6509\

EMPLOYMENT

Flexible Part-Time Research Interviewers Abt Associates in nearby Hadley, MA has openings for evenings and weekend shift Telephone Interviewers. We require minimum of 20 hours/week with flexible scheduling. Applicants must have excellent reading/communication skills, some computer knowledge and a solid work ethic. We offer $6.75/hr to start, regular merit increases to $8.00, health and dental benefits, holiday pay and free shuttle service from Hampshire Mall PVTA Stop. For more information or to arrange a personal interview, please call Paul R. Bebo Recruiting Coordinator 1-800-792-4514 Equal Opportunity Employer

Work On Campus $10-$15/hr. Great Experience (888) 316-2767 x1818 www.collegeclub.com

Aerobic Instructors Needed. Universal Health & Fitness. Call 585-9900

Earn $500 Weekly distributing phone cards. No experience necessary full or part time. Call 1-800-572-3361

Ski + Board All East Season Passes 7Mtn's only $350. Call Mark 413-527-3524

EMPLOYMENT

Child Care Needed 3 days/wk 5:30am-8:30am including every other weekend. Must have car and good references $8/hr 323-6183

Campaign Jobs For The Environment $300-$400/wk, F/T, P/T, + Career opportunities. Call Jesse 256-6434

Spring 2000 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary—training provided. Contact the Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals - Free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

2 COMPUTERS Specifications Processor: MMX 166 Mhz Ram: 16 Mb Hard Drive: 3.2 Gigs. Floppys: One 2 MB Monitor: 15" CD: 24X Zip Drive: Internal IDE Video Card: Cirrus 2 Mbs Keyboard: 101 Modem: 56K External Software: Win95 and various others $400.00 each Call 549-5511

EMPLOYMENT

Couch $80, Loveseat $60, Beds $50, Desks $50, Etc. Free Delivery 586-2221

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

LOST & FOUND

LOST CAT: Near Leach, Orange Tabby Please Call 665-9950 Leave Message

ROOM FOR RENT

Homeshare Large Room Furnished. Quiet setting. Private phone line. 367-9286

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female Roommate non-smoker for ASAP or NEXT semester Call 549-9452

3 Fun Girls Looking For One Roommate! 1/3 mi from campus. $250+util/mo. Call 549-9621 Spring Semester Only!

SERVICES

Know your rights! Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Cheap Heating Oil: Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Coop. Come to Commuter Services, RM 428 Student Union or Call 545-0865

SERVICES

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

#1 SPRINGBREAK operator! Check our website for the best deals! www.vagabond-tours.com Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica & Florida Group organizers EARN FREE TRIPS & CASH...Call today! 800-700-0790

EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 CANCUN JAMAICA For 10 years Class Travel International (CTI) has distinguished itself as the most reliable student event and marketing organization in North America Motivated Reps can go on Spring Break FREE & earn OVER $$$$$$10,000! $$$$$ Contact Us today for details! 800/328-1509 www.classtravelintl.com

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

Are you sick and tired of classes?

Need A Break?

How about going on Spring Break!!

Check out The Collegian Classifieds!!

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, OCT. 28

FRIDAY, OCT. 29

SATURDAY, OCT. 30

SUNDAY, OCT. 31

NOTICES

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

UStore CAMPUS CENTER Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 28, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Polar Bear: Arctic Odyssey		Mystery: Unsolvable Job		Being Served	Keeping Up	Wait for God	This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Dogonoker Murder (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Jeopardy!	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Whose Line? [Whose Line?]		Wasteland (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Nanny
WLVI		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Radio Music Awards (In Stereo Live)						News	Tonight Show
WHDH	7	News		Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	World Series: Game 5 – Atlanta Braves or New York Mets at Boston Red Sox or New York Yankees.				[Caroline		Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WTBX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Real TV (R)	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)				News		News	Tonight Show
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	World Series: Game 5 – Atlanta Braves or New York Mets at Boston Red Sox or New York Yankees.				Friends		Friends	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Headless Horseman		Action	Action (R)	News		News	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	World Series: Game 5 – Atlanta Braves or New York Mets at Boston Red Sox or New York Yankees.				Antiques Roadshow (In Stereo)		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		This Old Hse. [Drs. on Call		Mystery: Unsolvable Job		20/20 Downtown		News	Nightline
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Whose Line? [Whose Line?		Wasteland (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager "The Thaw"		Blind Date	Reid Latte
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)				Chimp	WCW Thunder (R)		WCW Thunder
WTBS	46	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	WCW Thunder		WCW Thunder				Law & Order "Night and Fog"
A&E	51	Simon & Simon		Law & Order "Fever"		Biography: Christina Onassis		Investigative Reports "Blood Money: Switzerland's Nazi Gold"				Sports	Moneyline
CNN	29	Worldview	Moneyline	Inside Politics		The Situation Room		Larry King Live		World Today		Daily Show	Stein's Money
COM	35	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	First in the Nation: N.H. Town Meeting		Saturday Night Live		Saturday Night Live		On the Inside: Haunts
DISC	52	Your New House		Grizzly Diaries		Animal Mummies: Creatures				Would You Believe It (R)		Sportscenter
ESPN	33	Sportscenter			Gymnastnight	College Football: Utah at Colorado State. (Live)				"No Greater Love" (1996, Drama)		Kelly Rutherford.	New Attitudes
LIFE	45	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait "Michelle Lee"		Chicago Hope "Teacher's Pet"		"No Greater Love" (1996, Drama)			Celebrity	Tom Green	Lovelines
MTV	53	Global Groove	MTV Jams	MTV Video Music Awards (R) (In Stereo)						All in Family	All in Family	All in Family	All in Family
NICK	50	All That	Caledog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Cousin	All in Family	All in Family	All in Family	All in Family	It "Known"	The Shield
SCIFI	55	Hercules: Legendary Journ.		In "House II: The Second Story" (1987, Horror) Arye Gross.		Movie Monsters Revealed				Haunted Lighthouses		Untamed Earth: Ferocious
TLC	56	Home Again	Home Again	Rebirth: The Untold Stories		Untamed Earth: Ferocious				"Conagher" (1991, Western) Sam Elliott.		Sam Elliott.
TNT	54	Due South "The Wild Bunch"		CBA "Long Day's Journey		Walker, Texas Ranger						Gortwitch "Sail Away"
USA	59	Baywatch "Free Fall"		UFAO "Death Watch" (In Stereo)								Inside the NFL (In Stereo)
HBO	60	"The Tuskegee Airmen" (1995) Laurence Fishburne.										Autopsy: Secrets
MAX	61	4:30		"The Hollywood Knights" (1980) Fran Drescher.									Linc's
SHOW	62	"The Deal" (1997, Comedy) Mike Starr.

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	10	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	11	UVC/TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WCCH & HSCN International	30	Univision
14	UMass Academic TV	31	Comedy Central
15	WB/New Haven	32	Cartoon
16	HSCN Programming	33	Much Music
17

Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

Joe Banana! By J.D. Schneider

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Horoscopes

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You can expect an equitable distribution of responsibility today, but you may want to take on a little more later on in the day.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You can use your imagination today to increase your own prestige and possibly add a little to your available funds we well.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You may discover today that you've been remembered for something you did some time ago. Check your calendar and see if you're available again.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Your willingness to go the distance will serve you well today. Someone is watching you and is ready to make an important decision about your future.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – A partnership may be threatened for a time today, but a little trust and even more hard work can keep a crisis at bay.

Aries (March 21-April 19) – Someone from your distant past may appear suddenly today and make a surprise demand. You have what it takes to come through in spades.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – The unpredictable and the unconventional, though intriguing, are really not for you in the long run. Focus today on achieving more stability.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – You may be hard to pin down today because you are so interested in exploring all your options. There is no reason to limit yourself – just yet.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – You may be unusually accident-prone today, so you'll want to keep your wits about you as you travel here and there. Take precautions.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – You'll get a head start today, and enjoy a little more time off when you most need it as a result of putting in some early efforts.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You'll receive an important boost today from someone who will give your efforts a little more public credibility. Thank this person.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Any unusual behavior on your part today is likely to arouse suspicions in those closest to you at this time. Play is safe for now.

Quote of the Day

"Could it be that all those trick-or-treaters wearing sheets aren't going as ghosts but as mattresses?"

–George Carlin

Close to Home By John McPherson

With textbook loads ever increasing, many students are finding alternatives to backpacks.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Santa Fe Chicken Sandwich
Pizza Casserole

DINNER
Sicilian Stuffed Shells
Apple Ginger Pork Chops
Baked Teriyaki Tofu

Worcester

LUNCH
Santa Fe Chicken Sandwich
Pizza Casserole
Carrot-Onion Schine
Southern 6 Bean Stew

DINNER
Sicilian Stuffed Shells
Apple Ginger Pork Chops
Baked Teriyaki Tofu

Hampshire

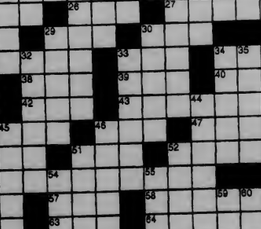
LUNCH
Santa Fe Chicken Sandwich
Pizza Casserole
Beans & Rice

DINNER
icilian Stuffed Shells
Apple Ginger Pork Chops
Baked Teriyaki Tofu

Berkshire

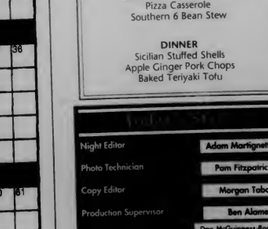
LUNCH
anta Fe Chicken Sandwich
Pizza Casserole
Southern 6 Bean Stew

DINNER
Sicilian Stuffed Shells
Apple Ginger Pork Chops
Baked Teriyaki Tofu



ACROSS

1 Praying —
7 Scientist's place
10 Fail to win
14 Go to extremes
15 Out — limb
16 Cinema canine
17 Outdoor areas
18 Possess
19 Duo
20 Explodes
23 Santa —
26 Above, to Keats
27 Item for 16 Across
28 Sword handle
29 Food fish
30 Air-rifle ammo
31 Like textbooks
33 Third of a series
34 Cook's mass
37 Singer Brenda
38 TV spots
39 Hockey great Bobby
40 Scurry
41 Lodge
42 Vote against
43 Shooting stars
45 Golf standard
46 Qty.
47 Arduous journey
48 Went rowing
51 "The Greatest"
52 Playwright Wasserstein
53 Popular sandwich spread
56 B — boy
57 — Kippur
58 Back out
62 Rubber tube
63 Do a marathon
64 Ballet part
65 Went 95 mph
66 Greek letter
67 Highway cones



DOWN

1 Housekeeper's tool
2 Frank's ex
3 Mesh
4 Acknowledgment of respect
5 Goddesses' statues
6 Fair
7 Released
8 — Sadat
9 Spur
10 Expires
11 Japanese port
12 Pens
13 Soil
21 Like forests
22 Prince — of Monaco
23 Hot dish
24 Suit fabric
25 Priscilla's John
29 Fragrant wood
30 French hat
32 "Kubla Khan" locale
33 Place in an asylum
34 Prickle
35 Fathered
36 Bothersome
44 Timeless
45 Composed
48 Wellesley grad
49 Fable writer
50 Grow
51 Concerning
52 Like unkempt lawns
54 Phoenician port
55 Snare
59 Self-regard
60 Liquor
61 Dawn goddess

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10-28-99 © 1999, United Feature Syndicate

Night Editor: Adam Martignetti
Photo Technician: Pam Fitzpatrick
Copy Editor: Morgan Tabor
Production Supervisor: Ben Alamed
Production Staff: Dan McGuinness-Rossi, Janine Tangney, Roberto Delgado

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Thursday October 28, 1999

Some news and notes from the NHL frozen pond

Matt Depres on the NHL

Question for Buffalo Sabres fans: Has Dominik Hasek retired already?

Of course not. To the casual hockey fan, however, the rumblings over in Buffalo would indicate otherwise. The Sabres have crawled out to a 1-6-2 start, giving the NHL a fitting equivalent to the Denver Broncos.

Consider this: both the Broncos and the Sabres enjoyed highly successful campaigns last year, with Denver reeling in a Super Bowl victory for the second consecutive season, and the Sabres marching to the Stanley Cup Finals. Denver QB John Elway announced his retirement from the game, ending a spectacular career. Buffalo goalie Hasek announces that he will retire upon completing the 1999-2000 season, thus ending a spectacular career. And now, in the still early moments of the season, both teams have huge question marks hanging over them as they bring up the rear in their respective divisions.

But forget the irrelevant comparisons, and forget putting the blame squarely on the shoulders of Hasek - one individual, no matter how great, does not dictate the fate of an entire team. Though the Dominator has strayed from his usual high level of play, posting an 0-4-1 record to go along with a 3.20 goals against average, the bigger question is: where has the rest of the team been? For all Hasek has brought to this team, in terms of wins and spirit, his teammates should be going 110-percent to support their man between the pipes.

Michael Peca, with only a goal, three assists and a dismal plus/minus rating of -7 to show for this season, has yet to even approach the level of play that he took his game to last year. Stu Barnes and Curtis Brown have been the Sabres most consistent and disciplined players, with six and nine points respectively, and have only four penalty minutes apiece. Their play has yet to inspire the rest of the team. Rob Ray, Wayne Primeau, Brian Holzinger and others have all been non-factors.

Inconsistency, thrown into any equation, leads to a disappointing performance, and that's what the defending Eastern Conference champs are facing right now. Don't expect the Sabres to remain dormant for long, though. They recently locked up star forward Miroslav Satan to a multi-year deal, and finally signed their last holdout, defenseman Rhett Warrener. It's only a matter of time before the team gels and starts the climb out of the Eastern conference basement.

So, Keith Primeau and Bill Guerin don't have an NHL city to call home. Primeau, who has said he will not play for the Carolina Hurricanes again, has run off to the Canadian National team, hoping that offers from interested clubs start coming in. Guerin, unable to come to terms with the Edmonton Oilers, is splitting his time between home and the ice, skating during the week with the U.S junior national team. Let's dream for a second here.

Boston management, in an attempt to fool fans into thinking they actually care about winning, aggressively pursues one of the two forwards and actually lands them. Regardless of the outcome, fans enjoy the fact that this team has shown some sign of interest and a desire to succeed.

Nah... not a chance. Either of those guys would look pretty sweet in the Black and Gold right now, especially Guerin and the physical edge he brings to the game. It's a shame, but more than likely, the Boston Brass will pass on a serious attempt at these players and settle on a middle-aged free agent at the season's halfway point. Here's praying that I'm dead wrong.

The St. Louis Blues this past week went out and played a nice little Halloween joke on their fans, signing veteran defenseman and ex-Bruin Dave Ellett. I'm sure Dave is a great guy and all, but he's as scary as an NHL blue liner comes, and I've seen pieces of driftwood with better puck control and foot speed. No word yet if Ellett will be masquerading this Sunday as his alter ego - Jon Casey's five-hole.

Other former Bruins in the news: Joe Juneau, who split from the Sabres in the off-season, has signed on with the Ottawa Senators. Juneau, 31, is a smart addition to a club playing without Daniel Alfredsson, who was lost to injury, and Alexei Yashin, who like everyone else it seems, is sitting home demanding more pay. Many people around the league question the passion with which luneau plays, and feel that he can never regain the touch he had in his rookie campaign of 1992-93, when he racked up an impressive 102 points in Beantown. He has experience, though, that this talented Senators club can use in the long haul, and the versatility to be played at left wing or center.

Word out of Toronto is that injured center Mats Sundin is making remarkable progress with his broken right

Turn to HOCKEY, page 13

Field hockey seniors are class acts

Crooks and Millbauer set for postseason send-off

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

The passing of a season is both a blessing and a curse for a sports program. The biggest upside is that each year provides a wealth of invaluable experience, particularly to a young squad. The most significant detriment is that each passing season brings with it graduation, and the subsequent loss of many of a team's key veteran components.

Last year's graduation did quite a number on the Massachusetts field hockey team, robbing the Maroon and White of its leading scorer and two-thirds of its starting midfield. While the Minutewomen have bounced back with a tremendous '99 campaign, they are once again faced with the loss of some dynamic talent at this season's end.

At the top of that list are Michelle Crooks and Chrissy Millbauer. This pair of fourth-year phenoms has injected the team with the passionate play and sideline wisdom necessary for it to achieve championship caliber success, in the form of the regular season Atlantic 10 title.

And if you ask Crooks and Millbauer, the conference crown was just a precursor to their final act of greatness in Maroon and White: Returning the program to national glory.

For goalkeeper Crooks, the road to Coach Patty Shea's roster began in Feasterville, Pennsylvania. The daughter of Margie and Tony Crooks, she enjoyed a stellar high school career at Archbishop Wood High that culminated in her winning the squad's Most Valuable Player award her senior year. The team captain was also named to the 1995 Philadelphia All-Catholic first team, setting the stage for a smooth transition from secondary school standout to collegiate commodity.

But unluckily for the Keystone State, Crooks turned her gaze a little farther north when it came time to choose a college. She spurned the well-respected programs of home state havens Temple, St. Joseph's and Penn State and instead focused on a particular Pioneer Valley institution with a storied field hockey past and a legendary coach in Pam Hixon.

"Part of it was that I wanted to go away from home, and see what it's like to live far away," Crooks said. "A lot of it, though, was that the coaches here at UMass have always been amazing, and historically have national credentials under their belts- both as coaches and as players."

And it wasn't just the locale and leadership that enticed Crooks to join the Minutewomen. The keeper felt an instant connection with the existing players, who embodied the same grittiness and work ethic that had shot Crooks to the top of the high school heap. She points to those exact qualities as being responsible for not only the program's recruiting power, but also its reputation for molding raw talent into proven winners with resilience.

"That's another reason why you come to UMass," Crooks said. "It's something that's understood about UMass field hockey players- we're not finesse, pretty players; we're probably at our best when things are going the worst. That's the signature piece of any player who's going to come to UMass. You're going to have to be able to get it done in both the good times and the bad. We have a bunch of players that- if they didn't know that they were capable of doing it before- are definitely learning that now."

COURTESY UMASS FIELD HOCKEY

UMass seniors Chrissy Millbauer [front] and Michelle Crooks have played a key role in the success of the Massachusetts field hockey team this year.

Learning was precisely what Crooks concentrated on throughout her first three years here. After spending her freshman year adapting to the college game and studying the Maroon and White's system, she was given a chance to shine during her sophomore season under then-first year coach Shea. Crooks responded with style in her seven appearances, piling up 10 saves and holding opponents to a meager 2.03 goals-per-game average. She also shared two shutouts with then-rookie Zowie Tucker for one on the year.

The net-minding skills of Crooks would continue to blossom during her junior campaign, when she racked up seven saves without allowing a single goal. Her practice presence was also recognized as a huge benefit to the team, as illustrated by her selection, along with back Lucy Koch, as a co-captain for the '99 campaign. While the development of Tucker may have cut into Crooks's net time, her worth to the team was undeniable; captainship was just the next logical step.

"A lot of it has to do with my role on the team as a non-starter," Crooks said. "You have to find a way to contribute. What I've had to resort to a lot of times is verbally supporting people, when I can't do it on the field."

That support has come in a variety of forms, from directing the defense in practice, to providing critical sideline counsel and inspiration during games. When asked what constitutes success in the sport, Crooks's wisdom and experience become apparent.

"Being able to focus 100-percent on the task at hand," Crooks said. "Whether that focus is looking to the game that you have the next day, or looking to the defender that's between you and the goal. The key is using 100 percent of your attention."

With such a high degree of field hockey insight, it would only seem natural for Crooks to consider coaching once she receives her degree and parts ways with the Minutewomen. But according to her, that will all depend on which way the winds of change blow.

"I'm still debating whether to go back to the Philadelphia area, or to stay in the New England states," Crooks said. "I think if I get back to the Philadelphia area, I'll want to go back to my hometown. Coaching will probably be in my future there. Here, I'm not quite so sure. I may be moving more toward the career goals that I've set for myself."

Might we someday see Crooks prowling the turf in an officiating role?

"I'm a great referee on the sideline," laughs Crooks. "But I think I'd probably swallow my whistle if I was actually wearing the ref stuff. I don't think that's quite my calling."

Turn to SENIORS, page 12

Rugby team has solid run; wins its league title

By Catherine Turner and Adam White
Collegian Staff

Saturday was a day of testament for the Massachusetts men's rugby club team, as senior captain Tom Westerlind led the team in an unstoppable beat-down on Northeastern University that clinched the Green League Division I title.

The seniors stepped up play in their last home game, with Westerlind scoring three trys. Dave Wasserman also touched one down for UM, and Ryan Doherty came back after a two-week injury to add another score against the Huskies in a 34-29 final.

"The UMass men have shown a penchant for slow starts," UMass coach Robert "Doc" Laurence said. "Saturday against Northeastern was no exception."

UMass didn't appear to bring their A-game at the onset of the match, as NU jumped out to an early lead. A number of untimely UMass penalties gave the opponents a number of opportunities to score, but once the hosts' backline got in sync, the game turned around quickly in favor of the Maroon and Black.

"We had a disappointing start when we fell behind," Westerlind said. "But once we got the ball, we were unstoppable."

With the backline running free and opening up the field, UMass' pack put the Huskies back on their heels with trademark UM smash-mouth rugby.

Senior forwards Rob Sundlin, Justin "Gus" Picard and Brian Haas stepped up and rucked like madmen, allowing UM to crash the ball upfield and swing it out to the backs. Once Tim Lockhart and company went to work on their open field running, Northeastern had little success stopping UM's ball movement.

Practically all of the game's set pieces belonged to the Maroon and Black. UMass gained a lead that it would never relinquish early in the second half, as fullback Ryan Doherty tore away from the NU defense and touched the ball down between the posts to stake the home team to a 17-12 lead.

Turn to RUGBY, page 13

Napoli, Stevens lead the way for UM soccer

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Isolation can be scary sometimes, even in a team game like soccer.

For Massachusetts women's soccer goalkeepers Angie Napoli and Cori Stevens, defending the net that they stand in front of can be an intimidating and solitary task. After all, the goalie is the last line of defense, a single individual who spends most of the 90 minutes of game time waiting patiently for the action to come to them.

Eventually, the ball will make its way into the UMass end of the field, forcing the keeper to read the play and often act instinctively to make a save. Fortunately for the Minutewomen, when the cards are on the table and the netminder needs to make a critical save, more often then not this duo has answered the call.

"I think that they are having a banner year. They are training very hard, and both have made a lot of improvement from last year," Massachusetts women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "They are playing with confidence superior to last year, and not only do our players realize this, but our opponents do too. Together they are a tough package to beat."

What makes this combination unique is that the two platoon in net. In this case, there is no backup - only two starters. Each goalie plays every other game, and each one has produced when thrust into the spotlight.

"It [the rotation] works out well. We get along good and we encourage each other on the field," Stevens said. "If someone makes a mistake, it's not like you're out of the game. We're able to learn from our mistakes, and because of that, it's been fun."

Added Rudy: "We're very pleased to have both of them. They have been great team players and are very supportive of each other."

Napoli, a senior from nearby Longmeadow, took over as the team's starting keeper last year, succeeding former standout Danielle Dion. However, as Stevens emerged and battled for play at the collegiate level, Rudy made the decision to start both goalies in opposite games.

After the new tactic was employed around the halfway point of the season, each goalie had success. In fact, together they were a key reason why the Minutewomen rallied from a 3-7 start in 1998 to qualify for the Atlantic 10 tournament.

This season the pair has picked up right where they left off last season. Since the opening game against the University of Albany, the two have alternated starts in goal. Typically, Napoli gets the nod on Friday games, while Stevens enters the lineup for Sunday contests.

"Because we know who is going to play when, it's not disruptive to

Turn to GOALIES, page 13

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

The play of goalkeepers Cori Stevens [left] and Angie Napoli [right] is a big reason why the Massachusetts women's soccer team is in the hunt for the Atlantic 10 regular season crown.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

New England's scariest college daily

Friday, October 29, 1999

Volume CVI

Privatization argument still hot

Starbucks cart not burning Retail Food Services yet

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

At the beginning of the semester the first signs of private corporations appeared in the Campus Center with the addition of a Starbucks cart.

Following the suggestion of the UMass Campus Union Task Force on Privatization, and the information stated in The Alternative Report on Operations and Privatization the University of Massachusetts has now begun to carry products supplied by private organizations. According to Student Trustee Seth Avakian as quoted in a previous Collegian article, these changes do "not in any way [represent] a decision to privatize."

The Starbucks cart is not a privatized business but instead a part of Retail Food Services at the university. The cart is student run and operating in conjunction with other campus businesses. Avakian went on to explain that the university is only carrying Starbucks products and that, "the Starbucks Corporation does not have a footing in this University."

Although some students at UMass originally expressed concern that the cart may take away business from student run organizations, student businesses still seem to be thriving in spite of the new addition. According to a representative from The Bluewall, the Starbucks cart has not affected the business at all. She said that the lines at The Bluewall are still, "out the door."

According to Chris Dooley senior and a co-manager at Earthfoods, the cart does not affect some specific businesses in the campus center because the Starbucks cart sells only coffee and pastries. He did, however, speak out against Starbucks as a coffee selling chain. "Personally I don't like Starbucks because it puts smaller coffee stores out of business."

He went on to explain that he does not, "like the idea of other private organizations on campus."

One of the reasons why current campus businesses may continue to be successful even though products from a privately owned organization are being sold, may be due to the fact that they keep longer hours. The Coffee Shop, which is located in the Campus Center, is open each day from 7:30 am to 3:00 pm, and the Bluewall is opened seven days a week for a variety of different hours. While, the Starbucks cart is available to students during a more limited time range.

Another reason why student businesses may still be thriving is due to the fact that they are included on both the on and off campus meal plans that are available to upperclassmen attending the university. Student run businesses that are located in the Campus Center such as The Bluewall, and The Hatch are currently included on the plans.

Earthfoods is currently debating on whether or not to join the On Campus Meal Plan. Dooley explained that student businesses work as a partnership and look out for the best interests of the students. The venue is at present weighing the positive and negative aspects to joining the plan. Dooley illustrated that one of the main concerns that the business has is that seating may be limited because of an already large clientele. Since the organization must make decisions as a group, Dooley said, "We are still trying to evaluate."

The final date for bids for spaces located on campus, and currently held by student businesses is November 9. And, although both student run businesses and the university as a whole are still debating both the positive and negative aspects of privatization, no decision has been reached

Grad unlocks UM's ghost stories

Browne puts together creepy cast from campus past

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

Around October 31, 1996, a University of Massachusetts student disappeared (graduated) from campus while investigating and documenting the ghost stories on campus.

Three years later, his tales were recovered and they are revealed in the following paragraphs. So turn back now or forever be haunted by the facts revealed in the "UMass Ghost Project."

It may sound like a Hollywood farce, but three years ago, UMass student Patrick Browne did just that this. He set out to investigate and record the ghost tales imbedded in the Halloween tradition at UMass. Browne is currently alive and well and is most likely reaping benefits from having uncovered these ghost stories that have been passed down each year.

According to Browne, during the late 1980's, rumor has it that a girl hung herself in the back stairwell of Mary Lyons Residence Hall in Northeast. To this day, the stench of her dead corpse can be smelled drifting through the halls.

However, Browne suggests to most disbelievers to look at the 1960 Collegian because events like this one are recorded.

Another story centers around Northeast is about two girls that lived together in Thatcher Residence Hall. One of the girls woke up one morning to discover her roommate dead. The girl screamed frantically and even today, it is believed that people can still hear the scream coming from a room. According to Browne in the October 30, 1998 edition of the Collegian, this room today is numbered 515.

Browne goes on to further explain a ghost tale originating from Orchard Hill. The event, involving a boy falling from an apple tree, is completely factual, Browne said. In an apple orchard, roughly where the four residence halls sit, two boys decided one day to go tree climbing. By accident, the boy fell from a tree and fractured his leg. The other boy rushed him to the infirmary via the Worcester path, leading from Orchard Hill to Northeast. As Browne explained, the injured boy died attempting to get down the path and to this very day, people have claimed to seen his decrepit, ghostly figure wobbling down the path.

Browne said this event is quite factual and was also recorded in the news-

Turn to GHOST, page 2

BECKY REDDICK COLLEGIAN

Children's festival: Sweet fun

By Erica H. Mattison
Collegian Correspondent

During the fifth annual Halloween Children's Festival yesterday, Resident Assistants led children on a mission through the Northeast and Sylvan Residence Halls in search of candy. The 160 children from the Holyoke, South End, Dunbar and Springfield Community Centers were accompanied by adult chaperones.

Upon arriving at the University of Massachusetts, the children were greeted by a group of cheering UMass students.

"We took our time from our schedules to show these children a memorable Halloween experience," said Brooke Weissblum of Kappa Kappa Gamma.

The children clambered into the basement of Leach Residence Hall where they were fed pizza, soda and chips. When a chaperone asked if anyone wanted more pizza, four little girls jumped off the couch, yelling, "I do!"

Chaperones handed out plastic bags, courtesy of Newbury Comics, and the kids were off to collect candy.

Eleven-year-old Tyshara from the South End Community Center, who dressed up as a cheerleader, has been trick-or-treating at UMass for the past two years. Her goal this year was to get three bags full of candy. With treasures in hand, the cats, "Scream" monsters and ghosts headed to the basement of Leach for the Haunted House.

Approximately 40 floors in Northeast participated in handing out candy to the trick-or-treaters. Black and orange streamers, cotton cobwebs and spiders hanging from the walls demonstrated the work done by the residents.

"We had fun decorating the hall; we stayed up really late," said second flour Dwight Resident Liz Defeo.

An RA on the same floor, Jimmy Chen, who headed the organization of the Haunted House, was proud of the way his residents transformed their hall. Out of all the decorated floors in Northeast, Chen said, "we definitely win."

Helen Jung, an RA in Dwight Residence Hall, said that the activities provided a "chance to get in touch with our childhoods." UMass residents roamed the halls dressed as Goths, Romans in togas and Hula dancers. Aside from dressing up themselves, they took pleasure in seeing the younger kids having a good time. The phrase, "they're so cute" resounded throughout Dwight. Students appreciated the chance to welcome trick-or-treaters.

"It makes you feel like you're at home," said freshman Jessica Garofolo. After the first round of kids came by, she looked at her basket of candy and replied, "I just got wiped out in two seconds."

Many UMass students took part because they wanted to give back to the community.

"Having students from UMass get involved with this sends a positive message to the affected communities," Jung said.

The event "helps those kids who don't feel that they can trick or treat in their own neighborhoods," according to Don Wilson, the fund Coordinator for the festival. "It is something that [some of us] took for granted if we lived in safe places."

Wilson has been working on getting support from businesses since the start of school.

Northeast residents donated $1,000 to sponsor the Halloween program, according to Deanna Leone, Assistant Resident Director for the Dwight, Leach, Hamlin Cluster. The Northeast Area Government was also essential in allowing the event to take place, according to Resident Director Shuli Xu.

Mullins led anew

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

Handling an entertainment and sports venue like the William D. Mullins Center is a tough job at the University of Massachusetts. Just ask its newly appointed Executive Director, Nancy Beauchamp, who said it is an honor to be the head of "a great facility."

Ogden Entertainment, the private firm that operates the Mullins Center for UMass, recommended Beauchamp as a well-qualified candidate.

This week she was named to the post by Harold Bannon, a regional director of operations for Ogden. Beauchamp joins the Mullins Center staff after being with Ogden Enterprises since 1993, when she held the position of director of finance for Connecticut's Hartford Civic Center.

In January 1998, she was appointed Director of Finance for the Providence Civic Center and was later promoted to the post of Director of Facility and Services.

With a determined look, Beauchamp said she knows the kinds of competition the Mullins Center is up against in the area, and she hopes to uphold expectations.

"It just happens to be a very competitive area, and the building needs to do what it takes to bring events in," Beauchamp said. "It's a beautiful facility, and the university as a whole should be very proud of the facility itself."

According to her, the Mullins Center has the capability of doing Broadway, Opera and other theatrical events as a multi-purpose facility. However, she suggests that the keys to success are finding out what the demands are and scheduling the right mix of events to appeal to a diverse audience.

"I think we're on the fringe of two regions," Beauchamp said. "Hopefully, we'll be able to work with an assistant company to schedule some events that appeal to the local community."

In addition, she hopes to interact directly with the students through University Productions and Concerts (UPC). However, having just been appointed to the position, she said she is still in the transition stage.

"My goal at first is to get settled," Beauchamp said. "I'd like to work closely with the Fine Arts Department and the UPC group."

Paul Page, UMass vice chancellor for administration and finance, said in a MassLive article that he looks forward to working with Beauchamp.

"Her breadth of experience in facilities, coupled with her broad experience in the management field, gives the University of Massachusetts and the Mullins Center an individual who will continue to the excellence set forth by Ogden," Page said.

Beauchamp replaced Dale Adams, executive director since 1994, after he resigned to take a job with Feld Entertainment Inc. in Virginia. In March, the university and Ogden agreed to a five-year management contract, with two separate two-year renewal period options.

BECKY REDDICK COLLEGIAN

Steady now...
Animal Science sophmore Kim Knight practices her juggling skills in the Campus Center basement last night.

Fine Arts Center lobby gets finer with facelift

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

The wind that once blew against the concrete walls near the entrance of the Rand Theater and Concert Hall of the Fine Arts Center (FAC) is a memory adrift now that the new lobby addition is in full swing.

More than 100 people gathered last night inside the glass walls and marble based floor at the University of Massachusetts to witness the official opening of the new lobby addition that has been keeping the community in eager anticipation.

Chancellor David K. Scott compared the building of the lobby to the task of "transforming a wind tunnel into a lighthouse." Just as the lighthouse is a marker for boats, so is the FAC lobby a haven and beacon for people to take shelter and celebrate the arts and humanities at the university, Scott said.

"In the future, may this center be a symbol of a beacon and a haven for the integration of the arts, humanities and science at the university," Scott said. "We should congratulate them for their imagination, both past and future, at the University of Massachusetts."

Scott's emphasis focused on the theme for the evening: a world view of the arts. He said the 18 languages displayed proudly outside the FAC entrance represent the diversity that has been displayed through events and programming over the last three years.

"There is no ribbon cutting but there is a celebration of world culture," Scott said.

Guest speaker Zhongwei Shen, visiting associate professor in Asian Languages and Literatures Department, presented the lobby with a very special gift. As a world class calligrapher Shen presented two banners with messages proudly displayed in calligraphs. He said one of the messages, which read, "singing in spring and dancing in autumn," represents the function of the FAC as a form of free artistic expression.

The other banner proudly displayed the message, "mountains green and maple leaves red," to symbolize the kind of environment he envisions forming at the center. His intention was to share the Chinese calligraphy and beauty of the language.

"Art should not have any form of national boundary," Shen said. "It belongs to humankind and all four corners of the earth should be touched with the arts."

Director of the Fine Arts Center Frederick Tillis, said the lobby is aesthetically symbolic of keeping the vision of the heart of campus in view through the arts.

"This is one of the major steps towards making the arts more accessible to all members of the university community," Tillis said.

Marie Hess, deputy director of FAC, said they will continue to support the arts in a growing and demanding technological world.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 66 LOW: 35	HIGH: 62 LOW: 41	HIGH: 68 LOW: 42

Menstrual cycles, Pimps and Freudian Slips

Discover some of the zaniest costumes yet in the special Halloween Campus Perspectives.

PAGE 2

Insanity at its best

Check out a review of Terry Gilliam's excellent flick 12 Monkeys in today's Arts.

PAGE 5

Marshfield Madness

Sophomore forward Kristi Robicheau and the UM women's soccer team will defend its home turf against a pair of A-10 foes this weekend.

PAGE 12

Arts & Living 5
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Andrea M. Peers Photos by Becky Reddick

What are you going to be for Halloween?

"I don't know. I'm still in the process of deciding, but I want to be the M&M man."

Darryl Denson
Junior
Sociology

"I was going to be an angel, but my friend's costume is cool. He is putting two bike wheels on his belt and putting tampons and maxi-pads all over his body. He's a menstrual cycle."

Kristen Paonessa
Junior
Italian/ Early Childhood Education

"My roommate wants us to be the Three Amigos."

Brian Gifford
Senior
English

"I have a few pimp costumes from a few years back. I want to be goofy and weird."

Jeff Chan
Senior
Economics

"My friend had a costume idea where you dress up all in white and plaster yourself with little phrases all over. It's called the little white lie or Freudian slip."

Angela Gwynn
Graduate Student
Education

"I don't know what I'm going to be yet, but I was thinking about being one of the Supremes."

Yolanda Dacosta
Senior Nursing

ghost

continued from page 1

...ter.

The student was John Howard, and his death was recorded in the Collegian on May 2, 1934," Browne said.

Another factual event involved a bell boy who was struck by a car on his way to ring the Class "Old" Chapel bell. Rumors have it that on Halloween night, the bells can be heard ringing in the still night, and on occasion, people have said they can see the shadow of a boy standing on top of the tower attempting to ring it.

According to Browne, the first murder on campus occurred in Draper Hall in the early 1930's and involved a cook murdering another cook. A women's dorm was located above it. Rumor has stated that he believed the door leading to the kitchen has been locked and bolted for many years, but even today, students can supposedly hear crazy noises emanating from the kitchen room.

There are many other ghost stories surrounding UMass and Browne feels that not all of them have been proven to be factual, but the idea that they could be true is thrilling enough and is what has kept him and others coming back to the ghost stories again and again.

"Students should look into these stories," Browne said. "They don't realize it, but ghost stories are part of the UMass tradition and always will be," Browne said.

Like these ghost stories, there are many other Halloween-based traditions on campus. The annual "Rocky Horror Picture Show," which took place last night in the Campus Center, is sponsored by the UMass Science Fiction Society. Vice-President Sean Conlon said this event has been a solid tradition for many years.

"It's out there and so wild and crazy," Conlon said. "A lot of people dress up like the actors on stage. It has a big cult following."

Whether such ghost tales are a cult movement is set to be decided, but Browne doesn't believe it is and just like the three students from Burkittsville, Maryland, he wants to uncover the truth behind such tales, just as long as the ghost stories don't disappear from tradition.

Air valve on Stewart's jet had been replaced

By Eric Malnic
Los Angeles Times

MINA, S.D. – Repairs were made to the air pressurization system of pro golfer Payne Stewart's business jet just two days before the plane crashed, a federal investigator said Wednesday.

The revelation that an air input modulator valve was replaced last week suggests another possible decompression scenario in Monday's crash of the Learjet 35 that killed six people.

Investigators believe the plane depressurized about 39,000 feet over Gainesville, Fla., incapacitating the two pilots and four passengers aboard. The jet – likely on autopilot – flew on another 1,400 miles before apparently running out of fuel and spiraling nose-first into a muddy pasture about a mile from this tiny rural town.

The National Transportation Safety Board said all those aboard the plane probably died of asphyxiation long before the crash.

Investigators said Wednesday that it was still too early to say what caused the apparent depressurization, but several possibilities have been suggested.

The latest to emerge involves the plane's two modulator valves, which control the flow of air pumped by the engines into the cabin to maintain adequate pressurization at high altitudes.

Bob Benzon, the investigator in charge at the crash site, said records show that one of these valves was replaced Saturday. If the replacement valve was defective, or installed improperly, that might have affected pressurization.

However, Benzon was quick to point out, the plane has a modulator valve on each engine. Should one fail, he said, the other should be adequate to maintain pressurization.

Other scenarios involve the possible failure of an interior pressure bulkhead on the plane; failure of the pilots to turn the pressurization system on and failure of the plane's outflow valve – which bleeds off excessive air pressure.

Aviation experts say that in most plane crashes, more than one thing has gone wrong.

Like all pressurized planes, the Learjet 35 has an emergency oxygen system for the pilots and passengers to use in the event of unexpected depressurization.

Assuming depressurization occurred on Stewart's plane, the experts wonder why the pilots apparently were unable to swiftly utilize emergency oxygen masks, stowed in their headrests, to avoid incapacitation and enable them to maintain control of the aircraft.

The experts say there could be several reasons – failure of the emergency oxygen system to work properly, failure of the pilots to turn it on and failure of the pilots to recognize an emergency situation before it was too late.

The oxygen masks for the passengers were among the items investigators recovered Wednesday. Benzon said investigators want to determine whether the masks had dropped from the ceiling as they are designed to do during a loss of cabin pressure. The pilots' oxygen masks had not been found.

FREE DELIVERY

PIZZA
PAPA JOHN'S
331 Russell Street, Hadley
5 8 6 - 7 2 7 2

OPEN 'TIL 3AM
FRIDAY & SATURDAY

PAPA JOHN'S
is now accepting OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan

DON'T FORGET Our Hot Bread Sticks & Mouth-Watering Cheese Sticks

SPECIAL
THURS-SUN OCT.31ST
LARGE CHEESE PIZZA
$6.99

Sunday - Thursday 11am - 2am
Friday & Saturday 11am - 3am

Accepting: VISA MasterCard

1 LARGE 1 TOPPING $7.99
•Not Valid with any other offer
•Valid only at participatin locations
• Customer pays all applicable sales tax
•Additional toppings extra

2 LARGE 1 TOPPING $13.99
•Not Valid with any other offer
•Valid only at participatin locations
• Customer pays all applicable sales tax
•Additional toppings extra

3 LARGE 1 TOPPING $19.99
•Not Valid with any other offer
•Valid only at participatin locations
• Customer pays all applicable sales tax
•Additional toppings extra

BECKY REDDICK/ COLLEGIAN

I know it's Halloween weekend, BUT...

You still have to study! Take Josh Muncey, Bonnie MacDonald, Lauren Watson, and Elena Favrasi's example to heart, people.

Bradley, Gore grace town meeting

By Ronald Brownstein
Los Angeles Times

HANOVER, N.H. – Appearing side by side for the first time, Al Gore and Bill Bradley engaged in a civil but intermittently pointed town meeting Wednesday night that highlighted differences of style as much as substance.

Taking the offensive, Gore repeatedly charged that Bradley's recent proposal to provide health care for millions of uninsured Americans would consume the entire expected federal budget surplus – endangering the economic recovery and precluding efforts to strengthen Medicare.

"If you spend the entire surplus on the first campaign proposal," Gore said, "then that does not leave money that should be allocated for Medicare." Bradley held his ground, arguing that Gore was overestimating the long-term cost of his plan, and insisting that the problem of the uninsured demands a comprehensive response. "It is a big problem and it needs a big solution to that problem," Bradley argued.

On a night that saw the two rivals answer 24 questions about education, the environment, gay rights, and other priorities of the predominantly liberal audience, the exchanges about the cost of Bradley's health care plan were the most barbed and far-reaching. Partly because the evening's format did not allow much direct exchange between the two men – it was billed as a town meeting, not a debate – the contrasts in their manner were as vivid as the differences on policy.

Bradley was calm, collected and confidently low-key, if sometimes a bit subdued, in sticking mostly to broad themes. Gore was much more intense – both in challenging Bradley over the specifics of his health care plan, and in doggedly trying to build a rapport with the audience by joking, bantering and even questioning them. "Tell me about your family," he asked one woman.

Gore set a frenetic tone even before the event formally began. Stepping out with Bradley on stage 20 minutes before the scheduled starting time, he turned to the crowd and invited them to begin asking questions before the cameras went on – which they did. Ninety minutes after the broadcast ended, long after Bradley had gone, Gore was still on the stage, fielding questions.

After the event, Dartmouth College professor of government Dean Spiliotes said "Gore seemed a bit overeager at the beginning [and]...a little bit over- aggressive" at the end. By contrast, he said, Bradley seemed "really relaxed. He doesn't look premeditated."

Jointly sponsored by CNN and the Manchester television station WMUR, the event's format did not allow the two men to question each other, directly rebut the other's comments, or make opening or closing statements. Instead they answered questions from an audience of 250 New Hampshire residents and another 50 students and faculty who assembled in a theater on the campus of Dartmouth here. The two men works chose the questions in advance, but did not inform the candidates of the subjects.

While the two men did not take any new positions, the event did produce some striking moments as they forcefully expressed their views only a few feet from each other.

In Jerusalem, a media murder plot

By Lee Hockstader
Washington Post

JERUSALEM – Imagine that the chairman of The Washington Post decided to tackle the competition a little more directly – and took out murder contracts on the publishers of the New York Times and the Wall Street Journal.

Change the names and that's the gist of a scandal in which the chairman of one of Israel's three leading newspapers is under investigation for plotting to eliminate the publishers of the other two.

In a country that's known its share of scandal, this one is impossibly, deliciously sordid, with wiretaps, bribery, blackmail, corrupt cops and international intrigue. At the heart of it all is Ofer Nimrodi, 45, chairman of the scrappy daily Maariv.

Nimrodi – impeccably dressed, possessor of a Harvard MBA, son of a multimillionaire arms dealer – is an Israeli media mogul with interests in book publishing, the recording industry, real estate, insurance, television and cable. Earlier this year, when he married for the second time, the wedding was a spectacular affair whose guest list was a Who's Who of Israel's power elite, including then-prime minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Ehud Barak, the current premier.

But Nimrodi isn't exactly a golden boy. After a three-year investigation, he was convicted last year for illegally tapping the phones of an array of prominent media, political and business figures and for obstructing justice. He was released earlier this year after serving four months of an eight-month prison sentence.

That case was small potatoes compared with the current allegations.

In recent days, police sources let it be known that since August they've been investigating allegations that Nimrodi conspired to commit murder and to disrupt a police investigation, principally by paying bribes – and that two of those he's suspected of targeting for murder are the chiefs of Israel's other two daily newspapers: Amon Mozes of the best-selling tabloid Yedioth Ahronoth and Amos Schocken of the upscale broadsheet Haaretz.

The third man on his alleged hit list is Yaacov Tzur, a former private investigator who was a principal government witness against him in the wiretapping case that unfolded in 1996. Police suspect that during that investigation, Nimrodi may have tried to hatch a plan to lure Tzur to Southeast Asia for a contract murder.

"This is the most detailed model of organized crime ever exposed in Israel," said journalist Amnon Abramovitz of Israel's government-owned Channel 1.

Nimrodi and his attorneys have denied the reports heatedly. He has pointed the finger at his chief accuser, former private detective Rafi Pridan, now serving a four-year prison sentence for his own role in Nimrodi's wiretapping episode. Nimrodi says Pridan unsuccessfully tried to blackmail him for $3 million and is now making wild allegations.

"Murder?" an incredulous Nimrodi told reporters staking out his luxurious villa Wednesday. "I am simply shocked. Rafi Pridan told me: 'If you do not pay me millions of dollars, I will tell such stories about you, stories that will bury you both personally and professionally. And by the time they are found to be false you'll already be finished.' He threatened, I didn't give in, and this is the outcome."

BECKY REDDICK/ COLLEGIAN

I love technology, don't you?

Third semester senior Michael J. Murphy, a Dance major with a minor in LGBT studies, finds dancing the mambo easier than logging on to a computer.

The University of Massachusetts
Something Every Friday
presents
Free! Tethered Hot-Air Balloon Rides!
Friday October 29, 1999
Metawampee Lawn,
4:30-7pm

Brought to you by Something Every Friday in conjunction with Alpha Lambda Delta

Visit us on the Web: http://www.umass.edu/events/calendar.htm
This progrm is made possible by a grant from the Auxiliary Dervices Department and the vice-chancellor for Student Affairs.

friday marks the end of the world wide web as you know it.

pixelon.com

On Friday, October 29, pixelon.com introduces the world's first full-screen, full-motion, tv-quality internet broadcast network.

Unveiling three years of revolutionary research, pixelon.com will provide on-demand entertainment, sports and news programming unlike any in Internet history. iBash'99 - the single largest entertainment event ever held in Las Vegas - is our way of introducing pixelon.com to the world.

FRIDAY! iBash '99! Live concert Webcast from the MGM Grand in Las Vegas...
A Reunion of Rock Legends - The Who
KISS • The Offspring • The Brian Setzer Orchestra • Tony Bennett
The Hottest Divas of Country - The Dixie Chicks, Faith Hill, LeAnn Rimes and Chely Wright

View iBash '99 for free at pixelon.com beginning Friday, October 29 at 2 p.m. PST. You can even direct the cameras yourself! Log on now for more information and a concert schedule

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Under the big top

In case you haven't noticed, our government is run by a bunch of clowns. Only the sight of all 535 members of Congress arriving at the capitol in one car could heighten the circus atmosphere that pervades Washington. This would be all fun and good, providing ample fodder for Conan and Dave, except for the fact that our government is doing reprehensible things.

Consider Congress's legislative work recently. Last week they voted to reject the ratification of the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty, a pact signed by numerous nations in 1996 in which all parties agreed to cease underground testing of nuclear weapons. Most rational human beings would agree that any effort to halt the spread of a weapon with the potential to destroy the world is a good thing. However, United States Senators are not rational human beings. Several hardline Republicans killed the treaty, saying that such an agreement would limit the ability of the U.S. to monitor the nuclear activity of other nations and that it did not contain measures adequate to insure the compliance of those nations.

Richard Anderson

An equally frustrating footnote is the Bill Buckner-esque miscalculation by Senate Democrats that precipitated this legislative scarlet letter. Frustrated by three years of GOP rebuffs on the treaty question, the Democrats decided to force a showdown with Republicans by threatening to shutdown the Senate unless a vote was held. Had the Democrats checked they would have found they did not have a sufficient number of votes to pass the bill. Oops! They heedlessly pushed forward and Republican Majority leader Trent Lott promptly called their bluff. The doomed vote was scheduled.

Realizing a crushing defeat was imminent, Democrats desperately sought a compromise by offering to delay the vote until after the 2000 election. It must have been difficult for Lott to suppress a giggle as Democrats pleaded, "C'mon, Trent, delay the vote even though we can't pass it and its defeat would hurt Democrats in the next election and humiliate the President you hate so much!" The GOP smelled blood and went for the kill. And abracadabra, the treaty was dead.

What's the significance of this legislative execution? The United States, which purports to be the world's leader in the fight to insure peace and prosperity, has made the world an infinitely less safe place. Foreign nations follow our diplomatic lead. We are leading the world down a path to destruction. There are indications that India and Pakistan will now reject the treaty. That's a scary thought considering that both nations recently detonated nuclear warheads and are engaged in a violent border conflict.

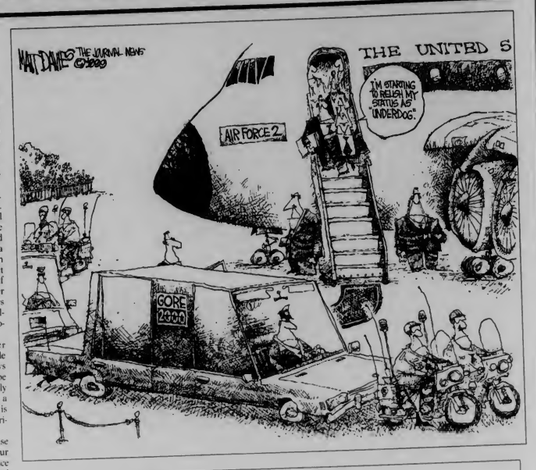
The second problem is that America once again appears hopelessly hypocritical. How can we demand that other nations cease nuclear tests when we won't make the same pledge? Apparently that contradiction does not concern Lott and his isolationist buddies. Imagine Trent entering his Georgetown townhouse, dropping his keys and calling, "Honey, I'm home!" "How was your day, dear?" his second wife asks. "Great! I had lunch with Henry Hyde, picked up my tie from the cleaners, increased the chance of a nuclear holocaust and got tickets for Ragtime." The world's policeman is acting more recklessly than New York City's policemen. The progress of nuclear disarmament has been retarded and a new arms race is conceivable. We have a bunch of nitwit senators to thank for it.

"But Richard," you ask hopefully, "is Congress handling domestic policy any better?" Fraid not. Last week the Senate also defeated the bipartisan campaign finance reform bill of John McCain and Russ Feingold. The legislation would have banned unregulated "soft money" donations to national political parties. Soft money is crucial to campaign finance reform because while individuals are limited by law to one $1,000 contribution to a candidate during a campaign, individuals and corporations can contribute enormous sums of money to a political party. The party may then spend that money to help elect their candidate. So while Bill Gates can only give Al Gore $1,000, he can currently give the Democratic National Committee (DNC) his entire $40 zillion fortune. Thus, Bill Gates would have a larger influence on government than you and I, who can't afford giant donations.

This is not a fantastical scenario. Big money rules politics. Right now George W. Bush is buying the presidency. Alongside his $60 million war chest, the Republican National Committee has a huge reserve of cash available to him. The McCain-Feingold bill would have prohibited soft money and leveled the playing field somewhat. Obviously, this is not a state of affairs most senators wish to see. Republican Mitch McConnell has such a virulent personal vendetta against such legislation that I often wonder if campaign finance reform killed his father when he was a small boy. As in years past, McConnell and his allies successfully blocked a vote on the bill. Later that day he proudly proclaimed the legislation, "pretty dead."

This is good news to McConnell and many other Republicans who know their party traditionally enjoys a wide lead over Democrats in fundraising. Reforming the laws would contradict their own self-interest, which seems to be their primary concern. To be fair, Democrats would surely share a similar view if the tables were turned. Politics is a dirty game and Congress is the field where the contest is decided. It is therefore fundamentally corrupt and meretricious.

"But Richard," you ask hopefully, "Can the White House clean up the mess?" Once again, 'fraid not. You see, our president is a guy named Bill Clinton. Here's a quick glance at the peccadilloes of seven years in office: he has been sued for sexual harassment, sold access to the White House and the Lincoln bedroom, allowed the Chinese government to contribute to the DNC, and met in the White House with an Asian businessman who was later revealed to be an international arms dealer. Oh, he also had sex with a 22-year-old girl in the Oval Office and lied about it to a grand jury and the nation.



Troubled times demand leaders of integrity and backbone, like Franklin Roosevelt and Abraham Lincoln. Our current leader is a national joke: the presidential equivalent of Alan Thicke. He is reminiscent of the pathetic guy in high school who was always making his problems public, crying to his girlfriend at her locker to please take him back. While Clinton's breathtakingly foolish antics may not have effected his policy achievements, it has undoubtedly cast a cynical, fatalistic haze over the country. Ask any business and they will tell you that having a goon in charge is bad for morale.

Could a strong-willed, competent president straighten out this mess?

Possibly. But only in conjunction with a responsible, perceptive Congress.

One pundit has said that actually wanting to be president should be sufficient grounds for disqualification. Hopefully that is not true. Hopefully there are still genuinely good men and women aspiring to serve our country. In 1995 a disgusted Bill Bradley, retired from the Senate, saying "politics is broken." Apparently he thinks he can fix it because he is now running for president. Is he a clown? It's too early to tell. Listen carefully until next November and cast your vote wisely. But watch out for red noses.

Richard Anderson is a Collegian columnist.

No school spirit

When you left high school, why did you come here? Think about it. It's a genuinely fair question with, for some people, no definite answer. Perhaps you came here because you live instate and it's cheaper. Perhaps you came here because of academic reasons or family history reasons. Or perhaps you came here because we had a kick-ass basketball team. Yeah, you can go ahead and read it again. I actually suggested that the reason you're in college is because of a good athletic team.

Ryan Benharris

It really isn't that far fetched of an idea. If you're like me, you're a junior and your freshman year was the year after the team went to the Final Four. Now the actual reason that I came here was not because we had a good basketball team. That would be silly. However, being a huge sports fan, I figured that there would be a certain feeling of strong tradition that would go along with, not only the basketball team, but also everything that has to do with sports in the UMass community, I was wrong.

Last week, my friend Matt approached me with something he thought I should "write a column about." He had some very good points about the lack of tradition on this campus and possible causes. We mainly discussed how lousy the turnouts are at UMass football games and how this could be a result of the rules against tailgating on this campus.

I'm not quite sure what the actual rules against tailgating are. All I know is that it's not allowed. I was still in high school when these rules were imposed, but after being here three years, I have discovered how they impact everyone directly.

Tailgating is definitely a ritual that goes along with football. There's no other sport that you can sit out in the parking lot for a few hours before a game, with friends and family, and get excited about your team's upcoming battle. Since I live less than ten minutes away from Foxboro, I have spent my life going to Patriots games. Even when I was young, I'd go with my dad to games, and we'd bring a small hibachi and grill out in the huge, full parking lots. For me, tailgating had become part of the game. I would never simply leave my house for a 1:00 p.m. game at around noon, park my car, walk into the stadium and take my seat. A Patriots game was, and still is, an all-day event. Some of the most memorable parts of the day happen when the team's not even on the field yet. To me, tailgating is simply a part of football. Not only does it create memories, but it establishes tradition as well.

Tradition is not just something that works over night. I spoke to someone this past week who has attended football games at Ohio State. There, they tailgate in the parking lot before every game, and the band (which they call the "best damn band in the land") walks through the parking lot 45 minutes before the players ever enter the field. Everyone gets prepared for the band to come out, and once the finally do, there are thousands of people ready to cheer them on. He also said, "the football game is the center of everyone's weekend." That's tradition! However, as this person mentioned to me, "tradition isn't something that happens overnight. It's something that is created after a long time."

We don't have tradition here at UMass. We have a football team that is defending their right to be called the best Division-IAA College Football team in the most powerful country in the world, but at every game, half of the seats in the stands are empty. That's not just lack of tradition, it's downright sad.

At places like Ohio State, Florida State and Michigan, it doesn't matter if the team is winning or losing, the entire school goes to the games. Everyone tailgates in the parking lot before the game as well.

I know that part of the reason that tailgating was abolished was to combat underage drinking. I do not condone underage drinking at all, but I definitely think that there are many ways to go about stopping it that are better than preventing people from tailgating. The University should not discourage people from celebrating. There's nothing wrong with school spirit and by abolishing tailgating, they're making a statement that there is something wrong with celebration.

Everyone gets excited for Midnight Madness at UMass. However, if the team isn't doing well, everyone gets on top of them and stops going to the games. Do you think that people boycott basketball games at North Carolina or Duke if they lose a game? Of course they don't. Even if the school has an off year, it's tradition, and part of going to that school for everyone to go support their team and have fun.

What I suggest is that we give tradition a chance at UMass. I think it's wrong to ban tailgating, and to the people that are responsible for that, you should think about what you're doing. You're not giving the students the opportunity to support their team, and get excited about campus events.

I also think that school spirit should be higher among students. Go to these games, and not just football, basketball and hockey. Check out a field hockey game, or cheer on the crew team. It's the student's job to create tradition, even if we are being oppressed by higher authorities.

There's a football game tomorrow at 1:00 p.m., if you have anything to say about what I've written, you can find me there.

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian columnist.

Trick or treat

There are three occasions during the course of a calendar year that make me feel old. What's that you say? "Calm down, Dana. You're a young stallion in the prime of your youth!" OK, OK, not really old, because lord knows that there are plenty of people who would love to be 19 again. I guess these days make me feel more like I'm finally growing up. As if the thought of me being an adult isn't depressing enough, I've got my mother leaving messages on my voice mail constantly: "Dana, you'd better be enjoying school while you can, because after that, the fun's over and you're in the real world." Assuming that is true, and the big, bad real world is counting down the days until May 2002, then I can't help but feel like I'm putting the finishing touches on my carefree childhood. My God, I've only got two and a half years left! I guess that's my motivation for taking full advantage of every one of these few precious remaining days (witness my collection of empties in my room and the scores of girls who know me only as "the drunken fool from the party").

Dana Oppedisano

Getting back on track, one of those calendar days happens to be the upcoming October 31. For the record, the other two are my birthday and Christmas, which only went downhill after I figured out, on my own, that Santa was really Uncle Joe and that his checks aren't naturally rosy. While the other days at least have that special something about them, Halloween just downright depresses me now. For example, my birthday is still the only day of the year when I can't wipe that stupid grin off my face, and that people I haven't seen or heard from in months call me to tell me how special I am. The world actually revolves around me for 24 hours and I can choose to shut it down at will (example: "I'm not going to work today! It's my birthday, damn it! Everybody get trashed!") Christmas, well, I'm still a sucker for the whole Yuletide feeling, and presents and a good meal are two things that I could never argue with.

Which brings me back to the subject of my complaining: Halloween. First of all, what the hell is Halloween and how did it get started? You actually buy the whole Eve of All Saints story about how people got dressed up to scare away evil spirits? That's just a stupid hoax made up by the people who really made Halloween: the executives of every major candy corporation and the people at Hallmark. Their pockets get fatter because they've devised the perfect moneymaker: a day that is directed solely at children. One might argue, what the hell, there are millions of children, why not give them their own special day to have fun? Hello? Every day revolves around children when they're young!

The most serious of a 7-year-old's problems are whether or not his mother remembered to pack a Snack Pack for recess, and we have to dedicate a day to him? Now, maybe some people will read this and say that my whole problem is that I don't know how to have fun on Halloween. You're sitting there saying, "just because you're not a little kid doesn't mean that you can't have fun." Well don't get me wrong, I try to enjoy Halloween as much now as I ever did, but we all know that things just aren't the same.

Maybe I'm just living in the past, in the days where my mom cooked those Pillsbury cookies with the big orange pumpkin in the middle, and I got dressed up to go to school. I would take pictures with my best friends in our cute little costumes, and then we would meet up the moment the sun went down to go trick-or-treating. I still remember the old lady down the street who would pass out apples (doesn't this prehistoric woman know that they teach us NOT to eat anything without a wrapper?!) and how the older kids would chase us with their eggs and shaving cream. Then, of course, how I became one of those hard-asses who chased little kids with my trusty bottle of Gillette Extra Foam and came home drenched in everything from Silly String to ketchup and mustard. One Halloween I even got to go for a ride in a paddy wagon and see the inside of the bright, shiny Everett Police Station (long story).

Those were the days that made Halloween great, and I guess I'd better start getting used to the fact that those days are gone. Who knows, maybe some day when I have kids of my own, Halloween will have that special feeling again. After all, I've made it through tough Halloweens before, like the 5 years from '87-'91 when my mother forced me to wear that same Freddy Krueger mask because I cried until she spent the forty bucks to buy it. Well, who knows, maybe I'll break out the trusty claw one more time for the sake of terror, or better yet, maybe I'll make an even bigger contribution in the name of Halloween: I'll drive home and help that old lady down the street pass out candy. No more apples from the witch! Happy Halloween.

Dana Oppedisano is a UMass student.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Trencoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Guy, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor

Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor

Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menichel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor

Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Being John Malkovitch fascinates

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

BEING JOHN MALKOVITCH
Directed by Spike Jonze
with John Cusack, Cameron Diaz, Catherine Keener, John Malkovitch

John Malkovitch is the man. He made ConAir worth seeing, he completely stole the show in Rounders from the likes of Edward Norton and Matt Damon, and, well, he's just the man. Who wouldn't want to be him, to live his life? That's the very question this movie tries to answer. Lest you begin to worry, however, Being John Malkovitch isn't a cloudy philosophical film that forces its viewers to analyze every small detail in order to take something away from the experience. Instead, it tells what you might all a modern-day fairytale, and with the suspension of a little disbelief, you can loose yourself in a bizarre world of inner discoveries about what it means to be someone, what it means to fall in love, and what it means to hang out with Charlie Sheen.

John Cusack (who's also the man) plays Craig Schwartz, a talented but broke street puppeteer. His wife Lotte (Cameron Diaz, proving here that she deserves much better roles than she's received), a pet store owner, suggests that he get a legitimate job until the puppeteering becomes more profitable.

Craig finds work as a filing clerk on the seven and _ floor of an ancient office building (all the ceilings are low and the elevator has to be forced open with a crowbar). The company president is a lonely old man showing signs of insanity, the secretary is nearly deaf, and Maxine (Katherine Keener), the only normal person in the whole place, won't give Craig the time of day. Regardless, he cannot help his attraction the beautiful and mysterious Maxine; and from what we've seen, Craig and Lotte's home life has routine and strained.

The quirkiness of Being John Malkovitch up until this point, however, cannot possibly compare the bizarreness of what happens next. While moving around some file cabinets, Craig discovers a tiny wooden door opening up into a dark, damp tunnel. He crawls down the tunnel, and the next thing he knows he's looking through actor John Malkovitch's eyes while he eats toast in his luxury apartment. Approximately fifteen minutes later, Craig gets dumped out of the sky on the side of the Jersey Turnpike.

Craig and Maxine set up an afterhours business through which anyone can be John Malkovitch for fifteen minutes for the low price of $200. A four-way romantic entanglement ensues among Craig, Maxine, Lotte, and John, and the movie continues its decent into the surreal. What makes Being John Malkovitch so entertaining, however, is that it always takes itself seriously. The characters are quick to overlook the strangeness of their discovery, and therefore so is the audience. Ultimately, the movie turns into a microscope-slide world of human interaction under the most bizarre and hilarious of conditions.

You can take Being John

Turn to MALKOVITCH, page 7

COURTESY USA FILMS

Craig and Maxine arrive for work at the seventh floor.

Tempermental a solid album

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

EVERYTHING BUT THE GIRL
Tempermental
Atlantic

Everything But the Girl's new album, Temperamental, picks up where their last album Walking Wounded, left off. Or more importantly, where their huge smash hit "Missing" left off.

The band, refusing to die like a good one hit wonder should, shows versatility on their new album. From slow and short, almost jazzy songs like "Downhill Racer," to relatively longer songs that clock in at close to seven and a half minutes, like "Compression," Temperamental is certainly a worthwhile album to pick up.

Band members Ben Watt and Tracey Thorn, who have been releasing singles since 1982, have seen their popularity rise after "Missing," and a 90 date world tour from 1996-1997. After taking time to explore their own interests, Thorn and Watt came back together. And while the songs seem heavily influenced by the phenomenon of "Missing" the band has matured, allowing for their music to trap a listener's attention for long periods of time.

Thorn's vocals are not the focus of every song, as Watt is allowed to explore his drum and bass influences. But Watt has obviously learned from his DJ training, taking a wide variety of beats, some fast and some slow, and combining them onto an album that still gives Thorne's beautiful voice a chance to shine.

Thorne and Watt really mix when the songs are neither top heavy on sound or vocal, like on "No Difference" when a beat that involves drums and flowing water is heard underneath Thorne's crooning, or on "Five Fathoms" when a very steady driving beat leads us towards Thorne's melodic storytelling. Very few songs fall short, although there are times when Watt seems to have absolutely come up blank on creative new sounds. Rather than plugging in something creative, the beats are allowed to run on, overwhelming the senses and increasing the desire to skip to the next song.

The only other complaint —and it wears off quickly— is that the album features what seems to be a "Missing" influence. It's almost as if the band were trying to recreate the same sound, over and over again. But upon second, third and fourth listenings, such complaints hold no water, as the listener realizes that EBTG has released a solid album that is certainly worth the purchase price. B+

COURTESY VIRGIN/ T&G

Electronica-popsters Everything But The Girl emerged from three years of silence this fall with Tempermental, their latest and most daring album.

The University of Massachusetts'
Something Every Friday
presents
[illegible] cross

Vocalist Ellen Cross
Friday, October 29th in the Bluewall at 8pm

Followed by a showing of:

THE BLAIR WITCH PROJECT

In the C.C.A.
at 10:30 pm...
Be there!

Visit us on the Web: http://www.umass.edu/events/calendar.htm
This program is made possible by a grant from the Auxiliary Services Department and the vice-chancellor for Student Affairs.

Bucci
HAIRCUTS $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256 0733
145 main st. northampton 586 0155

SUNDAY BRUNCH
5 Brunch Platter Meals
$4.99
Saturday - Sunday
10 a.m. - 3 p.m.
Applebee's
Neighborhood Grill & Bar
Applebee's
100 Westgate Center Drive • Rte 9 & Rte. 116, Hadley • (413) 853-8799

Video pick: 12 Monkeys

By Nicholas Pizzolato
Collegian Correspondent

Some call 12 Monkeys really messed up, claiming that the sudden plot changes, bizarre and abrupt camera angles, and violent scenes make the movie impossible to follow and enjoy. Others call it a masterpiece, showing Terry Gilliam's gift for visual imagery as well as perhaps the best work by Bruce Willis and Brad Pitt (Pitt was nominated for an Oscar for his role in the film) backed up by a child-like soundtrack that courses down the viewer's spine. While most films are either one or the other, both views of the film are correct: 12 Monkeys is a messed up masterpiece.

12 Monkeys directed by Terry Gilliam (the only American member of the British comedy troupe Monty Python) and written by the David Peoples (the screenwriter of the 1979 sci-fi classic Blade Runner) is the story of James Cole (Bruce Willis) a criminal in the not so distant future who is sent back to the

Turn to MONKEYS page 6

Pursue a World of OPPORTUNITIES in Natural Health Care

What careers can you pursue at Northwestern Health Sciences University?
Chiropractic • Integrative health and wellness • Acupuncture • Oriental medicine • Therapeutic massage
Northwestern Health Sciences University provides the widest range of choices in natural health care in the United States.

The foundation of the University is Northwestern College of Chiropractic, which has earned an international reputation in 58 years as a pioneer in chiropractic education, patient care and scientific research. The individual attention and access to educational resources our students receive helps them excel in preparing to practice as outstanding health care practitioners. Combined with our pioneering clinical education programs and our assistance in job placement, Northwestern provides a superb educational experience.

Now featuring master's-level courses in integrative health and wellness.

NORTHWESTERN HEALTH SCIENCES UNIVERSITY
Minneapolis, Minnesota
For a personal visit or more information, call
1-800-888-4777
Or go virtual at www.nwhealth.edu

COURTESY OF CROSS

Vocalist performs at the Bluewall

Singer/songwriter Ellen Cross will perform tonight in the Bluewall at 8 P.M., presented by Something Every Friday. Her performance will be followed by a showing of The Blair Witch Project.

Robyn Hitchcock at Iron Horse

Talented, eclectic musician takes band along for tour

By Robert Grover
Collegian Correspondent

For 20 years British rocker Robyn Hitchcock has skirted widespread commercial success. Critics fawn over every new release, calling him commercially invisible, yet vitally influential. His most ardent fans include R.E.M.'s Peter Buck and Paul Westerberg, formerly of the Replacements. In an industry dominated by the notion of "keeping it real" and endless discussion of ones purported sexual prowess, his repertoire features songs about Anglepoise lamps, the veins of England's Queen, and sharing supper with God and Satan (during which God assures Hitchcock that "I've got all your albums", to which he counters, "yea, but who's got all the tunes?"). Clearly, his agenda falls somewhere left of the center mark in respect to commercial accessibility.

First with the sonic charged harmony powerhouse that characterized the Soft Boys, and later as a solo artist and with the superb Egyptians, Hitchcock built a strong following in the US, particularly among the alternative crowd. Much of the credit for Hitchcock's longevity resides in his unerring mastery of combining obscure, yet ethereal lyrics with sublime music. His first studio offering in three years is Jewels for Sophia (Warner Brothers). Setting out to "make another rock and roll record, using different combinations of people, all playing songs they had never heard before", Hitchcock gathered together a unique cross section of musicians for Sophia. The album's contributors include 3/4 of the members of Fresh Young Fellows, Grant Lee Phillips (formally Buffalo), Peter Buck (who cites the Soft Boys as a bigger influence that the Beatles), and former Soft Boy Kimberly Row.

True to form, Hitchcock's newest disc features a collection of songs with a wide range of subject matter. Effortlessly he marries unconventional love songs, like "I Feel Beautiful" (I water the tomatoes and I think of you/no one's ever watered me the way you do) to raucous numbers, like an ode to Seattle in "Viva! Sea-Tec" (Viva Seattle Tacoma/Viva Sea Tec!/They've got the best computers, and coffee and smack). To the mix he tells of a surreal obsession with an "Antwoman" and calls for someone to ring "The Cheese Alarm". The album's funniest moment, however, comes in the hidden track "Gene Hackman" (He's got an evil grin/he's got curly hair/and every time he smiles it means trouble somewhere). The end result is a work truly deserving of a wider audience.

Deftly dodging the anachronistic trappings of his peers, the 46 year old Hitchcock continues to straddle a fine line between being willfully idiosyncratic and representing an essential alternative to the mainstream. Perhaps it is the difficulty inherent in trying to compartmentalize music that so endears him to both fans and critics. Words like "eccentric" and "genius" dominate his reviews, yet no

Turn to HITCHCOCK, page 7

COURTESY BLEEDING BUTCHER

Robyn Hitchcock is set to play the Iron Horse, using a full band for the first time in 6 years.

Your guide to movies currently in release

American Beauty
Playing at Pleasant St. Theater

American Beauty takes a fascinating look at the afflictions to be found in middle class culture, the neurotic human drama that potentially plays out behind every white picket fence in America. Beyond providing us with so many colorful, intoxicating characters, American Beauty has a lot to say about American Culture. Materialism, homophobia, the innocence and non-innocence of youth, and the hypocritical nature of American ideals are all present, woven into the characters' internal struggles. A magnificent script is brought to life by wonderful direction and a flawlessly talented cast; this is truly one of the best films of the year.

A (David Troupes)

Double Jeopardy
Playing at Showcase Cinemas, Springfield

Double Jeopardy takes its incredibly lame-sounding name from the legal institution by which someone cannot be tried for the same crime twice. Except for a few instances of humor and a handful of scenes that approached being suspenseful, this movie is barely worth the $5.50 for a Blockbuster rental. Instead, stare at an Ashley Judd poster for a while, and then watch U.S. Marshalls.

C- (David Troupes)

The Sixth Sense
Playing at Mountain Farms Theaters

The Sixth lies somewhere between psychologically intense realism and science fiction, slowly opening the viewer's eyes to a singularly bizarre arrangement. Bruce Willis gives a surprisingly solid lead performance as Dr. Malcolm Crowe, a clinical psychologist specializing in children, reminding us that he's not restricted to movies like Armageddon and The Fifth Element. Crowe becomes involved with Cole, a troubled young boy who confides in Crowe that he can see dead people.

A (David Troupes)

The Story of Us
Playing at Showcase Cinemas, Springfield

Can a marriage survive 15 years of marriage? A more relevant question: can an audience survive 90 minutes of this movie? Not easily. The Story of Us comes suspiciously close to being "Mad About You" the Movie, except with worse writing and worse character treatment. Ben and Katie Jordan are having problems with their marriage and decide to separate while their kids are away, looking toward respective friends for their help. Unfortunately, The Story of Us never accomplishes more than a shallow treatment of marriage, with a couple of lukewarm laughs thrown in to keep you from falling asleep.

C- (David Troupes)

Bringing Out the Dead
Playing at Showcase Cinemas, Springfield

Bringing Out the Dead takes an eccentric, heavily stylized look at the life of a paramedic struggling for sanity in an insane environment. Nick Cage plays a paramedic consumed by his work; he starts seeing patients whom he didn't save as a result. Although most of the movie is plotless, Bringing out the Dead clearly has something to say about the innate, pointless fragility of humanity and the kindness of euthanasia. Ultimately, Bringing Out the Dead suffers from over-important direction that indulges in its music video-like rhythm, but the picture it creates of the lives of the characters has an undeniably fascinating power.

B (David Troupes)

Fight Club
Playing at Showcase Cinemas, Springfield

You cannot imagine the strangeness that is Fight Club. Edward Norton stars as the movie's nameless narrator - a caricature of the model American citizen. Fight Club's primary function is that of a subversive attack on a society that renders its citizens faceless, impotent drones; The narrator and Tyler, his new anarchistic friend, start Fight Club, an underground arena in which men can reclaim their sense of masculinity and empowerment by beating each other bloody.

A (David Troupes)

TRIBUNE PICTURE MAGAZINE

Brad Pitt (left) does some of the finest work of his career in 12 Monkeys as Jeffrey Goines, the deranged leader of an environmental terrorist group.

■ monkeys

continued from page 5

nineties to stop a plague from overcoming the entire Earth. In his future this virus killed most of the human population, leaving the animals above ground in control the planet. The few humans that have survived have created a time machine in order to stop the plague. Because they don't won't to risk the life of someone who is a decent human being, because 1) no one knows if the time travel experiment does work, and 2) no one knows what is expected in the past; they offer the task to prisoners. If the prisoners succeed, a full pardon will be granted to them along with anything else that the incarcerated wishes.

Cole is sent to the year 1990 to figure out anything he can about the plague. Appearing in the past Cole is bleeding and mumbling incoherent sentences, which is why he is sent to jail and then the local institution so that he does not hurt himself or others. While at the hospital as Kathryn Reilly (Madeline Stowe) a psychiatrist observes him and condemns him as being crazy.

Perhaps sensing a kindred spirit in Cole, Jeffrey Goines (Brad Pitt) an animal rights activist (and son of a multi-million dollar industrialist) corrals him and preaches to him about his master plan of giving the animals of the planet a better life, equating the human race to a plague of vermin. While locked up that night Cole goes back to the future and then returns in 1996 with more information on the plague knowing the name of the group that released the virus. However, with this new knowledge can Cole stop the terror that challenges his future?

With the present fear of chemical terrorism that exists in today's society, 12 Monkeys ponders the question of not only what type of person or group would release such a carnage but also how would society stop such a thing from happening? Throughout its acid trip story line, 12 Monkeys keeps the audience enthralled and vocal with comments like, "What the hell" and "Oh my god". It is a brilliant story with unique directing choices not to mention great performances by all the actors. Overall, 12 Monkeys is a great film, especially for those of you who like to not only analyze but also like to sit on the end of your seat in suspense.

Listen To "MUMMY" ... Our Savings Are SPOOKTACULAR!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
Everyday pricing
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LIGHT, BUD ICE, MICHELOB, LT, AMBER BOCK, LITE, ICEHOUSE, RED DOG, COORS LT, COORS, ROLLING ROCK $39.99 +DEP.
1/2 KEGS ICE, NATURAL, NATURAL ICE, MILWAUKEE'S BEST $34.99 +DEP.
1/2 KEGS BERKSHIRE BREWING STEEL RAIL, PORTER, TRADITIONAL, I.P.A. $82.99 +DEP.
BUD & BUD LIGHT CASE OF 24-16 OZ. BOT. $16.49 +DEP.
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS $11.49 +DEP. $2.00 OFF
GENUINE DRAFT & GEN. DRAFT LIGHT CASE 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES $9.99 +DEP.
MAGIC HAT ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $5.99 +DEP.
MOLSON GOLDEN ALE 12 OZ. CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES $14.49 +DEP.
CORONA 12 PK. BOTTLE $9.49 +DEP.
CIDER JACK ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99
WINE OF THE MONTH
FETZER VINEYARDS SYRAH, CHARDONNAY, VALLEY OAKS CABERNET SAUVIGNON, EAGLE PEAK MERLOT 750 ML. $7.49
FRANZIA CHABLIS, BURGUNDY, BLUSH, RHINE, CENTE BLANC, FB, COLOMBARD, CHATEAUBLE RED WHITE GRENACHE 5 LT. $6.99
DUNNEWOOD CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5 LT. $10.49
COLUMBIA CREST CHARDONNAY, CABERNET SAUVIGNON & MERLOT 750 ML $9.99
CAVIT PINOT GRIGIO 1.5 LT. $9.49
JACK DANIELS COUNTRY COCKTAILS 4 PK $3.69
CAPT. MORGAN SPICED RUM 1.75L $18.99
SMIRNOFF VODKA 1.75 L $14.49
SEAGRAM'S GIN & LIME GIN 1.75L $12.99
JOHNNIE WALKER RED SCOTCH 750 ML $15.99
KAHLUA COFFEE LIQUEUR 750 ML $13.99
SOUTHERN COMFORT 1.75 LT $16.49
JOSE CURVO GOLD TEQUILA 750 ML $11.99
Discounts Available on Cases of Wine & Liquor. Ask For Details.
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 10/28/99 THRU WEDS. 11/3/99
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

"What a Great Experience!"
Learning the language. Meeting people. Coming face to face with history, art and architecture, culture, food and fun.
UNIVERSITY STUDIES ABROAD CONSORTIUM
Small classes. Personal attention. Fully accredited — receive university credit. We provide great classes in intensive language, history, anthropology, art, business, economics, political science...
University Studies Abroad Consortium
University of Nevada MS/323
Reno, Nevada 89557
(725) 784-6569
E-mail: usac@admin.unr.edu
http://usac.unr.edu
AUSTRALIA • BASQUE COUNTRY • CHILE • CHINA • COSTA RICA • DENMARK • ENGLAND • FRANCE
GERMANY • IRELAND • ISRAEL • ITALY • MALTA • NEW ZEALAND • SCOTLAND • SPAIN • THAILAND

COURTESY OF WARNER BROTHERS

Gotta catch 'em all!

Behold Mewtwo, fierce Pokemon warrior! Catch him in the upcoming full-length animated movie, Pokemon: The First Movie.

Y2K may create post-New Year buying spree

By Abigail Goldman
Los Angeles Times

Many in retailing are looking forward to a Y2K-rooted boom – not by selling survival gear before Jan. 1, but by selling hooray-we're-alive-and-well wares afterward.

The so-called "January effect" holds that Americans who hoarded cash in anticipation of millennium computer problems at banks, will spend it when it becomes clear the financial system hasn't crashed.

That kind of spending boom would be a huge windfall for retailers, transforming what is typically the slowest shopping month of the year into a bonanza.

In preparation for any run on cash in the days and weeks before the ball drops in Times Square, the Treasury will print an extra $50 billion for domestic use and $20 billion to handle demand overseas. That is in addition to the $150 billion the Federal Reserve regularly holds in reserve.

"Our feeling is that once that high-powered money goes into circulation, it's not going to go back in the bank, it's going to get spent," said Carl Steidtmann, the chief retail economist PricewaterhouseCoopers. "Banks don't make it easy to put money back in – particularly cash. This make it a whole lot harder than taking it out."

Like any good economic forecast, this prediction has doubters.

Michael Niemira, retail analyst at the Bank of Tokyo-Mitsubishi in New York, said he can't imagine a cash infusion so large it would sway January numbers.

"Get a bad blizzard somewhere and that will matter more," he said. "I'm not sure we have any parallel to this situation that would let us predict."

Retail industry watchers generally agree that fears about Y2K, when computers could mistake 2000 for 1900, are likely to affect sales in some way, however.

Some predict a near-spending freeze starting after Christmas and lasting into the first two weeks of 2000. In that case, important post-holiday sales could drag down fourth-quarter and first-quarter 2000 receipts, turning a potentially record January into a mixed bag.

Another theory has shoppers going on a spending bender before the Y2K apocalypse. This idea predicts a late-December boom and a slow January. At the least, some say, Y2K could cause a spending shift, as some people stock up on food and gear in December and then cut spending back in January, either because they have enough staple supplies or because they've already spent their discretionary money.

Still others predict a post-holidays sales slowdown as those who are worried about Y2K hunker down and stay down, even after the sun rises on Jan. 1, afraid to use their credit cards, which could offset any cash-spending gains.

"I think people are pretty cautious with their money," said Stephanie Shern, global vice chair of retail and consumer products for mega-consultant Earnst & Young. "They might think that their number will be used or they might get a lot of errors as a result of what they do so they might tend not to buy."

As it is, shopping patterns have already shifted January sales, which used to be slow as activity focused on late Christmas returns and inventory close-outs. The month has morphed over the past few years into a solid selling month, as value-driven consumers delay purchases until the after-season sales begin and increasing numbers of gift-certificate recipients swell the purchasing ranks with their own added dollars.

Last January, for the first time, many retailers actually made money, analysts said. Successful retailers planned for a later season, noted analysts at Salomon Smith Barney, controlling fourth-quarter inventories to reduce markdowns, keeping the selling floor fresh and offering plenty of seasonable goods after the holiday season ended.

Even some of those who anticipate a January effect, however, worry that some retailers expecting a replay of last year will fail to fully take advantage of it by keeping inventory too low or marking down too much.

The strong numbers from January 1999 also have some economists downplaying chances for a bang-up January, noting that it will be hard for many retailers to show growth in comparison to last year's strong numbers.

But with the late-buying trend and the record amounts of circulating cash, economist Steidtmann and others still envision a scenario with the first of next year ushering in the best January sales in history.

"We still have more people working than ever before," said John Challenger, chief executive of employment consulting firm Challenger, Gray & Christmas. "They have money on hand and people now know to wait for the discount season. It might be the heaviest shopping season in many years."

New test for computer literacy

By Michael Hill
The Baltimore Sun

So you know your Chaucer, but how about your CD-ROMs? You've got Schopenhauer down cold, but how do you handle a spreadsheet?

A new test has been designed to answer those questions, giving college students who major in the humanities and social sciences a chance to prove their technical prowess for potential employers.

Tek.Xam got its fourth and final test drive last weekend as 1,000 students on more than 60 campuses in 25 states took the four- to five-hour test.

"So many younger people are technically competent, yet have an end degree that doesn't show any technical background," said Mark Warner, chairman of the Virginia Foundation of Independent Colleges (VFIC), which developed the test. "Yet there are so many things that come out of a liberal arts background, like critical thinking, that an employer wants."

Mei-Ling Johnson, an English major at Goucher College in Maryland, was one of the students prepared to take the test Saturday.

"There are a lot of professions out there that require a certain degree of computer proficiency," said the 20-year-old junior. "But there was no certification of my knowledge unless I went through the Microsoft certification process – which is expensive and difficult."

If the test catches on, its developers hope it will become a credential recognized by human resource officials at companies that might otherwise overlook liberal arts graduates.

"These are critical thinking problem-solvers who can write and communicate," said Linda Dalch, VFIC president. "When you add technical skills to that, you have a powerhouse, someone who can work on the technical side and cross the bridge into management."

Tek.Xam seems to be catching on. According to Mariah Bauer, the graduate assistant administering the test at the University of Maryland, College Park, the 40 spaces were filled hours after an e-mail notice was sent to the campus. The waiting list was cut off at 80, with many more trying to get on.

"These students want to say, 'I can do this and here's my proof,'" Bauer said.

This was the students' last chance to take the test for free. Developers say it will cost $150 to $200 when it's officially launched, probably next spring.

"We want to create a brand, like the bar exam, the CPA test, that's not the product of any school, or any group of schools from one state, but that is recognized nationwide, worldwide, as a standard," said Warner, a venture capitalist active in Virginia Democratic politics.

The test is taken on the Internet and must be administered in wired computer labs. The publishers say it's "vendor neutral," which means it can be taken on Windows PCs or Apple Macintosh machines.

"It's not just a technical exam, they have to use their heads," said Dalch.

Paul Sankovich, VFIC's director of Tek.Xam, said one section requires using the Internet to research "relatively obscure questions." For example, he said, "We've asked the mileage of the most direct route driving from San Antonio, Texas to Jacksonville, Fla."

The test quizzes students about computer concepts and terminology, asks them to design a document using a word processor, prepare a PowerPoint-style presentation, create a spreadsheet from raw data and analyze it, and use case studies to evaluate legal and ethical issues such as privacy and copyright.

"One side of the test is technical, point-and-click, in nature; the other side is the more analytical," said Sankovich. "Can they create something that's persuasive and well designed? Can they read what a spreadsheet is telling them?"

■ malkovitch

Malkovitch on as many levels as you wish, but the movie is so eccentric that looking too closely for any overriding purpose may lead to frustration. The movie is primarily interested in the nature of relationships, but it's hard to say exactly what it wants us to think. For instance: Lotte finds herself attracted to Maxine. Maxine returns the interest, but she only feels comfortable acting on those emotions when Lotte has entered John's head. Maxine, therefore, seduces John Malkovitch, but imagines herself having sex with Lotter herself, who's on the other side of John's eyes. Make of that what you will.

Regardless of that sort of physiological commentary, though, Being John Malkovitch is thoroughly entertaining: a well acted, well written, well directed, hilarious and fascinating film. I find it truly refreshing to see this sort of originality and experimentation in an industry drowning in romantic comedies and formulaic thrillers. A

■ hitchcock

continued from page 6

one rushes to deconstruct his songs. Hitchcock offers this observation of his work: "My songs have always been about the shock of existence: 'Oh my God, I'm really here!' – whether that shock is benign or terrible." He seems content to remain in the periphery, relaying his unique observations of the human condition, bereft of the trappings of fame. Perhaps that's not a bad thing. "Praise goes to my head", he says. "Blame goes to my feet-so I stay upright."

Hitchcock will be playing at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton this Sunday, October 31 at 7:00 p.m. Tickets are available at Northampton Box Office. For the Record in Amherst and at the door.

Arts and Living So much fun, it's scary!!!!

BECKY BEDDICK/COLLEGIAN

Urban Tattoo

A free preview reading of the play that just opened in Los Angeles about a Native American woman's personal journey graced the Augusta Savage Gallery last night.

amc
There is a Difference!
Silence is Golden
No child under 6 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6PM.
Mt. Farms 4 • Mt. Farms Mall
584-9163
SIXTH SENSE: PG13
Today at (5:10@ $3.25) 8:00 10:40
Sa t 2:20 (5:10@ $3.25) 8:00 10:40
Sun at 2:20 (5:10 @ $3.25) 8:00
Mon - Thurs at (5:40 @ $3.25) 8:30
THREE TO TANGO: PG13
Today at (5:20@ $3.25) 8:10 10:40
Sat at 2:20 (5:20@ $3.25) 8:10 10:40
Sun at 2:20 (5:20 @ $3.25) 8:00
Mon - Thurs at (5:50 @ $3.25) 8:30
MUSIC TO MY HEART:PG
Today at (4:50@ $3.25) 7:40 10:20
Sat at 2:00 (4:50@ $3.25) 7:40 10:20
Sun at 2:00 (4:40 @ $3.25) 7:40
Mon - Thurs (5:20@3.25) 8:10
THREE KINGS: R
Today at (5:00@ $3.25) 7:50 10:30
Sat at 2:10 (5:00@ $3.25)7:50 10:30
Sun at 2:10 (5:00 @ $3.25) 7:50
Mon - Thurs (5:30@ $3.25) 8:20
$3.25 'Twi-lite' Show Daily!
Special Engagement No Passes or Coupons

MASS SKATE
'kick A++ skate park'
Route 202 • Westfield
(413) 534-1000
Monday & Sat-
• BMX Sessions
Friday-
• Live Punk Shows
COMPLETE SKATEBOARD, SNOWBOARD, & BMX SHOP.
ELEMENT • SPITFIRE • INDY • SANT CRUZ • FORUM • FOUR SQUARE • DC • OSIRIS • BRIEFCA • BLACK LABEL • ZERO • 151 • ANTI HERO • VOLCOM • SPLIT • PRIMO • FBM • LOOSE • GLOBE • 5 • 81 • GIRL •
WEEKDAYS $5 OFF with COLLEGE ID
LARGEST INDOOR PARK IN MASS.
OPEN 7 DAYS • NOON-NINE

McMurphy's Uptown Tavern
Live Music
McMurphy's Welcomes
Umass' Own
Steve Asadorian
Sunday Night
37 North Pleasant St.

"What a Great Experience!"
Learning the language. Meeting people. Coming face to face with history, art and architecture, culture, food and fun.
UNIVERSITY STUDIES ABROAD CONSORTIUM...
Small classes. Personal attention. Fully accredited — receive university credit. We provide great classes in intensive, language, history, anthropology, art, business, economics, political science...
University Studies Abroad Consortium
University of Nevada MS/323
Reno, Nevada 89557
(725) 784-6569
E-mail: usac@admin.unr.edu
http://usac.unr.edu
AUSTRALIA • BASQUE COUNTRY • CHILE • CHINA • COSTA RICA • DENMARK • ENGLAND • FRANCE
GERMANY • IRELAND • ISRAEL • ITALY • MALTA • NEW ZEALAND • SCOTLAND • SPAIN • THAILAND

Hey everybody, the Collegian is cool. It's Trish's Birthday. Yippee, two reasons to celebrate!

■ invasion

continued from page12

field for a 3 p.m. game today. The Dukes enter today's contest with a 7-4-1 overall mark, but they are 5-4 in the A-10 and in the driver's seat for the last tourney berth.

However, the Minutewomen will be looking to return a favor of sorts to the Dukes. Last year UMass lost in Pittsburgh in the final weekend, forcing the Minutewomen to win on the final day of the regular season against St. Bonaventure to make the A-10 tournament. Should the Maroon and White win today, the same scenario will likely face the Dukes in their finale against URI on Sunday in what could be a winner-take-all match.

Kristi Robicheau

"They're a direct sort of team who has given us fits the past few years," Rudy said. "They have the second lowest goals against in the conference after Dayton and are the only team who has beaten them. You're not wowed with their offense, but on the other hand, they don't give up a lot on defense, either."

The Dukes come into the weekend on a two-game losing skid in the conference, a trend that the Minutewomen are hoping to extend today.

"They went from 5-2 to 5-4, so this is the biggest weekend of the year for them. They're first trip to the A-10's is on the line," Rudy said.

Top threats for the Dukes include Abbey Burns and Julie Antignano, while midfielders Kate Matuszewki and Stacy Wilhelm.

St. Bonaventure will visit Amherst on Sunday in the season finale for both teams. The Bonnies come into the weekend with a 7-7-3 mark, but are only 3-4-2 in the A-10.

"St. Bonaventure has a number of good players. They have the most organized team that they've ever had, and it keep it tight," Rudy said. "They've had 11 one-goal games and five overtime games."

Kara Green

Kate Web

Top players for the Bonnies include Kristin Konstanty, Jen Twardzik and Keri Guiminey.

On the UMass side of things, forwards Emma Kurowski and Kara Green continue to lead the Minutewomen offense. However, their supporting cast is nothing to complain about. Katelyn Jones, Cindy Garceau, Sarah Cook and Brooke Bartlett have all chipped in during key situations for UMass.

What is questionable, though, is whether or not Rudy will be able to continue his goalkeeper rotation this weekend. Typically, senior Angie Napoli and sophomore Cori Stevens play on alternate days, but Stevens tore ligaments in her right thumb in practice during the week, and may not be able to go this weekend.

Sunday's game will also be the final regular season contest for the seniors on the UMass roster. However, it will not be their final home game, as they will play at least one more game next weekend in front of the Totman faithful in the A-10 tournament.

Men's X-C searching for A-10 glory in City of Brotherly Love

By Andrea Crane
Collegian Staff

Looking to storm into the Atlantic 10 Championships with speed and authority, the Massachusetts men's cross-country team will travel to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania this Saturday in a quest for the conference crown.

The Maroon and White has the talent and potential to charge into LaSalle and St. Joseph's country and tear it up. Eleven teams will compete for the Atlantic 10 crown at the Belmont Plateau course.

The Minutemen are predicted to finish strong in fourth place by the A-10 coaches' poll. Two weeks ago at the New England Championships at Franklin Park in Boston, UMass ended the race in 13th place, just ahead of fellow A-10 competitor Rhode Island.

Brown dominated the field and won the race with 69 points. Host Boston College boasted a second place finish with 100 points. Other strong, well-rounded teams, Providence College and Keene State ended the race in third and fourth place, respectively.

Sophomore sensation, Ryan Corbett once again set the pace for the Maroon and White, coasting to the finish line in 58th place overall. Corbett once again set the pace for the Maroon and White, coasting to the finish line in 58th place overall. Teammate Colin Baughman was the diamond in the rough of this race, as he came out of nowhere and finished second for UMass and 61st overall. Matt Ely once again proved to be the backbone of the UMass team as he always finishes in the top four for the Minutemen, this time in a place of 85th overall. Sophomore, Kevin Curtin rounded out the score for the team as he crossed the line in 87th place.

"Corbett, Baughman, Ely, and Curtin seem to be passing around their best scores," coach Ken O'Brien said. "If we can get them all to come out strong and produce their top times at the same race, we have a really good chance for success."

The UMass team is young this year, as six out of its top seven runners are sophomores. O'Brien hopes that all the athletes will draw on each others' experience to come out on top in Philly.

The site of the Atlantic 10 championships is chosen every couple of years by the coaches and the conference as a whole. This year the schools will compete at Belmont Plateau in Philadelphia.

"It is a real tough course and an extra challenge is added because of St. Joseph's and LaSalle's home course advantage," coach O'Brien said. "But there is no better feeling than beating a rival at home."

Last year the Minutemen finished in fifth place. The outlook for this year has LaSalle, finishing on top, followed by last year's champion St. Joseph's. Predicted to tally up enough points to finish third is Virginia Tech and Rhode Island looks good enough to come in at the fifth position.

■ polo

continued from page 12

the Knights coming out on top in their most recent meeting, a 9-7 nail-biter at Wheaton College just two weeks back.

"I have trouble being rational about that team right now. I don't think that they're playing the way the game's supposed to play it," Yarworth said. "I think that water polo should be a very physical game, but there's a line."

Carlos Ramos netted a pair of goals in last week's win. Entering the playoffs, the sophomore will look to equal last year's postseason success, where he tallied a goal and two assists in the Northern Championships win, in addition to his four scores in the ECAC Championship game. He also played an integral role in the Minutemen's 8-5 defeat of Queens in the finals of the CWPA Tournament earlier this month, recording two goals.

Senior Timmy Troupis has registered a goal in five consecutive games, including a four-goal effort in the Minutemen's 15-7 triumph of Bucknell in the opening round of the ECACs. The victory broke a two-game slide.

■ football

continued from page 12

in the second half, two of which the Minutemen were faced with a deficit at halftime. The offense has responded with an average of 25 points in that time, good enough for three victories.

"Our defense has gained a lot of confidence. I do not think we were confident as a football team earlier this year," Whipple said. "Our defense has grown and they really believe in one another. They believe the offense is going to get it done and the offense feels likewise."

Through seven games, the Minutemen lead the nation with 19 interceptions, six of which came in the 77-0 drubbing of Northeastern, tying the school record. Jerard White and Jeremy Robinson headline the defensive secondary with five picks apiece, which puts them in a seven-way tie for the top in the nation. UMass is +10 in the turnover column, good for ninth nationwide.

Redshirt freshman Corey Potter makes his fourth start at outside linebacker in the place of the injured Dan Healey. Last week, the Doylestown, Pa. native recorded 10 tackles and three sacks, earning him ECAC/Budget 1-AA Rookie of the Week honors. All three of his sacks came in fourth quarter.

The Rams better hope to get their points early because the UMass defense has held opponents scoreless in the second half in the last three games.

Collegian Sports hits them up the middle!

GO UMASS!!

NBC's Gray had right line, but walked it too long for public

By Leonard Shapiro
Washington Post

The bottom line on the Jim Gray/Pete Rose flap: Gray was a reporter doing his job, asking questions that needed answers.

Did Gray go on with the same line of questioning a tad too long when Rose, a man he's known for more than 20 years and interviewed more than 50 times, made it clear he had no intention of answering? Perhaps.

Was the line of questioning inappropriate, considering it occurred minutes after Rose and other all-time great players had been honored as members of baseball's All-Century Team?

You probably could make a case for that, too.

But I won't even try.

Gray answered both those questions Tuesday night. After viewing the tape of the Sunday night interview for the first time in a Tuesday production meeting before Game 3, Gray apologized during the NBC pregame show.

"After viewing the videotape, I can understand the reaction of many baseball fans," Gray said on the air. "I thought it was important to ask Pete Rose if this was the right moment for him to make an apology. If, in doing so, the interview went on too long and took out some of the joy of the occasion, then I want to say to baseball fans everywhere that I am very sorry about this."

NBC officials on Wednesday insisted Gray wasn't pressured into his apology and that MasterCard, sponsor of the all-century promotion, never threatened to pull its considerable lineup of advertising from future NBC baseball telecasts. That's what network officials are supposed to say, even if experience would indicate there almost certainly had to be considerable pressure on Gray from a variety of sources.

Gray said in a brief interview Wednesday: "People at NBC have been beyond belief. (NBC Sports president) Dick Ebersol has been unbelievable with his support personally, privately and publicly. You could not ask or receive any more. That is plain and simply the truth."

On Monday, I phoned Gray, who was having a difficult time understanding the furor his interview had created, especially on a day when a far more significant story, a plane crash that killed U.S. Open champion Payne Stewart, was unfolding.

"I thought I was doing my job," he said several times. "I'm not sorry for it. I don't apologize for it. It was an opportunity to find out if he had a change of heart."

At the time, I agreed with Gray. I still do. He's the best sideline and event reporter on television, always eschewing the insipid "how does it feel" line of questioning used by so many of his peers. Just last year, he won an Emmy award for his brilliant interview with a very angry Mike Tyson minutes after the boxer had bitten off part of Evander Holyfield's ear.

Gray never shied away or backed ", in that interview. And when Rose kept answering Gray's questions with queries of his own, it merely prolonged a discussion on a subject that probably should have ended when it became obvious Rose was still in total denial about the severity of his sins against the game.

Gray is taking all the heat for this, and that's too bad. Wasn't he wearing an earpiece connecting him to his producers and directors? Why didn't someone quietly suggest, "Jim, let's move the questioning over to Pete being honored tonight and what it's like to be back in a major league ballpark."

This is all being said with 20-20 hindsight. There's not a reporter in the business who has never come out of an interview thinking he or she should have started off soft and eased into the tough question, or lamented not asking a question in a slightly gentler tone, or even worried about asking the wrong question.

Gray had a limited amount of airtime. He probably should have started by asking Rose's reaction to being honored before going into questions Rose, quite frankly, has never really answered honestly.

Let's not forget something else: Rose knew full well what Gray's line of inquiry was going to be beforehand. He didn't jump on Gray after the interview nor, to my knowledge, has said anything about it publicly.

We're also talking about a man who was convicted for tax evasion, allegedly gambled on the team he was managing and, by his own admission, wasn't a particularly good family man. This was not about bullying a candidate for canonization. Of course Rose should be treated fairly. But he can take it and dish it right back.

Long before Sunday's flap, and Yankee Chad Curtis' childish snub of Gray after hitting the game-winning home run Tuesday, I was thinking about Gray while watching the Mike Tyson fight Saturday night.

On another evening of typically huge controversy, Showtime was forced to use that intrepid reporter, Dr. Ferdie Pacheco. I saw his interview with the head of the Nevada Boxing Commission and cringed as Pacheco asked questions, then answered himself, offered his own opinion to a mostly silent interview subject and at times seemed to be ranting and raving even more than usual.

Pacheco was pressed into duty for only one reason: Jim Gray, the best game interviewer on television, was busy doing the World Series. Viewers can only hope Gray will be around for a long time, doing the big interviews at the big events, and asking the tough questions that need answers. In other words, doing his job.

When most people think of masks, they picture 'Jason' from Friday the Thirteenth, Darth Vader or Rocky Dennis. But this Halloween, Collegian Sports would like to remind you that masks aren't just limited to monsters and freaks. UMass hockey goalie Marcus Helanen, softball pitcher Nikki Faessler and field hockey keeper Zowie Tucker all reiy on masks to keep their mugs intact. After all, candy can't rot your teeth if they've all been knocked out!

Men's soccer hoping for road treats

Dukes, Bonnies out to trick UM in holiday weekend away contests

By Matt Crocker
Collegian Staff

There will be a lot scarier things this Halloween weekend than children dressed in rubber masks carrying orange plastic jack-o-lanterns, open candy, or possible egg attacks.

The Massachusetts men's soccer team hits the road in an attempt to scare the competition stiff with an outstanding performance in their final two games of the regular season.

Hosting the Minutemen are Duquesne University on Friday evening and St. Bonaventure on Sunday afternoon. Both teams have posted impressive records this season, offering serious conference competition for the Maroon and White. The Dukes will be joining UMass in the post season Atlantic 10 tournament, as this weekend will shape up to be a preview of this season's tournament action. The Bonnies also might find themselves traveling to Dayton in November if they can win or tie once in their two games this weekend.

Duquesne, who are second in the A-10 and have secured a spot in the post season tournament, enter this weekend with a 11-4-2 record and stand 8-1 in the A-10. Only dropping one game at home this entire season, the Dukes' artificial turf field has spelled the demise on many opponents. Duquesne is currently on a four game win streak; marking the second time this season it has made such a run. Yet, it is not just a powerful offensive game that is giving the Dukes the edge in the A-10; Duquesne defense has posted ten shutouts this season, and four in its latest win streak. Although originally picked to finish at the bottom of the A-10, the Dukes have surprised their critics and risen to the top of a very talent-stacked division. There is a possibility that UMass will see Duquesne in the tournament, and despite the fact that the Minutemen have never lost to the Dukes in their four meetings, the numbers that Duquesne has produced could scare even the most avid Halloween aficionado.

St. Bonaventure, who does not conjure up the same frightening image as Duquesne's soccer squad, enters this weekend haunted by past UMass defeats which have left them on the sidelines looking in on post season A-10 play. Tied with the Minutemen for third in the A-10, the Bonnies hold a record of 9-8 and 7-2 in the A-10. Having to win or tie once this weekend to get to November, the Bonnies are in a desperate situation, but do not have an easy time ahead of them. The University of Rhode Island, which has not lost a single conference game all season, will face SBU on Friday. Sunday opponent UMass has taken nine-of-ten from the Bonnies, who may have as much chance as a "please take one" candy bowl does of leaving Halloween weekend with anything.

No matter what transpires this weekend, the Minutemen are in the A-10 tournament; yet the games are no less important. Vying for a higher seed, UMass must lost its opponents and look to leave a horrific impression with their possible tournament competition, which will most likely be Duquesne. The Minutemen will want the Dukes to have nightmares before the next time the two teams will square off.

Possible means of doing this may come from senior forward Adam Black, who for the second time this season received the Atlantic 10 Conference Player of the Week. Black found the back of the net three times last weekend in UMass victories over La Salle and Fordham. Sitting atop the A-10 in goals scored in conference games, Black is a dominant offensive force in the A-10 and has accumulated 25 points this season, 14 of which came in only two games.

But with a mere two games left this season, Black will attempt to raise that point title even higher as everyone else is out getting a costume ready for this Halloween weekend. The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team has already found its costume. Bad news for Duquesne's and St. Bonaventure's this weekend.

DAN SHIFFLETT/COLLEGIAN

Matt Christy and the men's soccer team hope to close the season on the right foot, traveling south for dates with Atlantic 10 rivals Duquesne and St. Bonaventure.

UM tries on Team of Century tag as it eyes repeat trip to Atlantic 10 Conference peak

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

Team of the decade, huh? Who decides this?

They are not the Chicago Bulls, the Dallas Cowboys, the New York Yankees, or the Detroit Red Wings; they are the Massachusetts women's cross-country team. And they have a case to state.

The Bulls won three NBA championships in a row twice in the 1990s. The Cowboys and Yankees both won three Super Bowls and World Series respectively. The Red Wings etched their names on Lord Stanley's Cup twice. But none these performances equal the run put forth by the Minutewomen.

This Saturday, the Maroon and White look to continue they dominance of the Atlantic 10 when they compete for the conference crown in Philadelphia, PA. UMass is the four-time defending A-10 Champion, and the odds-on favorite to capture its fifth title in a row.

UM has dominated the 11-year history of this event, having won six overall titles as well as four individual crowns.

The Minutewomen are led by senior Nicole Way. Their most consistent runner this season, Way is poised to be on the squad for four championships. The native of Marstons Mills, MA has been the model of consistency for coach Julie LaFreniere, not finishing out of the top seven of UMass runners in the past two seasons.

Kristin Ciswoski burst onto the scene at last year's meet, capturing the individual title. Ciswoski became the first freshman ever to accomplish this feat, with a time of 18:24. The sophomore returns to defend her title and to help spearhead the Minutewoman machine.

The Minutewomen have been atop the coaches' poll all season, but Virginia Tech presents the biggest threat for UMass. The Hokies have taken second place, followed by Rhode Island and La Salle. Hometown hero St. Joseph's and Dayton have outside shots at breaking the unprecedented streak of the Minutewomen.

Last year's squad bested the second place Rams of URI by a score of 35 to 7. The gun will sound at 1:45 and Keri Guiminey.

■ huskeys

continued from page 12

V-Ball says 'gimme some candy!'

By James Piehl & Seth Szilagyi
Collegian Staff

Tape a protractor to your face, have a pickle for a hand or recycle by rolling up this newspaper and be a newspaper unicorn guy because its costume night at the Curtis Hicks-Cage and the winner gets a free round trip ticket to anywhere in the continental United States.

While you're there enjoy an Atlantic 10 volleyball battle between the Rams of Rhode Island and the Massachusetts Minutewomen.

The A-10's second ranked Rams roll into town on Saturday for the 7pm conference contest. They carry with them a 16-6 season and 8-3 conference record that the Minutewomen aim to add a loss too. The wonder women of UM are seventh in the conference and are looking to wrap a golden lariat around a big win over their foes. The Minutewomen are carrying a grudge from their earlier meeting with URI, in which the Rams grabbed a tough 3-2 home victory.

UM knows it has to contain the offensive pyrotechnics in Christie Wilson, whose team-leading kill average is an impressive 5.41 per game. Wilson walloped a match-high 30 kills in the first meeting. Another key to securing a big A-10 upset will be keeping Amy Knebel at bay. Knebel leads her squad in digs with 5.09 per game, but she also spanked 20 kills past the Massachusetts defense.

UMass remains realistic and optimistic before facing these A-10 giants. "We had tough practices this week preparing for Rhode Island's strong outside hitters," quoth junior Jennifer Drennan in a press release. "We put ourselves in a tough spot last weekend, but if we can come together and play without worrying too much about what Rhode Island does, we will be more successful."

The Minutewomen will again look to their usual cage for help to a victory, but other squad members will need to step into the limelight for this key conference showdown.

Always reliable senior leader Jill Meyers tops her squad with a 4.46 kill per game average, while holding second place in digs with 3.41 per game. The gang to Meyers' kin is other senior co-captain Kari Hogancamp, who holds the team and nation-high dig average with 5.18 while adding a team second best 3.51 kill-per-game average to her credentials. This marks the fifth straight week Hogancamp has led the nation in digs.

Quickly emerging junior standout Rebecca Hassan is third on the squad in kills averaging 3.05 per game, and is leading the Minutewomen in blocks per game averaging 1.14.

UM will look to sophomores Janeen DeMarte and Lynarie Ilovet for some added offensive production. DeMarte and Ilovet average 2.45 and 1.68 kills per game respectively, coming into this weekend's battle.

UM needs a big upset over the second place Rams to stay afloat in the Atlantic 10 race. The Minutewomen still have a shot at a journey to the A-10 tournament which kicks off on November 5 in Philadelphia. And after such a sweet season, lurks hoping the Minutewomen don't wake up with a stomachache on Monday

COURTESY SAEDA RELATIONS

With a victory against URI this weekend, the volleyball team would end a three-game skid and put itself in good shape for the November stretch run.

Freshman forward Erika Whiston has been coach Patty Shea's most lethal offensive weapon off the bench this season.

STUDENTS NEEDED TO TRYOUT ESSAY QUESTIONS

Undergraduate students in all majors are invited to tryout essay questions. The tryout will be conducted Tuesday, November 2, 1999, from noon until 8:00PM in Campus Center Room 163C. Participants will be reimbursed for each completed essay (approximately $12 per hour).

For more information please call Jennifer Murray at 256-7473.

Do You Have Any Of The Following Complaints?

- Runny, Itchy, or Congested Nose
- Sneezing
- Post Nasal Drip
- Watery ,Itchy Eyes
- Itchy Ears or Palate

Males and females 12 years of age and older who experience any of these problems are invited to participate in a clinical research study to evaluate an investigational medication to reduce these year round symptoms.

Qualified participants may recieve financial compensation for participation.

For information call:
413 - 584 -4010

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Starts Fri. thru Tues. - 5 Days Only!
daily 7:00 "ONE OF THE MOST EXCITING AND UNUSUAL ACTION THRILLERS OF THE YEAR!" THREE KINGS daily 9:15 STOP MAKING SENSE
ACADEMY OF MUSIC Cinema Center NORTHAMPTON 584-8135

puttin' on the glitz.

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free CD of Cool Indie Music when you register at MyBytes.com, the ultimate wesite for your college needs

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Alpine Commons 4 Bedroom, 2 Baths, Fully applianced kitchen, Private Balconies, All utilities included, perfect roommate living. Just 3 miles to UMass. Move-in special. 256-0741

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Crown Victoria Station Wagon Automatic, Lg. Interior, very good condition, Power windows, AM/FM $1200 or B/O Call 542-3130

90 Chevy Blazer 4wd, AC, CD, Remote Starter, 108k, runs great, Exc. Condition. $5500 or BO 253-6591

1992 Jetta GL, A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500. 546-1773

COMPUTERS

Computer System and Printer $675.00 O/B Call 413-268-0081

Computer Problems? We've got solutions. New systems to technical service. Call 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

OFFICE ASSISTANT NEEDED Student needed to work afternoon hours. Must have Win. 95/Office 97 experience, Good phone skills. Previous office experience a plus. SALARY $7.00 - $8.00 Fill out application at Blaisdell House 545-2842

Work On Campus $10-$15/hr. Great Experience (888) 316-2767 x1818 www.collegeclub.com

Aerobic Instructors Needed. Universal Health & Fitness. Call 585-9900

Earn $500 Weekly distributing phone cards. No experience necessary full or part time. Call 1-800-572-3361

Child Care Needed 3 days/wk 5:30am-8:30am including every other weekend. Must have car and good references $8/hr 323-6183

Campaign Jobs For The Environment $300-$400/wk, F/T, P/T, + Career opportunities. Call Jesse 256-6434

EMPLOYMENT

allstudents.com

Earn $400 per class each semester by simply Taking Notes!

Apply online at www.allstudents.com for all sections of the following undergraduate courses:

Accounting, Advertising, Aerospace, Afro-American Studies, Agricultural Science, Air Force Science, Anthropology, American Studies, Archaeology, Architecture, Art, Art history, Asian American Studies, Astronomy, Atmospheric Sciences, Biochemistry, Biology, Biomedical Engineering, Biotechnology, Botany, Business, Calculus, Chemistry, Classics, Communications, Comparative Literature, Computer Sciences, Construction Design, Earth and Space Science, Ecology, Economics, Education, Engineering, English, Finance, Geography, German, Government, Greek Studies, Health Education, History, Journalism, Judaic Studies, Kinesiology, Legal Studies, Life Sciences, Linguistics, Management, Marketing, Microbiology, Middle Eastern Studies, Molecular Genetics, Medical Studies, Middle Eastern Studies, Numbers, Nursing, Philosophy, Pharmacy, Physical Therapy, Political Science, Public Relations, ROTC Courses, Sociology, Social Work, Spanish, Special Education, Speech, Theater, Women's Studies, Writing, Wildlife Studies, Zoology allstudents.com will be offering the above listed courses online FREE of charge.

If you're interested in becoming a Note Taker for a course that doesn't appear on this list, please submit an application online for review.

ATTENTION MARKETING MAJORS: Currently we are hiring for a Marketing Specialist as well as Note Takers, please apply online at www.allstudents.com

GET IN GET THROUGH GET OUT!

EMPLOYMENT

Spring 2000 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary—training provided. Contact the Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center

ENTERTAINMENT

Fridge Rentals - Free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Ski + Board All East Season Passes 7Mtn's only $350. Call Mark 413-527-3524

Couch $80, Loveseat $60, Beds $50, Desks $50, Etc. Free Delivery 586-2221

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

LOST & FOUND

Lost Keys- Lost 3 keys on Michigan key chain please call 549-6052

Found- Dorm key on green Brine Lanyard key number is 17X44. Call 6-2890 if yours

EMPLOYMENT

LOST CAT: Near Leach, Orange Tabby Please Call 665-9950 Leave Message

ROOM FOR RENT

Homeshare Large Room Furnished. Quiet setting. Private phone line. 367-9286

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female Roommate non-smoker for ASAP or NEXT semester Call 549-9452

3 Fun Girls Looking! 1/3 mi from campus. $250+util/mo. Call 549-9621 Spring Semester Only!

SERVOCES

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

TRAVEL

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplash-tours.com

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sun-splashtours.com

There are THOUSANDS of people here you can Advertise to!!

What are you waiting for??

You could Advertise RIGHT HERE!!!!

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, OCT. 29

Film – A feature-film entitled "Sons" which covers the complex relationship between two unemployed young men and their alcoholic, schizophrenic father will be shown at 6:30 p.m. in Thompson 106. The film is part of a four-day tribute to Yuan Zhang and Jimmy Tan.

Service – There will be a Shabbat service at 6 p.m. in the Hillel House. Professor Julius Lester will lead, with special music by K Glo. Families are welcome. A Shabbat dinner will follow.

SATURDAY, OCT. 30

Comedy – MISSION IMPROVable, UMass' improvisational troupe, will perform at 8 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center.

Service – There will be a Shabbat morning service at 10 a.m. in the Hillel House. Families are welcome. A lunch will follow.

SUNDAY, OCT. 31

Presentation/Ball – The Halloween Street Theater will hold a presentation on the "Horrors of Globalization" at 5 p.m. in the Unitarian Meeting House in Amherst. The street theater will perform at 7 p.m., and a masquerade ball will follow at 9:30 p.m.

MONDAY, NOV. 1

Film – A film entitled "Beijing Bastards," the first truly independent film in China starring China's most famous rock musician, Cui Jian, will be shown in Thompson 106 at 6:30 p.m. The film is part of a four-day tribute to Yuan Zhang and Jimmy Tan.

Meeting – TV 19 will be having a meeting at 7 p.m. at the station, located behind the Hatch. Anyone is welcome.

NOTICES

Art – The Wheeler Gallery will present "Cellblock Visions: Cell Division – Prison Art in America," on display until Nov. 7. The Gallery is located in Central Residential Area.

Art – The Student Union Visual and Performing Art Space will be showing an exhibit of undergraduate artwork, focusing on the self-portrait, until Oct. 29. Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday, 9:30 a.m.-5 p.m.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is now open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops call 545-2096, or stop by the Craft Center.

Support – AL-ANON and ALATEEN is offering local meetings to those affected by someone else's drinking. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

Support – The Counseling Services Program at the Everywoman's Center is offering a free support group for women living with bipolar disorder on Wednesdays from 5-6:30 p.m. There will be four consecutive sessions at the Everywoman's Center in Wilder Hall. Call 545-0663 for more information, or to register.

Support – A grief support group for undergraduate and graduate students is available starting Tuesday, Oct. 27 from 6-7:30 p.m. Telephone prescreening is required. Call 577-5316 or 545-0041 if interested.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER — Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3 Hartford
4	CBS/4 Boston
5	ABC/5 Boston
6	PBS/57 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.
8	UPN/20 Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30 New Haven
11	Fox/61 Hartford
12	PBS/24 Hartford
13	WCCH & HSCN
14	International
15	UMass Academic TV
16	WB/New Haven
17	HSCN Programming
18	The Learning Channel
19	UVC-TV19
20	ABC/40 Springfield
21	Gavel to Gavel
22	NBC/22 Springfield
23	Sundance
24	Bloomberg Financial
25	CTN
26	TBS
27	BET
28	TV Land
29	Univision
30	Comedy Central
31	Cartoon
32	Much Music
33

C - Campus — FRIDAY EVENING — OCTOBER 29, 1999

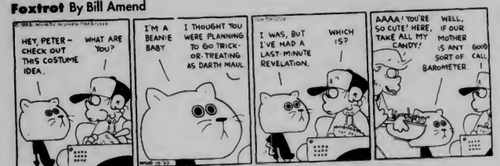
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	13 Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ※		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Connecticut Journal		Stockholder Society ※		Y2K-Winter of Our Disconnect
WFSB	3	3 News ※	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Charlie Brown	Garfield	Kids-Darndest	Love & Money	Nash Bridges "Curveball" ※		News ※	Late Show ※
WBZ	4	4 News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ※	Boy-World	Odd Man Out	Sabrina-Witch	Hughleys ※	20/20 ※		News ※	Late Show ※
WCVB	5	5 News ※	ABC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ※	Jannie Poxx ※	Jannie Foxx ※	Steve Harvey	Fe Your Love	News ※		Friends ※	Nanny ※
WLVI	6	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends ※	Nanny ※	Providence (In Stereo) ※		Freaks and Geeks "Pilot" (R) ※		Cold Feet (In Stereo) ※		News	Tonight Show
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ※	"The Disciples" (1998, Action) Ice-T, Fran				News	Caroline	Change-Heart	Change-heart
WTXX	8	4 Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV ※	Real TV (R) ※	"The Disciples" (1998, Action) Ice-T, Fran				Cold Feet (In Stereo) ※		News	Tonight Show
WVIT	9	10 News	NBC News	Extra ※	Ent. Tonight	Providence (In Stereo) ※				News		Friends ※	Frasier ※
WTIC	61	11 Simpsons ※	Frasier ※	Seinfeld ※	Friends ※	Providence (In Stereo) ※		Ryan Caulfield: Year One ※		Harsh Realm "Kain Ausgang"		News ※	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	22 News ※	NBC News	Extra ※	Ent. Tonight	Providence (In Stereo) ※		Freaks and Geeks "Pilot" (R) ※		Cold Feet (In Stereo) ※		Friends ※	Frasier ※
WGBY	57	6 World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ※		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	State We're In	Love Goes By	20/20 ※		News ※	Nightline ※
WGGB	40	28 News ※	ABC News	Seinfeld ※	Frasier ※	Boy-World	Odd Man Out	Sabrina-Witch	Hughleys ※	Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Blind Date	Charlie Rose (In Stereo) ※
WSBK	38		Judge Judy ※	Judge Judy ※	Seinfeld ※	Frasier ※	"The Disciples" (1998, Action) Ice-T, Fran					Cold Feet (In Stereo) ※
WTBS	72		Judge Judy ※	Judge Judy ※	Seinfeld ※	Frasier ※	"The Disciples" (1998, Action) Ice-T, Fran					Cold Feet (In Stereo) ※
A&E	35		Roseanne ※	Roseanne ※	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	※½ "Earth Girls Are Easy" (1988, Comedy) Geena Davis, Jeff Goldblum					Sherlock Holmes Mysteries (R) ※	Law & Order "Out of Control" ※
CNN	29	23 Simon & Simon "Photo Finish"		Law & Order "The Troubles" ※		Biography: Ronald Reagan				Harvestland		Sports	Moneyline ※
COM	28	25 Worldview ※	Moneyline Newshour ※		Crossfire ※	World Today ※		Larry King Live ※		Saturday Night Live Halloween		N.Y. Fries"n Jerry Seinfeld
DISC	36	26 Saturday Night Live ※		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	※½ "Elvira, Mistress of the Dark" (1988, Comedy) Cassandra Peterson				Storm Warning!		On the Inside: Racing
ESPN	31	Tour New House		Who's Afraid of... Wolves (R)		On the Inside: Racing		News	Discover Mag.	50 Greatest	50 Greatest	Sportscenter ※
LIFE	37	Sportscenter		NHL Hockey: Chicago Blackhawks at Detroit Red Wings. (Live) ※								Once and Again (In Stereo) ※
MTV	39	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Chicago Hope (In Stereo) ※		"Dangerous Intentions" (1995, Drama) Dennis				Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	40	Celebrity	Cartoon Sushi	Biorhythm (R)	News	Say What Kcka	Say What Kcka	Say What Kcka "Head Trip		All in Family	All in Family	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	41	All That	Catdog	Catdog	Rocket Power	Eddie	Kenan & Kel	All in Family	All in Family			Pottersville: The Legacy (R) ※
TLC	42	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Potheryeist: The Legacy ※		Farscape (R) (In Stereo) ※		Sliders "Please Press One" ※		First Wave "Martial Arts" (R) ※		Cheating Gravity (R)
TNT	43	Home Again	Home Again	Turning Point (R)		Cheating Gravity (R)		Ghost Writers		Ghost Books: Dramatic (R)		Cheating Gravity (R)
USA	44	Due South "The Blue Line" ※		ER "February 5, 1995" ※		※½ "Rogue Male" (1976, Suspense) Peter O'Toole		Walker, Texas Ranger ※		※½ "Child's Play" (1998, Horror) Catherine Hicks, Brad Dourif		※½ "Child's Play 2" (1990)
HBO	45	Baywatch "The Last Wave" ※		DAG "Imports" (R) (Stereo) ※		※½ "The X-Files" (1998) David Duchovny, (In Stereo) PG-13 ※				Inside Deep Throat (R) ※		Late Show ※
MAX	46	5:00 "Life in the Sky" (1999) ※		Inside the NFL (In Stereo) ※		※½ "Forty's Revenge" (1995) Dan Monahan, R		※½ "Crossing" (1997) Ray Poitier, NC-17		※½ "Halloween H20: Twenty Years Later" (1998) Jamie Lee Curtis, Josh Hartnett, Michelle Williams, LL Cool J, Adam Arkin, Jodi Lyn O'Keefe, Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Janet Leigh, Chris Durand, Nancy Stephens, Matthew Walker, Jeffrey DeMunn, Beau Bridges, Adam Hann-Byrd, Michael Piller, Josh Hartnett, Jamie Lee Curtis, Michelle Williams, LL Cool J, Adam Arkin, Jodi Lyn O'Keefe, Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Janet Leigh, Chris Durand, Nancy Stephens, Matthew Walker, Jeffrey DeMunn, Beau Bridges, Adam Hann-Byrd, Michael Piller		Late Show ※
SHOW	47	5:30 ※※※ "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" (1977) PG ※		※½ "Halloween H20: Twenty Years Later" (1998) Jamie Lee Curtis, Josh Hartnett, Michelle Williams, LL Cool J, Adam Arkin, Jodi Lyn O'Keefe, Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Janet Leigh, Chris Durand, Nancy Stephens, Matthew Walker, Jeffrey DeMunn, Beau Bridges, Adam Hann-Byrd, Michael Piller		Stargate SG-1		Outer Limits "Stranded" (R) ※		Total Recall

Joe Banana! By JD Shneider



Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

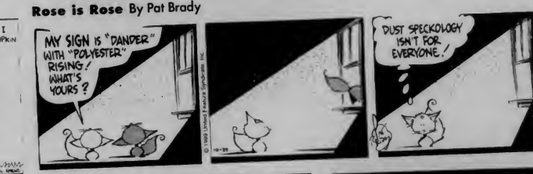
Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Horoscopes

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Building castles in the air can only hurt your cause at this time. You must be sure to establish a strong foundation, rooted in reality.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Details must not be ignored today, even as you tend to the larger issues affecting you and loved ones. Be aware of another's needs.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Someone who is opposed to your plans will have to admit that you do, indeed, know that you're talking about. It's only a matter of time!

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You must be ready to make a difficult decision regarding your future involvement in a major project or campaign. Consider family issues, too.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – You must wait until the time is right today before you tell someone what you're really thinking. Are you considering letting go a little?

Aries (March 21-April 19) – You're likely to finish a job well ahead of schedule today. The time you have on your hands can be put to good use in a personal arena.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – Don't be so stubborn that you do yourself out of an opportunity that you've been looking forward to for a long time. Accept that apology.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – One of your more unusual ideas may actually prove a "pop hit" sooner than you think, and it may remain in style much longer than you expect.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – You and a close friend may have something "cooking" before the day is out, and its results may bring you both a little more notoriety.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – You can make your current relationship work, but you must be willing to compromise, and, perhaps, make a minor sacrifice.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You may be searching for something to inspire you today, but you're looking a little too far from home. Try looking in your own backyard.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You may find yourself getting wrapped up in a struggle you neither desire nor understand, but one which you can put to rest for good.

Quote of the Day

"Halloween, a pagan holiday perpetuated by the American Dental Association."

-the clown

Leold www.leold.com by Roger and Salem Salloom© 1997

I think one of the secrets of a contented life is obvious... plan your week so that you are occupied by things you find delightful... even if it's quiet and you're alone.

For instance on:

Mondays- have a nice dinner with friends.

Tuesdays- watch your favorite t.v. show with a tasty snack

Wednesdays- do a home improvement job or clean something which you've always cherished.

Thursdays- sit in the dark alone for hours

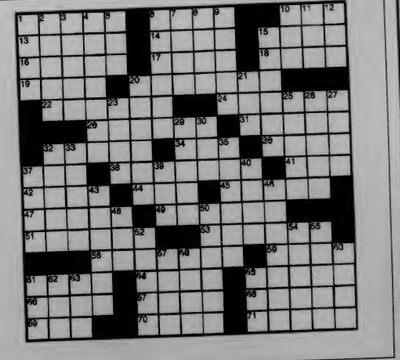
Fridays- go to a local lovely natural setting... like a lake or a mountain.

Saturdays- do something athletic which pushes you to a new limit.

Sundays- sit alone again in the dark until you cry.

The Count sez' stay outta trouble on Halloween ya meddling college brats

...On the Account of the Blair Witch



ACROSS
1 Offbeat
6 Stagger
10 Small amount
13 Often-heard song
14 Columnist Bombeck
15 Outer garment
16 Obeys
17 Won ton or gazpacho
18 Memo abbr.
19 Earsplitting
20 Nuclear reaction
22 Listened to the photographer
24 Threadbare
28 Fourscore plus ten
31 Musical performance
32 Urged on 34 — Town"
36 Actor Estrada
37 Caustic stuff
38 Teased
41 — Palmas
42 Bad day for Caesar
44 Country addr.
45 Tough question
47 Foggy
49 Bill Gates, for one
51 Looked
53 Gofer's job
56 Rich
58 Piece by Wordsworth
61 Chow —
64 Shed
65 Reckon
66 Loud sound
67 Cathedral part
68 Wrens' abodes
69 Diving bird
70 Scorch
71 Lock

DOWN
1 Germany's Helmut —
2 Margarines
3 Music hall
4 Teasing
5 "Of course!"
6 Dwell
7 Son of Aphrodite
8 Flightless birds
9 — lazuli
10 Make lace
11 Real-estate abbr.
12 Beer's home
15 Appetizer
20 — -bender
21 "So that's it!"
23 Property claim
25 "Uncle Miltie"
26 Pipe type
27 Gabs and gabs
29 Hot drink
30 Actor Brynner
32 Singer Gorme
33 Silly ones
35 Student's assignment
37 Droopy
39 Newt
40 Entrance
43 Mighty
46 Red —
48 Stingy version of 5 Down
50 Heart
52 "The Three Musketeers" author
54 Dirt
55 Flaws
57 Sirius along
58 "Born Free" lioness
60 Clutter
61 CEO's deg.
62 Water, for Pierre
63 Pen filler
65 Que. neighbor

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

M	A	I	N	T	I	S	L	A	B	L	O	S	E
O	V	E	R	D	O	O	N	I	A	A	I	S	T	A
P	A	T	T	O	S	O	M	N	P	A	I	L	E
					B	I	W	S	I	A	G	A	S	K	E	T
O	L	A	U	S	O	E	R	T	E	A	S	H
H	I	T	T	Y	C	O	D	B	I	S
I	N	D	E	X	E	D		D	E	B	T	M	S	D
L	E	E	A	D	S		O	P	E	H	I	T	S
I	N	K		N	A	V		M	E	T	E	O	R	S
		P	A	R		A	M		I	R	A	E	S
O	A	R	E	D		A	U	T		M	E	D	I	A
P	E	R	A	N	D		S	U	B	T	L	E
A	I	S	I	N		Y	O	M		B	R	I	N	E	G	E
H	O	S	E	S		R	U	N		A	V	I	A	T	I	O
S	P	E	E	D		E	N	I	A		P	Y	L	O	N	S

10-29-99 © 1999, United Feature Syndicate

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Adam Munster
Photo Technician	Becky "scorner from the gory from Scrivner" Roddick
Copy Editor	Bela Lugosi
Production Supervisor	Katie "Cereal Killer" Ross
Production Staff	Jimmy Krueger Vlad The Impaler

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

UMass gridiron troops lock and load for war with Rhode Island

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

Perhaps just a 1-6 speedbump, but for the Massachusetts football team, even the remote possibility of bottoming out this weekend against Rhode Island at McGuirk Stadium has the Minutemen preparing like a loss would in all likelihood close the books on the 1999 season.

With UMass (4-3, 4-1 Atlantic 10 Conference) having steamrolled through the opposition the past three weeks, it would seem as though the No. 20 Minutemen would follow suit against the Rams on Family Day.

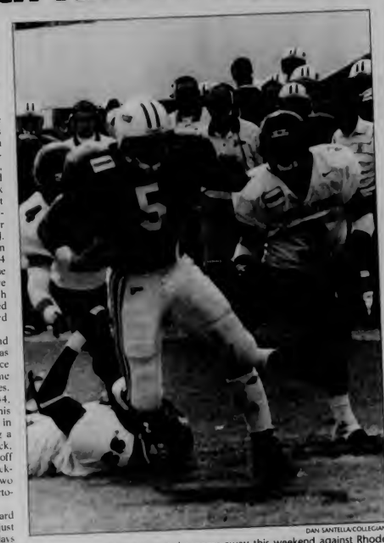
FOOTBALL
UMASS VS. URI
SATURDAY, 12:30 PM
91.1 FM-WMUA
MIKE KOBYLANSKI-PLAY
REGAN MCKENDRY-COLOR
WMUA PREVIEW

Just a year ago, though, the Minutemen were nearly derailed by a URI squad taken too lightly, barely escaping Kingston with a 23-13 victory. After spotting the Rams a 10-0 lead in the first half, it took a Khari Samuel interception return for a touchdown on a potential game-winning Ram drive to secure the win. After a rough start, Rhode Island is beginning to gain steam, picking up its first victory of the season, a 23-14 defeat of Maine in which the Black Bears were forced into four turnovers.

"They are on a roll right now," head coach Mark Whipple said. "They have lost some tough games and a win this week will make their season. We have to get ready for this game."

Three of the Rams' losses have come by three points or less, including a 27-25 loss at Brown which saw them fall just short after scoring 22 unanswered points in the second half.

The line of scrimmage has dictated the Rams' late so far this season. While registering just seven sacks in as many games, the offensive line has yielded a conference-high 24 sacks. Ranking near the bottom in rushing offense, URI has relied on the arm of quarterback Ken Mastrole, a Maryland transfer who has thrown just three interceptions in 256 attempts.



"We'll try to take away the run to get them one-dimensional," defensive coordinator Don Brown said, "so we can do what we do best and that's get after the passer and try to create havoc."

As for the Minutemen, they are still coming down from last week's 26-19 disposal of Delaware in Newark. UMass scored 19 unanswered points, capped by a 23-yard scamper by tailback Marcel Shipp that put a lid on the victory. The junior from Paterson, N.J. gained 176 yards on a career-high 44 carries, marking the 19th consecutive game in which Shipp has eclipsed the 100-yard plateau.

Winning in Delaware didn't and doesn't come easily, as the victory was the Minutemen's first in Newark since 1990, marking just the third time UMass came out on top in 22 tries. On a 4th-and-1 at the Delaware 44, instead of punting and allowing his defense, who hadn't let up a point in the fourth quarter since yielding a touchdown to Toledo a month back, to take over, Shipp took the handoff and was immediately hit in the backfield, but a late surge got him two yards and got the Minutemen a victory.

"Both teams played very, very hard and laid it on the line. We were just fortunate to come up with some plays in the second half," Whipple said. "I don't think either team played great, but I think we played very hard, and we left it all out on the field. We were fortunate to get it done in the fourth quarter."

After three first half interceptions against the Blue Hens, Todd Bankhead responded by leading the team to two fourth quarter scores. This week, the senior co-captain has a chance to make it a clean sweep of the UMass record book. Breaking the record for completions against Maine, Bankhead needs just 88 yards to pass Dave Palazzi at 5,402 yards set back in 1988. In addition, just 25 attempts will put Bankhead atop the career pass attempt list, eclipsing Palazzi's record of 409.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Marcel Shipp will look to put the game away this weekend against Rhode Island, much like he did in last week's 26-19 victory over Delaware.

The key to UMass' recent success has been a defense that now stands atop the conference in scoring defense, giving up just under 19 points per contest. In the last three games, opponents have gone scoreless

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 11

Halloween, Huskies don't scare A-10 Champ UMass

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

For most of the country, Halloween is the one time of year that the streets are filled with ghouls, witches and vampires. But spend a night uptown in Amherst, and you get used to, or even bored with, the sight of freaks and monsters.

That's why the Minutewomen are getting out of here this Sunday.

Nicole Bardell

The Massachusetts field hockey team (10-8, 5-0 Atlantic 10) will try to roll lucky sevens on All Hallows Eve, as in its seventh straight win, when it travels to Boston to close out its season with a 1 pm contest against Northeastern. The Maroon and White won't bother with costumes for its battle with the Huskies, as most everyone now recognizes the regular season A-10 Champions.

This weekend's season finale pits UM against an opponent who's record is cleverly disguised. Northeastern (7-10, 6-2 America East) acquired seven of its losses against ranked foes this season, including two teams that bested the Minutewomen: No. 2 Connecticut and No. 14 Boston University. The Huskies opened the '99 campaign with four straight losses against top-20 teams, including No. 4 Penn State and No. 7 Old Dominion.

Tamra Geryk

Coach patty Shea's Minutewomen, on the other hand, have been on cruise control down the season's stretch run, winning eight of their last 11 games and sewing up the top seed in the upcoming Bell Atlantic 10 Tournament.

The Maroon and White's resurgence has been fueled by a rise in offensive efficiency behind back Anke Bruemmer. The German import has rocketed to the top of the A-10 scoring list with 14 goals and 30 points, and has emerged as a frighteningly consistent penalty corner shooter in the process.

Helping setting up the fantastic fraulein are five forwards who have kept opposing goalies shaking in their skirts. Greenfield native Kristen Schmidt ranks second on the squad with four goals, while fellow stick magicians Tamra Geryk and Lindsay Abbott have each tucked home a trifecta of scores.

Standout freshmen Sarah Bohonowicz and Erika Whiston have pieced together solid rookie campaigns that would make Dr. Frankenstein proud, composed of fantastic play in nearly every facet of the game. Whiston's dribbling and evasiveness have stunned more experienced defenders, particularly when she uses her body to shield the ball on blistering sideline breakaways as she did twice against Temple a week ago.

The treats in Shea's goodie bag aren't confined to the front line, either. Ontario original Nicole Bardell has lent senior savvy to the UMass attack and shown she is not afraid to sacrifice her body, with sliding tackles in the UM midfield against Providence and St. Joseph's. Co-captain Lucy Koch has eaten opposing offenses alive with her otherworldly field vision and skill at keying transitions, while her 13 points and 11 assists have proved to be sweet music for fans of UM's penalty corner trio.

Sophomore Jill Fantasia has also given followers of the Maroon

Turn to HUSKIES, page 8

UMass set to defend home turf during A-10 invasion

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Atlantic 10 Conference opponents Duquesne and St. Bonaventure are expected to provide a stiff test for the Massachusetts women's soccer team this weekend when the two schools descend on Totman Field to face the Minutewomen.

"Duquesne and St. Bonaventure have to come in here hungry. Either one of those teams, or Rhode Island, is going to make the playoffs by getting that fourth spot," UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "And a lot of that has to do with who is playing us."

Entering the final weekend of the regular season, UMass (10-3-1, 8-1 in the A-10) has already clinched a berth in next weekend's conference tournament. However, since the post-season event will be held here at UMass, Rudy wants to make sure his club makes full use of the home field advantage.

"Just getting to the tournament isn't enough. We haven't had a good weekend at home yet," he said. "All of our three losses have been home and we haven't had a two-win weekend at home yet. We can't have any doubts [playing on our home field] heading into the A-10's."

"This is our last home weekend of the year, and we'd like to play or top game. I'm not sure that we've seen our top game yet," added Rudy.

Duquesne will be the first squad to come to Totman

Turn to INVASION, page 9

KARA STOKES/COLLEGIAN

Hosting the A-10 Tournament next weekend, the Minutewomen will look to build momentum by wrapping up the conference schedule with a pair at Totman.

UM water polo heads east to Northern Championships, hopes it leads west

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

A far-off land can be seen just over the horizon. A date in the NCAA Tournament in California next month is within grasp for the Massachusetts men's water polo team. The road has not hit any sharp turns thus far, but the 11th-ranked Minutemen will need to focus on the weekend ahead, one where they will take on the best in the Northeast in the Collegiate Water Polo Association Northern Division Championship at Harvard.

Carlos Ramos

Rich Slingluff

The Minutemen enter the weekend with targets on their backs, just a week after knocking off St. Francis, 8-5, in the finals of the ECAC Championships in Providence. It marked their first victory against the Terriers this season in five tries. Without any upsets, UMass (22-5 overall, 9-1 CWPA) and St. Francis would meet in the finals, marking the fifth time they have met in the pool.

Boston College is first on the block for head coach Russ Yarworth, who saw his squad dispose of the very same Eagles 22-6 in the CWPA Tournament earlier this season. Mike Foley recorded four goals to go along with Villanova transfer Pat Kain's trio of scores. The Minutemen jumped out to a 13-4 half-time lead before coasting to victory.

BC will look to avenge its loss when the two teams hit the water at 12 noon on Saturday. The winner automatically qualifies for the Eastern Championships in Annapolis, Md. in two weeks.

"I'm very proud of where this group is at because at the beginning of the season, I was kind of unsure of what we were going to do," Yarworth said. "I knew we had the talent, but from last year, we graduated five seniors and three were All-Americans."

In addition to the Terriers, UMass looks ahead to a date with Queens College in the semi-final round, a year after a friendly match turned into a war in the pool, as fists were thrown in the Minutemen's 10-5 victory that had an unwarranted sour taste. This season, the two teams have split two matches,

Turn to POLO, page 9

Ice hockey looks to bury shaky start at expense of stumbling West Point squad

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

After dropping three straight games to open the 1999-2000 season, the Massachusetts hockey team is looking to record its first win of the year tonight when it travels to West Point, NY to face Army.

The Minutemen are coming off a pair of games last weekend that they lost by identical 4-1 scores to Northeastern and No. 1 Boston College. Needless to say, tonight's game is an important one, as it is a transition contest between important Hockey East weekends.

"At this point, we've lost two of our three games to teams who are in the Top 15 in Boston College and Colgate [a team UMass lost to in its season opener], but we can't allow that to take away from our play and improvement," Massachusetts hockey coach Joe Mallen said. "It's important to get into the win column against Army. We have to use this game to get in position for our upcoming Hockey East games against UMass-Lowell, New Hampshire and Merrimack."

Like the Minutemen, Army has also gotten off to a rough start. Even though the Cadets have not faced three strong opponents like UMass has, they will also be seeking win No. 1 tonight. Army is 0-3-1 thus far, with losses to Bemidji State [twice] and Iona, along with a tie versus Fairfield.

"They're in the same boat as us. They are having problems putting puck in the net," Mallen said. "But you know a couple of things about Army teams, regardless of the sport. They are going to be tough, well-conditioned and keep the pressure on you."

Poor offensive output and shaky special teams have contributed to the slow start for the Minutemen. UMass is averaging 1.33 goals per game, and has been bitten several times by allowing power play tallies.

"Especially last weekend, we showed some inconsistency. We're looking to put together three good periods," Mallen said. "Last weekend the second period killed us on both nights."

Leading the way for the Minutemen up front will be seniors Jeff Blanchard and Nathan Sell, along with junior Jeff Turner. Blanchard and Turner are tied for the team lead in points through the first three games with two points apiece.

In goal, UMass has the option of using either junior Markus Helanen or sophomore Mike Johnson. Although Helanen is the No. 1 goalie, Johnson shut out the Cadets last year in a game played at the William D. Mullins Center.

Army will be paced by Mike Fairman and Joe Carpenter, each of whom have two points for the Cadets. However, Army coach Rob Riley may use either one of his two goalies, Corey Winer or Scott Hamilton. Both have started two games on the season for the upstate New York school.

However, besides facing a tough club in the Cadets, UMass has had problems at Tate Rink in the past. That will be something the Minutemen will need to overcome if they want to board the bus for home with their first win of the season.

"It's incentive for us. The last time we were down there they beat us, so we've got to approach this game with a lot of intensity," Mallen said.

UMass Family Day '99

Schedule of Activities

Saturday, October 30

8:00 a.m. - 1:00 p.m.
Family Day Registration
Memorial Hall

10:00 a.m.
Live the Experience!!
Five individual classes are offered by some of the University's distinguished faculty.

Mind Games: From Illusions to Freudian Slips
Susan Krauss Whitbourne, Psychology — Bartlett, Room 65
The human mind is capable of many tricks and deceptions. It causes people to make mistakes in perceptual judgements, remember events that did not happen, and unintentionally reveal their most secret wishes. This lecture will provide a scientific explanation of visual and other illusions, false memories, slips of the tongue, and mistakes in logic, as well as a range of related phenomena such as "psychic" intuitions, deja vu, and hypnotic suggestion. Participants will have the opportunity to play their own mind games as we explore some of these unusual features of basic mental processes.

The Big Bang to Black Holes
Jennie Traschen, Physics and Astronomy — Morrill, Room 131
Two great revolutions in physics happened during the first half of this century: the development of Quantum Mechanics and of Einstein's theory of Relativity. General Relativity is a theory of Gravitation. GR predicts many things about Nature, which were initially found to be surprising, or even "unbelievable" for example: 1) the expansion of our Universe and 2) black holes. In Einstein's theory things can go into black holes, but nothing can come back out. However, we know that GR is not the "ultimate" theory of gravity...in fact, the holy grail of theoretical physics has been to find a Quantum theory of Gravity. In 1975, Hawking published an amazing calculation, which has provided an important clue in the effort to meld gravity and quantum mechanics. Hawking calculated that black holes actually emit quantum mechanical particles, and so "evaporate." Currently, String theory is a candidate theory of quantum gravity which includes black hole evaporation. We will discuss these topics, and NO memory of algebra is necessary!

Radio Astronomy
Stephen E. Schneider, Physics and Astronomy — Thompson, Room 106
What do astronomers see when they point huge radio antennae at the sky? We will examine radio images of the sky, radar maps of the planets, pulsar timing, and the search for extraterrestrial intelligence. The talk will also include brief photo tours of the UMass radio observatory at the Quabbin reservoir, the Arecibo observatory and other radio facilities around the world.

Biology of Cancer and AIDS
Steve Goodwin, Microbiology — Thompson, Room 102
Cancer and AIDS are topics that get the attention of college students. Many students have had their lives or the lives of family members impacted by these diseases. Most students know that they will be impacted in the future. But in a general education course, how do we get beyond the "surface glitz"? How can we help students learn about fundamental concepts in biology, how do we help student learn how science works as a discipline, how do we develop the critical thinking skills students will need for making life decisions? This presentation will explore the broader goals of this general education course.

Sunwheels for the 21st Century
Judy Young, Physics and Astronomy — Morrill, Room 329
Stone circles are found worldwide: many of which have astronomical alignments and serve as calendars. They are the original observatories. To help students and visitors experience and understand the cycles exhibited by the Sun and Moon and the cause of the seasons, I began creating a stone circle, which I call a Sunwheel, on the UMass campus in 1992. A preliminary Sunwheel has been in place since May 1997 consisting of a dozen 2.5' high boulders in a circle 100' across. Stones mark North, South, East, and West, as well as the summer and winter solstice sunrise and sunset directions. This preliminary Sunwheel is an active arena for public outreach and enhancing the science curriculum, with over 1,000 visitors per year since 1997. This presentation will describe the Sunwheel — the astronomy, the design, the reach, and fundraising activities, and plans for larger stones in the future.

10:30 a.m. - 1:00 p.m.
Busus to McGuirk Alumni Stadium
Don't feel like walking? Catch a bus to the tailgate and football game from the Fine Arts Center/ Haigis Mall bus stop. Buses will run a continuous loop during these hours.

11:00 a.m. - 12:30 p.m.
Family Day Barbecue
North Gate, McGuirk Alumni Stadium
Grab a bite before the game with your student. The grills will sizzle with classic cookout items accompanied by salads and more. $15/person. For those who have not purchased tickets to the Family Day Barbecue, lunch can; buffets will be offered in any of the Dining Commons until 2:00 p.m.

12:30 p.m.
Football UMass Minutemen vs. University of Rhode Island
McGuirk Alumni Stadium
Tickets $11/ reserved or $10/ unreserved and $6/ students and children. If you have not pre-ordered your tickets, you may purchase tickets at the stadium before the game. (Students sit in unreserved seats. Purchase unreserved tickets if you wish to sit with your UMass student.)

3:00 p.m. - 4:00 p.m.
Buses to Afternoon Activities
Buses will run a loop from McGuirk Alumni Stadium to the Student Union/ Campus Center Complex.

3:30 p.m.
Campus Life Forum
Campus Center - Room 163
Host - Paul Vasconcellos, Assistant Dean of Students
Become familiar with some of the different aspects of your student's life from the University Health Services, Housing Services, Registrar's Office, Campus Activities and other areas responsible for the well-being of our students.

4:15 p.m.
How to Study Abroad
Campus Center - Room 101
Host - Maryelise Lamet, Director of Education Abroad
This is the why, where and what to do to make Study Abroad connect to your student's education at UMass Amherst. Students who have recently studied abroad will be available to answer questions and talk about their experiences.

5:00 p.m. - 7:00 p.m.
Reception with the Deans Campus Center 1009
Wrap up your day on campus with light refreshments before you venture out for dinner with your student. Meet the academic deans and advisors from the UMass schools and colleges and enjoy entertainment by current UMass students. $7/ person

7:00 p.m.
UMass Women's Volleyball
Curry Hicks Cage
This event is free to the general public.

Enter the 1999 Tuition Raffle

This is your chance to enter to win credit to your tuition bill next semester! The Student Alumni Relations Society, STARS, is raffling off a tuition award of up to $4,000 to be used for the Spring semester of 2000. The University of Massachusetts Amherst Alumni Association sponsors this raffle to benefit STARS, which plans programs and activities throughout the year to bring alumni and students closer together. Only undergraduates and/or their parents are eligible to purchase tickets. There will be no outright cash award; credit for tuition and fees will be issued to a maximum amount of $4,000. If you receive financial aid, this credit will be factored into your eligibility and may have an impact on your financial aid award. To purchase ticke*s, complete the attached Family Day reservation form. Tickets are $8 each or 5 for $25. The winning ticket will be drawn at half-time of the Rhode Island Football game.

*Even if you cannot be with us for Family Day 1999, you may still purchase raffle tickets. The winner need not be present to win. For more information, call STARS at the UMass Alumni Office at (800) 358-UMAS (8627).

Win Big

Congratulations William F. Field Alumni Scholars

On Saturday, September 25, 1999, the Alumni Association honored the 60 recipients of the 1999 William F. Field Alumni Scholars award. All 60 students were recognized for their academic achievement by the deans of the schools and colleges of UMass and chosen in the spring of their junior year. Each was awarded a $750 scholarship and given a certificate of commendation at the awards ceremony in September. UMass Alumni Association President, John Goodrich was on hand to present the awards and congratulate all award winners.

Alumni Scholars Recipients:

College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics
Erica Chevalier Larsen
John Cummings
Joseph Daverin
Seth Eichenlaub
Nathan Fuller
Daniel Osuch
Laurence Shumway
Lida Tang

College of Humanities and Fine Arts
Aimee Barnes
Laura Bernardo
Megan Meara
Kelly Mimmo
Litza Melendez
John Oksanish
Brooke Shilling
Alexis Wiggins
Jessica Wilke
Takeisha Wilson
Sevan Yuselian

College of Social and Behavioral Sciences
Carolyn Brenna
Carolyn Gillette
Rebecca Glauber
Yolanda Hippensteele
Thomas Innis
Deborah Massachi
Carey Morewedge
Catina Smith
Pamela Tomawski
Katherine Youman

School of Nursing
Patricia Faron
Megan Rennick
Elsie Skaar

Isenberg School of Management
Heather Brunelle
Andrea Clinton
Gabe Gillis
Melissa Gorski
Shannon Lee
Karen Meade
Amanda Mosby

College of Food and Natural Resources
Denise Brown
Lisa Cantin
Charles Eisemen
Jessica Kraeft
Jason Lanier
Jeffrey Lavallee
Kate Vaughan
Scott Walker

School of Education
Janna Borsetti
Erica Holcomb
Wesley Jacques
Heang Ly

College of Engineering
Steven Barg
Theresa McGovern
Brian Murch
Thomas Sturgis
Daniel Sumorok

School of Public Health and Health Sciences
Cara Caminiti
Evan Maraghy
Nicole Way

Bachelor's Degree with Individual Concentration
Benjamin Joplin

William F. Field Alumni Scholars

UMass Campaign Cabinet Holds Third Annual Meeting

As of Sept. 30, the University of Massachusetts has raised $91 million for Campaign UMass, according to the latest fundraising report delivered at the third annual meeting of the Campaign Cabinet, held on campus during Homecoming Weekend earlier this month. Campaign UMass is the campuss five-year campaign to raise $125 million, enlist advocates for the University, and enhance the University's image.

In his remarks to the cabinet, Chancellor David K. Scott noted that because of numerous efforts on many fronts, the University's reputation has improved dramatically. Because of the success of Campaign UMass and the fact that many of the goals of his strategic plan have been reached, Scott said he is proposing to end the campaign and his strategic plan one year early.

Royster Hedgepeth, vice chancellor for University Advancement, said the campaign raised $23.9 million in cash gifts, gifts in kind, and all new pledges during FY 99, which began July 1, 1998, and ended June 30, 1999. Hedgepeth said fundraising is exceeding expectations and agreed the campaign could end a year earlier than the original target date of 2001 if current progress continues.

The other major item on the meeting's agenda was an explanation by Hedgepeth of the role of the newly created UMass Foundation at Amherst. According to the revised by-laws for the system-wide UMass Foundation, each of the five UMass campuses is charged with developing a campus-based foundation. At its annual meeting last year, the Campaign Cabinet became the board of directors for the Amherst campus foundation. According to Hedgepeth, the campus foundation will assist in major gift fund-raising; provide executive counsel to Chancellor Scott; strengthen the University's image; advocate for the campus and the University; and provide a focal point for engaging prospective donors and volunteers.

Hedgepeth said the organizational structure of the campus foundation would include an executive committee that will oversee five operating committees: communications and marketing; nominating; campaign cabinet; investment; and foundation associates. Each committee will have 30-40 members, and there will be up to 400 associates who make an annual gift to the University of at least $5,000.

In a related presentation to the cabinet, Joseph Cofield, president and chief executive officer of the UMass Foundation, explained that the functions of the system-wide foundation are to increase and manage the University's $118 million endowment, and steward gifts. Cofield said it's his goal to make the UMass Foundation "one of the most prestigious in the country."

Cabinet members also heard from Carolyn Sanzone, assistant vice chancellor for Science and Technology Advancement/ Corporate and Foundation Relations (STACFR). Sanzone described the University's efforts to forge relationships with the corporate sector as a "UMass success story." STA raised $6.5 million and CFR, $32.1 million for FY97-99. Fred Byron, interim vice chancellor for research, described STACFR as a "model for university-corporate relations."

John Goodrich, president of the UMass Amherst Alumni Association, and its executive director Susan Mattei reported that the association is focusing its efforts on expanding membership and increasing the endowment to construct an Alumni Center on campus. The membership goal is 30,000 members by the year 2002, which means a total of 16,500 members during FY 00, an average of 691 new members per month. Mattei explained the association is increasing member services, and has expanded its clubs program and newsletter, as well as its career services program.

The Ambassadors Network

The Ambassadors Network organizes alumni, parents, students, faculty, staff and friends of UMass to take volunteer action on behalf of UMass. Volunteers receive all the information and resources they need to successfully complete each action through a regular mailing.

In the coming year, Ambassadors will act to:

Remind our elected representatives in Boston that the University of Massachusetts Amherst is a world-class institution and a treasure to our Commonwealth, deserving of continued support through the state budget.

Inform businesses throughout Massachusetts and the nation of the "human capital" produced by the University of Massachusetts Amherst, and build internship and employment opportunities for our students and alumni.

Spread the word about Admission's new student profile, Commonwealth College, the University Scholars program, and the many other opportunities available to UMass students. In addition, encourage the best and brightest high school students in the state and nation to apply to the University of Massachusetts Amherst.

Since the Ambassadors Network was founded, parents have been some of our most dedicated volunteers. By participating in the Ambassadors Network, you will have another opportunity to be part of the UMass community.

For more information about the Ambassadors Network, visit our website at: http://www.umass.edu/ambassadors or call or email Lynne Marie Wanamaker, Advocacy Programs Coordinator, (800) 772-6155 or lwanamaker@urd.umass.edu

UMass at the Ryder Cup

The Alumni Association provided the UMass pins worn proudly on the shirts of the many UMass students, faculty, and alumni that worked at the spectacular 1999 Ryder Cup. Pictured on the clubhouse steps at The Country Club in Brookline, MA are: (Front row, left to right) Karen Schirmuhly, Elizabeth Daniels, Dan Parker, Stephanie Cox, Ashley Potts, Tara Narmita, Adam Wade; (Back Row, left to right) Michelle Neveux, Ben Cohen, Anthony Quintiliani, Jamie Morrell, Ben Goldberg, Catherine McCann, Brian Miller (Instructor HRTA), Rod Warnick (HRTA)

UMass at the Ryder Cup

The University of Massachusetts Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration Department and the UMass Country Club Management Association of American (CMAA) Student Chapter placed three groups of students in clubhouse management, hospitality services and contract food service positions at the 33rd Ryder Cup, which was held September 23rd through September 26th at The Country Club in Brookline, Massachusetts. In addition, a number of UMass alumni were responsible for critical clubhouse management and hospitality functions during the tournament.

HRTA Professor Rod Warnick coordinated the student employment and placement of UMass HRTA Department and the CMAA Student Chapter. Professor Warnick is completing a faculty internship at The Country Club in Brookline through the non-profit wing of the Club Managers Association of America — The Club Foundation.

A select group of students held dining room Captain and special hospitality service positions for PGA Distinguished Guests. These students managed food services and hospitality for approximately 400 of the PGA's most distinguished guests to the event, including dignitaries such as former U.S. President George Bush, England's Prince Andrew, former Ryder Cup officials and players. These students also filled management positions and completed internships at The Country Club during the summer of 1999. Several students had direct responsibilities in the Locker Room Building at the famous course, which housed the European and American players.

A second group of students were placed in hospitality and food service positions in the member – guest area of The Country Club's clubhouse. They provided services to the club's 1,200 members and guests and were called upon for service duties at the distinguished guest level.

Finally, a number of UMass Alumni will be in critical clubhouse and management positions for the event. Bob Caty, Assistant Clubhouse Manager '96; Chris True '96, dining room manager; and Brent Tartamella, clubhouse manager for Baltimore Country Club and former assistant clubhouse manager at The Country Club oversaw food service operations at all levels in the clubhouse. Others who worked in the clubhouse facilities include Nat Rigoli HRTA '95 and Adam Wade HRTA '96.

William Spence, chief grounds superintendent, is in charge of golf course grounds and turf management and is an ISOM grad from the 60s. Jeff Baker (Stockbridge '93) and Gregory Barker (Stockbridge '94) were the assistant grounds superintendents for the event and approximately 10 -12 members of the grounds crews working the event were UMass Stockbridge Turf Management graduates. Part-time former instructors to the HRTA Department also held critical management functions for the Ryder Cup. David Chag, the general manager of The Country Club and Kirk Reese, former clubhouse manager and current general manager of the Chevy Chase Country Club in Maryland, both taught courses in the HRTA Department and served in critical management positions for the event.

The 33rd Ryder Cup is a competitive golf event between teams of the 12 best golfers from the U.S. versus the 12 best golfers from Europe. The event is held every two years and alternates between the U.S. and Europe. The Country Club, located in Brookline, Massachusetts was the site of this years event, which drew over 40,000 spectators. It is a 19-hole championship course set to the configuration of the 1988 U.S. Open which was held at the same course over a decade ago. The Country Club has been a strong supporter of UMass through student placement and education in club management over the past decade. Over one dozen UMass students have entered the club management profession through placement and internships at The Country Club in the last decade. This is a public private partnership that works.

As many proud alumni know, the UMass HRTA Department is recognized as one of the top four programs in hospitality management in the U.S. What many may not know, is that the UMass student chapter of CMAA has won the Chapter Achievement Award for excellence in education and professional development as awarded by the Club Managers Association of American national chapter four of the last six years. UMass is a leader in placement and preparation of club management professionals.

"Black to UMass 2000 – The Reunion"

May 5 – 7, 2000

The preliminary reunion planning committee, co-chaired by Tracy Benton Whitley '88 and John B. Johnson III, has been generating lots of ideas for a weekend to remember back on the Amherst Campus. If you would like more information or want to help in the planning, contact Michele in the Alumni Relations office at 1-800-456-UMASS or mgb@admin.umass.edu or contact any of the committee members as follows:

Tracy Benton Whitley '88 Twhitley@cancer.org
John B. Johnson III '87 Ljohnson@umassp.edu
Lisa Huff Johnson '88 Ljohnson@umassp.edu
Keith Millet '92 kamillet@worldnet.att.net
V. Van Johnson III '95 vjohnson@map.com

Please send your current address, phone and email so Van, self proclaimed "Official Keeper of the UMass Nubian and honorary Nubian email list" so you too will be added to the list of those to receive reunion information.

UMass Amherst Alumni Association Awards Grants

Your Alumni Association is dedicated to improving and enhancing student life and the image of the University of Massachusetts Amherst. Our grant program is available to campus groups, such as Registered Student Organizations and academic departments.

Application Deadlines

Date	For events after
November 22, 1999	December 7, 1999
December 28, 1999	January 11, 2000
February 28, 2000	March 14, 2000

- Individuals are not eligible to apply unless they are associated with and supported by an RSO or other campus group.

This year, the following have been recipients of an Alumni Association Grant:

School of Public Health & Health Sciences

Women's Rugby Football Club

Dept of Political Science

Nuance First Year Seminar

Fine Arts Center, Hampden & Wheeler Galleries

Campus Center Administration

Asian Dance & Music Program

Puerto Rican Student Organization

Amherst Fire Department

Sunday, October 31

1:00 p.m.
UMass Women's Soccer
Totman Field
UMass Minutewomen take on Atlantic - 10 rival St. Bonaventure.
This event is free to the general public.

8:00 p.m.
Sunday Night Movie
Campus Center Auditorium
The Campus Activities "The Blair Witch Project."

NOVEMBER

1999

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
New England's largest college daily

Monday, November 1, 1999

Volume CVI

Campus to focus on hate crimes this week

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

Hate Crimes Awareness Week begins today in an effort to educate the University of Massachusetts community on crimes based on race, ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation and physical or mental disability.

The week's agenda, which was put together primarily by the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA) and the Student Government Association (SGA), with assistance from the Office of Human Relations, is in response to incidents of graffiti in the Gorman Residence Hall earlier this semester. Other campus groups were also involved in bringing Hate Crimes Awareness Week to campus.

The goal of the week is to make students, faculty and staff on campus aware that such crimes are very serious and can be punishable by a court of law. "We've put together this week because hate crimes do exist," said Monica Chierici, student campus activist organizer. "Any person can be a victim. It's not motivated by anything rational."

The kick-off event for the week will be a showing of the movie American History X tonight at 7 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union. The film documents how an urban family is torn apart by hate.

Education is the focus of a panel discussion being held on Tuesday, during which individuals will be given the opportunity to learn about the legal side of hate crimes. Janice Healy, of the office of the Attorney General of Western Massachusetts, along with Steven Greenbaum, assistant district attorney, Northwestern District and UMass Chief of Police John Luippold, will make up the panel.

"Most people on campus are unaware that hate crimes such as graffiti could get you in trouble," said Grant Ingle, director of human relations. He said such crimes are infringing on a person's civil rights and that a verbal assault can be even worse than a physical attack.

He said he hopes that the week will be a success and evolve into an annual event. The Office of Human Relations is committed to the continuing goal of educating the community on the seriousness of hate crimes. Ingle said that education should be ongoing. He said he hopes that the problems can be addressed before they actually happen.

Continuing the week, Dr. Howard J. Ehrlich, director of The Prejudice Institute/Center for Applied Study of Ethnoviolence, will speak on Wednesday in the Campus Center rooms 165-169 at 6 p.m. Ehrlich has done national studies of hate crimes on campuses and will speak at UMass on the topic of ethnoviolence on campus.

This year, Smith College is incorporating its Ottelia Cromwell Day celebration into the start of its national conference on diversity. The conference, being held from Nov. 4 - 6 will consist of panel discussions and talks focusing on hate crimes and incidents, specifically in educational settings.

The last evening of UMass' awareness week will bring the focus back to campus. Gorman residents will be given the opportunity to tell their stories. At 6 p.m. in Campus Center room 163, students will speak on racism at UMass. The panel will be followed by a candlelight vigil and speak-out.

The week of events represents SCERA's effort to bring the issue of diversity from the talking level to the action level.

"We want to make the campus a more diverse and open place for everyone," said Chierici.

Professor chronicles science behind 'The X-Files'

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Dr. Anne Simon, University of Massachusetts virologist and author of the book The Real Science Behind 'The X-Files' spoke at the Jeffery Amherst Bookshop Saturday.

Simon served as an informal science advisor for both the X-files movie and the popular television show. The show chronicles the lives and work of FBI agents Fox Mulder and Dana Scully in their investigations of cases of the paranormal and the unexplained.

Simon said her first impression of the show was very favorable, and that she liked particularly the character of Scully.

"It was the first time a scientist was being portrayed in a positive light," Simon said.

Beginning in the first season, Simon worked with the creator of the show, Chris Carter, on scientific aspect of the plot. Simon received five to six scripts per season to edit for scientific content. In addition, through phone calls, she helped to scientifically develop plots.

Simon explained that her job as scientific advisor was to tell Carter what was and was not realistically possible. Although she admitted that some aspects of The X-Files are hard to believe, she commented that, "I am a scientist, I get to hypothesize."

In addition to reading the script, Simon also makes suggestions regarding the use of realistic scientific props and, contributed some ideas for an episode of the show. Simon had a character on the show named after her in the first season. Though her character helped Mulder and Scully with their scientific experiences, she did not last long.

"He [Carter] kills me off, and my entire family in a car crash," Simon said.

Simon began to think about writing a book about The X-Files when she was approached about two years ago with the idea. Simon explained that after pondering the idea for a while, she decided to write a book for people who had no science background, so that they could understand the scientific aspects of the show. She said the book could be read by people of all ages, both devoted fans of the show and those who had never seen it before.

KARA STORES/ COLLEGIAN

Anne Simon, one of the creative talents behind the hit television show The X-Files, spoke at the Jeffrey Amherst bookstore on Saturday.

"I start with 'The X-Files,' and then go into the science," Simon said. "This may be a really fun way for people to learn about science."

Simon said she found writing the book to be both challenging and positive.

"I haven't done creative writing since college – it was fun." Simon said.

Currently, she is promoting her book, which was published by Simon and Schuster, and lecturing at bookstores in the area about the science within the book. She is next scheduled to give a lecture on her new book at The Springfield Museum of Science in January.

UMass mourns Jean Hosmer

Hundreds gathered Saturday in Amherst's First Congressional Church to remember former University of Massachusetts Extension employee Jean Hosmer.

Hosmer's 15-year-old daughter, Sandra, spoke to the crowd during the two-hour memorial, as did members of her family. Friends also remembered the former UMass employee.

Hosmer, 45, of Pelham, was shot and killed last Monday, police say, by former husband William Bernotas, 46. She had filed for and been granted an extension to a restraining order she had against Bernotas. The alleged gunman turned the gun on himself after shooting Hosmer. He is listed in critical condition in Baystate Medical Center.

–Sam Wilkinson

HC rallies for Mumia

By Jason Spears
Collegian Correspondent

In mid-October, 20 Hampshire College students drove to Philadelphia to participate in a rally against the recently signed death warrant of journalist, political activist and former Black Panther Mumia Abu-Jamal.

In 1981, Abu-Jamal tried to stop Philadelphia police officer Daniel Faulkner from assaulting an African-American. Abu-Jamal's intervention resulted in a shoot-out that left him shot in the chest and Faulkner dead. Abu-Jamal was convicted of murdering the officer and sentenced to death in 1982 by Judge Sabo, a judge famous for handing out 32 death sentences, twice as many as any other judge in the country.

Abu-Jamal's trial had many questionable circumstances. Before the trial began, he concluded that his court-appointed attorney could not adequately defend him, and he requested the right to defend himself. His request was denied. During the trial, there was a failure to present physical evidence linking Abu-Jamal to the murder weapon and a lack of ballistic evidence connecting Abu-Jamal's gun to the bullet found in Faulkner's body. Furthermore, several witnesses have changed their stories since the trial.

"[Abu-Jamal] should represent, number one, the incompetency and injustice of the American justice system, and number two, [the high percentage] of black men and young black men in jail," said Hampshire College student Joshua Jackson. "He also represents a string of responsible journalists across the country."

The Oct. 16 rally was organized by MOVE, an organization based in Philadelphia and headed by Pamela Africa. The participating group of Hampshire College students was organized in two days by Jackson and his brother Justin. The brothers estimate that the rally had 1,000 participants, and said the crowd was a diverse group that included members of the new Black Panthers.

The Philadelphia police were present, including plainclothes officers as well as a riot squad. The Philadelphia police chief, who also attended the rally, received jeers from the crowd, according to Jackson. Despite the heavy police presence, the rally proceeded peacefully, with the exception of a passerby who tried to start a fight with a member of the rally who was handing out pamphlets.

The rally participants walked three hours through north Philadelphia and unintentionally passed the home and office of the president of the Philadelphia City Council, John Street. Street was a supporter of Abu-Jamal. Currently in a tight race for the mayor's office, Street does not discuss Abu-Jamal's case. In response to Street's silence on Abu-Jamal's struggle, the crowd stopped and demonstrated outside his office, chanting, "Whose Streets? Our Streets!"

The rally itself received only local media coverage, but the Jacksons said Abu-Jamal's case has been getting national coverage, with stories in the Portland Herald and the television news program 20/20. There has been international support from Amnesty International, Archbishop Desmond Tutu and the European Parliament. The Jackson brothers also said the involvement of mainstream music groups, including Rage Against the Machine, is a helpful step in awakening more young people to Abu-Jamal's cause.

"I think it is very instrumental in getting young people involved in not just this case, but politics in general," Justin Jackson said.

On Oct. 26, Abu-Jamal was granted a stay of execution by Federal Judge William H. Yohn, Jr. A stay of execution will delay the execution to allow Judge Yohn to review the habeas corpus petition that was filed by Abu-Jamal's lawyers. The petition is 150 pages long and alleges 29 separate constitutional violations that have occurred during Abu-Jamal's trial and appeals according to the statement released by his lawyers.

"Any one of the 29 constitutional violations should warrant a new trial," Leonard Weinglass, Abu-Jamal's leading attorney, stated in the statement.

For further information on Abu-Jamal's struggle, consult Znet at www.lbbs.org, or the International Action Center at www.iacenter.org and www.mumia.org.

BASEARA BRADBURY/ COLLEGIAN

Blowin' in the DC

Saxophonist Geoff Vidal and drummer Ken Ross played in Hampshire Dining Hall on Sunday morning with other UMass musicians.

Athlete wins Nat'l award
UM lineman honored

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

On the field, Mike Wynne has been a three-year starter for the Minutemen, leading the football team's offensive line in last year's national championship run. He also earned a perfect 4.0 grade point average in five of his first eight semesters at UMass.

A senior majoring in accounting and information systems, Wynne now has a 3.93 GPA.

Wynne has been selected as a 1999 National College Scholar Athlete by the National Football Foundation and College Hall of Fame, making the lineman one of only 15 students to win the honor nationwide, and the first- ever player on the UMass football team to win.

"It's a great honor to be included in this group of athletes," Wynne said. "It's the highest award a scholar-athlete can win."

Wynne, besides being the recipient of an $18,000 postgraduate scholarship, will also have a chance to win the Vincent dePaul Draddy Award. The Draddy award is considered to be the highest academic award that can be won by a scholar-athlete. It has been called the "academic Heisman," and brings with it a postgraduate scholarship of $25,000.

Past winners of the award include Payton Manning from the University of Tennessee and Danny Weurffel from the University of Florida.

Wynne kept things simple to maintain his GPA.

"Most of what I did was go to class on a regular basis," Wynne said. "Our schedule is tight with football, but I just did my best not to miss or skip classes."

Wynne is unsure of what he's going to do with the financial windfall of the scholarship.

"I'm really not that sure of what I'm going to do with the scholarship, but I'm fairly sure it won't be anything right away," Wynne said. "I'm graduating in December, and then I'm starting a job at KPMG [a national accounting firm]."

He was recruited through the School of Management and has already had an internship with the international accounting firm.

"I went out on audits of various places," Wynne said. "Hospitals, schools, a community college. I was basically a first-year auditor."

Wynne said he will see if he can use the scholarship money at a later date.

Crash highlights U.S. air safety

By Glenn Kessler
Washington Post

The crash of EgyptAir Flight 990 is likely to place renewed scrutiny on whether U.S. aviation officials do enough to monitor the safety of the scores of foreign airlines that land and take off from U.S. soil.

While the cause of yesterday's crash likely won't be apparent for months, investigators will look closely at the airline's pilot training and aircraft maintenance and the oversight it receives from Egyptian regulatory authorities.

Many major countries and their airlines adhere to rules and procedures set forth by the Federal Aviation Administration. But the FAA has long contended that it has no authority under either U.S. law or international treaties to determine the safety of individual overseas airlines.

That is likely to change for some foreign carriers. By year-end the FAA is expected to sign on to some sort of increased scrutiny of foreign carriers

Turn to EGYPT, page 2

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 66 LOW: 43	HIGH: 56 LOW: 35	HIGH: 46 LOW: 26

The Morning After

"What was your name again?" A pair of skeltons recoup the day after Halloween. Read News for more weekend happenings.

SAUNTER PAGE 2

What Goes Around Comes Around

In two examples of history repeating itself, House on Haunted Hill was the number one movie at the box office this weekend. And Iggy Pop released his latest album, Avenue B. Read Arts for all the reemerging trends.

ARTS PAGE 6

The Hit Man

Defenseman Randy Drohan and UM ice hockey finally made it into the win column by besting the Cadets of West Point 1-0 in overtime action Friday.

SPORTS PAGE 10

Arts & Living 6
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
New England's largest college daily

Volume CVJ — Monday, November 1, 1999

Campus to focus on hate crimes this week

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

Hate Crimes Awareness Week begins today in an effort to educate the University of Massachusetts community on crimes based on race, ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation and physical or mental disability.

The week's agenda, which was put together primarily by the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA) and the Student Government Association (SGA), with assistance from the Office of Human Relations, is in response to incidents of graffiti in the Gorman Residence Hall earlier this semester. Other campus groups were also involved in bringing Hate Crimes Awareness Week to campus.

The goal of the week is to make students, faculty and staff on campus aware that such crimes are very serious and can be punishable by a court of law. "We've put together this week because hate crimes do exist," said Monica Chierici, student campus activist organizer. "Any person can be a victim. It's not motivated by anything rational."

The kick-off event for the week will be a showing of the movie American History X tonight at 7 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union. The film documents how an urban family is torn apart by hate.

Education is the focus of a panel discussion being held on Tuesday, during which individuals will be given the opportunity to learn about the legal side of hate crimes. Janice Healy, of the office of the Attorney General of Western Massachusetts, along with Steven Greenbaum, assistant district attorney, Northwestern District and UMass Chief of Police John Luippold, will make up the panel.

"Most people on campus are unaware that hate crimes such as graffiti could get you in trouble," said Grant Ingle, director of human relations. He said such crimes are infringing on a person's civil rights and that a verbal assault can be even worse than a physical attack.

He said he hopes that the week will be a success and evolve into an annual event. The Office of Human Relations is committed to the continuing goal of educating the community on the seriousness of hate crimes. Ingle said that education should be ongoing. He said he hopes that the problems can be addressed before they actually happen.

Continuing the week, Dr. Howard J. Ehrlich, director of The Prejudice Institute/Center for Applied Study of Ethnoviolence, will speak on Wednesday in the Campus Center rooms 165-169 at 6 p.m. Ehrlich has done national studies of hate crimes on campuses and will speak at UMass on the topic of ethnoviolence on campus.

This year, Smith College is incorporating its Ottelia Cromwell Day celebration into the start of its national conference on diversity. The conference, being held from Nov. 4 - 6 will consist of panel discussions and talks focusing on hate crimes and incidents, specifically in educational settings.

The last evening of UMass' awareness week will bring the focus back to campus. Gorman residents will be given the opportunity to tell their stories. At 6 p.m. in Campus Center room 163, students will speak on racism at UMass. The panel will be followed by a candlelight vigil and speak-out.

The week of events represents SCERA's effort to bring the issue of diversity from the talking level to the action level.

"We want to make the campus a more diverse and open place for everyone," said Chierici.

Professor chronicles science behind 'The X-Files'

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Dr. Anne Simon, University of Massachusetts virologist and author of the book The Real Science Behind 'The X-Files' spoke at the Jeffery Amherst Bookshop Saturday.

Simon served as an informal science advisor for both the X-files movie and the popular television show. The show chronicles the lives and work of FBI agents Fox Mulder and Dana Scully in their investigations of cases of the paranormal and the unexplained.

Simon said her first impression of the show was very favorable, and that she liked particularly the character of Scully.

"It was the first time a scientist was being portrayed in a positive light," Simon said.

Beginning in the first season, Simon worked with the creator of the show, Chris Carter, on scientific aspect of the plot. Simon received five to six scripts per season to edit for scientific content. In addition, through phone calls, she helped to scientifically develop plots.

Simon explained that her job as scientific advisor was to tell Carter what was and was not realistically possible. Although she admitted that some aspects of The X-Files are hard to believe, she commented that, "I am a scientist, I get to hypothesize."

In addition to reading the script, Simon also makes suggestions regarding the use of realistic scientific props and, contributed some ideas for an episode of the show. Simon had a character on the show named after her in the first season. Though her character helped Mulder and Scully with their scientific experience , she did not last long.

"He [Carter] kills me off, and my entire family in a car crash," Simon said.

Simon began to think about writing a book about The X-Files when she was approached about two years ago with the idea. Simon explained that after pondering the idea for a while, she decided to write a book for people who had no science background, so that they could understand the scientific aspects of the show. She said the book could be read by people of all ages, both devoted fans of the show and those who had never seen it before.

KARA STOKES/ COLLEGIAN

Anne Simon, one of the creative talents behind the hit television show The X-Files, spoke at the Jeffrey Amherst bookstore on Saturday.

"I start with 'The X-Files,' and then go into the science," Simon said. "This may be a really fun way for people to learn about science."

Simon said she found writing the book to be both challenging and positive.

"I haven't done creative writing since college – it was fun," Simon said.

Currently, she is promoting her book, which was published by Simon and Schuster, and lecturing at bookstores in the area about the science within the book. She is next scheduled to give a lecture on her new book at The Springfield Museum of Science in January.

UMass mourns Jean Hosmer

Hundreds gathered Saturday in Amherst's First Congressional Church to remember former University of Massachusetts Extension employee Jean Hosmer.

Hosmer's 15-year-old daughter, Sandra, spoke to the crowd during the two-hour memorial, as did members of her family. Friends also remembered the former UMass employee.

Hosmer, 45, of Pelham, was shot and killed last Monday, police say, by former husband William Bernotas, 46. She had filed for and been granted an extension to a restraining order she had against Bernotas. The alleged gunman turned the gun on himself after shooting Hosmer. He is listed in critical condition in Baystate Medical Center.

–Sam Wilkinson

HC rallies for Mumia

By Jason Spears
Collegian Correspondent

In mid-October, 20 Hampshire College students drove to Philadelphia to participate in a rally against the recently signed death warrant of journalist, political activist and former Black Panther Mumia Abu-Jamal.

In 1981, Abu-Jamal tried to stop Philadelphia police officer Daniel Faulkner from assaulting an African-American. Abu-Jamal's intervention resulted in a shoot-out that left him shot in the chest and Faulkner dead. Abu-Jamal was convicted of murdering the officer and sentenced to death in 1982 by Judge Sabo, a judge famous for handing out 32 death sentences, twice as many as any other judge in the country.

Abu-Jamal's trial had many questionable circumstances. Before the trial began, he concluded that his court-appointed attorney could not adequately defend him, and he requested the right to defend himself. His request was denied. During the trial, there was a failure to present physical evidence linking Abu-Jamal to the murder weapon and a lack of ballistic evidence connecting Abu-Jamal's gun to the bullet found in Faulkner's body. Furthermore, several witnesses have changed their stories since the trial.

"[Abu-Jamal] should represent, number one, the incompetency and injustice of the American justice system, and number two, [the high percentage] of black men and young black men in jail," said Hampshire College student Joshua Jackson. "He also represents a string of responsible journalists across the country."

The Oct. 16 rally was organized by MOVE, an organization based in Philadelphia and headed by Pamela Africa. The participating group of Hampshire College students was organized in two days by Jackson and his brother Justin. The brothers estimate that the rally had 1,000 participants, and said the crowd was a diverse group that included members of the new Black Panthers.

The Philadelphia police were present, including plainclothes officers as well as a riot squad. The Philadelphia police chief, who also attended the rally, received jeers from the crowd, according to Jackson. Despite the heavy police presence, the rally proceeded peacefully, with the exception of a passerby who tried to start a fight with a member of the rally who was handing out pamphlets.

The rally participants walked three hours through north Philadelphia and unintentionally passed the home and office of the president of the Philadelphia City Council, John Street. Street was a supporter of Abu-Jamal. Currently in a tight race for the mayor's office, Street does not discuss Abu-Jamal's case. In response to Street's silence on Abu-Jamal's struggle, the crowd stopped and demonstrated outside his office, chanting, "Whose Streets? Our Streets!"

The rally itself received only local media coverage, but the Jacksons said Abu-Jamal's case has been getting national coverage, with stories in the Portland Herald and the television news program 20/20. There has been international support from Amnesty International, Archbishop Desmond Tutu and the European Parliament. The Jackson brothers also said the involvement of mainstream music groups, including Rage Against the Machine, is a helpful step in awakening more young people to Abu-Jamal's cause.

"I think it is very instrumental in getting young people involved in not just this case, but politics in general," Justin Jackson said.

On Oct. 26, Abu-Jamal was granted a stay of execution by Federal Judge William H. Yohn, Jr. A stay of execution will delay the execution to allow Judge Yohn to review the habeas corpus petition that was filed by Abu-Jamal's lawyers. The petition is 150 pages long and alleges 29 separate constitutional violations that have occurred during Abu-Jamal's trial and appeals according to the statement released by his lawyers.

"Any one of the 29 constitutional violations should warrant a new trial," Leonard Weinglass, Abu-Jamal's leading attorney, stated in the statement.

For further information on Abu-Jamal's struggle, consult Znet at www.lbbs.org, or the International Action Center at www.iacenter.org and www.mumia.org.

BARBARA BRADBURY/ COLLEGIAN

Blowin' in the DC

Saxophonist Geoff Vidal and drummer Ken Ross played in Hampshire Dining Hall on Sunday morning with other UMass musicians.

Athlete wins Nat'l award
UM lineman honored

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

On the field, Mike Wynne has been a three-year starter for the Minutemen, leading the football team's offensive line in last year's national championship run. He also earned a perfect 4.0 grade point average in five of his first eight semesters at UMass.

A senior majoring in accounting and information systems, Wynne now has a 3.93 GPA.

Wynne has been selected as a 1999 National College Scholar Athlete by the National Football Foundation and College Hall of Fame, making the lineman one of only 15 students to win the honor nationwide, and the first- ever player on the UMass football team to win.

"It's a great honor to be included in this group of athletes," Wynne said. "It's the highest award a scholar-athlete can win."

Wynne, besides being the recipient of an $18,000 postgraduate scholarship, will also have a chance to win the Vincent dePaul Draddy Award. The Draddy award is considered to be the highest academic award that can be won by a scholar-athlete. It has been called the "academic Heisman," and brings with it a postgraduate scholarship of $25,000.

Past winners of the award include Payton Manning from the University of Tennessee and Danny Weurffel from the University of Florida.

Wynne kept things simple to maintain his GPA.

"Most of what I did was go to class on a regular basis," Wynne said. "Our schedule is tight with football, but I just did my best not to miss or skip classes."

Wynne is unsure of what he's going to do with the financial windfall of the scholarship.

"I'm really not that sure of what I'm going to do with the scholarship, but I'm fairly sure it won't be anything right away," Wynne said. "I'm graduating in December, and then I'm starting a job at KPMG [a national accounting firm]."

He was recruited through the School of Management and has already had an internship with the international accounting firm.

"I went out on audits of various places," Wynne said. "Hospitals, schools, a community college. I was basically a first-year auditor."

Wynne said he will see if he can use the scholarship money at a later date.

Crash highlights U.S. air safety

By Glenn Kessler
Washington Post

The crash of EgyptAir Flight 990 is likely to place renewed scrutiny on whether U.S. aviation officials do enough to monitor the safety of the scores of foreign airlines that land and take off from U.S. soil.

While the cause of yesterday's crash likely won't be apparent for months, investigators will look closely at the airline's pilot training and aircraft maintenance and the oversight it receives from Egyptian regulatory authorities.

Many major countries and their airlines adhere to rules and procedures set forth by the Federal Aviation Administration. But the FAA has long contended that it has no authority under either U.S. law or international treaties to determine the safety of individual overseas airlines.

That is likely to change for some foreign carriers. By year-end the FAA is expected to sign on to some sort of increased scrutiny of foreign carriers

Turn to EGYPT, page 2

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 66 LOW: 43	HIGH: 56 LOW: 35	HIGH: 46 LOW: 26

The Morning After

"What was your name again?" A pair of skeltons recoup the day after Halloween. Read News for more weekend happenings.

NEWS PAGE 2

What Goes Around Comes Around

In two examples of history repeating itself, House on Haunted Hill was the number one movie at the box office this weekend. And Iggy Pop released his latest album, Avenue B. Read Arts for all the reemerging trends.

ARTS PAGE 6

The Hit Man

Defenseman Randy Drohan and UM ice hockey finally made it into the win column by besting the Cadets of West Point 1-0 in overtime action Friday.

SPORTS PAGE 10

Arts & Living 6
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

ASHLEY COWLES/ COLLEGIAN

The Horror

These masqueraders are just some of the participants of the Horrors of Globalization street theatre, which took place at the Unitarian Meetinghouse on Sunday evening.

Fire rages through illegal Korean beer hall, kills 54

INCHON, South Korea – At least 54 South Koreans, mainly high school students, were killed and 75 others were injured Saturday in a fire that trapped more than 100 people inside a cramped, illegal beer hall in the port city of Inchon, 30 miles west of Seoul.

Authorities said 97 of the 129 known victims were under the age of 18, the legal drinking age in Korea, and the youngest person killed in the blaze was just 13.

One girl who survived alleged that the bar door had been locked from the outside.

Many of the teenagers died from inhaling smoke and toxic fumes in a second-floor beer hall and a third-floor billiard room in a building that had windows that did not open, narrow corridors, only one small exit, and no sprinklers, officials and witnesses said yesterday. Police arrested four workers for alleged safety violations and reportedly were searching for the owner of the beer hall, which was a popular teen hangout known as a place where underage revelers could buy alcoholic drinks.

Eight days before the inferno, police had ordered the beer hall to be shut down for doing business without a license, and a spot check by local authorities Wednesday found that the establishment was closed, Lee Se Young, chief of the city's Jung Iu district, said yesterday.

From her hospital bed, one seriously burned high school student told her family and friends that after the fire broke out – but before it began to spread – the bar manager allegedly told his staff to lock the door of the beer hall and not let the customers leave until they paid for their drinks. He then allegedly left.

Survivor Ko Jin Mi, 16, who was in the intensive-care unit suffering from burns and smoke inhalation, scrawled the allegations in a note to a friend and repeated them to her older sister, but two local officials said they had no information and could not confirm her story. However, an inspection of the bar's steel door showed that the door frame was severely bent and damaged, with one side detached in what appeared to have been an effort to force the door open.

The local fire chief, Kim Myong Hwan, said that when firefighters arrived, they found the steel door open. However, Kim said, the windows did not open and were made of a thick, reinforced glass that the youngsters were unable to break. Had they been able to vent the smoke or jump from the windows, he said, they might have survived.

The fire was the worst blaze in South Korea since 1974. It raised fresh concerns about disaster safety in a nation where 19 kindergarten children and four adults died just four months ago in a summer-camp fire that was blamed on corrupt officials overlooking egregious fire safety violations.

According to local media reports, officials believe that Saturday's blaze broke out in an underground karaoke bar that was undergoing renovation, when a spark from a broken lightbulb ignited paint thinner. The blaze then spread up through the four-story wood-and-brick building, a 20-year-old structure that was located in the entertainment district of Inchon, South Korea's third-largest city. Patrons in a ground-floor restaurant managed to escape, but more than 120 people who were upstairs were trapped.

"In a word, it was an inferno," said Kim, the fire chief. "Teenagers were entangled in several layers, with some groaning when firefighters smashed the doors and windows open. There were fire extinguishers in the beer hall, but there was no time for anybody to use them because the victims were immediately suffocated by toxic smoke."

Firefighters were able to extinguish the blaze in 13 minutes.

Ko Kyung Mi, 20, the older sister of burn victim Ko Jin Mi, said she had passed by the bar Saturday night and saw the fire but did not realize until she saw a television news report later that evening that her younger sister was inside.

"I've been to that place several times as well," she told the Los Angeles Times. "It's very small, a very closed space, with very small entrances and lots of chairs and furniture," making it difficult to move around, she said.

"Everyone knows this bar is just for youngsters," she said, adding that she suspected the bar had an informant who tipped off the owner when authorities were to inspect the establishment. "Every time the police had a surprise inspection, the owner kicked the children out and shut down the bar," Ko Kyung Mi said. "But I am sure that the police knew about the situation."

■ Egypt

continued from page 1

that are partners of U.S. carriers. The Transportation Department inspector general recently recommended that the FAA begin assessing the safety risk of foreign airlines that form "code-share" partnerships wherein a U.S. airline sells tickets under its own name for flights flown by another airline. Passengers fly as if they were on only one airline, but all or a portion of the flight is on a foreign carrier with a foreign crew.

"Code-share is an initial step," FAA inspector general Kenneth Mead said Sunday. "It is fair to say the aviation safety issues associated with globalization is one we all have to come to grips with."

Nearly half of Americans flying overseas use foreign carriers, and a large number of the passengers aboard Flight 990 were American. But EgyptAir does not appear to have any code-sharing arrangements with U.S. carriers.

A 1990 Newsday study of about 140 major international carriers found that the odds of dying on any EgyptAir flight were one in 117,000 – the worst of any major carrier – compared to one out of 5 million for most U.S. airlines. The study calculated the odds of dying by comparing data on number of fatal flights per flights flown.

Before yesterday, however, the Egyptian carrier had not had any fatal accidents in the past 10 years. It has experienced at least six nonfatal accidents that caused major or complete damage to the aircraft, according to an accident database compiled by Airclaims Ltd., a London firm.

One accident involved an EgyptAir Boeing 767, the same type of jet involved in Sunday's accident. On May 25, 1997, the inboard half of the thrust reverser sleeve on the right engine lifted suddenly while the jet was at cruising altitude. The outer portion of the sleeve tore away and damaged part of the wing, but the flight landed safely.

Before 1990, the FAA did little to assess the safety of foreign carriers. After an Avianca jet ran out of fuel and crashed on Long Island in 1990, however, the agency started a program in which it evaluated whether a country's regulatory oversight met the standards set by the International Civil Aviation Organization, an arm of the United Nations.

If FAA inspectors determined that a country failed to meet ICAO standards, its airlines were barred from flying to the United States. At least 14 countries have failed the inspections.

Egypt was evaluated by the FAA and found to meet ICAO standards. The country recently began a major effort to improve its regulatory oversight, contracting with McLean, Va.-based Mitre Corp. to provide assistance, according to an aviation source. Mitre officials could not be reached for comment yesterday.

In 1996, ICAO decided to conduct its own evaluations of whether nations met its standards. The program effectively began this year, but ICAO does not make its reports public.

Cost is one factor that makes it difficult to improve safety. The baseline cost for rewriting regulations, retaining personnel and setting up the right organization structure is $5 million to $10 million, no matter the size of a country or its aviation fleet, according to a former FAA official.

Mead, the inspector general, said the FAA has protested that if it takes on additional scrutiny of foreign carriers, resources and personnel now devoted to domestic carriers will be eaten up. But pressure has been building for the agency to look at code-share partners because technically a code-share is a U.S. flight.

Delta Air Lines and American Airlines recently dropped code-share arrangements with Korean Airlines and China Airlines of Taiwan, respectively, after questions were raised about safety records.

RESUME BUILDER

Collegian Hiring:
Advertising Account Executive Position

*Application deadline November 12 at 3:30pm.
Interviews held between Nov. 15-19.

*Seeking motivated students fromm ALL majors.

*Jobs start Spring Semester.

*Earn money, gain experience and have fun!!

*Only 5-10 hours/week paid on commission!!!

*Not telemarketing, client interaction.

GREAT EXPERIENCE

Fill out application in Rm. 113 Campus Center Basement

Boston University
College of Communication

Graduate Open House

Saturday, November 6
10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Learn about COM's graduate programs.

Meet department chairmen and faculty.

Acquire information about the admissions process and financial aid.

Pre-register by phone 617/353-3481 or by e-mail: echristi@bu.edu

Boston University
College of Communication
640 Commonwealth Avenue
Boston, MA 02215

An equal opportunity, affirmative action institution

GRADUATE PROGRAMS IN:

Film and Television
Film (M.F.A.)
- Production
- Studies
- Screenwriting
Television (M.S.)
- Production
- Management
Dual Degree
- TV Management (M.B.A./M.S.)

Journalism
- Print/Magazine
- News/Editorial
- On-line
- Photojournalism
Science
Business and Economics
Broadcast (TV/Radio)
Certificate
- Advanced Journalism Studies

Mass Communication
- Advertising/Marketing
- Communication Studies
- Applied Communication Research
Dual Degree
- Law and Communication (J.D./M.S.)
Public Relations
- Non-Profit Sector
- Corporate
Health Communication

BOSTON UNIVERSITY COLLEGE of Communication

BARBARA BRADBURY/ COLLEGIAN

Easy Rider

Here are some local Northampton originals hanging out on Halloween. Dennis Hopper and Peter Fonda they are not.

Gore "breaks away" from Pres.

By Edwin Chen
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – In his presidential campaign, Al Gore has been distancing himself from Bill Clinton, methodically crafting his own policy agenda. Now the vice president is separating himself from the very office he has held since 1993, declaring that his candidacy has become more important to him than his official duties.

"It's a breaking-away process, that's exactly right," Gore said in an interview on Air Force II after a week of campaigning in Chicago, New Hampshire and Iowa.

Asked whether his newfound outlook might pose a conflict in the remaining 14 months of his tenure, the vice president responded:

"I hope not. But if it does, then so be it. I hope not. But that's not particularly important compared to making sure my line of communication with the American people is strong and clear."

Asked further whether a tough balancing act looms, Gore said emphatically: "Not any more."

The vice president delivered that last answer as his jet landed at Andrews Air Force Base in suburban Maryland. Deftly balancing a coffee mug in his left palm, he looked relaxed in his standard campaign attire nowadays: gray flannel shirt, white slacks and shiny black cowboy boots. As aides bustled about, Gore made sure his terse reply wasn't lost in the commotion. Leaning forward, he asked: "Did you hear my answer?"

Gore's comments, highly unusual for a sitting vice president, are noteworthy because he has not previously revealed how he would resolve the growing tensions between his dual roles.

By decisively elevating his candidacy above the vice presidency, Gore is all but casting aside a role that he and President Clinton have carved out for him over the past seven years as the most influential vice president in U.S. history.

But their close relationship began to fray after Gore publicly criticized Clinton's behavior in the Monica S. Lewinsky scandal. Clinton then heightened those tensions by critiquing Gore's stiff demeanor. More recently, Gore mused about whether to ask Clinton to refrain from campaigning for him.

Gore's new mind-set – and the startlingly liberating effect it has had on him – was evident throughout a six-day campaign jaunt that ended conveniently in time to allow him to attend his son's high school football game Friday night.

"It has been fun, hasn't it?" an exuberant Gore said at the end of a trip that included a nationally televised appearance at Dartmouth College with his rival for the Democratic nomination, former Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey.

BARBARA BRADBURY/ COLLEGIAN

Art in Motion

These three dancers are part of the troupe that performed at the Smith College Art Museum on Sunday.

it's coming sooner than you think...almost as quick as you blink..

BRUISED BODY?

Don't let the tow truck drag your wounded vehicle to their pet place. Demand Dana! We offer a lifetime warranty on all our body shop work.

DANA BODY SHOP
968 Bridge Road, Northampton, Mass.
586-7250

SLAM/JAM FEST '99
DEC. 11, 1999

安城中国餐店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 • 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

Business
Journalism
Education
Health
Law

QUINNIPIAC COLLEGE GRADUATE PROGRAMS
Business Administration
Health Administration
Teaching
Journalism
Paralegal/Legal Assistant
Physician Assistant
Advanced Physical Therapy
Biomedical Science
Histotechnician/Cell Biology
Nurse Practitioner
Post-Professional:
Law
Law/Business Administration
Law/Health Administration

Quinnipiac offers the caliber of programs, faculty and facilities you want in a graduate school. With a level of attention that's equaled by few. It's the kind of practical, real world training and education that give you the skills, confidence and connections you need to succeed in the most competitive field of all Life.

Challenging students to meet the challenges of the future

QUINNIPIAC COLLEGE

ATTENTION
ALL MAJORS & UNDERGRADS

Only 5hrs per week
being a Classified Typist or a Classified Graphic Layout person

Great Experience while having Fun!!

Come to the Campus Center Basement to fill out an application.
